"Oh! Innkeeper Wu, nice to meet you."

"Hahaha, Old Wang, how's your theater troupe doing these days?"

"Oh my, isn't this our Mr. Zhao? Why do you look so gloomy? Did your pharmacy go bust?"

Lu Zhuangyuan looked over excitedly. After a while, he abandoned his noodles and wiped his mouth with his sleeve. He then shook off the dust on his clothes and moved closer to where the conversation was happening.

"What's your dad up to?" Puppy asked Lu Xiucan.

"Hmph! What else can he do? The old man went to buy his own coffin!" Lu Xiucan replied impatiently. Laughter soon erupted from where Lu Zhuangyuan had gone.

"Where's this? This is Shangjing! Do you think that you're qualified to buy a theater here just because you're surnamed Ji? Even if you have money, there's no guarantee that you can buy one!”

“With just this meager amount of silver, you still dare to dream of buying a theater troupe in Shangjing! Hahaha! Even the tips my family’s troupe gets in one night is worth more than this!”

Lu Zhuangyuan returned with an ugly look. He sat back at his previous seat and began eating his noodles without a word.

After swallowing the noodles, he stood up firmly and said, “Let’s go! We’ll find another inn. We’re not staying no matter how cheap this place is!”

“You bitch!” Lu Xiucan cursed and lifted the broken hilt of a bronze coin sword in his hand. However, Lu Juren moved immediately and hugged him to stop him. “Xiucan! Don’t kick up a fuss!”

Lu Juren let him go as soon as they were out of the inn.

Lu Xiucan kicked Lu Juren away and exclaimed, “I can’t care less about all this! I’m not some damned actor. I can use supernatural powers! Puppy, let’s go and find Master!”

Puppy whispered a few words to Lu Juren before running toward Lu Xiucan. “Hey, slow down. Why are you moving so fast? Do you even know where Senior Li is right now?”

Puppy’s words made Lu Xiucan stop disgruntledly on the stone bridge. Lu Xiucan stared at the boats in the distance with disdain and said, “Look at them! They have supernatural powers right before them, but these idiots aren’t even trying to learn them! They only think about those lowly theater troupes every day! They’re so arrogant to their own people, but they can’t even lift a finger to fight back against outsiders!”

“Hehe, weren’t you planning to kill your dad? Why are you so resentful toward him for being so weak?”

“Of course, I’m going to kill him! Do you really think that I’m just boasting? I'll go back now and kill that damned old man!"

"Alright, alright. Are you going to find Senior Li or not? Did you come all this way just for a stroll?"

Lu Xiucan turned around and asked, "You have a method to find Master, right? Where is it?"

"Just follow me, Xiucan. Be polite. Your Master is my Senior, so you should call me Senior Uncle."

Lu Xiucan followed Puppy as they wandered through the bustling capital. Puppy headed straight to the entrance of an inn and restaurant.

He soon found the people he was looking for. It was a group of beggars eating leftovers.

Puppy held up a sling of bronze coins and tossed it up and down in his hand as he walked around the beggars.

When their eyes were all drawn to the coins, Puppy chuckled and said, "I'm looking for someone. Whoever finds them will receive this as their reward."

"This is your method?"

"Shh! Don't interrupt!" Puppy waved the coin in front of the beggars. "I'm looking for two people. A male Daoist with red Daoist robes and two swords on his back. The other is a woman with a skin so fair that her skin has the same color as a dead pig."

"I know! Six days ago, Little Grapefruit said he was delivering a letter to someone in the south of the city! That person seemed to be wearing red Daoist robes!"

"Oh? Then where's Little Grapefruit? Is he here? Where did he deliver the letter to?"

"He didn't come back after delivering the letter. The city south is occupied by other beggars. I dare not go find him."

A grubby hand reached for the sling of coins, but the sling was retracted. "What can I do with your outdated information? I asked you where they are right now."

“When you see them, bring me to them, and then this sling will be yours.”

Under the influence of money, the beggars dispersed and began their search.

“Let’s go back, Xiucai. All we have to do now is to wait,” Puppy said smugly.

“Can we really find Master just like that?” Lu Xiucai asked, sounding doubtful.

Chapter 525 - Old Ox

In the face of Lu Xiucan's doubt, Puppy confidently responded, "You shouldn't even ask that. It's just some coins! A beggar can turn their life around with that much money, so those beggars will definitely go all out to find Senior Li!"

"Those beggars are more familiar with the Shangjing capital than anyone else. They can find people much faster than we can."

"Yang Xiaohai used to be a beggar, and he taught me that method. He said many people use this method to find others."

"So after all this, this isn't a method you thought of," Lu Xiucan replied with a look of disdain.

"This is my method."

The two talked as they walked together. After a while, Lu Xiucan revealed a puzzled look and asked, "We still don't know whether Master is in Shangjing or not. Anyway, what are we going to do once we find him?"

"Once we find him?" Puppy rubbed his chin thoughtfully and said, "If he's fine, that's great. We can all go back to Cowheart Village together."

"If he's sick, we'll tie him back with the chain we brought with us and wait for him to wake up."

"If he has encountered any issues, Xiaoman has instructed us to notify Cowheart Village immediately, and they will come over to help."

"If he's dead, we'll bring his corpse back and give him a grand burial on Cowheart Mountain. We still have the shroud we bought for him. It couldn't be refunded, so I decided to put it away."

"My master is still alive! There's no way he's dead!" Lu Xiucan replied firmly.

“Just in case. I don't want him to die, either. Wait, Xiucai, isn't that your family's troupe up ahead?”

Puppy's words made Lu Xiucai look down the street. Puppy was right; his family members were indeed up ahead.

Lu Xiucai saw his father's worried face. The three carriages were parked at the roadside, and they seemed unsure of where to go next.

Lu Juren also had a troubled expression as he sighed deeply. “Just now, our father learned from the storyteller that in this Great Liang Empire, theater troupe performers are not allowed to study and take the imperial exams. Here, the descendants of theater troupe performers can only remain as performers for life.”

“Study for the imperial exams? Are you stupid? There are supernatural powers for us to learn, but you want to study instead?” Lu Xiucai was exasperated.

“You, milk-sucking scoundrel, what do you know?!” Lu Zhuangyuan exclaimed, and he scolded Lu Xiucai with a red face. He waved three fingers vigorously in front of Lu Xiucai's eyes and said, “Our Lu family only has three male descendants! Three eggs can't be put in one basket! Do you not understand that?!”

“I won't stop you if you want to learn supernatural powers! But you have to know that you're walking on a dangerous path! Look at the young Daoist; how many times has he gone through hell?! Can you even become as powerful as him?”

“You can go down that path, but the other members of the Lu family can't walk down on that path with you! Juren taking over the Lu Family Troupe is the stable path! While the children becoming scholars is one of our Lu family's way out! In case one path doesn't work out, there will be other paths to take!”

Lu Xiucai was stunned. It was his first time hearing Lu

Zhuangyuan's explanation. The latter had always just ordered him what to do or ought not to do without any explanations. He had always thought that Lu Zhuangyuan looked down on him from the bottom of his heart, which was the reason behind his opposition. However, he didn't expect that Lu Zhuangyuan still considered his path as one of the Lu family's way out, even though it was an extremely dangerous path.

Lu Xiucan's heart became filled with complicated emotions.

"Huh? Where did this troupe come from? Are they here to make trouble on my Golden Leopard's territory?"

Several men approached and eyed them. "Have you paid your respects yet? If you haven't, then do it quickly."

"Get lost!" Lu Xiucan lifted his sword hilt, and the bronze coins flew up to form a sword.

Just as Puppy thought that they would be scared off and scatter, those few rough-looking men burst into laughter instead.

The leader swaggered up to Lu Xiucan with a haughty expression on his face.

"I've seen plenty of bumpkins like you. Do you really think you know everything just because you've learned some supernatural power?"

"Do you know where we are right now? We're by the emperor's feet, and even a dragon will have to bow down before the emperor! My brothers are guarding the gates of the Surveillance Bureau! Attack us, and believe me when I say that I'll call them and have you all thrown in jail!"

The words "Surveillance Bureau" made Puppy's face change. Senior Li had told him many things about the Surveillance Bureau.

He subconsciously covered his chest, where he hid the scepter that Senior Li had given to him. He couldn't let the Surveillance Bureau discover it.

Puppy walked up to Lu Xiucan and whispered, "Don't act rashly! They're just a bunch of street thugs; it's not worth it!"

Lu Xiucan stood still, unsure whether to strike or not.

"What? Why are you making me wait? Hurry up and pay your respects!"

Just then, Lu Zhuangyuan walked up to the men with a smile tugging at his lips. He was holding a few silver coins in his hand and was fawning over them to send them away.

Lu Xiucan gripped the bronze coin sword tightly and slammed it heavily on the ground. "Let's go! This place is too oppressive!"

He had come to learn supernatural powers, but to think he'd still get bullied by a few thugs in the capital. It was just too frustrating of an experience.

"Go? Where can we go?" the wrinkled Lu Zhuangyuan took out his tobacco pipe and lit it.

"Where can't we go? If there's nowhere to go, we'll go back home! The theater performers back home can still take the imperial exams! Buying a theater there is cheaper than staying here!"

"It's gone... It's all gone..." Lu Zhuangyuan sighed deeply. "Fortunately, we made it out fast. The emperor of our hometown has even been dragged out and beheaded. I heard that even Si Qi was destroyed."

"De.. destroyed?" Lu Xiucan repeated with shock. He didn't really care about his hometown, but he was still surprised to learn that he could no longer go back to the place where he had spent about ten years of his life.

"Can we really never go back there?"

"Probably not within ten years. I heard that even Hou Shu is in chaos. Who knows when this damned world will become peaceful again," Lu Zhuangyuan said, tapping his worn-out pipe on his head before putting it away.

"Kid, let's go. We'll find an inn to rest. This place is too expensive, and I don't know if we can find cheap lodging here."

Lu Zhuangyuan had experienced many hardships throughout his life, and like an old ox; he remained quiet as he endured yet another hardship with his iron plow.

Chapter 526 - Method

“No, Brother Zhuge, you don’t understand Shai Zi. That letter is a warning to me! Anything related to him is definitely bad! It’s bad!”

Li Sui opened her mouth, revealing her sharp teeth and three tentacles. Then, she yawned and stretched her arms and nails to stretch. Afterward, she leaned on the Eight Immortals table and rested her slender head on her arms before staring at Li Huowang talking to someone invisible.

Dad is talking to those invisible people again... I used to be able to see them, but I can't see them anymore. I really want to know what they're talking about. I cannot understand what they're discussing just by listening to Dad.

Li Huowang frowned and massaged his temples. He paced back and forth for a while, then continued, “Brother Zhuge, let’s stop here. Arguing like this is just a waste of energy.”

“All right. If Bai Lingmiao is fine, and she’ll eventually come back here by herself, then we don’t need to do anything, right? We just have to wait, and the situation will resolve itself. Of course, that’s good, but... does that even make sense? I’ve never had any luck in this damned place! What if Bai Lingmiao is really in the hands of that Shai Zi? If I just sit and wait here, she’ll end up dead! I can’t afford that gamble! Moreover, this is not just for Bai Lingmiao but for ourselves, too. Since Shai Zi has already made a move against me, he’ll keep attacking us until we fight back!”

“The content of that letter doesn't mean anything at all! Perhaps the letter was really written by Bai Lingmiao, but don’t forget that they're the Sitting Oblivion Dao! I’ve seen this kind of scam too many times, even within my memories as Hong Zhong!

Perhaps Bai Lingmiao has been imprisoned, but she hasn't realized it yet! I'm not kidding; the Sitting Oblivion Dao can trap someone without using any force! They could do it just by talking to that person! They can make someone stay in one place willingly until they die!"

The room went silent just then, and there weren't any noises except for Li Huowang's rapid breathing. The two contrasting possibilities made Li Huowang feel extremely anxious. He also hoped that Bai Lingmiao was fine and that he didn't need to get involved in these troubles so they could just return to Cowheart Village and live a peaceful life. However, he really did not dare to gamble. After pacing around a few laps, his tone softened as he whispered to the empty window, "You're right; I'm feeling impatient. However, this is a lose-lose situation, so you can't blame me for being impatient!"

"We don't even know the location of our enemy nor their goal. And they're holding Bai Lingmiao as a hostage. I really... I really..." Li Huowang trailed off, and his worried eyes suddenly lit up.

He turned to the empty window and asked, "Brother Zhuge, is that true?"

"Hmm.. This is a problem. I need to find an opportunity to test it! But it's okay; it's a small matter."

"Hello, is Commander Er at home?"

Li Huowang smiled with joy at the voice outside the wooden door, "Speak of the devil, Brother Zhuge! The opportunity has come!"

"I'm here, the door isn't locked! Come in!"

The courtyard door was pushed open, and a eunuch walked in alone. His face was covered with a white powder, and a golden duster was in his hands.

Li Huowang recognized him. He was the same eunuch who had been delivering messages to Ji Lin.

The old eunuch coughed and walked up to Li Huowang. Then, he cleared his throat and raised his chin. “Er Jiu, receive the imperial decree~”

Before Li Huowang could react, he pulled out a roll of yellow silk and handed it to Li Huowang. Then, he decisively turned around to leave.

Li Huowang was puzzled as he opened the embroidered decree. Li Sui also came over and looked at it.

After a while, Li Sui stopped looking. There were many words written on it, many of which she recognized, but she couldn’t understand what they meant when placed together. “Dad, what does it say?”

“It tells me not to enter the palace and let Ji Lin come out himself.” Once Li Huowang’s words fell, the yellow silk in his hand quickly ignited and burned into nothing.

“Is there another fight?” Li Sui excitedly raised her ear halfway and said, “Dad, I’ll help you peel your skin!”

“No, I have to wait for the other layers to regenerate. I only have one layer of skin left now. I’ll run out of skin if we peel that layer.”

“Oh, I see. Shall we go now?”

“Don’t be impatient. There are some things I need to deal with first.”

Li Huowang walked into the house and picked up a pickle jar in the corner. He didn’t know how to pickle vegetables, but what was pickled inside was his corpse. The corpse was hollow, but it was still the corpse of a Strayed One. Li Huowang believed that it would eventually come in handy.

Li Huowang carried the pickle jar and walked to a hidden cellar under the bed. He opened it and placed the jar inside. Then, he stood up and picked up another pickle jar from the corner.

The pickle jar also contained the corpse of a Strayed One, but this one had five organs without a head. The headless corpse belonged to the Strayed One pretending to be Hong Zhong to deceive the Surveillance Bureau.

Things were busier back then, and he had to bury it somewhere after pickling it. In the end, he had forgotten it. If it weren't for the fact that he had been reminded of it by his recent handling of corpses, Li Huowang would have forgotten where he had buried it.

Li Huowang glanced at the two big jars in the cellar before closing the door and walking away. "Let's go see what Ji Lin is going to make us do this time."

The meeting point was in a gambling den. After Li Huowang won 318 taels, he was invited to the cellar in the backyard.

Surrounded by a group of eunuchs, Li Huowang saw Ji Lin once again. He didn't look great; half of his left ear was missing, and his face was wounded. The wound was deep enough to expose his bones.

"Your Majesty, what happened to your face?"

Ji Lin was stroking the fake jade cat as he revealed a sinister smile and said, "It's nothing serious. I dispatched people to kill someone else. Naturally, that person will seek revenge on me. It's only fair."

"It's just that I didn't expect the palace to be so dirty. Seems like it needs a cleaning."

Li Huowang was shocked. Ji Lin couldn't die right now, so he suggested, "Your Majesty, do you need me to protect you whenever I'm not out running errands?"

"No need. There are still some capable people around me. I can take care of myself. You just focus on what you're good at." Ji Lin waved his hand to motion for a eunuch to bring over a painting scroll.

Chapter 527 - Prince Ren Mansion

Li Huowang accepted the scroll and saw that it depicted a highly detailed map of a complex of buildings.

The layout of each room and their names were labeled clearly. There were three words written in red underneath—Prince Ren Mansion.

“Prince Ren Mansion?” Li Huowang frowned and looked up at Ji Lin.

“Prince Ren is my second brother. Take it slowly. It’s rumored that there are many evil cultivators among his followers. Back then, his followers were the ones responsible for the deaths of my mother and my sister.”

Li Huowang instantly understood what he needed to do next. He said nothing else and bowed to Ji Lin before leaving with the scroll.

“Er Jiu, do your best! Help me ascend the throne, and I will not let you down!”

Shangjing was vast, but it wasn't that difficult to find Prince Ren Mansion.

It's strange that the mansion is not built in the prince's fiefdom but in the capital. Li Huowang thought to himself. He was kneeling on a roof as he silently gazed at the large plaque in the distance.

Li Huowang muttered to himself once again, “Yes, indeed. Perhaps the imperial family has always been planning to raise a Gu.”

As Li Huowang spoke, his colored phantom merged slowly into the tiles. His invisible body began to move stealthily towards Prince Ren Mansion.

The towering walls posed no obstacle to Li Huowang, as Li Sui's tentacles effortlessly scaled the wall.

Li Huowang sensed several hidden sentries behind the wall. Instead of leaving quietly, he approached one of them.

After some time, Li Huowang stood on a roof beam and looked down at the eunuch who lay motionless by the window.

This person was one of Prince Ren Mansion's hidden sentries. He had been fixedly staring outwards through a small hole in the window.

He's just the test subject. Li Huowang mentally thought to Zhuge Yuan in his mind, as he grasped the hilt of his spine sword.

Swoosh! Li Huowang sliced his sword downward from the beam, and a silent wave of Great Qi history swept across.

This time, instead of cutting the man into three pieces as usual, the piece of history engulfed him completely.

Wait, it didn't completely engulf him. Half of his hand has been left behind in Great Liang.

"Brother Li, slash out once more so we can see whether that man is still alive in Great Qi or not," Zhuge Yuan said with a solemn face, which was a stark contrast to his usual calm demeanor.

It made sense, as this would determine whether Li Huowang could stand toe-to-toe against a Shai Zi.

"Li Sui, I'll strike again later. Remember to stick your eyeballs in to see if the man is still alive in Great Qi. Make to pull them out in time so they won't get left behind."

"Dad, I know, don't worry."

After his instructions to Li Sui, Li Huowang once again carefully gripped the spine sword's hilt and swung it forcefully. As the invisible gap between Great Qi and Great Liang appeared, a black shadow emerged from Li Huowang's body and flew into it with a lingering afterimage.

Just before the gap vanished, Li Sui pulled out her eyeballs entwined with tentacles.

“Dad, the man is still there. He’s alive. He’s clutching his severed hand and yelling something out the window.”

“Excellent!” Li Huowang clenched his fist in excitement.

This means that not only can this sword kill people, but it can also safely transport them to Great Qi! It’s not just others. If used properly, I might even be able to send myself to Great Qi! If that’s the case, Zhuge Yuan’s plan can be implemented!

Li Huowang was eager to try it out and go to Great Qi right away, but he forcibly suppressed this urge.

Since I’m already here, I should just deal with Prince Ren first. We cannot afford to delay things here. We need Ji Lin’s help to deal with Shai Zi, so it doesn’t matter even if we find him early. we can’t deal with him without Ji Lin’s help. Li Huowang thought as he put away the spine sword and made his way to his destination along the rafters.

Thanks to Ji Lin’s map, Li Huowang wouldn’t get lost in this maze-like mansion. He headed straight for Prince Ren’s quarters.

However, he found nothing when he arrived. Of course, Prince Ren was nowhere to be seen.

It’s already so late, but he’s still awake? Where is he? Li Huowang reopened the map and studied it carefully. He put it away again and felt his way toward the east.

He searched several places successively but found nothing. In the end, he found Prince Ren by following the bustling noises within the estate.

The grand stage adorned with lanterns was filled with tropes taking turns to perform. Every single performance involved over a hundred performers, and every single performer could easily become a star outside.

They were far better than the Lu Family Troupe by many times.

These troupes were all for one person's enjoyment. It was Li Huowang's first time seeing Prince Ren's face. He was a middle-aged man with a pale complexion and pale lips. If it weren't for the dragon robes he was wearing, Li Huowang wouldn't have thought he was someone vying for the throne with Ji Lin. Prince Ren's eyes were squinted as he lay on a plump woman. His fingers were adorned with sharp nail guards decorated with gold and jade, and he was tapping his knee to the music.

Li Huowang was crouched on a tree branch, and he swept his gaze across everyone. He didn't know what the so-called "evil cultivators" were like. However, none of them looked evil.

Should I just make a move now? No, this place is too open. There are so many people around as well, so I could get easily ambushed. I can't afford to make the same mistake twice. Perhaps Prince Ren, like the eldest princess, is also pretending to be weak. This might be a part of his scheme.

Li Huowang squatted silently, waiting for an opportunity to move.

An hour passed just like that. When it was the second section of the night, Li Huowang assumed that Prince Ren wanted to watch the performance all night, but the performance eventually stopped.

Prince Ren sat inside a grand sedan that was being lifted by twelve people. A group of eunuchs surrounded the sedan as the procession headed toward Prince Ren's quarters.

Li Huowang followed the sedan but found nothing unusual.

Li Huowang didn't believe that anyone daring to vie for the throne would be this careless, especially after the recent death of the Empress Dowager and the eldest princess.

The incongruity made Li Huowang become even warier.

The crowd outside gradually dispersed as Prince Ren called it a night.

Li Huowang sensed an opportunity and cautiously followed inside.

Li Huowang was surprised to hear singing inside Prince Ren's quarters.

Li Huowang followed the singing and found Prince Ren sprawled out on his bed. A woman stood before him and was singing a song. The woman's makeup made it clear to Li Huowang that she was an opera performer, but she wasn't wearing anything else aside from her makeup.

Chapter 528 - Slice

Li Huowang stared at the unfolding scene from the rafters. Then, he retrieved two eyeballs wrapped with Li Sui's tentacles. "This Prince Ren is really playful."

Prince Ren's face lacked vitality, but it wasn't apparent because he was wearing makeup. He was now on the bed together with the opera performer, who was singing and moving at the same time.

Li Huowang's right hand turned slightly pale from excessive force as he listened to their vulgar words sung with a cadence. He would cover Li Sui's ears if he could find them.

Li Huowang was ready; he was ready to strike the moment his target was at their most relaxed state.

"A h~~Yi~~I see your heart~~~my dear~~~"

As the singing became more and more intense, thick, killing intent began to pervade Li Huowang's eyes. He exerted force and flew downward with his sword in hand.

An afterimage of the spine sword in his hand was left as it made a beeline toward Prince Ren on the bed.

The spacetime rift that represented the Great Qi streaked across the air, which emitted a shrill cry as the rift traveled across it.

Just then, a transparent mosquito net made with thin metal wires suddenly appeared before Li Huowang.

Clearly, the mosquito net was Prince Ren's countermeasure against an assassin. Unfortunately, it was useless against the rift, and it was cleanly severed.

The opera performer on the bed reacted faster than Prince Ren; her face turned pale from the shock.

"Master~!" She sang with a mournful tone and pushed Prince Ren off the bed with all her strength.

However, Li Huowang had also taken this into account and had deliberately extended the rift.

The opera performer and the fallen Prince Ren were severed in two by the rift; their blood spurted all over the ground, staining it.

It's over just like that? Isn't it too easy? Li Huowang thought he had succeeded, but a palm-sized yellow leather figure emerged from Prince Ren's hair.

It dared not expand here and rushed outside for safety.

This Prince Ren still has that thing on him! Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and pulled out his sword before chasing after it.

As Li Huowang's weapon was about to hit the fleeing Prince Ren, a large group of shadow puppets emerged from under the bed and grabbed Li Huowang's shadow, immobilizing him.

Li Sui's tentacles swiftly swung and extinguished the candles on both sides, which made the shadow puppets disappear.

Li Huowang regained his freedom. However, the palm-sized Prince Ren had finally expanded to a human's size. However, his figure was still as thin as a sheet of paper.

White smoke spread rapidly from the wooden windows, accompanied by the rapid beating of gongs. The white smoke concealed Prince Ren's thin figure.

"Die!" Li Huowang swung his spine sword toward where Prince Ren disappeared, and the crack cut through the white smoke.

To Li Huowang's disappointment, there was no sign of Prince Ren amidst the smoke. There was only a strange-looking person with a giant gold ingot in hand. The strange-looking person was wearing a white mask with a black beard as well.

The large official hat with bronze coins on the man's head swayed back and forth. His legs seemed jointless as he jumped toward Li Huowang along with the rhythmic beats of the gongs.

Li Huowang immediately recognized the other party's identity upon seeing the two bronze coins in the eyes of the mask.

“Jumping God of Wealth, huh?”

Li Huowang gritted his teeth and tightened his grip on the spine sword before charging at the masked God of Wealth.

Since the surprise attack had failed, he could only mount a direct confrontation. He had to eliminate Prince Ren before reinforcements from the Prince Ren Mansion arrived.

As the two approached each other, Li Sui acted first. A tentacle drilled out from the left side of Li Huowang’s neck and wrapped around the bronze coin sword on his back, slashing toward the God of Wealth.

”Brother Li, put that sword away! The entire sword is made out of bronze coins!”

Zhuge Yuan was halfway through his reminder while the bronze coins swooshed out with the red thread. It quickly elongated like a whip and lashed towards the opponent.

When the bronze coins collided with the giant gold ingot, the coins on the sword trembled and broke free from Li Sui’s control.

The scattered coins all flew toward the giant gold ingot as if it were a magnet.

The God of Wealth forcefully lifted the gold ingot, and those bronze coins reassembled into a sword that flew toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang had been using his bronze coin sword for a long time now, but it no longer belonged to him.

Swoosh!

Li Huowang swung his spine sword, sending the bronze coin sword to the Great Qi.

The next moment, alarms suddenly rang in Li Huowang’s mind. He whipped around and raised the spine sword above his head.

Clang!

The floor beneath Li Huowang’s feet exploded, kicking up a cloud of dust.

Li Sui's eight tentacles pierced the ground, but Li Huowang could barely withstand the immense weight.

A huge silver mace, which seemed to be made out of broken silver, was pressing down on the spine sword with the weight of a mountain.

"Li Sui! Take the sword!"

The black tentacles wrapped around the spine sword's hilt. At the same time, Li Huowang drew the purple-tasseled sword and slashed it toward his own left hand.

His arm shattered and became a claw. Then, he wasted no time and attempted to grab his enemy.

The enemy retreated in response, and Li Huowang took advantage of that opportunity to take the spine sword back from Li Sui before widening the distance between him and his opponent.

Li Huowang looked at the ambusher. He was wearing an identical mask to the man who previously portrayed the Jumping God of Wealth. However, their clothes were markedly different from each other.

This man was eight feet tall and was riding a golden leopard dressed in bronze coin armor. Four yellow banners with the word "Wealth" were sticking out of his back.

"Martial God of Wealth? Scholar God of Wealth?" Li Huowang scanned the two enemies shrouded in white smoke.

The two Gods of Wealth began to orbit him as the urgent and piercing beats of gongs pervaded the surroundings.

This can't go on like this. Prince Ren would have already escaped by the time I'm done with these two! Li Huowang thought, feeling anxious as many ideas flashed through his mind.

When he saw more shadows in the white smoke, Li Huowang made up his mind. He gripped the spine sword tightly and swung it forcefully.

He carved open a rift large enough for a human being to use.

“Li Sui! Charge in!”

Li Huowang swiftly arrived at the edge of the crack. The Great Qi was within arm's reach, and he could already see it.

Li Huowang had decided to use the Great Qi as a shelter to escape the people of Great Liang's encirclement.

Li Sui took out two talismans and stuck them on Li Huowang's legs. Li Huowang then ran as fast as he could toward the rift, but he still seemed a bit too slow!

Chapter 529 - Great Qi

The rift wasn't stationary; it was moving at the same speed as sword qi.

If Li Huowang wanted to enter it, he had to be faster than it, but he was just a tad bit too slow.

I can go faster! I can definitely go faster! Li Huowang's speed increased explosively, and he plunged head-first into the narrowing rift.

He jumped to the left as soon as he arrived in the Great Qi. The rift behind him tore his cloak to shreds before disappearing.

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief. He finally had the time to look around at his surroundings.

He was in a prince's bedroom in Great Liang, and it seemed no different in Great Qi. The house was very large and spacious.

However, the broken tiles above, the weeds by the house, and the dust all over the furniture indicated that the glory of this place had already passed.

"It seems like this place has been abandoned for a long time," Li Huowang's voice echoed in the house as he stood up.

"Dad, where are we?" Li Sui's eyeballs emerged from Li Huowang's belly button, and they looked around the dilapidated surroundings.

"Who cares where this is? We haven't finished our business yet." Li Huowang gripped his sword tightly and rushed toward where Prince Ren had fled.

The inside was in ruins, but the outside wasn't much better. It seemed like everything here had been abandoned completely.

He searched up and down in Great Qi for a while before taking out the spine sword once again.

It had to be said that this weapon crafted using a Twisted One was really practical.

It could be used for both killing enemies and saving lives. Li Huowang was really happy that he didn't end up burying the sword back then.

"We should have escaped the encirclement. Let's go back and take a look," Li Huowang said. He exerted force to slash out a rift that led to Great Liang.

Upon arrival, Li Huowang found himself standing on a roof; Li Huowang's higher vantage point allowed him to see Prince Ren's sedan chair being carried to the east.

We caught up! Li Huowang's legs had the pasted talismans, and he leaped forward like an eagle toward the sedan chair.

Just as Li Huowang was about to succeed, a woman with a black cloth covering her face appeared on his back through an unknown means.

She raised the obsidian dagger in her hand and was about to stab Li Huowang in the neck, but Li Sui's tentacles stopped her in time.

When Li Huowang saw a large "Wu"[\[1\]](#) character written on the black cloth covering her face, his pupils shrank in shock.

No! She's a member of the Dharma Sect! Prince Ren actually has connections with the Dharma Sect!

This matter was much more serious than the succession war. It wasn't something that could be handled by just defeating a few evil cultivators. After all, the Dharma Sect worshiped God Yu'er, which was believed to be a god of natural disasters. More importantly, the Dharma Sect was widely considered to be an evil cult.

Li Huowang made a decision in mid-air and kicked the woman away. Instead of using the momentum to chase after Prince Ren, he plummeted toward the roof on the left.

"Dad, the sedan chair is leaving. Aren't we going to chase after it?” Li Sui looked at the sedan chair rapidly shrinking into the distance.

“There’s no need to chase anymore. In this game of raising Gus, Prince Ren has already crossed the line. We just need to report this to the Surveillance Bureau.”

Someone vying for the throne in Great Liang actually had helpers from the Dharma Sect. It was difficult to imagine what consequences would arise if they really ascended to the throne. A rebellious group like the Dharma Sect could not participate in the succession war. The Surveillance Bureau would remain indifferent to other matters, but they would definitely not stand idly by on this issue.

Since the Surveillance Bureau would definitely intervene, Li Huowang felt that he didn’t need to spend too much effort or place his life on the line to confront Prince Ren. Moreover, the Martial God of Wealth and the Scholar God of Wealth weren’t exactly easy opponents to handle.

Soon, Li Huowang heard the familiar beats of gongs and realized that he was about to be surrounded once again. Knowing that, he decisively created a rift that led to the Great Qi and dove into it.

The dilapidated courtyard was full of fallen leaves, while spider webs grew between the tree branches and the rafters. It was so quiet here that there wasn’t even a breeze.

Li Huowang raised his head to look at the half-moon covered by dark clouds. He found it difficult to get used to the sudden transition from extreme movement to extreme stillness.

“Let’s go.” Li Huowang quickly identified his bearings and walked in the direction of the Surveillance Bureau.

He just had to find the Surveillance Bureau here and return to the Great Liang to report his findings. The issue would be considered finished by then.

He was willing to do anything for this task, but he wasn't foolish enough to ignore external help when it was available.

"Dad, you threw my sword here. Shouldn't we pick it up?"

"Oh, right, I almost forgot," Li Huowang turned back toward the direction where he had fought the Scholar God of Wealth earlier.

"Brother Zhuge, what place is this in Great Qi?" Li Huowang asked Zhuge Yuan, who was in mid-air.

"Hmm... we should be in the Cold Palace[2]," Zhuge Yuan answered solemnly.

"This Cold Palace is indeed too cold. How come there isn't anyone here? Did something happen in Great Qi?"

Zhuce Yuan tightened his grip on his folding fan and contemplated silently.

With no one stopping him, Li Huowang soon found the bronze coin sword stuck in a broken water tank. He picked it up and placed it on his back before getting ready to return to the Great Liang.

The next moment, Li Huowang opened his eyes wide, and the tip of his sword pointed at the dilapidated building in the distance. "Who's there?! Get out!"

"Ahh... ahh... ahh..." Intermittent screams echoed in the distance. It was deep in the night, and Li Huowang was in the middle of a desolate ruins with absolutely no one else around; the intermittent which made the surroundings feel extremely eerie.

Of course, Li Huowang was not buying it. He charged toward where the voice was coming from with his sword in hand.

Li Huowang swung the spine sword repeatedly, sending massive chunks of walls to the Great Liang.

Eventually, he found where the screams were coming from. The screams were coming from a eunuch on a mat. The eunuch was bald and was completely naked. His abdomen was swollen, and he clutched it strongly as he screamed.

His bloated abdomen was covered with veins, which twitched occasionally. The edges of the eunuch's abdomen had cracked, leaking blood and amniotic fluid.

What kind of evil spirit has caused this? Li Huowang thought. However, he instantly understood what this eunuch was up to upon recalling that he was in Great Qi.

Righteous Monastery's Buddha could even allow a eunuch to give birth to a son. It seemed this eunuch was about to give birth.

Li Huowang's eyes flashed in a light of understanding, and then he turned around to leave.

The old eunuch noticed Li Huowang and screamed in distress, "Save me! Benefactor, save me! I'm having a difficult delivery!"

"Nonsense, do you even have a hole down there? Who's having a difficult delivery?" Li Huowang replied and picked up his pace.

The illusion of the monk stood in his path with a desperate look. "Daoist, please help him. Your refusal to lend a hand could lead to two deaths at once!"

"That's easy for you to say. Regardless of whether that eunuch is deceiving us or not, just think about what I can do. Do you really think that I can assist in childbirth? When did I learn to deliver babies, not to mention delivering a man's baby?"

Chapter 530 - Omen

In the desolate Cold Palace, Li Huowang looked at the monk's illusion with some dissatisfaction.

Li Huowang wasn't a heartless person. However, he really had no time to deal with a pregnant old eunuch of unknown origin.

After all, this was the Great Qi and not the Great Liang. Nobody knew if this guy was setting a trap.

His priority was to return and inform the Surveillance Bureau about Prince Ren's collusion with the Dharma Sect.

"Let's go!" Li Huowang said and turned to leave. He had only taken a few steps when a horrifying scream echoed from behind him.

He saw the eunuch grip a dagger with one hand before thrusting it into his swollen belly. A mixture of amniotic fluid and blood sprayed out from the wound.

It seemed that he intended to deliver the baby himself since Li Huowang wasn't going to help him.

The monk's illusion couldn't sit still anymore at the gruesome scene. He scratched his head as he blocked Li Huowang again and said, "Daoist, please save him. Saving a life is more important than building many houses. Even if we don't save him, the baby in his belly isn't guilty of any crimes, don't you think so?"

"One is reborn as a human as a result of accumulated blessings throughout lifetimes. This is a precious life."

Li Huowang sighed lightly and pressed his temple with one hand. "Fine! You have a kind heart; you are a living Bodhisattva. If you want to save him, do it yourself."

The monk's illusion didn't immediately grasp what was happening, but he soon noticed the changes in his body.

“I’m alive? I’m alive?!” the monk exclaimed with joy. He patted his bald head and bounced around like a child.

“Aren’t you going to save him? I can’t hold on much longer.”

However, the monk seemed at a loss when faced with the bloody scene. He obviously had no idea how to deliver babies.

The eunuch, who seemed on the verge of death, didn’t care where this unexpected helper had come from. He propped himself up as sweat poured down his face.

He opened his cracked lips, and his lips trembled as he pleaded, “Master! Forget about me! Save the child! I can die, but I will not let my ancestors down as long as the Wang family will have a descendant!”

“Okay, okay!” The monk nodded repeatedly and knelt down. He grasped the dagger sticking out of the eunuch’s belly and pulled downward.

“ AAAAHHHH! ” The eunuch screamed in agony as blood and amniotic fluid sprayed out of the wound and drenched the monk.

“Thank you... Master... May you... may you achieve enlightenment soon...” the eunuch trailed off, and his head tilted lifelessly to the side. His face lost all signs of vitality, but a satisfied smile was tugging at his sweaty lips.

The monk was covered in filth, and he was still rummaging through the eunuch's stomach.

Li Huowang couldn't take it anymore and walked over.

The monk felt as though there was a treasure trove filled with blood-red objects before him, and his hands were moving incessantly within the treasure trove.

Suddenly, he felt he had grabbed the ankle of the child. With a delighted expression, he pulled hard, but he ended up yanking out the eunuch’s intestines.

Li Huowang jumped into the fray, and his keen senses allowed him to detect the only thing moving in the treasure trove.

He yanked out the object as if pulling out a radish from the soil.

The monk's eyes widened in shock when he what Li Huowang had yanked out.

He took several steps backward and muttered, "What is that thing?"

Li Huowang was holding a baby in his hand—no, it seemed like a baby, but it had the body of a cow or a sheep, and it was covered in short, damp fur. Its limbs had hooves at the end instead of five fingers.

The monk wouldn't have been so frightened if it were just a calf born from the eunuch. What was most terrifying was that its head had a human face.

The eunuch didn't give birth to a male infant who could carry on his lineage. Instead, he gave birth to a strange creature with a human face and the body of a cow!

"What a mess!" Li Huowang exclaimed in disgust. He tossed the creature against the wall forcefully.

Bang! The human-faced sheep hit the wall and fell to the ground. It surprisingly didn't die. Instead, it stood up with its hooves and spat out amniotic fluid in big mouthfuls.

Li Huowang finally saw the appearance of this human-faced cow. It had the exact same face as the eunuch who gave birth to it. It had the same bald head and the same wrinkled face as the eunuch, but it seemed to embody the ugliness of the world. Li Huowang furrowed his brows and gripped the hilt of his sword, ready to eliminate this evil being. The human-faced cow opened its deformed mouth and cackled. Although its face was that of an old man, it had a baby's voice, which created an eerie combination.

"Hahaha! The moon will rise, the sun will dip, and the well water will overflow through the golden gate. The morning seeks to rise; the evening seeks to unite. It's difficult for the panchi[1] to survive against the serpent. Kill the cows and sheep, and drink wine. Everyone, big or small, will be happy! Eat his mother! Everyone, have a good time! Hahaha!" After singing the nonsensical phrase, the human-faced cow went limp and collapsed to the ground. Its eyes rolled up, and it died just like that.

Li Huowang couldn't understand what he had just witnessed. Why was everything in Great Qi so bizarre? What nonsense was it singing just now? Was it cursing me?

Li Huowang sheathed his sword with a frown, and then he looked at the monk, who had returned to being an illusion, "What did I tell you? You didn't listen and had to try it out. How was the good deed?"

Li Huowang didn't wait for the ashamed monk to reply. He prepared to leave this Cold Palace of Great Qi with Li Sui.

"Brother Li!" Zhuge Yuan's words made Li Huowang stop. He turned toward Zhuge Yuan and was shocked to see that Zhuge Yuan's expression was tense with a hint of regret.

"Brother Zhuge, what's going on?" Li Huowang asked. He sensed something off with Zhuge Yuan's emotions.

"I need you to do me a favor. Help me pass on a message to some friends in Great Qi!"

"Of course. But... Brother Zhuge, can you tell me what exactly is going on?"

Li Huowang didn't think for a moment that Zhuge Yuan's current demeanor was all because he was so touched that he managed to return to Great Qi and that he couldn't wait to reminisce with some of his old friends.

Zhuce Yuan wasn't that kind of person.

Moreover, he had never seen Zhuge Yuan lose his composure. Zhuge Yuan had remained calm even in the face of Doulaio and his own despairing death.

1. a creature similar to a dragon 🐉

Chapter 531 - Zhuge Yuan

Li Huowang knew that the issue had to be serious, as Zhuge Yuan looked so distressed.

What could be even worse than Doulao descending upon the mortal realm?

“Senior Zhuge, don’t panic,” said Li Huowang in an effort to console Zhuge Yuan, “Tell me what’s going on. I can’t help you if you don’t explain it to me.”

Zhuce Yuan closed his reddened eyes. He took a deep breath before pointing his fan at the deceased human-cow hybrid on the ground. “Junior Li, do you know what that is?”

“Er ... Isn’t that the son that the Righteous Monastery had implanted into that eunuch to give birth to? Wait, I actually don’t know if they can indeed grant children to the eunuchs. Maybe they just deceived the eunuchs?”

The fake Hong Zhong’s illusion interjected. “Yeah, how could they be so unscrupulous?”

“Wrong! You’re very wrong. Did you not hear what it sang? That was an omen! The Great Qi’s dragon vein is about to be severed!”

Zhuce Yuan’s words frightened Li Huowang. He didn’t know what the human-cow hybrid was, but he knew that the severing of a dragon vein was bad news.

“Junior Li, we don’t have time now! We need to leave now! We can’t use your techniques here yet!”

Li Huowang ran out of the abandoned palace without any hesitation.

“Dragon Vein?” Li Huowang recalled the tied-up bodies of the past emperors in the imperial palace of the Liang Kingdom last time.

Zhuge Yuan caught up to Li Huowang and explained, “There would be an omen before every great disaster—a half-human and half-beast hybrid would be born, and they would tell an omen before passing away. Omens are mostly bad, and they almost always happen immediately!”

“That means ... Did that thing say that the Great Qi’s Dragon Vein would be severed? Senior Zhuge, what would happen if the Dragon Vein was severed?” Li Huowang stomped the ground and leaped up the palace wall with ease with the help of Li Sui’s tentacles.

“There should only be the Great Qi in the first place. The Great Liang never existed! Do you know why? It’s because a thousand years ago, the Dragon Vein of the Qi Kingdom was severed once! If it’s severed once again, the entire Qi Kingdom might cease to exist!”

Li Huowang felt his blood run cold. The Dragon Vein was the anchor of a timeline!

Now he knew why the Liang Kingdom needed to have an emperor at all times and why the authority of the imperial family had lasted so long amidst such a crazy world.

But did the Liang Kingdom really come into existence because the Dragon Vein was severed once? Or was Zhuge Yuan mistaken?”

Li Huowang’s mind was in disarray as if he had learned something important but only the superficial details. He felt like the details were being obfuscated by something.

“Junior Li, stop here! This is good enough!”

Li Huowang noticed that he had arrived in the capital city of the Qi Kingdom, You Capital. It was night, so the streets were silent—too silent.

Li Huowang felt like something had changed here, but he didn’t know what had changed.

“Senior Zhuge, what should I do next?”

“Materialize me! I need to have a physical body!”

Li Huowang didn't hesitate and did it. He pressed his temples, and Zhuge Yuan's figure flickered.

Veins bulge on his forehead and his eyes started popping outwards slightly. He was using a lot of force.

Something's wrong! It wasn't this hard to materialize the old monk and Peng Longteng! Li Huowang knelt on the ground as blood dripped out of his nose.

“Junior Li, please hang on! The lives of everyone are at stake here!” Zhuge Yuan clenched his fist and urged Li Huowang to continue.

“Don't worry! I can handle it!” Li Huowang's brain bulged, and his head expanded by a huge margin. Zhuge Yuan's fleshly body materialized slowly.

Zhuce Yuan did not waste any time when he saw Li Huowang's swaying figure. He immediately took the spine sword off Li Huowang's back.

He tore off the talisman on the hilt, and the sword came back to life.

The two Zhuge Yuans looked at each other before he spoke to the sword, “There's an omen! The Dragon Vein is about to be severed!”

“What?! Is that true?!”

However, Zhuge Yuan's spine sword did not hesitate. He raised his skeletal hand and drew a line on its own bloody body. Blood flowed down his organs and talismans to reach the tip of the sword.

The blood that had dripped from the sword was somehow alive, and it burrowed into the ground.

Zhuce Yuan wielded the spine sword and started writing, but no words appeared on the ground as all of the blood had been absorbed by the ground.

“Faster! My dad can't keep it up any longer!” Li Sui shouted at Zhuge Yuan while supporting Li Huowang with her tentacles.

Taking advantage of the momentum, Zhuge Yuan flew and landed on a roof on the left side. He waved his right arm, and the roof tiles flew upwards, revealing the writing implements in the room.

He waved his hand, and a brush flew into his hand. Then, he summoned a piece of paper and drew something on it. He drew an incomplete circle with a single opening before writing something inside the circle.

When his hands faded into nothingness, the paper filled with words burned up, and when the tiles neatly landed on the roof, Zhuge Yuan finally disappeared.

Zhuge Yuan sighed in relief when he saw the paper burning up and scattering into the air as ashes. “I hope that it works. May the Three Ancient Ones protect the Dragon Vein.”

Zhuge Yuan floated toward Li Huowang.

“Junior Li, thank—” Zhuge Yuan stopped mid-sentence.

Li Huowang was bleeding from all of his orifices and was unconscious in his daughter’s tentacles.

Chapter 532 - Back

Li Huowang was having a splitting headache. “Materializing a Twisted One is still too much for me. If I want to materialize Zhuge Yuan to lend me a hand, I need to master the 'Truth' first.”

Knowing that they were at a critical juncture, Li Huowang sat up abruptly. He shook his head and opened his eyes. “Sorry, Senior Zhuge, I fainted. I didn’t see—”

Li Huowang stopped mid-sentence upon seeing doctors wearing white lab coats around him. He then looked around and saw that he was strapped to some sort of medical device. Moments later, Li Huowang finally realized that he had returned to the other side. “I’m back?”

“Li Huowang? Li Huowang? How many fingers am I holding up?” Three fingers were put up before him.

“Three?”

“Good! It seems that increasing the voltage has truly managed to bring you back here.”

Under the instructions of the doctor, the nurses approached Li Huowang and undid his restraints. They also peeled off the two electrodes on his temples and his scalp.

Li Huowang’s pupils shrank at the pills and the cup of water before him. He slapped the pills away and asked, “Who’s been feeding me these pills? I don’t want any of these! Li Sui picked up the spine sword and sent me back to the Liang Kingdom! Do not trust the person that’s near me!”

Li Huowang was clad in his blue and white striped patient robes, and he looked quite emaciated.

A doctor wearing frameless glasses told the nurses to back down before carefully approaching Li Huowang. “Li Huowang, don’t be afraid. Have you forgotten me? It’s me, your doctor Yi Donglai.”

“Yi Donglai?” Li Huowang stared at the familiar face in front of him. He remembered a lot of things.

“I don’t care who you are. I won’t eat anything right now! You can feed whatever medicine you want once I get back to the other side!” Li Huowang shouted so loudly that even the people outside the corridor could hear him. Some of them peeked through the door.

“Alright, don’t panic. Relax. I’m not feeding you any medicine and mean no harm to you.” Yi Donglai took a step back and displayed his palms.

Li Huowang sighed when Yi Donglai backed off. No matter who it was in the Qi Kingdom, at least that person meant no harm.

Seeing that his patient had calmed down, Yi Donglai brought out a stool and placed it beside Li Huowang. “Come here and sit down. Don’t do any sudden movements. Your muscles are too weak to support you right now.”

Glancing at Yi Donglai and the stool, Li Huowang reached for where his purple-tasseled sword was supposed to be and slashed at the stool before taking it to sit down.

Yi Donglai nodded and looked at the camera at the top-left corner of the room. “Please give me a copy of the footage later.”

With that, Yi Donglai looked at Li Huowang and said, “Based on what you’ve been talking about recently, I feel like you are encountering issues on the other side. Is something wrong there?”

Li Huowang kept quiet when he was being questioned by Yi Donglai. He knew that the doctor would not be able to help him deal with Shai Zi.

Yi Donglai pushed his glasses, “Li Huowang, is Shai Zi aiming for the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom?”

“ HM?! ” Li Huowang looked up in shock. How did the doctor know what was happening on the other side?

He immediately realized the gravity of the situation. The Dragon Vein could affect the history of a timeline, and Shai Zi wanted Ji Lin to succeed to the throne. Is Shai Zi aiming for the Dragon Vein?

Even though he didn't know what Shai Zi's true goal was, his fake memories as a Sitting Oblivion Dao were telling him that deceiving an entire history of a timeline was very alluring.

If Zhuge Yuan was right, it meant that the Liang Kingdom only appeared because the Qi Kingdom's Dragon Vein was severed.

Even Li Huowang had no idea what would happen if Shai Zi ended up achieving his goal.

Seeing that Li Huowang was deep in his thoughts, Yi Donglai gestured for everyone to leave the room and closed the doors. The room was quiet now that only he and Li Huowang were left inside.

Yi Donglai grabbed a stool and sat in front of Li Huowang, “Coming from my viewpoint as a doctor, I think it's best that you don't help the prince to become the emperor. In addition to the fact that it's not really a profitable trade for you, you also have to risk your life by killing the other princes. However, the Shai Zi capturing your Miaomiao is indeed a huge problem. Why don't we think of a solution together?”

It took him a few moments to catch his breath and calm himself down before he looked at Yi Donglai, “Don't discuss this with me. You have nothing to do with it!”

“What? Is it that uncomfortable to have reality and the hallucination mix with each other? It's fine; we can talk about something else. How about a trade?”

“A trade?” Li Huowang was curious as to what Yi Donglai was proposing.

“Yes. A trade. Do you understand the situation you are in right now? You are just like a living Bodhisattva. We can’t throw you, nor can we lose you. The leaders of White Tower Hospital are having a headache dealing with you. Whenever they’re having a headache, they’d always pressure us, the doctors. How about this? Can you work with me and become sane during the visits of the leaders? That way, I’ll be able to prove that my treatment method is working.”

Yi Donglai stood up and helped Li Huowang stand up before moving to the window. They stared at the scenery outside.

“As your reward, I can do almost anything for you as long as it’s within my authority. This is a win-win deal for both of us.”

Yi Donglai produced an unfamiliar smartphone and gave it to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang touched the screen, and an anime wallpaper popped up. Li Huowang realized that it was his smartphone.

“I’ve updated the games. Why don’t you play them?”

Li Huowang tapped into QQ and WeChat. He saw the red message bubbles with the letter + 99 on them. He tapped further and stared at the messages.

“I can give you your phone, and I can even grant you a certain degree of freedom. You just have to work with me. You can go to the canteen, play video games on the computer, and even watch movies.”

Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine at the remark, and he exclaimed, “Stop fooling me! The other doctors tried to do the same thing as you did! You want me to interact with this world more frequently so that you can condition me to think that this place is reality while the other side is fake!”

Chapter 533 - Doctor

Yi Donglai looked at him in exasperation and said, “Li Huowang, I’m trying to help you here by following your logic. I thought you managed to cultivate the ‘Truth’ and turned this place into reality. Why are you still afraid if this side is real?”

“I’m not afraid!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He then realized that he was shouting, and he calmed down by taking deep breaths. After calming down, he slowly persuaded the doctor. “I’m not afraid; it’s just that there are still many things I need to do on the other side. I have to focus on that side first. Once I’ve cultivated it to a high enough level, I will be able to resolve everything quite easily!”

“But what if Shai Zi is telling the truth? What if you are doomed when you cultivate on the ‘Truth’ and not the ‘Lies?’” Yi Donglai sighed and gestured helplessly.

“I will say it again! Stop talking about those things to me! You have no idea what I went through, and you don’t have the right to talk about it!”

“Why can’t I? Do you really think that whatever is happening in that world is still a secret here? Are you surprised to find out that everyone here knows what’s happening there? Are you worried about the possibility that this side and that side may not be too far away from each other and on the verge of overlapping? Or perhaps you’re afraid of me inadvertently revealing your true thoughts by speaking with you? Li Huowang, ask yourself this question: Is that crazy world in your heart real or not?”

Bam!

Li Huowang hurled the smartphone to the ground, shattering it. Li Huowang grabbed one of the sharp fragments and pounced on Yi Donglai. Before the doctor realized what was going on, the sharp fragment was already pressing against his jugular vein.

“I said, shut up! My muscles have atrophied, but I can still kill you quite easily!”

Li Huowang backed off only after seeing Yi Donglai trembling in fear.

“I will decide what is real and what is fake! I will do my best to solve the issue on the other side in two years, so stop looking for me! Once everything has died down, my illness will resolve itself!” Li Huowang threw the metal piece as he staggered backward.

Yi Donglai did not give up. “Li Huowang, you have to understand that your mental illness will make you think both worlds are real! No matter what you choose, you will have to treat yourself!”

“I’m not sick!”

Bam!

The door was kicked open; several nurses holding a bunch of tools charged in to suppress Li Huowang.

Yi Donglai rubbed his neck and looked at Li Huowang with a complicated expression. “If you think both worlds are real, why are you afraid that they'd overlap with each other? What are you so afraid of?”

Li Huowang sitting on the stool was surrounded by the nurses. The nurses glared at him, ready to act the moment he made a move.

They surrounded him until the straitjacket arrived. They restrained Li Huowang once more despite his emaciated look.

They carried him out of the room like a pig on a stick.

“Who caught me on the other side? Looks like the Qi Kingdom’s people have no plans on killing me. Li Sui, is everything alright?” Li Huowang mumbled.

and down in joy.

“Who is that? Do you know him? Why does he know you?” Yi Donglai was curious.

Li Huowang stared at the man and identified him. “That’s Wang Wei... I think he used to be my doctor before. He did the same thing as you did. But why did he go crazy, too?”

“What? What did you say?!” Yi Donglai was shocked. This was news to him.

“Li Huowang! Come here! I need to talk to you!” Wang Wei shouted at Li Huowang, jumping up and down.

Li Huowang closed his eyes and breathed deeply. When he opened his eyes once more, he found himself staring at the dusty rafters in the ceiling. The sight told him that he was back.

I should stay on this side before I'm done cultivating the "Truth." I'm not in danger on the other side, so it should be fine if I stay here for a while.

“Ah!” The pain in his abdomen made him look down, and he saw Li Sui pulling his stomach open while stuffing dumplings into it.

Li Huowang wasn’t sure how long he had passed out, but based on his bloated stomach, he seemed to have been asleep for a while. He looked around the dingy room and asked Li Sui, “Suisui, where are we? Are we in the Great Liang or in the Great Qi?”

“Dad, you’re awake! What’s the Great Liang and the Great Qi?”

Li Huowang went silent and looked at Zhuge Yuan instead.

“Junior Li, you’re in the Great Qi,” Zhuge Yuan said.

Li Huowang nodded and struggled to get up. He felt dizzy, and he almost fell backward. Thankfully, Li Sui was there to catch him.

I've rested for so long, but my injuries are still so serious. Looks like it will be a long time before I can materialize Zhuge Yuan again.

Li Huowang shook his head and felt somewhat better. “Senior Zhuge, who approached and fed me just now?”

“Dad, it’s me. I tried feeding you some buns, but you slapped it away. That’s why I’m stuffing it into your stomach.”

Hearing her dejected voice, Li Huowang felt his heart go soft, and he hugged her. “Sorry for scaring you. I didn’t do it on purpose. It’s just that I don’t have any awareness of what’s going on here while I’m on the other side. I can’t tell who is good or evil.”

Li Sui wrapped her tentacles around Li Huowang.

After consoling Li Sui, Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan again. “Senior Zhuge, are you done with everything? Do I need to do it again?”

However, Zhuge Yuan would never let Li Huowang manifest him again after seeing how bad the side effects were.

“No need. Everything is up to the heavens now. I’m already dead, and I’ve done my best as well. The rest is up to the people of the Great Qi.”

“Then let’s go back to the Liang Kingdom.” Li Huowang unsheathed the spine sword. He was about to swing it when he recalled what Yi Donglai had told him. “Wait, will the Liang Kingdom get affected if the Dragon Vein of the Qi Kingdom gets severed?”

Chapter 534 - Shangji

Guankou

“I’m awake?” Li Huowang woke up in the darkness and looked around.

He found himself lying in the courtyard of the house he owned in Shangjing. He sighed in relief because he didn't find himself in a hospital bed.

He struggled to get up and shook his heavy head. His vision was still blurry.

That day, he returned from the Qi Kingdom back to the Liang Kingdom and found himself in a hot kitchen. He immediately ran to the Surveillance Bureau and reported how Prince Ren was colluding with the Dharma Sect.

The Surveillance Bureau's reaction was according to his expectations. He learned from Nangong that the mission related to Prince Ren had been accepted by someone else.

Clearly, his mission from Ji Lin was as good as done. All he needed to do was to wait.

Li Huowang took advantage of the downtime to rest and recover. He had injured himself badly, and the splitting headache was still refusing to go away.

It seemed that forcefully materializing Zhuge Yuan had affected him both physically and spiritually.

To make matters worse, he had also lost control over his primordial breath, causing him to wake up in the White Tower Hospital. He hated it—he hated not having control over himself.

Li Huowang washed up and munched on the overcooked buns.

Li Sui had made the bun. Even though she couldn't make fluffy buns without yeast, it was still considerably better than the burnt ones she had made last time.

Li Huowang enjoyed his breakfast while listening to Li Sui practicing with the talisman and chanting on the lower floor.

After his breakfast, Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan and asked, "Senior Zhuge, I have some questions. Would you mind answering it?"

"Please, ask away." Zhuge Yuan's calm demeanor had returned as if he had never panicked in the Qi Kingdom not too long ago.

Li Huowang thought about how to ask the question. "Senior Zhuge, there's a chance that Shai Zi is trying to take advantage of the succession war, despite being hunted down by the Surveillance Bureau. is it because he wants to do something to the Dragon Vein?"

Li Huowang had no choice but to consider this possibility, especially upon recalling the Dragon Vein's value and that doctor's words.

As much as he hated Yi Donglai, he had to admit that the latter's questions were logical. If Yi Donglai's assumption was true, then Li Huowang couldn't help Ji Lin ascent to the throne.

Zhuce Yuan did not answer immediately. He tapped his fan on his palm and fell into deep thoughts before giving an answer, "You are not wrong, but Junior Li, you need to understand that the officials and Surveillance Bureau would definitely think of the possibility if even you can link the clues together. The Dragon Vein is important, and it's not as fragile as you think. It's actually the opposite. The reason the Dragon Vein is in the imperial temple isn't to protect it but to protect the palace. In short, the emperor is the son of the Dragon Vein. Shai Zi cannot defeat the emperor in the palace."

"The Dragon Vein is that strong? Even Shai Zi can't defeat the emperor if the latter is under its influence?" This was news to Li

Huowang.

That's true. How could the anchor of the history of a timeline be weak?

"Senior Zhuge, since the Dragon Vein is so strong, how did the one in Great Qi get severed?"

Zhugue Yuan's face fell when he heard that. He shook his head, "I don't know."

"You don't know?"

"I've been dead for quite some time, and while I was alive, the Qi Kingdom was still fine. There was no news about the Dragon Vein being severed. I have no idea what happened there after I died, too. There are too many possibilities."

The room fell silent, and the two of them looked at each other.

Zhugue Yuan broke the silence first. "Junior Li, there's no need to ponder over Shai Zi's thoughts. We should first think about how to counter him. If we want to fight him, we need to do what I told you."

"Now?" Li Huowang could still recall Zhugue Yuan's words. He could find someone in the Great Qi who could track down Shai Zi!

"Now that the omen has been read, who knows what would happen to the Qi Kingdom? If we don't act now, there might not even be a Qi Kingdom next time..." Zhugue Yuan said, "If the Qi Kingdom vanishes, then you'd have a hard time tracking down that Shai Zi."

Li Huowang was flustered. He finally managed to come up with a decent plan against defeating Shai Zi, so he couldn't give up now. This was much more important than helping Ji Lin to succeed to the throne. "Senior Zhuge. What should I do?"

"Go to the Great Qi and find Shangji Guankou. They have the method to find Shai Zi."

"Really?" Finding Shai Zi had always been a difficult task, but Zhugue Yuan made it sound easy. Li Huowang was suspicious of the method.

“We are talking about Shai Zi here. Even the entirety of the Surveillance Bureau hadn't been able to Shai Zi. How can Shangji Guankou do that? If it were that easy, why was it that the Surveillance Bureau hadn't looked for Shangji Guankou even once?”

Zhuge Yuan stared deeply at Li Huowang and replied, “Junior Li, that's because only the Great Qi has Shangji Guankou. They do not exist in the Great Liang.”

Li Huowang immediately understood. He took his weapons below his pillow and got ready to move out. “I see. Let's go then!”

“Wait, don't do it here. We should leave the city first. If we enter the Qi Kingdom here, we will appear in the You Capital, and we might kill someone accidentally.”

“Alright.” Li Huowang wore his red Daoist robes and took his two weapons as he went downstairs. “Senior Zhuge, what is Shangji Guankou? Is it a person or a sect?”

“I can't tell you that.”

“Why not?” Li Huowang told Li Sui to wear her veil as he asked.

“To some, they are humans. To others, they are evil beings. But there are people who had seen Shangji Guankou as a temple.”

“Is it that profound? Doesn't that mean they would request some sort of payment to find Shai Zi?”

“Don't worry. I will deal with that. Even if I'm dead, my reputation in the Great Qi has not. I still have some connections.” Zhuge Yuan became confident again.

Li Huowang sat on his horse and urged it to exit the capital as soon as possible.

“But, Junior Li, even though Shangji Guankou can find Shai Zi, they cannot help you fight him. You need to deal with Shai Zi on your own.”

“I understand!” Li Huowang swore to kill Shai Zi on his own.

He finally had a chance to defeat Shai Zi, and he had to take advantage of that opportunity no matter what!

Chapter 535 - Natural Disaster

“Beat the drum and the gongs~ Stop the gongs and hear my song~ Hear me sing the eighteen touches~”

Someone's singing came from the left side of an alley. Li Sui heard the voice and looked over, but Li Huowang frowned. He urged the horse to run faster so Li Sui wouldn't learn the inappropriate words.

“Touch the edges of my legs, and the skies are covered in clouds~ Touch the tip of my forehead, and feel how full it is~”

Lu Juren sang on the stage with his white makeup as he gestured with both of his hands according to the lyrics.

The men beneath the stage listened attentively and even looked at each other with a knowing gaze, snickering as they did so.

Everyone cheered and showered the stage with bronze coins at the end of the show. The Lu family's performance wasn't from the Liang Kingdom, so none of the audience had heard of it before. They relished in the novelty of it.

“Encore! Encore! One more time!”

“Do you have female performers?! I want them to sing for us!”

“Yeah, we want female performers! We will pay you more!”

While Lu Zhuangyuan was happily picking up the bronze coins, someone shouted, “What are you doing here?!”

Everyone saw that the shout had come from the city guards, so they ran away in a panic.

Lu Zhuangyuan panicked and froze.

“Who granted you permission to perform here? And you're even performing a pink show! This is an outright offense to public decency! Are you blind? Did you not see the warning on the city gates?!”

Lu Zhuangyuan lowered his head humbly. “Officer! I don’t know how to read... Please forgive us...”

“I don’t care whether you can read or not! We will seize all of the money you’ve earned here! Pick those coins up!”

Lu Zhuangyuan didn’t want to part away with so much money, but there was nothing he could do. The officials were of higher rank than him.

Soon, the city guards walked away happily with the money in hand, and the performers were left to pack up the stage with frowns.

Halfway through, Lu Xiucan and Puppy returned while bickering.

“Stupid! Your method is useless! Those beggars searched for so long and didn’t even manage to catch a glimpse of my master!”

“Shut up! At least I’m doing something. What about you? Except for flapping your mouth, you are doing nothing to help!”

The two only stopped bickering when they saw the performers packing up.

“Troupe Leader Lu, what happened? We finally found a place to perform. Why are you packing up now?” Puppy scratched the side of his face in confusion.

After learning what had happened, Lu Xiucan stomped the ground angrily and waved the bronze coin sword that he had stitched himself. “The people of Shangjing are so cruel! I will go and cut them down!”

Lu Zhuangyuan sighed and massaged his lower back, “It’s fine. We already have enough issues, so stop giving me more. We don’t need the money.”

“We can’t do that. We have to feed ourselves and the horses. Everything is so expensive in Shangjing. Even a single piece of bread costs five coins,” Luo Juanhua grumbled with the bronze mirror in hand.

“Do you really think that I don’t know how to manage my money?” Lu Zhuangyuan chided and looked at Puppy, “Sir Cao, did you manage to find the young Daoist?”

Lu Zhuangyuan couldn't wait to leave Shangjing after learning that he couldn’t build his own theater here. He couldn't even earn money here. However, he didn’t know what to tell the others if he returned without results.

Puppy could say nothing but lie about how he was close to finding Li Huowang.

However, Shangjing was so large, and there were too many people inside of it. It was like trying to find a needle in the haystack.

“Nevermind. Let’s report the situation back to Xiaoman using the pigeons. I’ve already asked the beggars, so they can’t blame me for not trying to find Li Huowang.”

Puppy walked toward the nearest City God Temple to find a scholar who could help write a letter for him.

Unbeknownst to them, Li Huowang was out of the city. After traveling for a few more kilometers, Li Huowang found an isolated place to park the carriage. He prepared food and water for the horse before traveling to the Qi Kingdom.

Upon sensing Li Sui inside of him, Li Huowang took a deep breath and gripped the spine sword tightly.

“Let’s go!” Li Huowang swung the sword. He stomped his feet onto the ground along with six tentacles before launching himself towards the crack in space.

He was getting used to the movements. This time, he didn’t even get his robes torn off.

Li Huowang didn’t even get to celebrate his small achievement when he was shocked to see what was happening in front of him. A massive cloud was heading towards him!

“Those are...” He stared into the distance to identify it, “Locusts!”

The locusts covered the sun and crashed downwards like a black tsunami.

Li Huowang put away the spine sword and brought out the purple-tasseled sword. The killing intent around him scared the locusts away. However, some of them still managed to chew on his robes and head before flying away.

The locusts flew around him, devouring anything in their path. When the sun revealed itself again, everything around Li Huowang turned barren. The plants have all been chewed off.

“To normal people, food is the most crucial part of their life. They don’t care about the Heavenly Daos because they can still live on without the Heavenly Daos, but without food, they will quickly die from hunger. To them, a locust swarm is worse than a Natural Disaster. More importantly, more disasters would follow after the locusts. There would be a drought, war, and finally, a plague. The world would become desolate.”

“What’s happening with the Qi Kingdom?” Li Huowang said, staring at the You Capital. He then looked at Zhuge Yuan and asked, “Senior Zhuge, is there something you need me to do here? Tell me, and I will—”

Zhuge Yuan shook his head. “Junior Li, you are not someone from the Qi Kingdom. This is not your karma, and you don’t need to interfere. You are also in a bad place. I love the people here, and I wish to protect them, but there’s nothing I can do for them.”

Chapter 536 - Great Qi

“Junior Li, go east,” Zhuge Yuan said after observing the mountains and rivers around them.

Li Huowang nodded and walked east without deviating even an inch. He climbed past the hills and waded through the waters.

“The left is blocked, and the right is crooked. We cannot walk this path any further. Head west for two Li.”

Li Huowang followed, but he needed clarification. “Senior Zhuge, is Shangji Guankou not in a specific place?”

“No. Shangji Guankou is alive. They're extremely good at moving and hiding. Thankfully, the Feng Shui around them would change every time they move. We just need to use the metal and water detection method to find traces of them amidst nature.” Zhuge Yuan calculated something with his fingers while looking at the sky.

Li Huowang nodded and said nothing as he continued walking.

He felt more confident and calm with Zhuge Yuan guiding him, especially in a foreign place like the Great Qi.

Under Zhuge Yuan's guidance, Li Huowang walked in circles until midnight. He only stopped when he saw a town with some lights in the distance while he was walking through a dried field with cracks in the ground.

The town had a decent size, so it wouldn't be an issue for him to find an inn there. Li Huowang looked at Li Sui and then at Zhuge Yuan. “Senior Zhuge, let's stop here for now and rest.” Li Huowang then approached the town with Li Sui.

“Junior Li, rest well. According to my calculations, we'll catch up to them by tomorrow.”

“Then that's good. I hope everything goes well.”

The Qi Kingdom's situation wasn't too bad, but Li Huowang felt a sense of foreboding for some reason.

He wasn't sure whether his instinct warning him of imminent danger or if it was just a feeling because he hadn't met any danger so far. Still, he maintained his guard.

Just as he got closer to the town, he caught a whiff of burning wood.

Someone was guarding the entrance of the town, but Li Huowang frowned at how unprofessional the guards were. They were all drinking soup by a bonfire.

The guards didn't even react when Li Huowang approached them.

He entered the town but failed to find an inn. More specifically, no one had their doors opened. The streets were deserted.

He sighed and decided to find a house that still had a light in it. He soon found one. The house had a small courtyard. Inside the courtyard was someone wearing a white towel on their head while cooking something on a small stove.

The man had been adding firewood to the stove, and he turned around upon hearing Li Huowang's footsteps.

Li Huowang saw that the man had pale skin and a fragrant scent. Li Huowang was immediately suspicious of the man.

"Do you need something, Daoist?"

That man stood up and looked at Li Huowang before staring at Li Sui behind him. Thankfully, Li Sui was wearing her veil.

Li Huowang took one look at the man and raised his guard up further. The man's feet were bound!

The man's feet were half the size of an ordinary human's feet. He was also wearing three-inch shoes women usually wore.

The man was reaching for something behind him when Li Huowang immediately unsheathed his sword and placed it on the man's neck.

“What are you doing?!”

“Junior Li, wait. Don’t be so rash. This is the Qi Kingdom. You don’t have any enemies here. This man is just an... escort,” Zhuge Yuan said, and then he proceeded to explain further.

Li Huowang then learned that there were men selling their bodies as a profession in the Qi Kingdom. Men with bound feet were one of such people.

Li Huowang sheathed his sword. The man slumped to the ground with his pants wet, and he kowtowed to Li Huowang.

“Please! The money is at the bottom of the chest! You can have it! Please spare me!”

Li Huowang looked at what the man had been reaching for behind him. It was a red handkerchief.

“I’m not here to rob you! I’m here to stay the night. Stand up. I will be staying at your house tonight. Take this. If it’s too much, just think of it as my apology.”

Li Huowang dragged the man up and placed several broken pieces of silver into his hands.

“T-t-that’s...” the man stammered, but Li Huowang had already entered his home.

The house was small and simple; it was surprisingly clean as well.

There was an altar to the left with two painted clay pots. Li Huowang was immediately attracted to it.

Staring at the long ears and three-pointed mouth of the pots, Li Huowang turned around and looked at the man. “What are you worshiping?”

The man smiled sheepishly, “We worship Sir Rabbit. Everyone in my line of work prays to him.”

“Hoh. I knew it.”

It was already late at night, and Li Huowang didn’t want to talk too much to the man. He needed to rest as well.

He walked up the second floor and used a drawer to block the stairways. Only then did he fall asleep on the bed.

Li Sui huddled at his side like a dog and closed her eyes, but her ears twitched as she monitored her surroundings for danger.

Time ticked by just like that. Li Huowang was still sleeping when he heard the sound of cracking firewood outside.

Sunlight shone in through the window, and Li Huowang opened his eyes upon hearing footsteps outside.

Li Sui was already taking a peek through the window gap.

“Dad, there are people outside. They all wear the same white towel, and they're whispering to each other... They're done talking. The man threw one more firewood into the stove and left with them.”

Li Huowang got out of bed and took his weapons. “They probably left to report to the officials.”

Li Sui nodded and followed him down the stairs.

The man with bound feet had left, but the fire in the stove was still going strong.

What was he cooking for an entire night? Li Huowang walked out of the courtyard to leave the town.

When he walked through the streets, he saw that everyone was cooking something. He frowned when he noticed it.

“Senior Zhuge, is this a tradition of the Qi Kingdom?”

“I don't think so. Junior Li, what month is it? Is the Dragon Boat Festival around the corner? I remember that it would take an entire day and night to cook the dumplings.”

Li Huowang took a deep breath before shaking his head. “No. The leaves wrapping the dumplings would be fragrant, then, but I can't smell anything at all. Anyway, it doesn't matter as long as they don't hinder us.”

Li Huowang picked up his pace and walked to the entrance of the town.

And that was when he saw rows of steaming stoves before him...

The townspeople were carrying heavy stoves outside of the town.

Chapter 537 - Dharma Sect

Li Huowang was confused when someone called out to him.

“Daoist! Daoist!”

The man with his bound feet walked over to Li Huowang and smiled. “You’re leaving? How about staying for a few more nights?”

“What are you doing?” Li Sui asked.

The men heard her and opened the pot lid. The steam escaped the pot, and a large stone, roughly the size of a watermelon, was sitting in the boiling water.

“We are cooking stone soup! This is a very nutritious meal. Not only could you stave off your hunger, you can even extend your lifespan. We just have to cook this stone until it becomes soft, and we can then ascend to the realm of the Immortals after drinking it! We no longer need to suffer the pain of the mortal realm.”

“Hm?” Li Huowang frowned and looked at the man in front of him. He hesitated for a moment before deciding to give some advice. “You think you can become immortal if you cook stone soup? Are you tricked by the Sitting Oblivion Dao?”

The man covered the lid and placed the pot back on the stove. “Daoist? What’s the Sitting Oblivion Dao? I’ve never heard of that before.”

“Stop cooking it. The one who told you that was lying. You can’t cook stones, and drinking boiled stone water won’t turn you into an Immortal.”

Li Huowang did what his conscience had told him to do and left. He had just taken several steps when he noticed several men approaching him with hostility in their faces.

Li Huowang gripped the hilt of his sword when he saw that all of them were wearing the same white towel on their heads.

“A liar? Sir Arrogant Stone, who has descended upon the mortal realm, was the one who told us to cook these stones!”

“Arrogant Stone?” Li Huowang mumbled, trying to recall if he had ever heard of that name before. He was about to retort, but he realized that he had been surrounded by the townspeople. All of them had the same white towel on their heads.

Li Huowang unsheathed his purple-tasseled sword, and a killing intent burst out of him spread out. “Scram!”

The townspeople retreated at Li Huowang's fierce display, but they didn't retreat far away. More and more people with white towels on their heads came out from the alleyways to join the others.

“Junior Li, we need to go now. I've been in the Great Qi for so long, and I've never heard of anyone with the moniker 'Arrogant Stone.' Something's wrong with them!”

Li Huowang opened his mouth, and Li Sui entered his body without needing any instructions.

Black tentacles sprouted out from his body and thrashed wildly, knocking the pots and stoves toward the people.

The boiling water scalded the townspeople, and they cried out in pain.

“Let's get out of here!”

Li Huowang's two feet and four tentacles stomped on the ground, propelling him away. He jumped out from their encirclement and ran toward the massive field up ahead.

He was about to reach the field when he noticed a white figure approaching him. The two tentacles on his armpits moved, lashing out at the white figure.

The white figure fell to the ground.

Li Huowang noticed the character "Witch" written on the white cloth covering the figure's face, and he immediately realized the identity of his opponents.

He had seen the same figure in the Liang Kingdom, but they were wearing black in the Liang Kingdom. To think that they'd wear white here in the Qi Kingdom.

There was no Arrogant Stone! It was just another name for God Yu'er! The people in the town belonged to the Dharma Sect of the Qi Kingdom!

"To think that even the Qi Kingdom has the Dharma Sect! The Natural Disaster has affected both places!" Zhuge Yuan frowned.

The white figure stood up, but Peng Longteng plummeted toward them.

Bam!

The white figure was crushed, and a cloud of dust flew into the air.

But rather than scaring the people away, they all went mad upon witnessing the death of one of them. They grabbed the stones that they were cooking and ran over to Li Huowang.

"I can't get entangled with them!" Li Sui slapped two talismans onto Li Huowang's legs, which increased his speed as he ran away like a ghost.

He had just exited the town when he saw a massive group of refugees standing in the empty space in front of the town.

They were skinny and wore rags, but no matter how dirty they were, they were still wearing clean white towels on their heads. They were from the Dharma Sect, too!

"Dammit! I should've known that the harder one's life was, the easier it would be for the evil sects to convince them to join their cause! The Dharma Sect's influence in this world is likely greater than their influence in the Liang Kingdom!"

"Brothers and sisters! Attack! That Daoist in red robes has killed Wu Zhu!"

The refugees standing outside of the town heard the cries from within the town. They all turned and stared at Li Huowang at the same time.

Li Huowang gritted his teeth when he felt their gazes. He gripped his purple-tassel sword with his right while he unsheathed the spine sword with his left. He smashed the spine sword on the ground.

Li Sui's tentacles opened Li Huowang's bag of torture tools, and her tentacles all held polished torture tools except for one tentacle holding the bronze coin sword.

“AAAAAAAHH!” The skinny refugees revealed their yellowing teeth as they ran at Li Huowang like zombies.

“Li Sui! Do it!” Li Huowang ran into the crowd without any hesitation.

He swung the spine sword, and a large group of the refugees was cut down like rice stalks. Blood sprayed everywhere as only their lower half remained.

Li Huowang jumped and crashed into the crowd. Blood and gore would paint the air every time he landed.

Even though there were many people from the Dharma Sect here, none of them could block even a single attack.

The purple-tasseled sword was a weapon forged for the army. Rather than losing strength, he was becoming stronger as he killed the refugees.

Li Huowang finally discovered the sword's true potential. It flourished in battles!

“Kill them all!” Li Huowang's eyes grew bloodshot, and the world before him became veiled in red.

Clang!

The purple-tasseled sword swung down and broke a sickle as if it were made of clay.

Li Huowang aimed for the next person who had blocked his escape, but he hesitated briefly at the astonishing sight.

The woman was wearing a white towel on her head with a dead baby covered in flies in her arms.

The sight convinced Li Huowang that the lady had gone mad.

The lady looked at Li Huowang and immediately brought out a rusted sickle to thrust toward Li Huowang.

The next moment, a large shadow plummeted, crushing the woman and the baby into a gory paste.

Peng Longteng then grabbed the nearest human being and used them as a weapon to slaughter everyone around her. A clearing was then made around Li Huowang in the blink of an eye.

Chapter 538 - Chibao

Rumble!

Her stomach rumbled, and she tied the strings of her pants tighter.

Her name was Chibao[1], but she rarely filled her belly.

It had been the same when was still living with her parents, and it remained the same even after she got married.

The fire grew smaller, and she panicked. She looked around her and quickly grabbed a handful of human bones beside a bonfire to fuel the flames.

Qiu Chibao sighed in relief when the flames got stronger. She then carefully removed the tile that she had used to substitute as the bowl lid.

The boiling water had three cobblestones within it; she prodded the stones with her rusted knife and grinned in delight, which brightened up her dirty face.

Qiu Chibao then covered the bowl and added more firewood. Afterward, she grabbed the nearby bundle of rags and rocked it in her arms.

“My son, the stones will soon go soft. Once it’s soft, you can drink the stone soup, and your illness will be cured! You can even become an Immortal!”

Qiu Chibao was so thrilled at the idea that she was chuckling while playing with her laughing son.

Just then, the people sleeping around her suddenly woke up in agitation.

An old man sleeping beside her woke up and stretched. His legs accidentally knocked over her bowl.

“My stone soup!” Qiu Chibao cried out in despair. The Dharma Sect members around her stirred and stood up one by one.

“Kill that Daoist in red robes! He killed our Lord Wu Zhu!” someone shouted, and everyone buzzed with agitation.

“Who killed our Wu Zhu?! Without him talking to Sir Arrogant Stone, the stone soup might not going to work!”

Qiu Chibao forgot about her despair when she heard those words. She stopped collecting the cobblestones on the ground and placed her rusted knife into the bundle of rags that she had used to wrap her son. She stood up shakily and wanted to charge at the front lines, but she was too emaciated to do so. She was too weak to shove away the person in front of her.

“Let me go! Let me go! I can’t see!” Qiu Chibao shouted, but no one heard her.

All of a sudden, the people moved to the side, revealing a path to her.

At the end of the path was a Daoist in red robes; the Daoist was wearing a bronze coin veil and had black tentacles sprouting all over his body.

Rather than feeling afraid, Qiu Chibao felt that she was under Sir Arrogant Stone's protection. She held her crying son and charged at the bizarre monster.

“You killed our Wu Zhu! How dare you destroy my stone soup!” Qiu Chibao gritted her teeth and thrust her rusted knife toward the Daoist in red robes.

In the next instant, she saw the sky become dark. She didn’t know what happened afterward.

“Dad! Dad!” Li Sui’s voice snapped Li Huowang out of it. He had been staring at the meat paste in front of him.

This was not the time to be distracted! He was still surrounded by the enemies!

Li Huowang was soaked in sweat as he took a deep breath. He chased after Peng Longteng, who was opening a path for him.

“Don’t just stand and fight! Charge forward! Break through the people!”

However, Peng Longteng ignored him and continued her onslaught.

“Go forward, or I will dematerialize you! I won’t materialize you again if that happens!”

Peng Longteng stood still and clenched her right hand. The grotesque noise of cracking bones echoed as she crushed the head of a refugee in her hand. The bones and flesh seeped out from the gaps in her fingers.

Even though she didn’t want to do so, she had no choice but to follow Li Huowang’s orders under the latter’s threat. She could only enjoy the sensation of killing with a physical body, so she had no choice but to rely on Li Huowang for now.

The massive Peng Longteng grabbed two men and forged a path of blood through the refugees. She swept across the townspeople and refugees alike as if she were a tornado.

Peng Longteng was in charge of the slaughter up ahead, so Li Huowang felt that the burden on him was much lighter. But he was not happy at all. He couldn’t stop thinking about the woman holding a dead baby earlier.

He looked around and saw their skinny bodies with an engorged abdomen.

The red veil slowly lifted off his eyes.

Peng Longteng stomped on one of the refugees’ stomachs and squeezed out the content of their stomach through their mouths. However, rather than food, the refugee vomited lumps of what looked like clay.

It turned out that the refugees had been eating Kaolinite!

Those who consumed Kaolinite wouldn't live for long. Li Huowang even saw a human's leg in the refugee's stomach; it seemed that they had been eating each other as well.

Li Huowang knew that those who had joined the Dharma Sect would commit all kinds of atrocities. It was definitely not a good thing to worship God Yu'er, but did they have a choice?

"Sir Arrogant Stone, protect me!" An old man with white hair raised his stick as he charged at Li Huowang.

Li Sui's bronze coin whipped around the old man's neck and tore off his head.

Li Huowang walked over the head and moved forward.

He looked at their faces, and for some reason, he recalled his master, Dan Yangzi.

All of them were just like Dan Yangzi, firm in their beliefs but ignorant. And that was exactly how they were manipulated...

Li Huowang discovered another truth of this cruel world when he saw the frenzy in the eyes of the decapitated heads.

This crazy world had ground everything the people in this world had to dust, including their rationality. Thus, they could only place their hope on God Yu'er; it didn't matter even if God Yu'er forced them to become murderers.

The people were innocent, but Li Huowang had no choice but to use their blood to forge a path to live.

However, perhaps death was better for them. Dying meant emancipation from suffering, and it was much better than living life as a mindless zombie.

Jin Shanzhao stared at the scene in front of him with eyes filled with sadness and anger. He cried at the sight of such injustice, "ARGH!"

That was the first time Li Huowang heard his voice ever since he became an illusion...

All of a sudden, the ground beneath caved in, and his legs were stuck!

He looked around and saw three mounds of earth rapidly approaching him.

Li Huang knew that there had to be someone commanding so many sect members, but he never expected them to come here so soon!

Chapter 539 - Trapped

“Tunneling?” Li Huowang immediately swung his spine sword at one of the earth mounds. The earth mound disappeared along with a huge patch of soil.

He destroyed the second earth mound, but the third one managed to reach him.

He suddenly felt an intense pain radiating from his left leg, causing his left leg to collapse like a wet noodle.

Something in the ground just took my femur! Li Huowang gritted his teeth and stabbed the purple-tasseled sword into the ground. A smelly, black blood spread out from the ground.

There was no time to waste. Li Huowang ran through the soggy path of blood towards Peng Longteng.

He saw several earth mounds chasing after him and sensed that he was in danger.

There are too many of them! I can't keep dragging on like this, or I'll get caught! I need to hide in the Liang Kingdom now! Li Huowang grabbed his spine sword.

Zhuge Yuan suddenly stopped him. “Junior Li! You can't! You must not let them know that you can travel to the Liang Kingdom. Someone in the Dharma Sect might be able to divine when you'll come back here! You would never be able to hide in the Qi Kingdom by then!”

Li Huowang cursed and ran nonstop. He stepped on the bloody path as Li Sui's tentacles propelled him forward

After jumping several times, Li Huowang landed on Peng Longteng's shoulders. He saw the endless sect members of the Dharma Sect.

He was already standing on Peng Longteng and he still couldn't see the end of the crowd. "How many people are here?! Did everyone in the Qi Kingdom join the Dharma Sect?!"

Li Huowang's instinct suddenly warned him of impending danger. He twisted himself as three rocks fell from the sky. They tore open his robes and made three holes in Peng Longteng's.

He looked around and saw who did that. It was a lady that was dressed in strange attire. Her limbs and neck swayed in the air as her silver jewelry jingled.

She stepped on the crowd as if she was walking on the ground. She ran towards Li Huowang with minimal effort.

Li Huowang never fought much with the Dharma Sect in the Liang Kingdom, but he noticed that the Dharma Sect of the Qi Kingdom primarily used techniques related to earth and stone.

Li Huowang observed the woman before he had a sudden realization! The woman was a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!

But the woman no longer had any features resembling the Sitting Oblivion Dao. She no longer believes in Doulao but rather in Arrogant Stone.

He realized how dire the situation was in the Qi Kingdom. To think that the Dharma Sect could absorb the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Li Huowang didn't want to get dragged into a fight of attrition here because he didn't know how many more people from other sects were absorbed into the Dharma Sect. But there were too many people for him to turn invisible.

Li Huowang stared at the woman getting closer to him when he had an idea from seeing how Peng Longteng was throwing the corpses around.

Li Huowang sent two tentacles to wrap around Peng Longteng's hands. Peng Longteng understood what he wanted to do as well as she swung him around.

She turned faster and faster, to the point where Li Huowang couldn't keep his eyes open.

Three more stones flew past and bore three holes in him. At the same time, Peng Longteng released her grip and hurled Li Huowang far away.

He felt the wind flying past his ears, and he got farther and farther away from the ground. He was so high up that he finally saw the edge of the Dharma Sect crowd, but he soon fell down into the arms of the Dharma Sect members.

But he wasn't worried because he finally found a good way to use the illusions.

He rematerialized Peng Longteng, and she grabbed Li Huowang's tentacles again.

After throwing him three times, Li Huowang finally landed in a place without a crowd. He found himself beside a small earth hill.

Ignoring his headache, he projected his body image beneath the ground and became invisible.

When the Dharma Sect members ran over to find him, he was already halfway up the hill.

"Dad! We won! We escaped their encirclement!" Li Sui's tentacles wiggled with joy.

"Did we?" Li Huowang looked down at the Dharma Sect members wearing tattered clothes. He recalled the crazy woman who was crushed into a paste by Peng Longteng.

Even though they were from the Dharma Sect, they were being used as cannon fodder. "There's nothing to be happy about. No one won here."

"Help... Help!" A familiar voice echoed. Li Huowang turned around and saw that Jin Shanzhao was pointing at the Dharma Sect members.

Li Huowang thought Jin Shanzhao would forever remain muted, so he never expected that Jin Shanzhao would start talking once again.

Even though he had uttered only a single word, Li Huowang understood what he was trying to say.

“Help? How do you want me to help them? How ambitious; you actually want to help the people, but do I look like the Emperor of the Qi Kingdom in your eyes? Or the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau? They're pitiful, right? But what about me? I'm worse than them! Who's pitying me instead? I can't even help myself, so how can I help them?”

Jin Shanzhao lowered his trembling finger and went silent.

Li Huowang sat down and pressed down on the scabs all over him. He was waiting for his headache to improve.

He couldn't rush things now. His head was pounding after materializing Peng Longteng so many times in quick succession. He would end up back in the hospital if he lost control of the Primordial Breath inside of him

“I would suggest that you disappear if you were planning on staying by my side just because of that. I'm not as selfless as Senior Zhuge.” Li Huowang panted as he looked at Jin Shanzhao in the air.

Zhugue Yuan said nothing. He had one of his hands behind his back as he stared at the crowd of Dharma Sect members moving around like ants. He was counting something with his other hand.

Li Huowang rested for a while and suddenly felt better. He then stood up to leave and swore not to get involved with the members of the Dharma Sect ever again.

Just then, Li Huowang noticed Jin Shanzhao smiling at him.

Hm? Why is he smiling? Li Huowang realized that Jin Shanzhao wasn't looking at him but was looking at something behind him.

He turned around and almost cursed out loud.

A woman wearing tattered rags stood just a few meters away from her. She was skinny with a white towel on her head, and she was still holding her dead baby in her arms.

There was another illusion in Li Huowang's illusion roster.

Chapter 540 - Guankou

Qiu Chibao held the baby in her hands as she swallowed her saliva. She stared at the Daoist in red robes munching on his rations while she pleaded, "Please. Sir Daoist, please give me some food. I haven't eaten in three days. I'm too hungry."

Li Huowang took out another bun when he looked at the poor woman. He soaked the bun in his blood and threw it to her.

Qiu Chibao's eyes lit up, and she pounced toward the bun. She wanted to eat it.

But it was useless. Her hands phased through the bun again and again. She could not pick it up.

Qiu Chibao looked up at Li Huowang with despair in her eyes and howled, "What are you doing?! You don't want the bun any more, so why don't you let me pick it up?! A mere bun can save someone's life! Huhuhu, I've gotten used to being hungry, but I need to eat to produce breast milk. Without breast milk, my son will die! Please find it in your conscience to feed me!"

Qiu Chibao bit her finger open and placed it near her baby's mouth.

Li Huowang sighed in frustration while staring at Qiu Chibao. He decided to ignore her as he looked east.

It had been a while since he had new illusions. Li Huowang had completely forgotten that he still had the ability to spawn illusions.

What's happening? Why did she become my illusion? Why was she the only one who became an illusion even though so many people had died in front of me?

Neither he nor Zhuge Yuan knew the answer to that question.

"Why don't you let me eat it?! You villain!" Qiu Chibao roared. She grabbed her rusted knife and thrust it toward Li Huowang's left eye.

Li Huowang stepped forward, and Qiu Chibao phased through him.

He had tried communicating with her but soon gave up after a few attempts.

He told her many different things, either she was dead, her baby was dead, or she had become an illusion. However, she refused to listen to any of his explanations.

It seemed that Qiu Chibao was still a lunatic despite becoming an illusion.

Li Huowang sympathized with her, but he could not help her until she acknowledged her condition.

Thankfully, it was easy enough to keep her quiet.

Li Huowang took out his last ration and threw it to her. She immediately became quiet and tried to eat it.

Peng Longteng, Jin Shanzhao, Zhuge Yuan, Monk, Qiu Chibao, Sitting Oblivion Dao, and Jiang Yingzi... Li Huowang tried to find something in common with them, as he believed he'd know the prerequisites to spawning illusions by learning that.

Li Huowang soon discovered that his emotions were particularly tumultuous while these people were dying, and perhaps that was the reason they became his illusions.

If he didn't want more illusions, he had to be a bit calmer in the future.

However, Li Huowang soon dismissed the idea. Not all of his illusions were spawned the same.

He didn't even know whether the old monk had actually died or not.

Some of them didn't even have a close relationship with him, such as Qiu Chibao. She had never talked to him in real life, but she still became his illusion.

“Unless... There's more than one way to become my illusion?”

Li Huowang mumbled.

“Junior Li... this isn't the time to think about that. It's best to focus on locating Shangji Guankou. Great Qi is extremely unstable at the moment, so we need to go back as soon as possible.”

Li Huowang nodded. Indeed, Shai Zi was his biggest headache. He already had quite a few illusions, so having another one wouldn't really matter.

He might be able to materialize all of them once he was done with his cultivation, and he could then allow them to live in peace.

“No... No...” Jin Shanzhao's words interrupted Li Huowang's train of thought.

Jin Shanzhao was smiling while staring at Li Huowang.

“Good... Good!” Jin Shanzhao said before dragging himself to Qiu Chibao and consoling her by tapping on her legs.

Li Huowang said nothing as he ran in the direction that Zhuge Yuan had pointed out.

The sun rose higher and higher, and Li Huowang was fast approaching Shangji Guankou. He started focusing more and more on his surroundings.

The trees grew sparser, and he realized almost all of the tree bark had been stripped away. Li Huowang walked along a dry riverbank, and he reached the source of the river at nightfall.

Li Huowang looked down and saw a deep pool of water; however, the drought had made the overall water level quite low.

Li Huowang frowned. “Am I staring at Shangji Guankou right now?”

“No. We're in the middle of the hour of the rat. Shangji Guankou must be underwater right now. Once the hour of the rat passes, they'd move somewhere else.”

“So there's a time constraint; why does it sound like I'm refining pills?” Li Huowang asked, but he dared not wait any longer. He picked up a large stone and jumped into the pool.

The pool was very cold, to the point that his limbs were numb. It was completely dark, and Li Huowang felt something smooth gliding past his neck. He wasn't sure what it was, though.

He took out a small piece of luminescent stone from within his robes.

The glowing green stone illuminated the surroundings, and a few creatures in the dark water receded like a tide.

Li Huowang plummeted to the bottom of the river, all thanks to the heavy stone in his arms.

However, the river was deeper than he initially thought.

Li Huowang turned to Zhuge Yuan, wanting to ask a question, but the latter guessed his question and said, "Junior Li, don't worry. Shangji Guankou is an isolationist. Evil beings cannot find them so easily, so there shouldn't be any danger here."

Li Huowang relaxed as he sank to the bottom of the river.

It was silent, and there weren't any noises except for Qiu Chibao's screams.

"AAAHHH! I'm drowning! I'm going to drown!" Qiu Chibao desperately tried to swim upward with her baby up above her head to try and get him to the surface first.

Chapter 541 - Secret

It had been ten minutes since Li Huowang had started sinking in the cold river. His face had already become red from trying to hold his breath, and his lips were becoming purple from the lack of air.

However, he was still sinking as if the river had infinite depth.

Li Huowang cast a worried look at Li Sui with worry but saw that she was enjoying it. She was swimming around with her swaying tentacles as if she were a fish.

“Junior Li, hold on! We're almost there!” Zhuge Yuan looked around in the darkness.

Li Huowang was just about to run out of air when a temple appeared in the dark.

“There!”

Li Sui grabbed Li Huowang and used her tentacles to swim toward the temple.

When Li Huowang crashed into the temple, the temple disappeared and was replaced by a black rift.

He threw the stone in his arms away and entered the rift. He swam up and popped out from the water. He panted and looked around to realize that there was air in the underwater cave.

“Cough, cough~!” Li Huowang coughed out water and pulled himself out of the water.

He didn't even rest as he raised a stone and examined the cave. He saw nothing but gray walls.

“Junior Li, turn around.”

He turned around and saw the ripples on the surface of the water where he had come from. The water reflected himself, but...

That's not my reflection! Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine.

His reflection looked similar to him. It wore the same red Daoist robes and the bronze coin veil, but the surface of the color looked strange. If he had to describe it, the reflection looked like painted pottery.

“Throw a stone at it,” Zhuge Yuan said.

Li Huowang followed Zhuge Yuan’s instructions, and a ripple appeared from where the stone landed.

A cracking sound echoed, and his reflection’s forehead cracked open. The crack spread across the reflection, and a single eye popped out from the hole in the forehead.

Is that Shangji Guankou? Li Huowang wasn’t sure what he was looking at.

Without waiting for him to speak, his reflection within the third eye spoke, “A secret for another secret.”

A secret to trade for another secret?

Shangji Guankou required nothing else but more secrets. As long as Li Huowang had enough secrets, he could exchange them for any secrets, including Shai Zi’s location.

There was no reason for him to be that wary of the Great Qi, so he immediately exclaimed, “I’m a Strayed One!”

The cracks on Shangji Guankou healed slightly.

This is great! Li Huowang was thrilled. “I’m not from this world! I’m from another world!”

However, nothing happened. The cracks didn’t heal. Shangji Guankou stared at Li Huowang as if he was a weird person.

Huh? That’s not a secret? Li Huowang wanted to try once again when Zhuge Yuan raised his hand.

“Junior Li, don’t worry. Let me handle it,” Zhuge Yuan said.

Li Huowang looked at him with a complicated expression. “I already owe you a lot. If I still need to rely on you even though you’re already dead, I fear that I won’t be able to repay you in this lifetime.”

“Junior Li, no need to be so sentimental. We're sworn brothers, aren't we?”

Li Huowang decided not to waste any more time and tried to materialize Zhuge Yuan again.

“No need. You can just materialize my fan. I've used some of Peng Longteng's blood to write some secrets on it.” Zhuge Yuan passed the fan to Li Huowang.

“Only the fan?” Li Huowang was confused, but he decided to do it anyway.

And he was stupefied to find that it took almost all of his strength to materialize just Zhuge Yuan's fan.

Zhuce Yuan's fan fell to the ground, and he was covered in his own sweat as he picked it up.

He looked at the fan, and a thought popped into his mind. What kind of secret was it that required so much of my energy?

He opened the fan and looked at the first two words when Zhuge Yuan stopped him. “Don't look at it!”

Li Huowang hurriedly looked away.

Zhuce Yuan sighed in relief and said, “Junior Li, I can't let you read it because the karma of the Simings would stick to you if you do so.”

Even the secrets of a Siming actually hold so much power? Li Huowang closed the fan and dared not to take a peek. He already had enough issues on his plate.

He threw the fan into the water, and Shangji Guankou's cracks healed rapidly.

Once the cracks had healed, everything became normal once again. Li Huowang's true reflection appeared in the water, but his reflection had a third eye for some reason.

“Junior Li, if you want to know Shai Zi's location, just take the eye out from your reflection and place it on your forehead.”

“Is that the secret that Shangji Guankou had left for me?” Li Huowang was thrilled upon realizing that he finally had a reasonable method to deal with Shai Zi.

It wasn't good enough for him to be satisfied, but at least he now had a chance.

“Li Sui, let's go back!” Li Huowang dove into the water once again.

He could use the spine sword to return to the Liang Kingdom, but he was currently underwater, so who knew where he'd pop out on the other side? What if he was somehow transported beneath the ground on the other side? Wouldn't that be a laughable death? Li Huowang entered the cold water once again. He took a deep breath this time and got ready to swim all the way up to the surface.

While he was on his way to the surface, the cogs in his mind turned rapidly, thinking of a way to use the secret that Shangji Guankou had left behind for him. Now that I can find that Shai Zi, I just need to find someone to deal with him. They must also be stronger than him. I can go and look for the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau, but would he even trust me if I tell him that I can find Shai Zi? Of course, there's the Imperial Preceptor, too! I remember him standing his ground against four Shai Zis.

Just then, something white floated past Li Huowang.

What was that?! Li Huowang grabbed his sword and saw the fan that he had thrown earlier into the water. To make matters worse, the fan was open!

Translator's Thoughts

The Chinese character for Shangji Guankou is 上级灌口. It doesn't refer to any mythological beings or folklore. I suppose it's just a name the author came up with.

Chapter 542 - Finding

Li Huowang suddenly felt cold, but it wasn't because of the frigid water. He felt cold, as he had realized that he was in extreme danger.

The fan contained the secrets of the Siming, and just a mere glance at those secrets was enough to put him in danger.

Li Huowang closed his eyes, but it was too late. He had already clapped his eyes on the first line of words on the fan, and his mind had captured those words clearly, even though the letters were dissolving in water.

"The Greater Siming has no future, no past. The heralds of the Simings come into existence as the Simings come into existence, and they get erased as the Simings are erased."

Greater Siming? What is that? No, I can't remember it! I need to forget about it! Li Huowang clenched his fist and shouted in his heart.

He took out a long needle from his pouch of torture tools before stabbing it into his fingernails and tearing them off. The pain from the wounds made him forget about what he had read.

He broke the surface of the water and panted and laid down on the floor of the cave. "Senior Zhuge, I've accidentally read the first line of words on the fan."

"Really?!" Zhuge Yuan's eyes went wide. However, he was confused when he looked at Li Huowang. "Wait, how come their karma hasn't stuck to you if you've already read it? That's strange."

"Nothing?" Li Huowang felt hope in his heart. "Perhaps because I couldn't understand it? You wrote it in a way that was very confusing to me."

Zhuce Yuan's worries went away as he sighed. "Thank goodness. It was great that you did not heed my advice about reading more books. I didn't expect that your illiteracy would end up helping you inadvertently today. I guess you won't get their karma without understanding their secrets."

Li Huowang was glad that he had no idea how to read classical texts. He recalled the first two words, "Greater Siming." He didn't know what the full sentence meant, but he still knew what these two words meant.

Greater Siming? Siming? But it's called Greater Siming. Is it stronger than Ba-Hui? A normal Siming is already so strong, so what kind of being a Greater Siming is? Li Huowang couldn't even begin to imagine it. He couldn't even see Ba-Hui's true form without his perception melding into one, so how was he supposed to perceive a Greater Siming?

The Greater Siming has no future and past? Li Huowang felt that he was learning something taboo. He was about to decipher the next sentence when he realized what he was doing. "No! I can't think about that! I cannot kill myself just like that!"

He stabbed his fingernails and gouged them out again. The intense pain distracted him from thinking about the contents of the fan.

Li Huowang endured the pain and looked at Zhuge Yuan, "It seems that I have no choice but to avoid reading classical texts throughout my life."

"Classical texts? What are those, Junior Li?"

Li Huowang shook his head and decided not to explain it. He then signaled at Li Sui to swim upward once again.

He wouldn't make the same mistake twice. This time, he made sure that the fan was gone before making a beeline for the surface.

He spent a lot of energy before he finally crawled out of the deep water. He took his spine sword and was ready to go back when Li Sui asked, "Dad, what's that over there?"

Li Huowang looked at where she was pointing with her tentacles. He saw three columns of black smoke rising in the distance.

He didn't know what it was, but Qiu Chibao knew what it was. She held her baby tighter and looked at the smoke with fear on her face. "That's the signal for war. My dear, can you not go there? I'm afraid many people will die."

Staring at the crazy Qiu Chibao, Li Huowang said nothing and swung his spine sword.

A few days later, Li Huowang made his way to Shangjing.

Even though he felt tired from the journey, he knew that it was worth it. He no longer felt as helpless as before, after all.

Li Huowang was about to enter his home when he realized that the door was half open. A thief?

He entered his home with his carriage and was surprised to find someone sitting in the living room. He was even more surprised when he discovered the identity of his visitor—Hong Da.

Li Huowang instinctively held his spine sword. Hong Da's appearance here meant only one thing. However, Li Huowang was surprised that they still managed to track him down despite his concealment.

However, Li Huowang knew that he couldn't fight them right now. He'd be burning bridges with the Surveillance Bureau if he were to do that.

Wait, things are different now. I don't have a deep grudge with them. In fact, this is a chance.

He came up with a plan as he smiled and greeted Hong Da.

"Oh? Brother Hong, long time no see! I thought you were no longer here?"

"The Surveillance Bureau is looking for you," Hong Da said, standing up to return the greeting.

Li Huowang feigned surprise. "Is this related to Prince Ren? Did he manage to escape the Surveillance Bureau's hunt?"

Hong Da smiled bitterly and shook his head. "No, Prince Ren is dead. This is about you stealing Fo Yulu's Ancient Sword."

The living room abruptly turned dark, and the same group of people that Li Huowang had fought before to obtain Zhuge Yuan's spine sword appeared by the door.

Miniature golden Buddhas crawled out from every nook and cranny of the room to surround Li Huowang.

The spine sword's previous owner, Fo Yulu, glared at Li Huowang with hatred. She pointed her black fingernails at him and roared, "How dare you deceive us with your illusions? We've checked, so we know that even the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau isn't strong enough to make a Twisted One come back to life!"

Hong Da revealed his rusted knives in his robes, but Li Huowang didn't panic. Instead, he retorted, "That's just an excuse. I'm helping the emperor at the moment. Are you trying to reduce the emperor's influence by killing me because you've accepted the request of someone in the palace?"

"Don't even try to twist the truth! You've stolen my weapon, and you're actually feigning ignorance?!" The woman was so angry at Li Huowang's attempt to twist the truth.

Li Huowang pulled one of the stools and sat on it calmly. "I don't know what you're talking bout. All I know is that my death would benefit the princes, so tell me... who told you to come here and kill me?"

Chapter 543 - Deal

Everyone around Li Huowang hesitated at his words.

While they were more than happy to help Ji Xiang deal with Li Huowang, it didn't mean that they were willing to dive into the muddy waters of politics.

“You!” Fo Yulu was furious, but she didn’t do anything in the end. The higher-ups of the Surveillance Bureau were cautious and had never gotten involved with the palace.

There wasn’t any punishment for getting involved with the palace; their career would most likely stay stagnant afterward. It was a difficult pill to swallow for everyone here.

Fo Yulu was no longer threatening him, but Li Huowang realized that they were still wary of him.

However, Li Huowang now had the initiative.

An hour later, they decided to disperse.

“Don’t you even dare think about running away! You’ll be under surveillance from now on! I’m going to kill you on the day the prince becomes the emperor! Let’s go!”

Fo Yulu stomped her way out of Li Huowang's residence.

Hong Da was about to leave as well.

However, Li Huowang said, “Brother Hong, it's been a while since we saw each other, and you're leaving already? How about we have some drinks? My treat.”

Li Huowang understood that it was easy to force her to leave right now, but he still needed to find a way to deal with the problem permanently.

A big table of food was placed in the first room of the Yangquan Inn. Li Huowang filled the cups with wine.

“Come, let me toast three cups to Brother Hong.”

Upon holding one of the cups, Li Huowang stared into the content of the cup and inwardly muttered, This is water! This is water!

After the drinks, Li Huowang ate some vegetables to wash the liquor down.

“Brother Hong, don’t just sit there; come and eat as well. If it weren’t for your recommendation, I wouldn’t become a part of the Surveillance Bureau, after all.”

Hong Da sighed. He was not an idiot. There was a reason Li Huowang had treated him to a meal. As someone stuck in the middle, he had the riskiest position. Of course, he preferred it if both parties stopped fighting each other.

“Fine. I will help you just this once and become your mediator. Return her sword to her, and I will try and convince them to not do anything to you. We can then consider this issue as resolved by then.”

“Return the sword?” Li Huowang touched the spine sword and shook his head. He would never return such a good weapon. He also didn’t want anyone desecrating Zhuge Yuan’s corpse. “Can you pass a message to her from me? We’re all from the Surveillance Bureau, and I don’t want to burn bridges, too. Tell her that I can’t return her sword, but I can trade it for something of equal value.”

Hong Da frowned and put down his chopsticks. “Trade it for something of equal value? The sword is made from a Twisted One’s corpse! Do you know how valuable that sword is even when compared to the treasures in the vault? You can borrow it, but you have to return it! If you don’t return it, then don’t blame me for not taking care of you. The Surveillance Bureau already knows about the issue, so you cannot escape this!”

Li Huowang took another cup of wine and gave it to Hong Da. “A weapon made from a Twisted One’s corpse? How about I exchange it with a Strayed One?”

“A Strayed One's corpse?” Hong Da reeled backward, and his expression returned to normal. He drank his wine calmly and asked, “A Strayed One? Dead or alive?”

Hearing that, Li Huowang knew that the deal was secured.

“Hoho, let's eat first, or the food will get cold.” Li Huowang relaxed and ate with relish.

They ate and drank while probing each other. Finally, Hong Da agreed to go back and pass Li Huowang's message.

This was a grudge between Li Huowang and Fo Yulu. He couldn't make any decisions as he was just stuck in the middle.

However, Li Huowang knew that it was considered resolved, and it was all because of Hong Da's reaction. If one Strayed One wasn't enough, then he could just add another one.

The business talks were over, so the two chattered leisurely.

They weren't really on extremely good terms, as they only worked together once, but under the influence of alcohol, the two became pretty friendly with each other.

“Er Jiu, how did you get involved with the imperial family? You should have asked me before getting involved with them. You're walking on a difficult path. Otherwise, everyone would be fighting for the same opportunity as yours. He's today's emperor, but he could die the next day. Promises will mean nothing once he's dead. You should have just focused on the Surveillance Bureau.”

Li Huowang smiled and said nothing. If Shai Zi hadn't forced him, he wouldn't have come back to Shangjing.

“It's too late for that. Having said that, what have you been up to recently?”

“Hoh, what else? There have been so many missions to do ever since the Dharma Sect rose up. Thankfully, the rewards are pretty good, so I've been running here and there for the past few months. If it wasn't because of you, I would still be outside getting rid of the Dharma Sect.”

“Have they really grown so much? Can't the Surveillance Bureau just deal with them outright?” Li Huowang asked nervously as he glanced at Qiu Chibao.

Hong Da ate a chunk of chicken and said in a stupor, “It’s probably fine now that Si Qi’s Surveillance Bureau has decided to join us. We now have more people to work with.”

“Si Qi’s Surveillance Bureau has joined us?” Li Huowang was surprised to hear that.

“Hehe, you don't know that Si Qi has fallen?”

Li Huowang woke up from his stupor. He arrived at the Liang Kingdom via Si Qi. It was a tiny place, but Li Huowang didn't expect it to fall.

He recalled the Abbess and the Righteous Monastery residing in Si Qi. “How did it fall? Weren’t they at peace?”

“Who said that? They’ve been at war for a long time now. The Liang Kingdom has been stable for the past few years while the other nations have been fighting each other for so long. We just don't know the details due to the distance.”

“But why did the new imperial family get rid of the Surveillance Bureau? Aren't Surveillance Bureaus necessary?”

The Surveillance Bureau was there to deal with Natural Disasters. As long as they weren’t idiots, they ought to know that a Surveillance Bureau was necessary.

Without anyone dealing with Natural Disasters, a kingdom would fall like paper mache; their strength didn't matter at all.

Hong Da shook his head and drank another cup of wine. “I don’t know anything about that. If I knew more about the details, I wouldn't be here right now. Anyway, times are tough, and everyone is at war with each other.”

Li Huowang felt restless after knowing that Si Qi had fallen and the new imperial family did not want the Surveillance Bureau. He felt a sense of foreboding at the revelation. He glanced at Qiu Chibao and saw that she was trying to eat a piece of the chicken.

Are these changes related to the Qi Kingdom somehow? I hope that whatever happened to the Qi Kingdom won't happen to the Liang Kingdom.

Li Huowang and Hong Da toasted before emptying the contents of their cup.

The table was a mess after their meal, and Li Sui had contributed a lot to the mess.

Li Sui ate with relish and to her heart's content.

“Er Jiu, do you know why I’m helping you?” Hong Da asked with a flushed face.

“Because we are brothers in the Surveillance Bureau.” Li Huowang toasted him again.

“Hehe, but we were also on good terms with Xinchu. What happened to him now? I actually knew that you were someone genuine and sincere after you saved us from the Muddled One. I’ve decided to befriend you from that moment onward because it’s very rare to find someone like you these days.” Hong Da sighed and revealed a hint of sadness in his eyes. “But since you’ve decided to get close to the imperial family, I fear that we will be meeting less and less. Once you’ve become successful, you better not forget about me, all right?”

Li Huowang looked at Hong Da’s Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings before answering, “That might not be the case. Once I’m done here, I will still go back to the Surveillance Bureau.”

“Hm? Why are you going back?”

Li Huowang looked at the tattered rags of Qiu Chibao.

“I have time to kill, and it would be a waste if I just left my techniques to rot. It’d be great to lend my power to the world.”

Li Huowang wasn’t sure whether the events in the Qi Kingdom would happen in the Liang Kingdom. No matter what, he decided to deal with it on his own accord because he didn't feel safe letting anyone else do it. He didn't mind becoming a true Surveillance Bureau member if necessary.

“Hoho, I had no idea that you were so kind. I thought youngsters like you loved power and money, so you helped the imperial family.”

Staring at the drunk Hong Da, Li Huowang decided it was time to ask something important, “Brother Hong, is the Chief inside the Surveillance Bureau right now?”

He wasn't asking out of curiosity. Now that he had the means to locate Shai Zi, he needed to find someone strong enough to defeat one.

Of course, Li Huowang's first candidate was the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau.

Time was running out. The faster the Shai Zi was dealt with, the better it'd be for him.

Hong Da was already here, so he saw no harm in asking.

“Which Chief? We have two now because the Si Qi's Surveillance Bureau has decided to join us.”

Li Huowang was secretly happy to learn that. He now had another person to help him kill Shai Zi.

“The Liang Kingdom's Chief.”

“Why do you want to know their whereabouts? I haven't been here for long, so I don't know either. But you can ask Liu Zongyuan if you want that information. Even if he's not in Shangjing, the Moongate, which he joined, has a ton of information.”

Li Huowang nodded. “Of course, how could I forget him? Come, let me toast you another cup.”

The two chatted until it was late.

While Li Huowang and Li Sui were on their way home, Li Huowang found himself thinking about the issues he was facing on the way back home. He looked at Zhuge Yuan and asked, “Senior Zhuge, should I use Shangji Guankou to find where Miaomiao is? Is it better to save her first? I fear that I might not be able to find her even after killing Shai Zi.”

Zhuge Yuan shook his head. “No. You have to kill Shai Zi, or you will not be able to save her. Even if you somehow managed to save her, you would still have to worry about Shai Zi taking her away again. You can’t keep your guard up all the time. Also, Shai Zi already has his sights on you, and he’s stronger than you. If you don’t get rid of him now, you will never know peace.”

“ Sigh, you are right.” Li Huowang pushed the door open and brought Li Sui into the house.

Even though Hong Da said he'd try, Fo Yulu and the others were clearly interested in the deal because they visited Li Huowang the next day.

“Ten years,” said Fo Yulu.

Hong Da could only shake his head at Fo Yulu's decision.

“You mean I can only use the sword for ten years in exchange for a Strayed One’s corpse? Are you crazy?” Li Huowang frowned, patting the big jar next to him.

“What? Do you really think that a Strayed One's corpse is enough to trade for a Twisted One's corpse? A Twisted One is even rarer than a Strayed One! Also, don’t forget that you stole that sword from me! You have no right to haggle with me!”

“And why can’t I haggle with you? A hundred years...”

“You fucker!” Several thumb-sized golden Buddhas crawled out of Fo Yulu’s robes.

“Lord Ji Xiang, we must not fight here. We are here to negotiate. We can talk it out.”

Hong Da became the mediator and stood in between them.

Both parties respected Hong Da and never fought even though it was tense.

Under his mediation, they both compromised, and a deal was made. Li Huowang was going to borrow the spine sword for twenty years in exchange for a Strayed One's corpse.

Fo Yulu had used the Surveillance Bureau as the witness to make sure that Li Huowang would return the weapon.

Back in the hall of screens of the Surveillance Bureau, Li Huowang stamped his thumb on the red ink before stamping on several papers.

Fo Yulu smiled at the sight, and Li Huowang instantly realized that she had profited more from this deal than him.

However, Li Huowang didn't really care. Twenty years was more than enough time for him to complete his cultivation.

He took his copy of the papers and thanked Hong Da. "Thanks, may we meet again soon."

Hong Da smiled bitterly and followed Fo Yulu out.

Li Huowang was the only one left behind the screen. He took the spine sword from his back and inspected it.

Good, now I can use it officially. No need to hide it any longer.

He was about to remove the strips of cloth when he felt someone near him.

Li Huowang swung his sword toward the left. However, two long fingernails clamped the tip of the sword, stopping it.

Li Huowang frowned. "How's everything?"

It was the old eunuch from the palace; he was Ji Lin's helper as well.

The old eunuch let go of the sword and said, "Ah... you've become important to our Lord, so how could you just disappear like that? We've been looking for you, but we haven't been able to find you at all until now."

"Ji Lin is looking for me?"

Chapter 545 - East Gate

Li Huowang stood in the large hall and stared at the throne hidden in the shadow. He was thinking about how to answer Ji Lin.

“Er Jiu, where have you been?” Ji Lin asked lazily, his voice rolling from the darkness.

“There was some urgent business on my side.”

“Heh. You are working for me, and you dare say you were dealing with your own business?”

“Prince Ren is dead. Who should I kill next?” Li Huowang changed the topic deliberately.

Ji Lin used his two remaining fingers to tap the throne. “Fine. You are a straightforward person, so I will be one too. I have one last remaining sister. Go ahead and kill her.”

Last remaining sister?! Li Huowang’s eyes shrunk from shock.

Ji Lin somehow sensed his surprise and chuckled, “Er Jiu, it’s all thanks to you creating chaos in the palace. If it hadn’t been for you, I wouldn’t have gotten this far. While you are a sharp sword, there’s no reason for me not to have a few more sharp swords, so don’t get cocky.”

His voice faltered, and someone stood out from behind the throne. There were some unfamiliar faces behind the throne.

Li Huowang didn’t recognize most of them, but he saw a familiar face holding a gold ingot.

He was none other than Prince Ren’s Scholar God of Wealth! He had defected to Ji Lin!

Staring at Ji Lin in the darkness, Li Huowang felt pressure mounting in his heart. Ji Lin had changed too fast and had expanded his influence to the limits using the space that Li Huowang had made for him.

“Er Jiu, do you accept? Say something, or do you have other private matters to attend to?”

One of the eunuchs who had coins for eyes held the royal decree to Li Huowang.

“I will take it.” Li Huowang took the decree and left.

Standing underneath the dark skies, he opened it and saw that it was information for his next target, Princess Anping.

Ji Lin even gave him a picture, as if he was afraid that Li Huowang wouldn’t know what she looked like.

Princess Anping was just a budding lady; she was even younger than Yang Na.

The mole above the right side of her lip made her look even prettier.

However, Li Huowang dared not underestimate her. Out of the nine of them, only two were remaining, and Princess Anping was one of them, so she definitely had some tricks up her sleeves.

After coming out from the palace, Li Huowang bought a messenger pigeon and started rummaging through his body.

He found a bamboo slip with the full moon carved onto it. He scraped it out of his body.

It was used to communicate with Liu Zongyuan in the Moongate. Since he was good with information, he decided to ask Liu Zongyuan about the Chief’s whereabouts.

He tied the bamboo slip onto the pigeon’s legs. He then took his weapons and slowly made his way to Princess Anping’s palace.

“What are your plans with the princess?” Zhuge Yuan asked.

“Nothing. I will drag for time. I might be able to help her reduce Ji Lin’s authority, too. Ji Lin is growing too fast. I don’t know if he would help me defeat Shai Zi like this.”

Zhuge Yuan nodded his head with satisfaction and stepped back.

Li Huowang had never forgotten his original goal, which was to kill Shai Zi and save Bai Lingmiao.

He didn't care who would become the emperor. He only needed time to deal with Shai Zi.

Li Huowang entered her palace and felt relieved when he saw a substitute body of the princess.

Luckily, she was quite smart, which gave Li Huowang an excuse to fool Ji Lin for some time by saying that he was trying to locate her true body.

That was how he kept still in the princess's palace without doing anything. He even took care of some of the spies for her.

On the third day, Li Huowang received Liu Zongyuan's letter.

"Brother Er Jiu, you want to find the Chief? The Surveillance Bureau is not your house, and you don't have the qualifications to meet him, but you can wait at the East Gate on the twenty-third day of the month. I've heard that he would bring a lot of people out of the city. It's up to you whether you can find him or not. I can only help you this much."

Li Huowang kept the letter and immediately jumped down from the tree. He took Li Sui toward the east gate.

The Chief was much more important than some princesses.

There were now two Chiefs in the Liang Kingdom. Now that he can find where Shai Zi was, he only needed to convince the two Chiefs.

He soon reached the East Gate and waited anxiously beside a tea stall.

According to Liu Zongyuan's report, the Chief would bring a lot of people out of town. Li Huowang would definitely spot them easily due to the size of their party.

Time slowly passed, and the sun slowly set. Li Huowang became nervous.

Why is he still not here? Was Liu Zongyuan's information erroneous? Didn't they say that Moongate's information is very accurate?

“Senior Li! Is that you!? We finally found you!”

Li Huowang had almost stabbed the person who had hugged his leg, but Puppy was saved by his familiar voice.

It wasn't just Puppy, the entire Lu family was here as well, and it was all thanks to a beggar, who told them Li Huowang's whereabouts.

Lu Xiucan didn't want to appear heartless and hugged Li Huowang's other leg but was kicked away instead.

“Why are you here?” Li Huowang carried Puppy like a chick.

“Senior Li, we are here to find you. You've said that you'd treat Senior Bai's eyes, but it's been so long since you left that we got too worried. We were really anxious and depressed.”

Puppy surreptitiously wiped a finger on his eyes to force out some tears.

“Go back home!” Li Huowang pointed at the exit and urged, “You're not supposed to be here! Shangjing is very dangerous at the moment!”

“Yeah! Master, Shangjing is so dangerous! We got bullied here! You must avenge us, Master!”

Lu Xiucan hugged Li Huowang's leg again.

Chapter 546 - Pursuit

Li Huowang found it annoying that these familiar people just had to appear before him today. He didn't expect that they'd come here and kick up a fuss at a critical juncture.

All of a sudden, Li Huowang's expression changed when the sound of galloping hooves entered his ears. He turned and saw twelve sleek horses pulling a carriage the size of a small house. The horses were belching yellow smoke as they raced toward the East Gate.

From the tokens on the waists of the riders, Li Huowang could tell that the person he was looking for was inside of that carriage.

“Um, Daoist, there’s something I need to discuss with you. Are you familiar with anyone in Shangjing? Someone influential with power and authority.”

“I truly don’t want to bother you, but I need to buy a theater in Shangjing. I need some connection to buy one. I also need some money but don’t worry; you’ll be the owner, and as for the sharing...” Lu Zhuangyuan trailed off upon seeing Li Huowang’s odd expression. He then bent down to pull his shameless son up to the ground.

Li Huowang pinched Puppy, and his incessant talking transformed into a squeal. Then, he dared not talk anymore.

When the carriage entered the East Gate, Li Huowang let go of Puppy and grabbed the latter by the neck before saying, “Listen to me! Go back to Cowheart Village immediately! No one is to come looking for me again! If you don’t want to listen to me, then you and your wife can leave the village!”

Li Huowang gave the Lu Family Troupe a cold glance. Everyone fell silent and dared not even breathe too loudly.

The former Daoist was usually reasonable, but it seemed he was truly angry today.

“Li Sui, let’s go!” Li Huowang said. He rushed toward the dirt-scattered road and left behind the speechless group of people.

“What’s wrong with Senior Li? Is he sick again? This shouldn’t be. He never acted like this before. And what about Miaomiao? How come she disappeared when her eyes are already healed?” Puppy muttered in surprise while massaging his neck.

“Maybe the Daoist has something urgent to attend to. So what should we do next? Say something,” Lu Zhuangyuan puffed on his tobacco pipe.

“He’s so ruthless toward his own, but since Senior Li has spoken, what else can we do? Let’s go back home.”

The others were relieved at Puppy’s words. In this place where even drinking water required money, they had had enough and wanted to leave as soon as possible.

The Lu Family Troupe and Puppy hastily grabbed bought dry rations and began to make their way back home.

Meanwhile, the letter that Puppy had commissioned some wandering merchants to deliver had finally arrived at Cowheart Village.

In the Bai family courtyard, everyone sat on stools and listened to Gao Zhijian stutter out the content of the letter.

When they heard that Puppy hadn’t found Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao in Shangjing, their faces didn’t look good.

Chun Xiaoman especially was very anxious.

“It’s been so long, but why is there no news at all? Could something have happened to Miaomiao?”

“It’s impossible. Li Huowang is so powerful; who could defeat him? Maybe he’s busy with something, and he’ll come back soon.”

Zhao Wu softly comforted Chun Xiaoman, but it didn’t have much effect.

“I... I... I... I’ll go!” Gao Zhijian stood up firmly.

“If Puppy can’t even find him, how can you possibly find him? Senior Li is strong, so he must be fine.”

However, Gao Zhijian seemed to have made up his mind, and he walked toward his house.

He didn’t take much. He picked up his heavy armor, a halberd, some dried rations, and some money to buy more rations.

When he finished packing, he turned around and saw Chun Xiaoman standing with a carriage at the entrance to his courtyard.

“Don’t worry, I’m not here to persuade you. I know you’re not stupid, just a bit slow-witted. There must be a reason behind your decision to go out there.”

“I’ll be in the village, and there are already seven people who know divine incantations. Your troops are here as well, so the village is well protected.”

Gao Zhijian nodded silently, took the reins, and made his way toward the village.

After walking a few steps, he turned back and stammered to Chun Xiaoman, “I... I am... I am the emperor! I... I can... find... them!”

“I found them! They’re right in front!” Li Huowang looked at the clear carriage marks on the ground. The tentacles on his body allowed him to move at breakneck speeds.

He had also pasted two talismans on his legs; Li Huowang moved so fast that his figure became blurry.

Just as he was about to climb over a hill, Li Huowang twisted instinctively to dodge a flying vajra[1].

Li Huowang pushed himself off the ground and took to the air before pulling out his Surveillance Bureau's identity token. “Wait! I have an urgent matter to report to the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau!”

The attacks stopped, but Li Huowang was instantly surrounded the moment he landed on the ground.

A black bird circling in the air landed on one of the people's shoulders.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across them, but he felt like the Chief wasn't among them. He pondered briefly before speaking slowly, "May I know where's the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau? I have an important matter to report, and it is about the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

"Just talk to me. You're not qualified to see the Chief," a gloomy-looking man said, stepping forward with his hands behind his back. The compass in his hand pointed straight at Li Huowang. A long braid was hanging from the back of his head all the way down to his calves.

"I have a method to locate Shai Zi! I'm here to ask the Chief to make a move against that evil beast!"

Li Huowang had no intentions of hiding anything, and the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau would surely hear his words.

"Er Jiu, true name Ji Zai, Grand Elder of the Ao Jing Sect having ascended thrice, Seventh Banner of the Surveillance Bureau, Commander of the Left and Right Jinwu Guards, accompanied by a dog-faced evil spirit. Forty-six days ago, you snatched Ji Xiang Fo Yulu's Ancient Sword. You lived for a long time at the foot of Cowheart Mountain. Is that correct?"

Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine despite the gloomy-looking man's casual tone of voice. The latter knew more than Li Huowang had imagined.

"Yes, that's right! But there's one thing missing—the irreconcilable conflict between me and the Sitting Oblivion Dao!" Li Huowang roared with clenched fists.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and then narrated what he had experienced in the Great Qi, including everything about Shangji

Guankou.

There was a saying about how one had to hide a tree in a forest, and Li Huowang was proving the legitimacy of that saying.

“Nonsense! I’ve lived for so long, but I’ve never heard of that so-called Shangji Guankou!!”

The gloomy-looking man's words made Zhuge Yuan frown.

“Just because you haven’t heard of it does not mean that it doesn't exist. These ignorant people are the reason why Shangji Guankou is becoming rare to come by.”

Chapter 547 - Chief

Realizing that the people around him didn't immediately believe him, Li Huowang said, "Let me speak to the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau! He'll know whether I'm speaking the truth or not the moment he sees my reflection!"

The man with the whip was about to point his index finger sternly toward Li Huowang, but his expression suddenly changed.

He hesitated for a moment before taking two steps to the left, which created a path in the middle of the encirclement.

Great! Li Huowang felt refreshed. The Chief had definitely heard him. With his spirits lifted, he clenched his fists and walked down the path.

He passed through a small forested area and soon saw a huge carriage parked by a stream. The horses pulling the carriage were grazing and drinking water.

"Greetings, Chief of the Surveillance Bureau!" Li Huowang bowed to the carriage. The curtains lifted, and the Chief appeared before him.

This wasn't Li Huowang's first time seeing the Chief, but he had only seen the latter from afar.

Today, Li Huowang finally had a closer look at the highest authority of the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang noticed that the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau's physique was taller and wider than an ordinary person; he appeared like he had been magnified by one.

A large red Daoist robe obscured the Chief's figure, which made him emit a mysterious air.

At first, Li Huowang thought that the robe just had one color, but he realized that the robe's color was actually a gradient of red.

Crimson words flowed seamlessly along with the gradient. Li Huowang's eyes were keen enough to see the strokes of the characters, but he couldn't read them at all. It was more bizarre than the women's script, and each stroke had its own style, resembling both a drawing and strokes.

[illegible]

He dared not look too long at it, as though looking at it for too long would hollow out his soul.

He composed himself as he looked at the withered grass on the ground. Moments later, he began to speak about the matter at hand.

“Reporting to the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau, I have a way to find the hiding place of Shai Zi! Shai Zi is full of tricks, and I am truly incapable of dealing with them. I hope the Chief will exterminate the Shai Zi for the people's sake!”

"No need to explain; I heard what you said earlier. I just have one question; how did you discover the existence of Shangji Guankou? And how did you find them?" asked the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau in a bizarre voice that sounded neither male, female, young, nor old. However, Li Huowang couldn't care less about the Chief's voice, as he was focused on how he was supposed to answer.

He couldn't say that Zhuge Yuan's illusion had told him about Shangji Guankou's existence, as he couldn't risk exposing his true identity.

“It was through a stroke of luck. I stumbled upon them,” Li Huowang explained.

“A stroke of luck? Heh, are the youngsters nowadays unable to fabricate lies anymore?”

Li Huowang immediately felt several sharp gazes landing on him, and they were concentrated on the spine sword behind him.

"Is it really necessary for you to know that, Chief?" Li Huowang said, "I'm not lying. I really have a way to find Shai Zi!"

"You seem very anxious. Why?"

"Chief!" Li Huowang's voice raised a notch, and he sounded agitated as he said, "The Sitting Oblivion Dao dared to treat us—the Surveillance Bureau—as if were nothing on that fateful day! I simply can't withstand the humiliation!"

"In addition, many people have perished because of their machinations! Now that there's a chance for us to bring Shai Zi to justice, I'm naturally anxious to see that day!"

"So you want to make use of me?"

Li Huowang's heart turned cold. The other party was too wary of him. In the end, he decided to tell the truth. "I dare not make use of Chief. I just feel that we are on the same side of such a matter as big as killing Shai Zi."

"At least, you're straightforward. Well, I do want to kill Shai Zi."

Li Huowang relaxed, thinking that the matter was settled, but the Chief's following words made him feel anxious again.

"But, I have something to attend to at the moment. I can't spare any time for that right now, and it will take a while until I'm done with my matters."

I still need to wait? Li Huowang looked up at the Chief. He stared at the darkness above the Daoist robe and said, "Chief! What could be more important than killing Shai Zi?"

The Chief's strange robes trembled slightly as if the Chief was shaking his head, "You don't understand. There are many things in this world that are more important than Shai Zi."

"Enough. Even if I tell you, you won't understand it. In the meantime, I need you to perform that stroke of luck once again. Find Shangji Guankou, and help me obtain some secrets."

Li Huowang really wanted to refuse, but agreeing to the Chief's request meant that the Chief would also help him deal with Shai Zi.

A little wait wasn't that big of a big deal. Li Huowang also believed that he had gotten more than he had bargained.

Li Huowang didn't know what thoughts the other party had; all he wanted was Shai Zi's life.

"Rest assured, by the time you're back with the secrets that I need from Shangji Guankou, I should be ready to make a move by then."

"Chief, I can help you find Shangji Guankou, but it's a secret in exchange for a secret. Do you have enough secrets to exchange with Shangji Guankou?"

"Rest assured, I know much more than you do. You may withdraw now. It's time for you to wake up."

"Wait, Chief, how are you going to give those secrets—what... wake up?"

Just as the confused Li Huowang was trying to understand the meaning behind the Chief's words, the scenery around him dispersed like smoke, including the horses, the stream, and the people.

Li Huowang turned and saw a long line toward Shangjing's gates.

Li Huowang stood in place, unable to comprehend what he had just experienced. It was a surreal experience.

"A myriad of transformations, changing forms, rising, and disappearing. It is a transformation and an illusion. Truly worthy of the Great Liang's Chief. What an amazing illusion technique," Zhuge Yuan said, staring at the deep tread marks of a carriage on the ground with a rare look of admiration on his face.

Illusion technique? Li Huowang pondered. It turned out that everything he had experienced after stepping out of the city gates had all been an illusion. It was all fake.

Li Huowang felt a chill in his heart. He had unknowingly been deceived. If the other party had ill intent toward him, he would have died without being able to resist.

He wasn't one of the fighters on that fateful day, so he wasn't exactly sure about the Chief's strength. However, he was finally sure of it now. The highest authority of the Surveillance Bureau had terrifying power.

“Brother Li, calm down. Since he has agreed to help you, he wouldn't change his mind so easily.”

Li Huowang nodded. Indeed, the Chief is already on my side, so the stronger he is, the better it'll be for me.

Li Huowang drew out the spine sword and said to a young and slim woman next to him with a beauty mark on her lips. “Let's not delay any longer. We'll go to the Great Qi and look for Shangji Guankou.”

“All right.” the young woman said, smiling sweetly.

Chapter 548 - Great Qi

“Brother Li!”

Li Huowang had just lifted his sword and was about to use it when Zhuge Yuan’s unusually solemn voice gave him pause.

“Don’t look at me, and don’t talk to me! There’s something wrong with the woman by your side! You can’t let her know that you have an illusion beside you!”

Li Huowang asked Zhuge Yuan in his mind, “Brother Zhuge, what are you talking about? Isn’t she Shangguan Yuting?”

“Think about it again. During this period, where did you ever encounter Shangguan Yuting? She’s fake!” Zhuge Yuan said.

The old monk and the Sitting Oblivion Dao chimed in.

“Daoist, this woman suddenly appeared out of nowhere; there were no signs of her before.”

“Hehe, Boss Hong Zhong, I really can’t respect you if you’re getting fooled so easily.”

“Elder Er, what’s wrong? Aren’t we supposed to go to the Great Qi?” Shangguan Yuting asked, tilting her head in confusion. Her shiny hairpin swayed slightly as she looked at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang caught a whiff of her familiar fragrance as she carefully scrutinized his familiar-looking confidante.

He recalled everything clearly about this girl, especially when not reminded about it. However, when his other illusions prompted him, Li Huowang instantly realized the woman was full of flaws.

Moreover, she had Princess Anping's face, but he hadn’t found it strange until now.

Is this the technique of the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau? Being able to transform one person into another before someone’s eyes without them noticing it? Li Huowang had never expected that he would one day feel lucky as a Strayed One. If it hadn't been for his illusions, he would have fallen to the Chief's techniques. He added another layer of caution against the young woman. Now what? Everything was going well, so why did the Chief suddenly place her next to me?

"Li Sui, what's wrong with your father? Does he often daydream like this?" Shangguan Yuting asked Li Sui softly.

Li Huowang stepped forward and blocked Li Sui.

He didn't think continuing to conceal the truth would benefit him, so he decided to be direct. "Why are you doing this, Chief? Do you not trust me at all?"

Shangguan Yuting seemed unashamed and calmly asked, "Senior Er, what are you talking about? Didn't you say you need enough secrets to trade with Shangji Guankou?"

Shangguan Yuting pinched her dress and turned toward Li Huowang with a smile. "I'm the secret."

"You?!"

"Yes, after all, Elder Er may not have enough secrets to exchange, right? It'd be a pointless trip if I'm not there," Shangguan Yuting said in a matter-of-factly way. She made it sound like Li Huowang was overreacting.

However, Li Huowang understood that if he hadn't seen through the young woman's identity, he would have no idea what she would have done. She would have been able to twist her words as she pleased, after all.

If Li Huowang's strange behavior allowed her to deduce his true identity as a Strayed One, the consequences would be disastrous.

These people are all cunning old foxes. Dealing with them requires the utmost vigilance. Once distracted, we can fall easily into their traps.

"Elder Er, let's hurry to Great Qi. Let's finish the task for the Chief as soon as possible," Shangguan Yuting urged.

Li Huowang nodded silently and opened his mouth toward Li

Sui.

Shangguan Yuting was shocked upon seeing Li Sui burrowing into Li Huowang's body.

"Try to keep up; I won't wait for you!" Li Huowang gripped his sword tightly.

"Elder Er, what are you saying? I'll be wherever you are. Look, I don't even leave footprints."

Shangguan Yuting said. She walked past him without leaving a trace. Li Huowang could not figure out exactly what she was and how the Chief managed to do something like this.

Forget it. I'll consider it a deal with the Chief. I'll help them exchange a secret for Shangji Guankou, and they'll help me deal with Shai Zi .

Li Huowang did not hesitate. He gripped his sword, activated the talismans on his legs, and dashed into the darkness.

The sky darkened the moment he entered the Great Qi. It was so dark that Li Huowang couldn't even see where he was right now. Why is it so dark in Great Qi?

He was about to look up when Zhuge Yuan exclaimed, "Don't look up! This darkness isn't because of the absence of light. It's because of a Natural Disaster! It's a solar eclipse!"

Li Huowang forced himself to stop looking up.

He was just about to repeat the same mistake as last time and would have had to gouge out his eyes.

Suddenly, a giant claw swiftly emerged from the left and swung toward Li Huowang.

Swoosh!

Li Huowang forcefully severed the giant claw, and a strange scream echoed in the darkness. The claw was then retracted.

Li Huowang didn't let his guard down, as he could feel many eyes staring at him from the dark.

The Natural Disaster had transformed the Great Qi into a world of evil spirits. The reason they weren't attacking was that Li Huowang had sufficiently intimidated them.

“Elder Er, what’s going on with Great Qi? Should we go back to Great Liang and wait for the Natural Disaster to pass?”

Li Huowang gripped his spine sword as he stood still for a while, then spoke, “There’s no need. It won’t hinder me from finding Shangji Guankou. These evil spirits are not worth mentioning. How long is this Natural Disaster going to last? I can’t wait for it to end!”

Li Huowang gripped his sword and sprinted through the dark world. He cut down any evil spirits that dared to stand in his way.

Rest was not optimal in this place, as there were dangers everywhere. Fortunately, Li Huowang could return to Great Liang for meals and to rest.

Days ticked by, but the Natural Disaster remained strong.

Li Huowang realized just then that this Natural Disaster in Great Qi was different from the recent Natural Disaster in Great Liang.

More and more evil spirits appeared in the Great Qi, and they weren't weak.

“Die!” Li Huowang’s eyes were closed as he gripped his purple-tasseled sword and swung it forward.

He felt a slippery feedback. He thrust his left hand into the creature's body and severed his own left hand without any hesitation.

The next moment, the bone spikes burst out of the severed hand, killing the creature.

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief after hearing the heavy sound of something collapsing in the darkness. He had no idea what he had just encountered. He had also realized that some evil spirits were forbidden to look at. Li Huowang looked at one of them once, and his Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings became tumultuous, exacerbating his internal conflict. The world had become extremely bizarre, and it was all thanks to the Natural Disaster.

Just as Li Huowang felt Li Sui picking up his severed hand with her tentacles, his expression stiffened. He sprawled out on the ground and pressed his ear to the ground.

Chapter 549 - Xu Nian

Thump, thump, thump!

Heavy and chaotic footsteps pierced Li Huowang's ears through the earth. The myriad of footsteps made Li Huowang's expression become serious.

It had been some time since he arrived in Great Qi, but he had never heard such a large commotion before. The wave of enemies this time couldn't be trifled with.

I must bypass this commotion first, no matter what it is! Li Huowang closed his eyes, then stood up without hesitation and rushed in the completely opposite direction.

Li Sui's tentacles emerged from her body and probed around rapidly like a white cane for the blind.

"Daoist, you can open your eyes now; there's nothing dirty around."

Li Huowang slightly opened one eye when he heard the monk's words. He found himself inexplicably in a chaotic graveyard.

Under the Natural Disaster, the entire graveyard looked anything but peaceful. Some things were crawling around aimlessly in the distance.

Li Huowang ignored the terrifying environment, then immediately crouched down again and listened intently.

When he felt that the sound had become almost inaudible, Li Huowang finally breathed a sigh of relief.

He didn't come to Great Qi with the intention of killing evil spirits. Since Great Qi was becoming increasingly dangerous, he needed to find Shangji Guankou and leave as quickly as possible.

Li Huowang gathered his spirits and rushed toward the direction Zhuge Yuan had pointed out. He thought to himself, “Brother Zhuge, how far are we from Shangji Guankou? I’m afraid that we’re running out of time.”

However, Li Huowang realized that Zhuge Yuan hadn't responded. After asking a few times in a row, Zhuge Yuan finally reacted. He had one hand behind his back while he silently looked around the chaotic graveyard.

“Not far, almost there,” Zhuge Yuan said in a deep voice and silently observed the scattered corpses.

Li Huowang seemed to understand what Zhuge Yuan was thinking.

As a Storyteller in the past, Zhuge Yuan had always been ready to share information about the Great Qi, and he had never been shy to advertise that he was from the Great Qi.

Upon seeing that the Great Qi had been reduced to such a state, Li Huowang believed that Zhuge Yuan definitely wasn't in the best mood right now.

More importantly, Li Huowang couldn't console him now, since the situation in Great Qi currently wasn't looking too optimistic. He didn't know what kind of more scary outcomes there would be in the future.

But Li Huowang couldn't afford to consider such major issues, since he was too busy handling his own affairs.

He had just prepared to continue on when a cold wind blew past, causing half of his body to lose sensation momentarily.

Here again?! Li Huowang took the bronze coin sword from Li Sui's tentacles and swung it toward the direction of the cold wind. It cut off a large chunk of darkness, revealing a piece of human skin floating in the air.

The piece of human skin immediately opened in the air when it saw that Li Huowang could still move. It resembled a big bird as it swooped toward him.

Just as Li Huowang tightened his grip on the sword hilt, prepared to cut the piece of human skin in half, it suddenly went limp and floated gently to the ground.

“Huh?” Li Huowang was extremely puzzled. He used the bronze coin sword in his hand to pick up the piece of human skin. Why did it suddenly stop moving?

When he saw that the piece of human skin was indeed dead, Li Huowang exerted some force with his wrist and split apart the skin on the bronze coin sword.

The white human skin shifted from Li Huowang’s sight, and a strange face was revealed.

It was a woman’s face with a red heart drawn on her brows. Her unblinking eyes made her appear extremely strange in the darkness.

However, that alone wouldn’t have frightened Li Huowang. Her face was coated with rouge, and it was split apart to reveal white paper with messy calligraphy underneath the skin.

“Is it you?” The woman stared straight at Li Huowang, her voice delicate as she uttered this inexplicable question.

Li Huowang wouldn’t waste any time conversing with such things. He tightened his grip on the spine sword and swung it toward the strange face without any hesitation.

“It’s you; it’s really you. Are you okay?” the large face shifted to the left, almost sticking to the crack while dodging the attack.

A pale green glowing stone was hurled into the distance, and the green light illuminated the darkness, allowing Li Huowang to see the woman clearly as the green light illuminated the darkness.

The only thing human about her was her face; she had a huge and sturdy four-footed beast body, which was covered in dark brown fur.

She had a fiery red mane, and her limbs had three claws; she also had a lion-like tail, which swayed from side to side as she moved.

A piece of rusty armor engraved with green fangs hung around her chest with chains. It made her look even more ferocious and terrifying.

What is this thing? Li Huowang's expression turned very ugly. Just from its appearance, it was clear that this thing was rather different from the ordinary evil spirits he had dealt with previously.

"What do you want? We can talk!" However, the other party did not respond to Li Huowang's negotiation at all.

What's going on? Could it be that she's just learning to speak and can't understand human speech?

Just as Li Huowang was thinking this, the creature had already rushed up, with its three sharp claws whistling toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's body flashed backward as he shifted ten feet in an instant to avoid the attack. The corpse on the ground took the blow for him.

Following that, Li Huowang witnessed a chilling scene. The semi-rotten middle-aged corpse aged rapidly at a rate visible to the naked eye, and it eventually turned into an old man.

Li Huowang swung his spine sword, but the opponent easily dodged the crack.

"Brother Li, be careful; this is a Nian."

"Nian?"

"Yes, not Wan Nian[1], but Xu Nian[2]. Don't have any physical contact with her, or she'll take away your lifespan."

Li Huowang found himself in a precarious situation, as he was unable to touch or hurt it.

Li Huowang had planned to retreat back to Great Liang using the crack, but Xu Nian seemed to have seen through his moves. Every time he cut open a spacetime rift in front of him, she'd rushed over immediately to disrupt him.

Li Huowang could only keep retreating under the constant pressure, and his expression became increasingly solemn. In the end, he grabbed two ribs from his belly button and thrust them forcefully into his own chest.

Xu Nian howled with her legs raised.

Li Huowang unleashed his killing intent and roared, “So you know what’s pain, too!”

Taking advantage of his opponent’s pain, he pulled out a dagger and opened his Daoist robes. He picked out a bloody piece of human skin, which flew up and landed on the Xu Nian’s head.

Blurry facial features flashed intermittently on the human skin. Xu Nian shook her head but couldn't shake off the human skin.

1. The raws for this is 𪛗年. I found nothing about it 🤔

2. The raws for this is 虚年. While the search came up empty, there is actually something called a Nian(年)beast and a nominal age(虚岁). The Nian beast is a mythological beast that barges into homes during the night of the New Years to eat people. The Nominal Age is when a person is counted as one year old on the day of birth, and becomes one year older, each year, on the day the Chinese New Year is celebrated. This means that, in China, nominal age is usually exaggerated by one to two years as compared with actual age. 🤔

The enigmatic Xu Nian. Credits to 格子的乱七八糟!

Chapter 550 - Dragon

Li Huowang faced the trapped Xu Nian. He took to the air with his six tentacles and legs.

He raised the bronze coin sword up high and roared, “Die!”

The next moment, the sharp tip of the sword pierced through the left eye socket on the human skin, and it easily emerged from the back of Xu Nian's head.

Li Huowang didn't forget the taboo mentioned by Zhuge Yuan. He pushed hard with both hands on the sword hilt and sent himself flying away before landing gracefully on the ground.

However, Xu Nian remained standing, even though the bronze coin sword was sticking out of her head.

Li Huowang's expression became extremely ugly at the sight.

Li Huowang found that his left foot had been pierced by a red spike at some point, and it had become old.

Clearly, Xu Nian was far more intelligent than he initially thought. She even knew how to exchange injuries for injuries, as well as set up traps to prevent him from using the spine sword to escape.

What is this thing made of? A sword specifically made to combat evil has been inserted into its head, but it doesn't react at all!

Li Huowang firmly took off the red Daoist robe on his body and threw it on the ground, then pulled out the flint from his pocket.

Xu Nian, pierced by the sword, stood still in place and did not charge at him. Instead, her face covered by the human skin looked to the left.

Her huge beast body lowered slightly as a low beastly growl came from under the human skin.

Thump, thump, thump!

All of a sudden, the familiar heavy and chaotic footsteps echoed once again, but they had gotten even closer. The noises sounded so close that they sounded ear-piercing to Li Huowang.

He tilted his head slightly. In the chaotic darkness, he saw a hill-sized object moving towards him along with the footsteps.

It had gotten very close now. With his excellent eyesight, Li Huowang managed to see the appearance of that thing clearly in the dark.

Lanterns, dragon flags, round jade, rings, bells. There were various old and dusty decorations densely covering this towering wooden building before him.

There were four pillars painted with red clouds and dragons, wrapped around with black and blue satin ribbons. Curtains made up of black clouds and dragon feathers hung between the pillars, which held the entire wooden structure together tightly.

The heavy and chaotic footsteps came from beneath this wooden structure, with various tattered eunuch figures that resembled skeletons. Their heads were tightly wrapped in white cloth strips, and they pulled forward on the ropes just like mules.

Although everything on this wooden building was very dilapidated, filthy, and even decayed, Li Huowang still saw at a glance that this thing was the imperial chariot of the emperor of Great Qi!

He never thought that the noise he had just heard was actually the little zombie emperor of Great Qi!

Li Huowang sensed a strong gaze from the wooden building that was deadlocked on him.

He glanced at Xu Nian in the distance, then at the emperor's chariot, which approached him with an overwhelming presence, and he cursed inwardly. This damned place! I've never had any luck here!

There was no need for words. Li Huowang opened his mouth wide and spat out Li Sui. Then, he slashed the spine sword at her to send her back to the Great Liang. Immediately afterward, he raised the flint and swiped it at his own skin.

Boom!

Li Huowang burst into flames. He became a blazing torch that illuminated everything around him.

Li Huowang glanced at Xu Nian through the dancing flames before rushing toward the huge imperial chariot.

Compared to the mysterious and unpredictable Xu Nian, the emperor seemed to be easier to deal with; he looked more flammable, too.

Li Huowang heard other noises aside from footsteps as he got closer to the chariot.

“Long live my emperor... Thanks to the Lord’s kindness... Blessings to the emperor...” These words were repeatedly uttered mechanically by the wooden-like eunuchs while pulling the chariot along with them.

The next moment, as Li Huowang raised his right hand, the eunuchs instantly caught fire and became living torches.

Li Huowang’s feet were injured, so he couldn’t move that quickly. However, he had many tricks up his sleeves.

Boom!

Peng Longteng smashed down heavily beside Li Huowang. The giant palm grabbed the ablaze Li Huowang and threw him towards the highest point of the imperial chariot.

As Li Huowang crashed into it, the cloud-patterned curtains caught fire and burned to ashes. Li Huowang saw the little emperor of Great Qi amidst the flames.

He was a child that was only six or seven years old. He was wearing a large dragon robe and sat on the even larger dragon throne, looking extremely out of place.

Even more mismatched was his appearance. He had heard that the little emperor of Great Qi was already dead and was a zombie. But he only saw a chubby child with innocent-looking eyes.

In the next moment, this unusually normal child began to rise while the dragon robe under him rose higher and higher.

When the dragon robe was fully lifted, the Dragon Vein stacked underneath was finally revealed.

Who would have thought that this little emperor of Great Qi was not alone and that he had already connected to the Dragon Vein while he was still alive?

A fierce wind roared as the entire Dragon Vein coiled in the air. At the top, the little emperor opened his chubby hands and clapped while he giggled with joy.

A powerful aura pressed down, which even suppressed the flames on Li Huowang's body from surging upward.

Swoosh! Li Huowang gripped the spine sword and slashed forcefully toward the sky. The crack flew over but had no effect on that thing at all!

Since acquiring the spine sword, it was the first time that he saw this gap that cut through two timelines had no damage at all.

The body of the Dragon Vein suddenly shook. An afterimage flew across and struck Li Huowang heavily.

He spat out blood as he was knocked out of the flaming imperial chariot. The flames on his body extinguished instantly while everything around him blurred. Shangguan Yuting or Zhuge Yuan all became intermittently bright and dark.

As he was about to fall to the ground from a great height, he suddenly closed his eyes and felt himself plunge into icy cold lake water.

He struggled to swim to the surface, then opened his eyes again. He found that half of his body was buried in the soil.

"Brother Zhuge, are you all right?" Li Huowang asked anxiously as he climbed out of the soil.

Zhuge Yuan said something with urgency, but Li Huowang couldn't hear a thing.

He saw Zhuge Yuan pointing towards the imperial chariot, and he turned his head to see the Great Qi Dragon Vein. It was like a real dragon that charged down towards him with immense pressure.

An angry roar caused the Dragon Vein to stop abruptly in mid-air as it started to coil and intertwine its head and tail together.

Li Huowang turned towards the source of the sound. He saw that it actually came from Xu Nian. Her hair bristled with anger at the appearance of the Dragon Vein.

Li Huowang looked down at his injured leg. Give it a try! I'll take advantage of their conflict and return to Great Liang first!

He immediately took action, and he raised the spine sword to slash out a crack and dashed forward.

The next moment, the Dragon Vein swept down and instantly shattered the crack into fragments.

It seemed that the Dragon Vein was strongly repulsed by the appearance of these rifts in the two timelines. It ignored Xu Nian's provocation and headed straight for Li Huowang.

The overlapping Dragon Vein moved extremely quickly and with great force, crushing half of Li Huowang's left shoulder in one fell swoop.

Li Huowang stabbed the Dragon Vein from behind with his purple-tasseled sword, but this injury was not much different than a mosquito bite.

This was the first time Li Huowang had faced such a powerful enemy, and he felt like even going all out was going to be useless against such a powerful foe.

Chapter 551 - Year

“Haha.” Blood flowed down from the wound on his forehead. It flowed across his scar and into his mouth before overflowing and dripping down onto the ground from his charred chin. The blood slowly seeped deeper into the earth.

Li Huowang was in a bad spot. Everything has been useless so far. His talismans, his spine sword capable of creating a rift in between timelines, the bronze coin sword capable of slaying evil beings, or even his purple-tasseled sword that could cut through steel like butter. All of it was useless.

More importantly, even his techniques as a Sitting Oblivion Dao and the Ao Jing Sect were useless.

This was the first time Li Huowang had met such a troublesome opponent after coming to this crazy world.

He finally understood why Zhuge Yuan told him that the Sitting Oblivion Dao would not try to fight the Dragon Vein.

He had one more technique, the Cang-Qiang Ascension. It could work, but he had no idea where to find the utmost mental pain.

The familiar sound of air ripping came again. He saw a massive shadow lashing out to his head.

His body would disintegrate if he was hit by it.

Bam! Peng Longteng’s large body appeared in front of Li Huowang and caught the shadow.

The shadow was none other than the Dragon Veins made from the past emperors of the Qi Kingdom.

The emperors appeared to be glued together by nothing, but the impact suggested that the Dragon Vein was as strong as reinforced steel.

Numerous dragon claws pierced into Peng Longteng's chest, but she was not afraid.

But no matter how strong she was, the Dragon Vein was leagues above her. The Dragon Vein compressed and expanded rapidly before batting Peng Longteng away.

Li Huowang took this chance to retreat out of the Dragon Vein's attack range.

He was stuck in a grueling situation, but he did not give up. He was not alone, after all.

A lion-like roar came from the other side, which distracted Dragon Vein from attacking Li Huowang.

It was Xu Nian. Now that they were both in danger, they had no choice but to work together to survive.

The human-faced beast leaped onto the Dragon Vein and decapitated the heads of four emperors!

The Qi Kingdom's emperor at the top of the Dragon Vein and opened his mouth, revealing a single front tooth as he cried out, “Uwaaaaaaaaa~”

As the veil on his head jingled, the Dragon Vein moved swiftly and wrapped around Xu Nian like a snake.

Xu Nian continued to attack the emperors, but they were already old to begin with. Xu Nian could not plunder any more lifespan from them.

Xu Nian was gradually getting squeezed into a tube when Li Huowang held his spine sword and catapulted himself to the Dragon Vein's head with Peng Longteng's help.

Even though Xu Nian had tried to kill him just now, Li Huowang had to save her at all costs. Otherwise, the Dragon Vein would be able to focus all of its wrath on Li Huowang.

When Li Huowang was close enough to see his own reflections in the young emperor's eyes, the Dragon Vein finally moved. Numerous heads of the past emperors blocked Li Huowang's vision.

Li Huowang focused, causing Peng Longteng's body to crash into the Dragon Vein and charging toward the young emperor.

But several hands reached out and grabbed Peng Longteng before tossing her to the ground.

The Dragon Vein also attacked at the same time by launching its massive body toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's legs were been injured, and he had to come up with something fast!

Suddenly, the Sitting Oblivion Dao's illusion materialized in front of Li Huowang. The Sitting Oblivion Dao stared in shock and horror as he became the meat shield for Li Huowang.

Li Huowang never expected his attacks to work, but thanks to his distraction, Xu Nian managed to escape the Dragon Vein's coil.

Li Huowang panted as he pushed away the Sitting Oblivion Dao that had been reduced to meat paste as he checked his wounds. He shouted at Xu Nian from afar, "You and me! We fight together or we both die! We don't have a deep grudge in between us so there's no need to fight to the death!"

Xu Nian removed the human face on her head and nodded at Li Huowang.

"We kill the young one," Xu Nian said, surprising Li Huowang.

The Dragon Vein pounced on Li Huowang once more and he had no choice but to retreat.

"All right! You deal with the old one, and I will kill the young one!" Li Huowang exclaimed.

Xu Nian nodded and stared at the Dragon Vein that was chasing Li Huowang. She raised her front paws and stomped the ground.

Her red fur grew bright as it started growing, making her body look like a lion dance.

The red furs spread out everywhere in the darkness as if they were looking for something. The darkness retreated with her standing in the middle of it.

She maintained that state for almost half a day. Li Huowang shouted out of desperation and anger as he was being attacked by the Dragon Vein. "What are you doing?! Stop spacing out!"

Li Huowang no longer looked like a human. Half of his face was torn away, one of his arms was broken, and a huge chunk of flesh on his abdomen was gone.

If it hadn't been for the "immortal" Peng Longteng tanking most of the attacks, he would've died.

But that was his limit. Li Huowang's head was pounding, signaling that he could no longer maintain Peng Longteng's materialization.

He had just shouted when Xu Nian moved. Her movement was beyond bizarre. She was charging toward the Dragon Vein, but there was still an afterimage of her at the original location.

But that was not all. Everywhere she moved, she would leave behind a red afterimage. The images linked together to form a single red line.

Li Huowang didn't know what it was doing, but he knew that this was her ultimate move. Their survival depended on her attack.

Li Huowang sheathed the spine sword on his back, and Peng Longteng grabbed his injured figure.

When the Xu Nian clashed with the Dragon Vein, Peng Longteng threw Li Huowang toward the Dragon Vein.

Two beasts, one yellow and one red, clashed together. Bizarre changes occurred in everything that collided with the red light.

Li Huowang's wounds healed rapidly before decaying the next moment.

However, Li Huowang wasn't the only one affected. The barren soil grew grass, and the stars in the skies started moving.

The same phenomena affected even the Dragon Vein. The ancient bodies of the past emperors regained their youth.

However, this was bad news to the Dragon Vein. Their bodies shivered as if they would separate at any time.

Chapter 552 - Death

The Dragon Vein resisted Xu Nian's profound attacks and struggled as it tried to coil Xu Nian's afterimages.

Li Huowang almost reached the Dragon Vein, but it was already on guard. Ten dragon claws swiped toward Li Huowang.

But their attacks phased through Li Huowang's illusion. Peng Longteng suddenly appeared and threw the invisible Li Huowang toward the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom.

It was definitely a 'young' emperor, as the baby had turned into a blob, becoming what looked like a fist-sized fetus.

Li Huowang extended his hands and unsheathed his purple-tassel sword to slash the young emperor.

"Junior Li! You can't kill it like that! You have to sever his connection to the Dragon Vein first!"

Hearing Zhuge Yuan, Li Huowang moved his sword three inches to the side.

With the sound of tearing flesh and spraying blood, the back of the young emperor was separated from the Dragon Vein.

He then flicked the sword and stabbed the embryo in the chest.

The ugly-looking embryo howled in pain and scratched at the blade to dislodge it, but ultimately he lost his strength. His head went limp and stopped moving.

Li Huowang still had the young emperor's corpse stuck to his sword as he fell downwards when the 'decapitated' Dragon Vein started expanding its body.

Thick blood, strange organs, messy scales, and dragon horns sprouted out from its body.

The eyes of the past emperors glared at Li Huowang with eternal hatred.

All of them revealed their dragon claws and charged at Li Huowang, or more accurately, the corpse of the young emperor on Li Huowang's sword.

“Junior Li! Be careful! The Dragon Qi will revive the young emperor! Do not let them touch him. Throw him into the Liang Kingdom!”

Li Huowang swung his sword, and the corpse of the young emperor fell into the red line made from Xu Nian's afterimages.

He then swung the spine sword and transported the young emperor into the Liang Kingdom along with part of the red line.

Li Huowang was already very close to the ground when he finished doing that.

He took a deep breath and imagined himself to be falling into a pool of water.

He felt the cold water splashing past his skin, but rather than swimming upwards, he swam sideways and tried to escape as far as possible.

He swam until he couldn't hold his breath any longer before surfacing. He felt his brain pounding and the water slowly becoming thicker until the pressure around him was barely tolerable.

Bam!

Li Huowang broke through the surface of the earth and spat out chunks of dirt. He ignored his wounds and turned to look at where the Dragon Vein was located.

However, the ground trembled before he could see anything.
Earthquake?

Sand and stones flew everywhere in the darkness, and the sky changed. There was nothing Li Huowang could do due to his injury. All he could do was sprawl out on the ground and wait for the earthquake to pass.

An unknown amount of time later, the earthquake stopped, and his wounds had scabbed over as well.

He used his sword as a support and stood up before looking around.

Wait, why is it so bright? Is the Natural Disaster gone? Li Huowang carefully looked up and saw that the darkness covering the skies was gone.

However, he didn't even have the time to celebrate when he saw something wrong with the sun. Rather than being a normal ball of light, some black spots had blotted out parts of the sun.

"Oh no. The Heavenly Dog has eaten the sun." The old monk's illusion used his right hand to cover his eyes as he looked at the strange phenomena.

What's wrong with this world? Is it real? Li Huowang immediately realized the mistake that he had made. NO! I can't doubt myself! I'm a Strayed One! I cannot doubt myself or something bad will happen!

Li Huowang slammed his fists on his head.

After pounding his own head a few times, Li Huowang stopped, not because he wanted to, but because there was danger.

Slam!

A thick claw struck the ground and blew the cloud of dust away. Xu Nian's figure then emerged from the dust.

Xu Nian was also heavily injured from the battle with the Dragon Vein. Most of her red fur was gone, and there were cracks on her face. Still, her injuries appeared better than Li Huowang's injuries.

Li Huowang held his sword tightly and stared at the woman's broken face. "You still want to fight me? Since you can understand me, you should also know that we don't have any grudges between us, right?" Li Huowang showed no fear as he gritted his teeth.

Xu Nian didn't respond. Instead, her face revealed a complicated expression as if she wanted to say something to him.

However, Li Huowang wasn't going to wait for an answer as he stepped back slowly. Just as Xu Nian was about to disappear into the cloud of dust, a female voice filled with yearning came from within her.

"I wish to write to my loved one, but the mountains are vast, and the seas are endless. How will I ever find him?"

ONE?! Had she realized that I'm a Strayed One?! Li Huowang immediately raised his weapons out of reflex.

However, he soon realized that Xu Nian was gone for good, and he could have misheard her as well.

"She said loved one' right? Senior Zhuge, what was she talking about?"

Zhugue Yuan stared at where Xu Nian had disappeared before speaking in a hushed tone. "Xu Nian copies the words of others, so it's probably nothing. Junior Li, you should probably go back and rest. You're heavily injured, after all."

Li Huowang looked at him and then at his own broken leg. "How can I chase after the rift to go back to the Liang Kingdom? It's best if I stay here and rest for a while."

Li Huowang held his sword and wore his red robes again. Then, he found a boulder and leaned against it.

Soon, the dust settled, and something unexpected appeared in front of him.

What was once the plains was now a cliff. He was sitting at the edge of a cliff.

What's happening? Li Huowang looked down at the chaotic scene beneath the cliff and then looked up at the sun covered in black spots. His brain started hurting, and he felt like he was in a dream.

Zhugue Yuan looked at the scene and shook his head. "I don't know what's going on."

Chapter 553 - Departure

On a dirt path hidden by the dense trees, Li Sui was orbiting the same clearing, seemingly looking for something.

The dirt path was covered in claw marks. Clearly, she had been looking for that something for a very long time now.

She had been looking for Li Huowang, but she hadn't been able to find him.

Li Sui got more and more anxious as time ticked by. She had gotten so used to living with Li Huowang that she became extremely anxious at the thought of losing him forever.

Just as tears rolled down from the edges of her eyes, a rift appeared on her left, and a heavily injured Li Huowang popped out of the rift.

“Dad!”

Li Sui pounced at Li Huowang and licked the bottom of his chin with her tentacles.

“You're heavy! And I'm too injured to carry you! Get off me!” Li Huowang used a lot of strength to push Li Sui away.

“Dad. Why did you throw me away? I thought I'd lose you forever,” Li Sui asked, circling around Li Huowang.

“I was afraid that you would burn while in my body, so I threw you to safety. It's all right; everything's fine now,” Li Huowang said, patting her head.

Feeling safe again, Li Sui placed her white skull on Li Huowang's palm and rubbed against him. “Dad, can we go back now?”

“Not yet. We still haven't found Shangji Guankou. Let's go back and recover first.”

Li Huowang looked at the dense forest around him before staring at the sunset with a perfectly normal sun.

He felt weird. The Great Qi was essentially in ruins, but the Great Liang was at peace.

It was hard to believe that both sides were so close to each other.

He had no idea what it meant to him, but he didn't care. There were too many unexplainable things here in this world, and there was no reason for him to find the answers to all of his questions.

Now that he was back in the familiar Liang Kingdom, his heart relaxed completely. At the same time, the accumulated fatigue finally struck him.

"Dad, are you alright?" Li Sui extended her tentacles to hold him. "Are you hungry? Thirsty?"

"It's alright. I can survive this. Just take me to the side and let me rest." Li Huowang endured the pain as he looked down at the hole in his abdomen. He pushed his organs back into his torso before they could fall out of him.

Li Sui's tentacles entered through the hole and soon she completely disappeared as she filled Li Huowang's body with her tentacles. The wounds closed up too.

"Dad, are you feeling better now?"

Hearing her voice inside of him, Li Huowang patted one of the tentacles and said, "Much better. On second thought, we don't have time to waste. We should back to the Qi Kingdom and find Shangji Guankou as soon as possible."

"Are you sure? Aren't you afraid that you will die there?" Shangguan Yuting said, sounding worried as she stared at the heavily injured Li Huowang.

"No need! It's better to finish this quick!" Li Huowang took out the spine sword again and unwrapped it.

"The Great Qi's Natural Disaster has finally passed, so we need to seize that opportunity. Who knows how long the peace would last over there? The opportunity would be wasted if we wait for too long, and the Great Qi disappears.”

Li Huowang took a deep breath and swung the spine sword. A spacetime rift manifested in the distance, and he charged decisively into it.

He had just entered the rift when a carriage ran past where Li Huowang had been moments ago. The carriage was heading toward Shangjing.

The one driving the carriage looked at the dense pawprints on the ground before shouting into the carriage, “We’ll rest once we get back home! There are too many giant insects around here.”

A woman sounded dissatisfied as she remarked, “That’s not what you said earlier! Ah... go slower. This carriage is bouncing so much that it’s hurting my butt.”

“Why are you so ungrateful? If it wasn’t because of the gentleman pitying us, we wouldn’t even have the chance to sit in one.”

He had just said that when the curtains opened up. A hand with a silver wristband grabbed the driver’s ears. “Say it again if you dare! You think you are the king of the house after I got married?”

“AIYA! Ouch! Big sis! I’m still driving the carriage. Stop it! Everyone would laugh at us.”

Gao Zhijian sat in the carriage as he looked at the siblings bickering.

Even though he appeared to be staring at them, he was actually thinking about what to do once he reached Shang Jing.

He actually didn’t really want to think about his past, no matter how chaotic it was.

He loved Cowheart Village. He wanted to live the rest of his life there, and it’d be great if he ended up marrying Xiaoman.

However, he had also seen how steep the price Li Huowang had paid to defend them during their travels.

He could never ignore Li Huowang now that the latter was in trouble.

If Puppy couldn't find the two of them, Gao Zhijian had no other choice but to rely on the strength of an emperor. The emperor was the ruler of everything beneath the heavens, after all.

Gao Zhijian wasn't entirely sure about his past either. His hazy memories could be fake, but he still needed to try his best.

I'm an emperor. They should recognize me, right?

Since I used to be an emperor, I'm technically part of the imperial family. I think it wouldn't be hard for them to find me, right?

It should be fine even if I'm not an emperor. I have some memories as a general. Maybe I used to be a general? I should go and look for the army, then.

Gao Zhijian's head throbbed with pain; his memories were too scrambled as if they were haphazardly stitched together.

When he snapped back to reality, he realized that the carriage had stopped. The siblings had disembarked as well.

"Dear sir, we are there. Thank you for your carriage. Our village is just at the front. Do you want to come and have a meal with us?" The man driving the carriage asked Gao Zhijian courteously.

Gao Zhijian shook his head and returned the greeting. He took the reins and started his journey on the dirt path again.

"He's such a good man, and he's big too. If I weren't married, I would choose him as my husband," the sister said with a sigh.

The brother shook his head. "Yeah. He definitely has the strength of two cows to work in the fields, but it's such a shame that he can't speak."

Chapter 554 - The Great Qi

Li Huowang followed Zhuge Yuan's guidance as they traversed the ruined Qi Kingdom. He walked up several mountains just to find Shangji Guankou once again.

They were currently on a mountain, or what was left of it. The mountain was split in half, and there was a ravine in the middle of the mountain.

Rocky spikes grew from the walls of the ravines, making it look like two large rows of teeth.

Li Huowang thought he was reaching his destination soon but the Feng Shui of the entire Qi Kingdom was in disarray due to the Natural Disaster. Zhuge Yuan needed some time to confirm Shangji Guankou's location.

Thankfully the journey here has been peaceful after the Natural Disaster had ended. He didn't encounter any dangers this time."

"Junior Li, let's rest a little. Shangji Guankou will only change locations once the time is right. We need to wait for two hours here."

Li Huowang and Li Sui sat underneath a tree. He took out some rations and started eating it voraciously.

"Dad, I don't like this. I like meat."

"Stop complaining and eat what you have. We can't afford to be picky now."

Li Huowang frowned and looked towards the left side of the forest. He had sensed movement.

He grabbed his sword before he saw a young girl covered in dust stagger out of the woods.

She was roughly five years old. Her dusty face had two streak marks made from her tears, and her nightdress was in tatters.

She hobbled toward Li Huowang, grabbed his bag of torture tools, and started pulling him toward the forest.

However, she lost her grip and fell to the ground. She sprawled out on the ground with her mouth opening and closing as if she were crying, but no voice came out of her mouth. Her voice had long left her, as she had been crying for such a long time.

Li Huowang carried her and walked into the woods under her lead.

The woods weren't large, and they soon reached the base of a mountain.

The little girl escaped his hands and started pulling at a hand with a silver wristband buried underneath a boulder. Li Huowang understood what she wanted him to do.

He looked around and saw that it was not just her house. The entire place used to be a village.

When the mountain was split in half, it completely buried the village. The young girl was the only one alive.

She ran to Li Huowang and pointed at the arm jutting out from underneath the boulder. She kept pulling at his red robes.

Li Huowang's heart ached a lot. He suddenly lost the courage to look into her pleading eyes, even though he was fearless in battle.

He wanted to avoid thinking about how many people had perished due to the Natural Disaster.

However, the scene before him made him realize that the people of the Qi Kingdom had truly been dealt a miserable fate.

This was just a small corner of the kingdom. There were even more unthinkable scenes throughout the Qi Kingdom.

Li Huowang picked the girl up and whispered in his heart.
Zhuge Yuan, do you think you could still use your techniques? Can the Great Qi be saved?

Zhuge Yuan had his back turned against Li Huowang. He sighed and said nothing.

Li Huowang looked at the girl in his embrace. He gently placed her on the ground. He was determined to save her.

When the little girl ran toward the arm sticking out of the boulder, Li Huowang held his spine sword and swung it at the little girl. A large rift enveloped her.

“Junior Li, it’s useless. She’s someone from the Great Qi. She cannot travel to the Great Liang.” Zhuge Yuan’s words were like cold water splashing on Li Huowang’s head.

“What? Then how come I can enter the Qi Kingdom?” Li Huowang couldn’t tolerate leaving someone that young in this hell.

“I’ve told you before. The Great Qi is real, while the Great Liang is fake. Those from the Liang Kingdom can come here but not the other way around.”

Li Huowang held the spine sword tightly. He swung it again and rescued the little girl from inside the rift.

He took her back, but now, he wasn’t sure about what to do.

Find a good family for her? Almost everyone is dead here. Who would want to have a deadweight following them? What if she followed me? But I’m heading back once I find Shangji Guankou...

“Hong Zhong, it’s useless. You can’t save her. Just throw her away. She’s not the only unfortunate person throughout the Qi Kingdom, and you can’t save them all,” the Sitting Oblivion Dao member taunted.

The old monk and Jin Shanzhao’s illusions walked up to the Sitting Oblivion Dao member.

What if I turned her into an illusion and made her stay by my side? Li Huowang thought, but even he was surprised by his own thoughts. No, I can’t! What if she didn’t become an illusion? I would have just killed her for nothing then!

In the end, Zhuge Yuan proposed a solution. “Junior Li, follow my instructions and draw a talisman. I will notify my friend to take her away. She might survive by then.”

“You think your friend is still alive?”

“They're still alive.”

“Alright then.” Li Huowang followed his instructions. He placed the talisman that was glowing with a gold light on the little girl. She immediately stopped moving as if she was a log.

He then used the spine sword to shave out a cavity in the mountain and stuffed her in.

After giving her some food and water, Li Huowang sighed and left. He still had his own issues to handle.

Two hours later, he found Shangji Guankou once again. This time, they were sitting in a small shrine dedicated to the Lord and Lady of the Land.

The shrine was in ruins, and the two statues had fused into a single statue with an abnormally large eye on its forehead.

Li Huowang found what he had been looking for, but he wasn't happy at all.

“A secret for a secret.” He heard the familiar voice. Li Huowang then looked at Shangguan Yuting.

“Senior Er, you are really amazing. To think that you can find it in such a remote location. I wouldn't be able to do the same if I were in your shoes.”

Shangguan Yuting bowed to Li Huowang before walking up to Shangji Guankou. She stepped on an invisible stairway and entered Shangji Guankou's shadow.

When Li Huowang thought everything had ended, the clay statue suddenly cracked, but an unexpected change occurred. A voice echoed from the shadow where Shangguan Yuting had melted into.

Chapter 555 - Shangguan Yuting

Li Huowang made a deal with Shangji Guankou before so he knew something was wrong. Shangguan Yuting hadn't come here to make a deal with them!

The surroundings shifted as a cold breeze flew out from the clay statue. The breeze seemed to contain indecipherable whispers as it flew upwards in a spiral.

Li Huowang recognized what the words were—it was Shangji Guankou themselves! Li Huowang also saw that it was composed of secrets.

Shangji Guankou wanted to escape, but the Surveillance Bureau would never let it happen. At some point, the skies had become like a mirror, reflecting the ground.

Shangji Guankou floated upward to escape, but they collided against the reflected "ground" and sank into the shadow of the clay statue. The clay statue's shadow in the sky shrank and expanded numerous times.

"They are not exchanging secrets, but rather the Surveillance Bureau is trying to rob its secrets," Zhuge Yuan explained. His words had yet to finish echoing in the air when the shadow of the clay statue expanded, revealing a myriad of eyes.

The space around them shifted, and Li Huowang felt he was somehow returning to the hospital.

Realizing that something was wrong, he quickly retreated to avoid getting caught in the strange technique. He had suffered it once and did not want to suffer it again.

He also had no intentions of helping Shangji Guankou. Shangji

Guankou wasn't going to affect his plans, so there was no reason for him to do so.

When Li Huowang left, the temple crumbled. Several illusory worlds flashed intermittently before Li Huowang, and he felt his head pounding just from staring at what was happening.

He finally understood that the Surveillance Bureau never had any intentions to make a deal with Shangji Guankou. Instead, they were here to rob the secrets for themselves.

“Can they really just forcefully grab the secrets like that?” Li Huowang asked Zhuge Yuan.

Zhuge Yuan looked at the scene with hesitation before sighing. Li Huowang's question was answered without a word.

“A normal person might not even be able to touch Shangji Guankou, but the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau can probably do it. He's a master of illusion techniques, after all. I also think he's an extremely special figure.”

“He has a strange illusion technique capable of dragging unsuspecting people into illusions, and he could also project an illusion to someone's side without them noticing it. Senior Zhuge, what do you think about the Chief?”

“I fear that he's not using any regular illusion techniques. I fear that it's Unspeakable.”

“Unspeakable? Again? Not even a name?”

Zhuge Yuan looked at the chaos in front of him and shook his head. “No, that is the name. Unspeakable. The true name cannot be spoken with our language nor could we write it, so we call them Unspeakable.”

Unspeakable? Li Huowang slowly ruminated on those words.

“I know only a little bit about them. When I was out on the seas, I once found a half-rotten bamboo slip and read about it from it. It was said that Unspeakable was born from the void and lived on the boundary of life and death. If we want to meet them, we have to quite literally be either on the edge of death or crying on a grave to the verge of collapse. Only then would we catch a glimpse of them. It's incredibly hard to even catch a glimpse of them, much less learn something from them. The Chief probably had an extraordinary fortuitous encounter long ago.”

Li Huowang looked at the flashing lights and hesitated, “Is Unspeakable a Siming? Which Heavenly Dao does it control? I've never heard of something so bizarre.”

Zhuge Yuan shook his head. “I've only managed to scrape a small bit of info from that bamboo slip. They are generally unknown.”

“So the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau obtained his position through his sheer strength. That's great. We now have a great chance at defeating Shai Zi.”

While Li Huowang was conversing with Zhuge Yuan, the sounds from afar slowly grew soft. A large shadow with unblinking eyes slowly extended from the broken temple.

There were hundreds of eyes, and Li Huowang recognized them. The eyes looked the same as the eye on his forehead.

The scene made his scalp go numb, but what happened afterward almost made him think that he was going crazy.

Shangguan Yuting walked out from the shadow as if she were walking up onto invisible stairs.

But this time, she looked different. Her figure looked the same, but her head was covered in blinking eyes.

Li Huowang thought that he was staring at a kaleidoscope of eyes, and he instinctively found it repulsive.

Shangguan Yuting nodded with her head covered in the eyeballs. Her soft voice echoed from beneath the eyes. “Senior Er, I'm done here. Let's go back.”

“Why do you need so many secrets? Are there really so many things you need to know?” Li Huowang averted his gaze and took out his spine sword.

Shangguan Yuting laughed, and her laughter sounded like chimes. “You have to ask the Chief to know the answer to that question. I’m just here to do my job. I don’t care about the other details.”

Li Huowang nodded. He was done here, so there was no reason for him to stay in the Qi Kingdom. He carved open a rift and entered the Liang Kingdom again.

The scenery peeled away, and Li Huowang found himself in the middle of a golden wheat field with workers busy harvesting the wheat.

The sight was so surreal that Li Huowang thought he had traveled through time.

“Can you let the Chief know that our mission is done?” Li Huowang asked Shangguan Yuting with his back facing her.

The Chief of the Surveillance Bureau was the only thing left he needed to kill Shai Zi.

“Don’t worry. Just head to Shangjing. I’ll find a way to notify him. He will be back once he’s finished with his business.”

Once I’m done with Shai Zi, I could probably go and look for Shangji Guankou again to find out where Bai Lingmiao is located. Li Huowang hastened his steps as he walked into the village.

He reached the village and bought a horse from a wealthy family.

He didn’t bring much money with him, but thankfully, he still had the jade pendant that he had taken from the Zephyr Temple.

He didn’t know how much the jade pendant he had taken from Xuanyang was worth, but the people who had sold him the horse were more than eager to accept it.

Unfortunately, Li Huowang was still suffering from severe injuries. His charred skin was showing signs of recovery, but it was only thanks to Li Sui inside of him that his body had yet to cave in.

Li Huowang dragged his injured self onto the horse and rushed back to Shangjing.

Ah, there it is. The bizarreness is back. She looks like an Amygdala from Bloodborne now.

Chapter 556 - Return

"Mom, I'm really fine. It's just that I don't have a lot of time to become coherent again. Don't worry; my situation will improve as time goes on," Li Huowang consoled his mother while he was strapped to the bed.

Sun Xiaoqin shook her head and smiled. "Mom isn't worried. Come, have an apple."

"Mom, I can't eat anything right now," Li Huowang said.

The smile tugging at Sun Xiaoqin's lips disappeared.

Li Huowang hurriedly explained, "Mom, if I want to eat something next time, I will just shout when I'm hallucinating. You can feed me an apple, then. How about that?"

Sun Xiaoqin nodded and smiled. "Whatever you want, my son."

Li Huowang relaxed and started chatting with his mother when he saw Yi Donglai standing outside the door and staring at him through the small mirror.

Seeing that Li Huowang had noticed him, Yi Donglai pushed his frameless glasses upward and entered the room.

He first asked Sun Xiaoqin to leave the room before conversing with Li Huowang in a friendly tone. "How is it? Did you find Bai Lingmiao?"

Li Huowang was silent.

"We have some good sunshine today. Want to go out and have a stroll?" Yi Donglai opened Li Huowang's straps but he didn't move.

Yi Donglai raised his eyebrows inquisitively as he pushed the wheelchair near Li Huowang. "Why aren't you moving?"

Li Huowang looked at him with a cold gaze. "I'm on a horse. If I move carelessly, I'll fall."

Yi Donglai nodded in understanding and pushed the wheelchair away. "I talked to Wang Wei before I came here."

Li Huowang was intrigued. "Why was he admitted into the hospital?"

"What kind of illness do you think it is if he were to be admitted here? But his documentation was incomplete, and he was admitted here through some connections. The director of the hospital has sent him away. While his symptoms were light, we somehow managed to come up with a treatment plan for you while I was conversing with him. I never tried it before, but we might as well try it since the regular treatments haven't been working on you."

Li Huowang smiled. "Sure. It might work."

Both worlds were real, and he was stuck in both worlds. Does Yi Donglai really think that he can cure me? It'll be great if can cure me.

"It's not that simple. There is a ton of paperwork to do, but I think they're more than happy to approve the plan. They are all itching to cure you so that they can send you away."

"If you have nothing else, you can go back now. I finally have some time to rest."

Yi Donglai turned serious as he stared at Li Huowang through his green-tinted glasses.

"I know you don't trust me, but I assure you that I'm a stubborn person. I am confident that I can cure any patient through my stubbornness and dedication. Even if I can't cure them completely, I'm confident that their symptoms will be reduced to the minimum! Since you are my patient, I will do everything in my power to cure you, no matter what!"

"Thank you. You are a good doctor, but I don't think you'll be helpful to me. Don't waste your time." Li Huowang closed his eyes after saying that.

In the darkness, he heard Yi Donglai's voice. "Is that so? I don't believe it. Your illness is not as incurable as you would've thought. Rather, I've found a pattern revolving around you. I know what to do to disrupt it."

Li Huowang was then woken up by thunder. He found himself back on the horse. Tentacles sprouted out from his red robes to hold onto the reins tightly.

It was raining. Li Huowang took out the straw hat and wore it.

"How long have we been traveling for?" Li Huowang asked Li Sui.

"I don't know. You've never taught me to count time."

Staring at the muddy road, Li Huowang bit his index finger and used his blood to draw a talisman before slapping it onto the horse's back.

The tired horse was suddenly invigorated, and it ran twice as fast as its original speed.

We should reach Shangjing soon. Li Huowang looked around and saw he recognized some of the scenery.

The horse never stopped running. They finally arrived at Shangjing's massive wall late at night. There was a thunderstorm looming as lightning flashed everywhere.

Li Huowang raised his identity plate high in the air and entered the city without issues.

There was another lightning bolt. Li Huowang suddenly realized that something was weird. Why is the lightning hitting the same location again and again?

He ran past the silent street before finally realizing which direction the lightning was striking. He immediately ran towards the lightning.

The sky was dark, but a fire was burning bright in the city. It was Princess Anping's palace!

Li Huowang ditched the horse, which was dying from fatigue, and ran into the palace with his sword. He saw a mound of heads in front of the burning palace.

“Oh~ You must be Er Jiu~” A Daoist chuckled as he walked out of the shadows.

The Daoist was wearing a tattered Daoist robe with patches everywhere. He wasn't even wearing shoes, and his hair was tied with a red thread that had a moldy green bead.

Li Huowang was not attracted to his weird look but rather focused on the head that the Daoist was holding in his left hand.

“Er Jiu~ Why are you here only now? Our Lord is disappointed in you. To think that you would take so much time just to deal with the weakest princess. I did it all by myself~”

The tattered Daoist placed Princess Anping's head on the top of the mound.

Princess Anping's beautiful face was filled with despair. Her mouth was open as rainwater dripped into it. Clearly, Princess Anping's true body had been found, and she was dead.

Now that Princess Anping was dead, no one else was eligible to become the emperor. In other words, it meant Ji Lin was now the emperor. Shai Zi's goal was achieved!

The tattered Daoist swaggered past Li Huowang and sighed, “Haiya~ Some people really don't have the foresight to think for themselves. Our Lord is more than happy to reward those who had decided to help him in his time of need, but he'd never waste his time on those who'd only come to his aid once the crisis is over.”

Li Huowang clenched his fist in the rain. No! I cannot let him ascend to the throne! Not while Shai Zi is still alive!

The tattered Daoist was about to leave when Li Huowang grabbed his spine sword and swung it.

The rift almost swallowed the Daoist's head, but his entire head had retracted into his robes as if it were a tortoise returning to its shell.

The tattered Daoist's head popped up, but his face was backward. “You dare attack me?!”

“You killed Princess Anping, but no one else was here to witness it! I just have to kill you, and everyone will think that she’s still alive! Ji Lin will never be able to ascend to the throne then!”

Li Huowang then pounced at the Daoist with Li Sui’s tentacles in tow.

Chapter 557 - Emperor

The rain poured down incessantly. Li Huowang twitched uncontrollably as he kneeled on the ground and panted.

His wounds had reopened, and he was covered in more wounds. Li Sui had to further expand within him.

Princess Anping's murderer was indeed powerful. Where did Ji Lin find someone as strong as Dan Yangzi?

The tattered Daoist's lightning attacks were lethal. Thankfully, Li Huowang had gotten even stronger as well.

Peng Longteng grabbed a bloody boulder and lifted it high in the sky before slamming it down on the dying Daoist.

The Daoist was crushed, and his limbs scattered in all directions.

However, Peng Longteng was still hungry for more. She grabbed the same boulder and smashed it down again and again on the corpse.

She did it a few times until a large crater appeared in front of her. There was no longer a body as the flesh and bones had scattered everywhere from the repeated impact.

"Enough... ENOUGH!" Li Huowang had just shouted when the boulder phased through her body and crashed onto the ground. She was a hallucination once more.

Li Huowang stood up while breathing in ragged pants. He opened his mouth and spat Li Sui out. "Suisui, please be nice and help me."

Li Huowang approached the mound of dead bodies and took Princess Anping's head. "The Black Taisui excels at parasitizing its victims. Can you control this head?"

"Let me try." Li Sui extended her tentacles and entered the head.

Soon Princess Anping's head stood up with tentacles beneath her neck. She could blink too.

"Is it like this?" The beautiful face of Princess Anping was being held up by numerous tentacles as she smiled at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was actually thinking of using his own skin to make a doll with his techniques as a Sitting Oblivion Dao member. Thankfully, the Black Taisui was really great at her job

Staring at her smile, Li Huowang nodded with approval. "Good. Just show yourself in front of others, and they will think that Princess Anping is still alive. She has already perished, but let's help her anyway. Li Sui, I know you're tired, but we only need to wait just a bit longer until the Chief is back."

Li Huowang brought Li Sui into the palace and soon found Princess Anping's corpse. Li Huowang dug out her organs, and Li Sui entered the hollowed-out body to become Princess Anping.

Li Sui washed the blood off her body and wore a dress with golden stitches. The wide dress allowed her to hide her tentacles beneath it.

Her innerwear was pink, and she was sporting a pale blue earring as well. Her intricate hairstyle was held together by an elaborate hairpin. Li Sui truly looked like Princess Anping when she was still alive; the only thing amiss was the white ribbon around her neck, which was concealing the wound that had decapitated her head.

"Alright, let's go! We can just run around the city, and the informants will know that Princess Anping is still alive!" Li Huowang dragged Li Sui into the rain.

It was a chaotic night, but when the rain washed over Shangjing and they woke up again the next morning, everything returned back to normal. The stench of blood had been washed away, and the civilians were out and about doing their own business.

Gao Zhijian entered Shangjing in his carriage and stared at the dense rows of shops on both sides of the street.

He thought that he'd recognize the place if he were the emperor, but he recognized nothing for some reason.

Did I not venture out of the palace last time?

He continued to drive the carriage on the main road. After some time, he saw the familiar red walls of the palace. His memories stirred.

He remembered seeing the same color every time he was carried by someone when he was younger.

He hopped off the carriage and calmed himself down as he slowly walked towards the palace.

The guards naturally noticed a huge man like Gao Zhijian and frowned. Cold glances came from above the palace walls.

Gao Zhijian stopped just a few meters away from the palace door. He stared at the guards stationed there.

A few moments passed and nothing happened. Strange. Do they not recognize me? I used to be an emperor. Even if it was in the past, they should still recognize me.

Gao Zhijian took two steps forward and pointed at his face as he attempted to speak.

“This is the land of the emperor! Who dares to trespass!” A sharp spear pointed at Gao Zhijian, causing him to panic.

As someone who learned how to utilize the murderous aura, he also felt the murderous aura high above the palace wall. The person up there was beyond his level. This was a warning. One more step and Gao Zhijian would die.

He immediately retreated back to his carriage and looked at the tall palace walls. He didn't know what to do. I should be the emperor, right?

While he was thinking about that, someone brushed past him and entered through the side door of the palace.

Compared to the treatment Gao Zhijian received, the guards didn't even look at the man as he entered the palace.

Back in the palace, the man ran as fast as he could, giving the illusion that he was stepping on air. He ran into Ji Lin's bed chamber.

He reached the outside and slowed down on purpose.

Even though he slowed down, he was still hit by an inkstone.

But the man dared not move because the one who hit him was Ji Lin himself.

The man prostrated on the ground as his voice trembled with fear. "My Lord! Princess Anping is still missing."

"Drag him out and execute him!" Ji Lin shouted with rage as he easily signed off on someone's death.

"My Lord! My Lord! Spare me!"

The consorts and eunuchs in the bed chamber were silent. They were afraid that they would be next.

However, one of the old eunuchs displayed not a hint of fear. He held a golden horse-tail whisk as he approached the angry Ji Lin. "My Lord, don't worry. I've made a divination and have ascertained that Princess Anping is dead. Even the others got the same results."

The beads on Ji Lin's crown shook violently as he exclaimed, "I don't care about the divinations! I want to see her true body! What if she used an illusion technique? I want to see her corpse! I want to see her head! That is what I want, you useless bastards!"

Chapter 558 - Luck

Ji Lin was fuming and pacing in the grand bed chamber. He was close to succeeding, but something had gone wrong.

After some time, he waved his large sleeves and exclaimed, "Everyone gets out! I don't care what you do but find Princess Anping's head for me!"

"Yes, my Lord!"

"My Lord, please calm down. This won't take long. Anyone with eyes would know that luck is on your side. It would be bad if you got sick due to the stress."

Ji Lin calmed down a little after hearing that. "Wait, what about Er Jiu from the Ao Jing Sect? Any news from him?"

"The guards saw him entering the city, but we cannot find him anywhere no matter what kind of divination we did."

"Hmph! He's too unpredictable to use. Nevermind then. I will just give him an official title without any real job in consideration of his contributions in the past."

Ji Lin then got ready for the morning meeting. While he was changing, he suddenly had a different idea. Rather than the hall, he walked towards the imperial temple.

This time he was alone. He entered the place and approached the coffin once more. With the sound of rumbling stones, the coffin lid slowly opened.

"Father, I've done what you've instructed me to do. I did all of it." Ji Lin looked at his father lying in the coffin emotionlessly.

"Hahaha! Good! You are indeed my son!" The old emperor laughed as the golden chains binding him rattled.

"My mother had decided to support the eldest prince, so I killed her!" Ji Lin' roared, interrupting the laughing emperor.

“The princes and princesses wanted to betray me, so I killed them, too. Father, you told me that I have to kill even my own family to become someone great!”

The old emperor in the coffin shuddered before speaking again. “Ruthless. I knew I was right.”

However, this wasn't what Ji Lin wanted to hear. He kicked the tributes in front of the coffin and exclaimed, “WHY! I'm going to be the emperor soon, so I want to know why! Why am I killing all of my siblings?! I've told you that once I become the emperor, I will not tolerate my children killing each other! I will be emperor soon, so I want to know why I should tell them not to kill each other!”

“Hohoho.” The old emperor laughed. “Lin'er, why do you think all of the officials and ministers are obeying us? Do you really think that they obey us because we are grand?”

“It's because we are the emperor!” Ji Lin replied.

“You really think so? Do you think that we can obtain absolute loyalty from those preaching Confucianism or from the military just by using our name? They control everything here, including the palace guards! Do you know why they did not revolt and become emperors themselves?”

Ji Lin didn't know what to answer. He had never thought of that before.

“Because they don't dare to do so! They dared not let their own people kill each other, but we—the Ji family—dare to do so! When the Qi Kingdom fell and the emperor's seat became empty, we—the Ji family—killed each other until only one of us remained. We were not a noble family, but there were still thousands of us. In order to become the emperor, we've killed our own mothers, grandchildren, grandparents, siblings, and even our own fathers! The sole remaining survivor from that bloodbath became the first emperor of the Liang Kingdom. Our family spanned thousands of generations, but we will always only have a single branch in our family tree. The cowards are only going to serve us!”

Ji Lin stepped back from shock. He was visibly shaken by the answer he obtained.

“But why?! Why us?! Why must the Ji family kill each other?”

“Because the heavens have selected us! We're the dragon's chosen ones! Only then can we shoulder the Great Liang's luck!”

The old emperor roared. The dragon roar shook the coffin, and Ji Lin's scale surfaced momentarily before fading.

After some time, the dragon's roar stopped, and the old emperor's tired voice could be heard. “Since you will be ascending soon, let me tell you this: the world is not as peaceful as you think. In the past, humans were raised by the ‘Witch’ clan. We lived just like how pigs are raised; we were fed nothing but feces. However, some of our ancestors refused to continue living as livestock and escaped. Unfortunately, escaping wasn't enough because they'd soon be caught. We needed to find a safe place to live. Luck was needed to sustain it. The Witch Clan was relentless. They will do everything they can to enter our space and capture us so that they can rear us like pigs again. Our ancestors came up with a plan. They robbed part of the luck in the Witch clan and used it to sustain our own safe lands. That ancestor was the first emperor.”

Ji Lin stood still and was confused by what he was hearing.

“It's fine even if you don't understand me. Just think about it upon your ascension. You have to remember that what I told you just now is the truth. If someone were to tell you something like Simings or Immortal Heaven, those are fake. They're used to fool people.”

Ji Lin walked out of the place, stumbling as he walked up the stairs. He was lost in his own thoughts. The skies turned dark and became bright again, but he was still lost in his own thoughts.

If his father did not lie to him, that meant his descendants must do the same thing. They need to kill each other just like how he did.

His family had to put up so much just to shoulder the ‘luck’ of the Liang Kingdom.

He didn’t want to do it. He even thought about letting others do so.

But he had sacrificed so much. He had killed so much just to earn the right to ascend to the throne.

He paid his price. He killed everyone until he was the sole remaining survivor out of the nine siblings. He was this close to becoming the emperor. He would never let others take it just because his descendants had to kill each other next time too.

Ji Lin only snapped out of it once the old eunuch draped the dragon robe on his body. “My Lord, let’s go back and rest. You will only tire yourself out like this.”

Ji Lin nodded and turned to his bed chamber while recalling what his father looked like. If even the dead can be brought back to life, does that mean my father is immortal?

Ji Lin sprawled out on his bed and started pondering over his next move.

Just then, footsteps echoed from the door.

“What is it?” Ji Lin asked with his eyes closed.

“My Lord! We’ve found traces of Princess Anping on the outskirts of the city! And she’s with Er Jiu!”

It’s him! I treated him so well, but to think that he still ended up betraying me just because of one, single girl!

“Pass down my orders! Capture Er Jiu and his entire family! Once you’ve captured him, skin him alive and feed his flesh to the dogs!”

Chapter 559 - Huangfu Tiangang

Five Li away from Shangjing, two figures could be seen running in the forest. They were none other than Li Huowang and Li Sui. There were many people chasing after them.

Just then, a man wearing black clothes burst out of a tree and threw a demon-slaying circle covered in sutra toward Li Huowang and Li Sui.

A dark light burst forth as the circle shrouded both Li Huowang and Li Sui. The next moment, their figures crumbled like rotten wood.

Soon the people chasing after them caught up and saw the man holding both Li Huowang and Li Sui's heads.

"Wait! Something is wrong!" A Daoist used two leaves and wiped his eyes with them.

He then tore off Li Huowang's face to reveal the face of someone else with a talisman stuck to it.

"It's an illusion! Chase after them!" The group dispersed immediately and continued their pursuit.

Halfway up a mountain, Li Huowang looked down at the people running around in the forest. To think that the techniques of the Sitting Oblivion Dao are actually so useful when it comes to buying time.

"Dad, how long should we get chased by them?" Li Sui was lying on the ground with her arms and legs sprawled out.

"That's not up to us. It depends on when the Chief returns." Li Huowang said nothing and tore off his collarbone before using it as an ingredient for his divination.

His target was none other than the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. Li Huowang knew that it was impossible for him to be able to use divination to find the Chief, but rather the Chief would know that Li Huowang was using divination on him. Li Huowang intended to use it to remind the Chief.

Once he was done, he placed his collarbone back into his body and looked at Shangguan Yuting. “Can you tell me where the Chief is?”

Shangguan Yuting was calm even though she had her entire head covered in her eyes. “I don’t know. He didn’t tell me. He must have his own reasons for delaying it.”

Li Huowang couldn’t even get angry at the illusion.

He had no idea where Ji Lin had found so many capable people. They had seamless teamwork, and their divinations were scarily accurate as well.

Of course, Li Huowang was not afraid because he had the spine sword inhand.

Every time he was about to get surrounded, he’d use the sword to escape into the Great Qi before popping up somewhere else.

No matter how strong or how strange their techniques were, they would never be able to travel to another timeline.

Still, the pursuit was taking a toll on Li Huowang.

He took out a bun and gave it to Li Sui. “Eat this. We need to move soon. I think there was one of them who possessed a compass that’s scarily accurate.”

Li Sui sat up and ate the bun. Her cheeks puffed up as she chewed on it. “Dad, I don’t like buns. Can we find some meat in the forest? I saw there were many just now.”

“Stop being picky. We are being chased right now. We can’t waste time hunting or we would let them know that we are in the area. Just eat this for now.” Li Huowang rummaged through his sleeves and tore off a long strip of skin and scab.

Li Sui chewed happily on the skin and scabs. "Thanks, Dad. I really love eating these. They're more delicious than meat."

Li Huowang felt weird seeing the young girl eating his scabs. He had been finding it strange Li Sui had taken over a human body.

Li Sui had become too human-like for her to eat something like the scabs on a wound. I should make her abandon that body once this ordeal is over

Li Huowang reached out to pat her head when he was alerted by something, prompting him to grab his spine sword.

"Li Sui! We need to move now! Someone's here!" Li Sui quickly shoved the scab into her mouth before jumping onto Li Huowang's back.

When he heard rustling noises, Li Huowang immediately swung his sword ahead of him.

Just as he was about to enter the rift, the skies abruptly went dark, and the rift that he had created with the spine sword shattered—it was cut in half!

Who can do something like this in the Liang Kingdom?! The moment he thought of that question, the answer revealed itself. It was none other than the Imperial Preceptor of the Liang Kingdom!

Compared to how laidback he looked last time on his ox and fishing pole, he was now wearing robes that made him look regal. His Constellation Sword was in his hand as he slowly appeared from the forest. "Ji Zai, what are you doing here?"

Li Huowang shielded Li Sui behind his back. "I'm here to protect my Lord! Have you come here to interfere? I've simply chosen who I think is more suitable to take the throne!"

"You think you can fool me? Anping is dead! The evil being that you're rearing is just using her corpse!" Huangfu Tiangang immediately saw through the farce. "Our Lord has won, so he's the emperor. Who do you think you are? You dare to try to stir up trouble in the kingdom? Those who try to fool our lord must die!"

Li Huowang immediately felt as if a mountain was pressing down on him, and he couldn't move even an inch.

Staring at the Imperial Preceptor approaching him slowly with a sword in hand, Li Huowang hurriedly shouted, "Wait! Since you are so strong, can you not see the illusion made by the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau next to me? This matter is related to the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau!"

The air itself seemed to freeze, but Li Huowang knew that his plan was working, as Huangfu Tiangang's sword didn't fall down on his head.

Li Huowang knew that even though the Surveillance Bureau and the Imperial Preceptor often worked together, they never really shared their plans with each other.

Huangfu Tiangang made an unfamiliar seal with his other hand and pointed it to the ground. He then looked at Shangguan Yuting and greeted her for the first time.

The Imperial Preceptor was shocked to see Shangguan Yuting's head covered in eyes. "To think that they exist! Wait, is he thinking..."

Li Huowang then took this chance to explain Shai Zi's plot.

However, the Imperial Preceptor revealed the same expression as the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. He remained calm despite hearing Shai Zi's scheme. Actually, he was more interested in the eyes covering Shangguan Yuting's head.

Li Huowang frowned, seemingly thinking about something when he heard footsteps all around him.

Ji Lin's subordinates were here.

They surrounded Li Huowang but none of them moved because Huangfu Tiangang was here as well.

A fat man holding a gold ingot stepped forward and said, "Imperial Preceptor, that man..."

"Go back."

The fearsome Imperial Preceptor, Huangfu Tiangang. I thought this would be a good time to start showing the fan art for the more important characters of the next arc.

Chapter 560 - Trade

None of them dared to disobey the orders of the Imperial Preceptor even though they had received orders from Ji Lin.

“Yes, we obey.” All of them dispersed. None of them dared to stay here for a moment longer.

Seeing how much respect he commanded, Li Huowang’s heart started pounding wildly against his chest. He was thinking about what he could do if the Imperial Preceptor actually wanted to kill him.

If that were to happen, he would have to materialize Zhuge Yuan to even stand a chance against Huangfu Tiangang.

Just then, Huangfu Tiangang put away his Constellation Sword in his sleeves and approached Li Huowang without a weapon.

“I’m afraid you would have to wait for a very long time till the Chief is done with his errands. What if we did this instead? I help you deal with Shai Zi, and you give me the illusion.”

“Hm?!”

Both Li Huowang and Shangguan Yuting were shocked. They never thought Huangfu Tiangang could do that.

That means the Imperial Preceptor wants to betray the Chief? Are they secretly fighting against each other?

“What? You don’t think I can’t deal with Shai Zi and only the Chief could? What a joke. Shai Zi is only good at running and hiding. As long as we can expose his location, I could kill him with a single hand!”

Li Huowang slowly thought about it and managed to glean some info. Firstly, rather than taking Shangguan Yuting directly, he offered a trade instead. That meant he didn’t want to completely break the relationship he had with the Surveillance Bureau.

Secondly, both the Imperial Preceptor and the Chief were extremely interested in the secrets of Shangji Guankou.

After weighing his options, Li Huowang looked at the Imperial Preceptor. "The Chief has helped me a lot. I don't think I feel right doing so."

Huangfu Tiangang looked at him strangely. "Are you that loyal to him? I remember that you don't even have an official position in the Bureau."

Li Huowang pointed at Shangguan Yuting's eyes. "There's so many of them. If you give some to me, I might feel better about doing it."

If he had two secrets, he could find Shai Zi and Miaomiao at the same time.

Since the Imperial Preceptor offered the trade, there was no reason for him to get some benefits.

Hearing his words, Huangfu Tiangang understood what was going on. "I see. Fine, I can't just let a soldier go hungry. The food doesn't belong to me in the first place."

Huangfu Tiangang made a seal and chanted something. He walked around Shangguan Yuting before pointing at Li Huowang. One of her eyeballs shot out and entered Li Huowang's shadow.

He then waved his robes and Shangguan Yuting disappeared just like that.

He was very satisfied with his haul and patted Li Huowang on the shoulder.

"Since you've taken what I've given, you should know what to say to the Chief upon his return."

Li Huowang nodded slowly. "I understand."

Li Huowang didn't really care what the Chief would think about him the moment he saw that Shangguan Yuting had disappeared and that he wouldn't obtain the secrets from Shangji Guankou.

Ji Lin was about to ascend to the throne, but Miaomiao was still missing. He was just too anxious to wait.

“Em~ Not bad. You are still teachable, at least.” Huangfu Tiangang nodded in satisfaction.

“Imperial Preceptor, when are we hunting down Shai Zi?” Li Huowang wanted it done as soon as possible.

“We can do it now.”

Hearing how confident he was, Li Huowang immediately ran down the mountain toward a river.

He needed his reflection to use Shangji Guankou’s secret.

When he reached the river, he saw the Imperial Preceptor appear out of nowhere on his side. “Imperial Preceptor, Shai Zi is evil, so how come he’s not your top priority to hunt?”

Li Huowang had finally managed to ask one of the many burning questions in his mind.

“Hmm... The Shai Zi who had plotted to rob the Sacred Mountain Ghost’s Eye is dead. What good is killing another? The Sitting Oblivion Dao is like the grass of Qing Qiu. You burn them, but they’ll still grow back. It’s fine as long as we wound them enough. There are even more pressing matters in this world.”

“You mean they’ll come back even after getting annihilated?”

He had never heard of it before. He didn’t even know that despite his memories as Hong Zhong.

“The Sitting Oblivion Dao exists so long as liars exist.”

Li Huowang realized something and looked up at the sunny skies.

This world was much more bizarre than he had thought. He still didn’t know about a lot of things.

A meandering small creek appeared in front of him. Li Huowang’s breathing grew heavier, knowing that he was about to hunt down a Shai Zi.

He looked into the water and saw his own reflection. The eye on his forehead was shifting in the water.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and thought about Shai Zi's location. He then gently popped the eyeball on the forehead of his reflection.

He felt cold water splashing on his body the next moment. The sounds around him disappeared. There was no flowing water, no bird chirping, and no heartbeat of the Imperial Preceptor.

At the same time, Li Huowang saw that he was looking through another person's eyes. It was through the eyes of an eunuch.

It was a younger eunuch. After placing the incense inside his stepfather's room, he carefully and respectfully exited the room.

Li Huowang realized where Shai Zi was after he saw the grand palace! It was the palace of the Liang Kingdom! The young eunuch was Shai Zi!

Li Huowang opened his eyes, and his vision swam. The eunuch's vision and his vision had fused together!

With two different perspectives, Li Huowang felt confused and nauseous, but he couldn't care less. "Shai Zi is in the palace! He's one of the younger eunuchs preparing for the crowning ceremony!"

"Haha! This is such a wondrous object. To think that it's so useful."

Huangfu Tiangang was overjoyed. He unsheathed his Constellation Sword out from his sleeves.

"Go!" He threw the sword into the air before kicking it. The sword flew towards the north.

But it was not over. Huangfu Tiangang grabbed Li Huowang's collars before jumping onto a tree and leaping into the air. He somehow managed to catch up to the sword as he stood on it to fly in the air.

He was carrying Li Huowang as they flew towards Shangjing.

Li Huowang's vision was swimming, and he felt his head becoming heavier. His breathing became irregular as well.

But the symptoms slowly lessened as he got used to it gradually.

Both of them reached Shangjing soon enough.

“Imperial Preceptor! Shai Zi knows you are here. He’s running away!”

“Hmph! He can’t run!” The Imperial Preceptor stomped on his sword, and it took to the air to eventually land in his hands.

Then, he pointed the sword at the sky. A thunderous boom echoed throughout the kingdom.

Lightning bolts struck several altars around the palace. The sutras written on pieces of purple paper inside the wooden bowls were set ablaze by the lightning strikes.

Chapter 561 - Lightning Attacks

“Five heavenly lightning, countless troops. Drive the thunder and lightning to illuminate the universe!”

There was a deafening roar of thunder, and five purple lightning descended from the sky and fiercely struck the rooftop of a palace.

The magnificent palace was enveloped by purple thunder and soon turned into a pile of charcoal.

He happened to be absent when they were in a full-scale battle with the Sitting Oblivion Dao. This was the first time Li Huowang realized the true strength of the Imperial Preceptor from Great Liang.

The pile of charcoal began to collapse under the weight of the roof tiles. A figure emerged from the falling debris and fled. It was a dying eunuch, and his charred face was filled with despair.

When he reached the plaza with its crumbling tiles, the Great Liang Imperial Preceptor descended from the sky and blocked his path while holding the Constellation Sword.

The eunuch stammered as he tried to say something. His figure twisted in a strange fashion as he dodged a rift that flew from behind.

His face lit up when he saw Li Huowang, who had a grim expression and was holding the spine sword. “So it’s you! I was wondering what happened. You did a good job this time. I’ll treat you to a meal when I have time.”

Li Huowang swept his sword across again, then turned to Huangfu Tiangang and said, “Imperial Preceptor! Don’t believe the nonsense of the Sitting Oblivion Dao! He's trying to sow discord between us!"

Huangfu Tiangang was unusually indifferent, and his gaze was fixed on Shai Zi, "Do you really think that you can come and go in the Great Liang palace as you please? You are going to die today!"

The eunuch peeled off his face, revealing a dice with constantly changing numbers, "When it's time, it's time. People will die inevitably. Dying later or today is the same. But... hehehe, I've already accomplished my task."

Shai Zi looked at Li Huowang, "Hong Zhong, Hong Zhong, did you really think you found me? It was all me leading you to find me. Every step you took was within my calculations."

"Don't give me that! I'm specialized in killing the Sitting Oblivion Dao! I've seen enough of these tricks! Who's Hong Zhong? You can't fool me!" Li Huowang charged forward with his sword.

Instead of dodging, Shai Zi rushed towards Li Huowang and even bared his chest to meet the blade, which emerged from Shai Zi's back.

As they were very close, Li Huowang could even smell the scent of charred flesh from Shai Zi.

"Die!" Li Huowang pushed the hilt of the sword and forced Shai Zi backward. He bared his teeth and fiercely bit off a chunk of Shai Zi's face.

Then, he exerted force with both hands to grab the hilt of the sword and lifted it upward to split Shai Zi's upper body in half.

The panting Li Huowang looked down at the corpse on the ground with trembling hands.

Just as he hadn't yet reacted to what had happened, a chilling voice sounded in his ear, "Child..."

Dan Yangzi is back? As Li Huowang momentarily lost consciousness, the three-flowered Dan Yangzi appeared intermittently before him.

No! This is fake! Shai Zi is still alive! He has attached himself to me! As Li Huowang realized this, he took out the purple-tasseled sword and started stabbing himself.

“Hehehe, Hong Zhong. You play well. You’re quite naughty.” Li Huowang’s mouth began to speak involuntarily.

“You want my body, huh? Fine! I’ll let you have it!” Li Huowang took out a hook from his bag of torture instruments. He hooked his own collarbone and yanked on it forcefully.

“Pfft, Hong Zhong, be gentle. You’re hurting me.”

Compared to Li Huowang’s methods of forcing out Shai Zi with pain, the methods of the Great Liang Imperial Preceptor were obviously much more simple and violent.

“Clouds fly with urgency! Mysterious thunder dragon, pass rain! Immortal fire, urgently bestowed! Lightning to the rescue!”

Thunder rolled above Li Huowang’s head. He didn’t show any mercy as he intended to split Shai Zi in half.

Shai Zi didn’t dare to mess around upon seeing that Huangfu Tiangang was serious. The corpse that was cut in half and was on the ground suddenly stood up by itself and ran toward the east gate.

The voice in Li Huowang’s ear had disappeared completely as well.

As the eunuch’s two legs moved quickly, Shai Zi’s head was cut in half, and they swayed up and down like fruits on a tree.

Each side only had half a mouth left, and they began to speak one word alternately at a time, “Ah, old fellow, you’re really serious, huh? Don’t forget that I have a share of the credit in you obtaining your current position.”

Huangfu Tiangang sensed Li Huowang looking over, and he casually replied, “It’s like what he told you just now. It’s all lies from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Don’t fall for it.”

He began to hold the Constellation Sword and perform a spell. Strong winds blew past, and thunder rolled in the sky.

Snap!

A purple lightning bolt struck Shai Zi, splitting his upper and lower body split in half.

However, Shai Zi could still move. His two halves, one left and one right, bounced up and down.

The Great Liang Imperial Preceptor didn't pay attention to the left half and attacked the right half instead.

Li Huowang saw what was going on and chased after the other half. He didn't want to let Shai Zi escape.

"Hong Zhong, you're here? I went to Fengyang Tower the other day, and their signature dishes there are truly exquisite. You must bring Bai Lingmiao to try them next time."

"Die!" Li Huowang swung the spine sword forcefully, and a rift flew toward Shai Zi.

Shai Zi's figure twisted, and he easily dodged the rift. "This isn't right, you know? Open a bit of a wider rift, and I can use it to escape to the Great Qi. If that happens, won't all your previous efforts be in vain?"

Shai Zi's words had just come out of his mouth when he abruptly screamed in pain and fell to the ground. There was an intense pain radiating from his chest.

"Hey, why are you using those crazy Ao Jing tricks again? Isn't it going to hurt for you as well? I really don't like playing with people like you."

Shai Zi trembled and stood up. He used his lone eye to look at Li Huowang, who was holding his ribs and had stabbed them into his chest.

"What? Do you really think you can kill me? Even if I'm only half myself, you can't."

"How would I know if I don't try? And I don't need to kill you; I just need to stop you!" Peng Longteng's headless body materialized slowly beside Li Huowang.

Right as things were about to break out, a dark gold arrow suddenly appeared on Shai Zi's head, which sent him flying away.

Shai Zi landed heavily on the ground, and the fierce wind behind almost blew Li Huowang off his feet.

Five more arrows shot out from all directions and pinned Shai Zi to the ground. "The audacity to do something like this in the palace in broad daylight... Do you really think that my Liang Kingdom has no one to defend it? Hmph?"

Chapter 562 - Scheme

“The audacity to do something like this in the palace in broad daylight... Do you really think that my Liang Kingdom has no one to defend it? Hmph?” A rough voice sounded from Li Huowang’s left. He turned and saw an elderly warrior clad in heavy armor on horseback.

Li Huowang felt like the wind itself was moving with the elderly warrior. Undoubtedly, the elderly warrior was from a military family and not from a mid-tier family like Peng Longteng!

His aura was perhaps the strongest among the Great Liang's forces!

He wasn’t alone. Six people in total were charging toward Shai Zi in all directions, and all of them were on horseback. It seemed that the commotion in the palace had attracted these monsters.

Li Huowang suddenly found himself experiencing auditory hallucinations. He could hear agonized screams, and he could also smell the rusty stench of blood. He suddenly felt annoyed.

When they gathered around Shai Zi, the oppressive aura that they carried pervaded the air; it was so thick that it was palpable.

Li Huowang even felt like there was an invisible wall ahead of him. The smell of blood on them was much heavier than the smell of blood on Li Huowang.

“When you reach the Yama[\[1\]](#) Temple, remember to say your Grandpa Zhang was your murderer !”

A veteran general with three deep scars on his face raised his heavy mace with lingering afterimages, ready to smash the immobilized Shai Zi on the ground.

“Hold on!” The heavy mace paused. The six veteran generals and Li Huowang looked toward the Imperial Preceptor

“Let me ask a few questions first before we kill him,” Huangfu Tiangang said, walking over with his hands behind his back.

Li Huowang’s heart tensed as he heard that the Imperial Preceptor wanted to talk to Shai Zi.

He knew too well the strengths and weaknesses of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Everyone knew that they weren’t that great at fighting, but they excelled at manipulation and deceit. A conversation was a Shai Zi’s home ground!

“Imperial Preceptor, it’s better to kill Shai Zi quickly to prevent any further complications!”

“I’m way more experienced than you. Do I really need you to lecture me?” Huangfu Tiangang glared at Li Huowang before walking toward the trapped Shai Zi.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion came to Li Huowang’s side again and winked. “Brother, don’t you think something’s fishy about this? What if that old man owes our boss a favor? He might be taking advantage of this opportunity to repay the favor.”

Li Huowang looked at him coldly. “Even at this point, you still want to help Shai Zi trick me? Fine, get ready to be tortured tonight!”

“Hey! What’s wrong with you? I’m just helping you think it through. You’re misinterpreting my kindness as malice.”

Li Huowang couldn’t be bothered to listen to his explanation. He turned to Zhuge Yuan and said, “Brother Zhuge, can you take care of Shai Zi if I materialize you for a short while?”

“Brother Li, we’re almost at the goal. Stay patient. There’s no need to risk exposing your Strayed One identity. Come, let’s go see what questions the Imperial Preceptor has for Shai Zi.”

With that, Zhuge Yuan followed Huangfu Tiangang toward Shai Zi. The Imperial Preceptor seemed to have sensed something. He glanced to his left before walking forward.

Li Huowang’s expression changed rapidly as he watched the two figures.

“Boss Hong Zhong, this kid is definitely hiding something from you,” The Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion came to Li Huowang’s side again.

“Shut up! What do you know? Is being tortured and dismembered not enough for you?” Li Huowang tightened his grip on the spine sword and followed them towards Shai Zi.

As Li Huowang finally arrived next to them, the Imperial Preceptor had already started his questioning, “Tell me, why are you hiding in the palace? I’ve been watching you for a long time. I thought I could lure out the remaining Sitting Oblivion Dao, but you’ve remained quiet all along.”

“Hehehe,” Shai Zi was calm despite being pinned to the ground. He even had the audacity to raise his chin at Li Huowang.

“You think you’ve been watching me, but I wanted you to watch me. I’m here to provide cover for others. I’m not the one doing the job this time, but it’s someone else,” Shai Zi said and blinked at Li Huowang.

“You better spit it out quickly! I have more important matters to attend to!” The Imperial Preceptor’s tone grew more serious.

“Hehehe~ Why don’t you guess how big of a scheme I have pulled off this time?” Shai Zi showed no signs of fear even when faced with the weapons around him.

“Oh, I won’t guess.” The Imperial Preceptor had no intention of indulging him. He drew his Constellation Sword and prepared to strike Shai Zi.

“Hey, what’s the hurry? You’re so impatient. I’ll talk, I’ll talk. After years of hard work, it’s all for this moment.”

“Hehehe, do you guys think that we, Sitting Oblivion Dao, can’t play with the Dragon Vein? We don’t believe in such nonsense! Our goal is the Emperor of the Great Liang.”

“Since we can’t touch the Dragon Vein, we’ll dig up the roots of the Dragon Vein! Hehehe, do you really think that the Emperor of the Great Liang is a chosen one? Seriously? That kid named Ji Lin is a chosen one? Do you really think so?”

“ Hmm? ” The Imperial Preceptor frowned as if recalling something.

“Isn’t Ji Lin of royal blood? Impossible! You must be playing some shoddy trick! I’ve calculated his eight characters[2] with Xuan Pin! He’s of the Ji family bloodline!”

“ Hahaha! ” Shai Zi laughed hysterically.

“That’s right~ Hahaha; he is of the Ji family bloodline! But I had Ji Lin’s genitals replaced! He’s actually a girl! And she’s infertile[3]! The Dragon Vein of Great Liang has been severed at her section! Hahaha!”

Shai Zi laughed until he ran out of breath, and there was a thrilled gleam in his eyes. He looked like he had been waiting for this very day.

Li Huowang’s heart trembled at the revelation. This lunatic had actually given him the task of helping Ji Lin ascend to the throne, all for the sake of deceiving everyone.

“Which one of you wants to tell the emperor this good news? Help me ask him how he feels about suddenly finding out that he’s a girl after being a man for more than ten years. Hahaha!”

Huangfu Tiangang looked coldly at Shai Zi, showing no surprise. “So this is Shai Zi’s scheme? If you think the Great Liang Dragon Vein is so easily severed, then you’ve miscalculated. We knew something like this was going to happen, so we’ve decided to hide some hidden dragons[4] among the people.”

“Hehehe~ There’s no more. We’ve cleaned them all up. What’s their token? Is it a white round jade pendant? Hehehe~”

A white round jade pendant? Li Huowang felt like he had seen such a thing before.

“Those people are just ordinary people with no bodyguards around them. We don't even need to do anything against them; we just have to provoke them a little, and they'll seek death by themselves. Isn't that right, Hong Zhong?" Shai Zi asked.

1. King of Hell 📖
2. birth date and time 📖
3. the term used was 'stone girl', which refers to a congenitally missing vagina 📖
4. secret descendants hidden amongst the people 📖

Chapter 563 - Shai Zi

“Those people are just ordinary people with no bodyguards around them. We don't even need to do anything against them; we just have to provoke them a little, and they'll seek death by themselves. Isn't that right, Hong Zhong?”

Shai Zi's words seemed directed at Li Huowang, but they were actually more like a reminder.

A white round jade pendant? Li Huowang immediately recalled the jade pendant that he had stolen from his late Senior Xuan Yang's residence inside the Zephyr Temple!

He had used that jade pendant to trade for a horse not too long ago.

Xuan Yang... was actually of the royal bloodline of the Great Liang? Shock dawned on Li Huowang's face as he recalled the youth who had attempted to escape from Zephyr Temple, only to be fed to the Black Taisui by Dan Yangzi.

He actually died because of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? The Sitting Oblivion Dao had already infiltrated Zephyr Temple while he was still there?!

Li Huowang knew that the sacred text Dan Yangzi had given to him was from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but it seemed that was another member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao within the Zephyr Temple at the time!

Who is it? Who did they impersonate? Xiaoman, Gao Zhijian, Bai Lingmiao, Yang Xiaohai—the faces of those people flashed rapidly through Li Huowang's mind.

Pop!

Li Huowang suddenly heard a noise reminiscent of a popping bubble, and his own face appeared in his own mind. He began to recall a few old memories, which had been sealed using the Sitting Oblivion Dao's methods.

Was it me? Did I hint to Xuan Yang to escape? Was I the Sitting Oblivion Dao inside Zephyr Temple? Li Huowang's body began to twitch uncontrollably, and he clutched his head in agony.

He suddenly recalled the preceding events, the period before he transmigrated to this world. He had pretended to encounter Dan Yangzi and pretended to be captured by him. It was all to deal with Xuan Yang, the hidden dragon of Great Liang.

Even Taishang Laojun, who had given Dan Yangzi those sacred texts, was actually himself in a disguise! He was a Hong Zhong, and he had deceived everyone!

No! This isn't right! Doulao Taiyin has tampered with my memories! These aren't my memories. I'm not a Hong Zhong, I'm Li Huowang! Don't let the Sitting Oblivion Dao deceive you! Li Huowang roared to himself.

No matter how much he tried to suggest otherwise, his memories as a Hong Zhong became increasingly vivid in his head.

Those memories of Hong Zhong began to accumulate more and more, and they gradually encroached on Li Huowang's own memories.

When his memories as a Hong Zhong began to outnumber his memories as Li Huowang, he started to find it difficult to differentiate whether he was a Hong Zhong or Li Huowang.

If this were any other time, Li Huowang's unusual reaction wouldn't have escaped the Imperial Preceptor's notice.

However, Huangfu Tiangang's attention was on Shai Zi alone; he didn't notice what was going on with Li Huowang.

"Don't even think about deceiving me! Do you think you can disturb my mind with these lies alone? Do you think I don't have other tricks up my sleeve?" A purple lightning bolt struck down, burning Shai Zi's remaining arm and leg to a crisp.

He was on the brink of death, but Shai Zi became even more invigorated rather than the opposite.

“Hahaha! Lies? Tiangang, it seems you still don’t understand the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Using lies to deceive people is just a trick used by the pawns within the Sitting Oblivion Dao! I am Shai Zi, I only use the truth to deceive people!”

“It’s alright, even if you don’t believe it. Anyway, the Dragon Vein of Great Liang has been severed. The god Yu’er has arrived, and all you have to do next is sit back and enjoy the show! Hehehe~”

One of the veteran generals nearby couldn’t bear Shai Zi’s arrogant act anymore. He raised his sword and pressed it against Shai Zi’s half-charred neck.

“You scoundrel! What benefit do you get from severing the Dragon Vein of Great Liang? When the whole world falls into chaos, you’ll die too!”

“Hehehe, so be it. Do you really think that the leader of the Sitting Oblivion Dao is going to be afraid of that?” Shai Zi curled up. He stretched his neck, tearing apart what remained of his head, which promptly rolled on the ground. “Farewell, everyone! I’m leaving first! Oh, Hong Zhong, you don’t need to burn paper money for me on Qingming Festival^[1]; it’s not our Sitting Oblivion Dao’s custom.”

With that, the head in a pool of blood lost all signs of life.

“Want to die? It’s not that easy! I’ll make your soul scatter into nothingness!”

Huangfu Tiangang pointed his Constellation Sword at the sky, and the sword quivered violently in mid-air. Purple lighting bolts struck down one after another, mercilessly scorching Shai Zi’s corpse.

After a dozen lightning bolts, Shai Zi’s corpse had been reduced to basically meat scraps.

The Imperial Preceptor's face twitched slightly, and he snorted in disdain while staring at the charred ground. Then, he turned around and started walking toward the palace.

“Sob! Boss Shai Zi~~~ You've met such a tragic end! How am I supposed to live without you! Sob!” The Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion lay on the scorched ground and cried inconsolably without tears.

“Monk! Monk! Aren't you supposed to be a good person? Didn't you see my boss die? Hurry up and help him ascend to the other side!”

Zhugue Yuan's expression was solemn as he walked past the wailing illusion to reach Li Huowang. “Brother Li! Brother Li! Hold on! Things aren't over yet!”

“I...” Li Huowang was scratching his head in confusion, “Who am I? Am I Hong Zhong, or am I Li Huowang?”

“Regardless of who you are, do you really want the Great Liang to suffer the same fate as the Great Qi? Think about your Cowheart Village! Think about your fellow disciples, your daughter Li Sui, and your Bai Lingmiao! Do you really want them to end up like the denizens of the Great Qi?”

Zhugue Yuan's words were like a bucket of cold water that was poured over Li Huowang's head, and they made him snap back to reality.

“Shai Zi's plan isn't flawless! Catch up with the Great Liang's Imperial Preceptor; there's still a way to connect Great Liang's roots!”

When Li Huowang felt his inner turmoil growing once more, he slapped himself and chased after the Imperial Preceptor of the Great Liang.

He was nearby; he was at the main hall where Ji Lin had summoned Li Huowang long ago.

Upon entering the hall, Li Huowang saw a group of eunuchs staggering away from Huangfu Tiangang.

Meanwhile, Huangfu Tiangang himself was walking toward Ji Lin with a dark expression.

“Preceptor... how dare you! I am the emperor! How dare you defy me!” Ji Lin’s fierce face showed panic. After all, it was the Imperial Preceptor who challenged him.

However, Huangfu Tiangang remained silent in the face of the questioning. He walked directly to the side of the throne and roughly pulled him down to the ground.

“Guards, protect the emperor!” Ji Lin shouted desperately as he struggled to prop himself up on the golden bricks with his remaining two fingers.

Just as he was about to stand up, the Imperial Preceptor lifted him up. Then, the Imperial Preceptor bit his fingertip and drew symbols on Ji Lin’s body.

“Imperial Preceptor! Huangfu Tiangang! How dare you! I am the emperor! I’m the one and only remaining member of the Ji family! How dare you disrespect me! Aren’t you afraid there’ll be no one left to bear the Great Liang’s luck?”

The Imperial Preceptor was soon finished drawing, and he slapped Ji Lin in the face.

The next moment, the red talismans on Ji Lin came alive. They slid rapidly across Ji Lin as if they were flying dragons.

Soon, the talismans seemed to have noticed something, and they picked up the pace.

A clear and distinct voice echoed from beneath Ji Lin’s dragon robe. “Oh dear, so you’ve found out? How clever~ How did you know that I’m the one who implanted this little girl’s manhood?”

Something rolled out from beneath the dragon robe, and it rolled in Li Huowang’s direction. “Hong Zhong! Hong Zhong! Hey! What are you doing standing there in a daze? Come here and help me!”

Before it could roll far away, Huangfu Tiangang's large foot came down and crushed it to pieces.

Chapter 564 - Schemes

Within Schemes

Ji Lin began to feel uneasy; he noticed something strange happening to his body.

“What’s going on...” Ji Lin trailed off as he froze. His voice was no longer that of a young man but had transformed into a delicate young woman’s voice.

Multiple changes occurred one after another. Her skin softened, and his Adam's apple sank. More and more changes occurred until he finally became a bonafide woman.

Huangfu Tiangang walked towards the exit with a grim expression but was stopped by Li Huowang, who was holding his head in pain. “Imperial Preceptor, don’t panic, there’s still a solution! The root of Great Liang’s Dragon Vein has yet to be severed!”

“You don’t even know what’s happening. This matter concerns not just the Dragon Vein! Hmph! You don’t know anything at all!”

Huangfu Tiangang suppressed his anger and walked briskly towards the hall’s exit.

Li Huowang wanted to speak, but he hesitated. His thoughts were a bit sluggish as he looked at Zhuge Yuan. “What method is it, Brother Zhuge?”

Zhuge Yuan closed his eyes and took a deep breath before opening his eyes once again, “The Great Qi! We can use the royal bloodline of the Great Qi to connect with the Dragon Vein of Great Liang, which will ensure that the Dragon Vein will remain linked.”

“Brother Zhuge, what nonsense are you talking about? The bloodline of the Great Qi no longer exists! Have you already forgotten how I beheaded the final emperor of the Great Qi?"

"He can't die The Empress Dowager of the Great Qi had done everything possible to ensure her son's ascension to the throne. She even defied fate to refine him the Hundred Souls Layered Body! You actually sent him to the Great Liang. We just have to find him, and Shai Zi's scheme will become meaningless!"

"Really?! That's great!" Li Huowang clutched his head and was about to chase after the Imperial Preceptor when he came to a halt and muttered, "Brother Zhuge... Did you already know about Shai Zi's scheme?"

"Brother Li, let's talk about that later. Hurry up and tell the Great Liang's Imperial Preceptor what I said to you!"

However, Li Huowang added, "Brother Zhuge, we're in Great Liang, so is it really necessary for us to go and look for him right now? Or are you trying to change the subject? I've been feeling something amiss for a while now, but I thought I was just overthinking it. I mean, how can I doubt you? I was convinced that I was just overthinking it. After all, you're such a good person, Zhuge Yuan. We're even sworn brothers!

"Unfortunately, my doubts only grew since my memories as a Hong Zhong were unlocked. Like how you told me to go to Great Qi to look for Shangji Guankou, which ended up in me stumbling upon the Emperor of the Great Qi? Then I actually brought him to the Great Liang?"

"Coincidentally, Shai Zi's scheme is to sever the Great Liang's roots. However, the Emperor of the Great Qi can actually destroy that scheme? What kind of a coincidence is that? it feels like I'm dancing to someone else's palm."

Zhugue Yuan sighed and admitted it. "Indeed, I saw through Shai Zi's scheme earlier."

"Then why didn't you stop it? You could have mentioned it to me earlier. There had been eight other contenders for the throne!

We wouldn't have found ourselves in this situation if we had spared just one or maybe two of them!"

"Because I wanted to save Great Qi!" Zhuge Yuan roared. This was the first time that Zhuge Yuan raised his voice at Li Huowang, and his lips trembled ever so slightly as he added, "Do you know how many people are still alive in the Great Qi? Do you know how many are going to die once the Great Qi is annihilated thoroughly? Think about that little girl, the one crying noiselessly while tugging at your clothes. She's alive, and everyone there is alive!"

"You have good friends, and you have people you care about. How about me? Do you really think that I don't have any beloved ones in the Great Qi?"

"Yes, I did all this! When I said I wanted to leave a message for my good friend, I was talking about that Xu Nian! She's my good friend! She's my confidante. I made it so that she'll bring the Emperor of Great Qi with her. She helped you with the scene, and she ultimately found a way to bring the Great Qi Emperor to the Great Liang, just as Shai Zi was setting up his scheme. That little emperor can break Shai Zi's scheme and save Great Qi at the same time. Don't worry; the Great Liang will remain unharmed, even if the Emperor of the Great Qi establishes a connection with it.

"The current Great Qi is done for, but... I want to give the survivors of the Great Qi a way out..." Zhuge Yuan trailed off, and his voice sounded so low at the end of his sentence that Li Huowang barely heard him.

After a while, Li Huowang smiled bitterly and asked, "Why? Why did you not tell me? Why did it have to be like this? Do you really think that I wouldn't have helped you if you had told me about it? Wrong! I would have risked my life to help you! You're the only one whom I truly trust in this crazy world, Zhuge Yuan! I truly consider you as my good friend!"

Zhuce Yuan was silent.

Li Huowang could guess the answer. He approached Zhuge Yuan step by step, glaring at him with bloodshot eyes. "Is it because you suspected that I was a Hong Zhong? Or was it because you thought that I was a lunatic? Did you not say anything to me because you couldn't trust me?"

"Yes."

Zhuce Yuan's succinct reply made Li Huowang feel like his chest was struck by a sledgehammer. His emotional pain then transformed into extreme anger. "I'm a lunatic! I'm a Hong Zhong! But what about you? You might not even be Zhuge Yuan! You're nothing but a mere illusion!"

Zhuce Yuan's figure flickered at Li Huowang's remark. However, Zhuge Yuan's gaze became even more resolute, "Does it matter whether I'm the real Zhuge Yuan or not? So what if I'm an illusion? Even if one is poor, they'll still be able to achieve something by persevering and never giving up on their ambitions!"

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and swung his hand toward Zhuge Yuan's face. "Stop the nonsense! I've never really understood your nonsense! I've just been pretending all this while!"

"Brother Li!" Zhuge Yuan took a step forward and looked seriously at Li Huowang's face, "Brother Li, does it really matter who we are? So what if I am an illusion? So what if you are Hong Zhong? What matters is our true intentions!"

"True intentions... Haha... True intentions..." Li Huowang shook his head with a bitter smile. He staggered backward until he collided with a massive dragon pillar. After a moment of silence, he looked at Zhuge Yuan again. His voice was tinged with indifference as he asked, "Brother Zhuge, what if I really am a Hong Zong? I mean, there must be a reason behind your suspicions, right? if I'm a Hong Zong, do you really think that this Hong Zhong of the Sitting Oblivion Dao would help you foil Shai Zi's plan?"

The spine sword on Li Huowang's back started moving on its own. The spine sword tore off the purple talisman on its head and used its bone-white fingers to carve some words into the stone tiles. After a brief pause, the spine sword slapped the words carved in the stone tiles, and the words took to the sky, leaving behind an afterimage as they made a beeline for the Imperial Preceptor of the Great Liang.

Chapter 565 - Zhuge Yuan

Li Huowang's eyes trembled slightly as he stood before the dragon pillar within the brightly lit palace hall.

He glanced at the spine sword, which was moving by itself, before turning to Zhuge Yuan beside him.

Li Huowang had suffered many injuries before, but none of them could compare to the pain he was feeling at the moment.

"So you had a backup plan all along! You never trusted me! Are you really the Zhuge Yuan who was willing to sacrifice even your life just to save me?!" Li Huowang roared, "You want me to stay steadfast to my true intentions? But you've always treated me as a Hong Zhong of the Sitting Oblivion Dao! How am I supposed to do that?"

Li Huowang's lips twitched slightly; he raised his fist and pounded his own head.

"Brother Li, I had no choice. There are so many lives in Great Qi, and I really couldn't risk everything for you. I can sacrifice my own life for you, but I can't sacrifice the lives of everyone in Great Qi for you!"

Li Huowang glared at Zhuge Yuan, and he was filled with rage as he rushed toward the latter.

Li Huowang clenched his right hand and swung it toward Zhuge Yuan's head, which became tangible as soon as his fist swept across it.

Zhuce Yuan's head whipped upward upon getting hit by Li Huowang's fist, and he staggered backward as well. A large bruise appeared on Zhuge Yuan's face. When he found his footing again, he sighed lightly and said, "I have always acted with a clear conscience, except for this time when I concealed the truth from you, my sworn brother, for the sake of the Great Qi. It was indeed ungentlemanly of me. I have made a mistake, and I must be punished for it; I am willing to atone for my sin with death.”

Li Huowang froze just then. Zhuge Yuan’s figure started flickering.

“What... what are you talking about?! I’m not done with you! You still owe me an explanation! You’re not going anywhere!” Li Huowang clutched his head again with an agonized look.

Zhuce Yuan’s figure stabilized almost immediately.

“Brother Li, illusions are only going to bring you harm as a Strayed One. It’s best to get rid of them as soon as possible. If you want the illusions around you to disappear, perhaps you may do so by eliminating their obsessions. Once their obsessions are eliminated, the illusions will naturally vanish, just like me and like Jiang Yingzi,” Zhuge Yuan said, his figure becoming extremely blurry.

Li Huowang tried to solidify him again but to no avail.

“Brother Li, if you can’t distinguish whether you are Hong Zhong or Li Huowang, you must go to where Li Huowang should be and gather more memories as Li Huowang. This might help suppress your memories as a Hong Zhong. Brother Li, I once wanted to help you find out why Doulao Taiyin had decided to modify your past. But forgive me for my incompetence, as I couldn’t figure out the reason why. It would be best for you to delay cultivating the ‘Truth’ until you’ve learned why.”

Zhuce Yuan’s figure became almost completely transparent.

Zhuce Yuan carefully adjusted his robes and leaned forward. He cupped his fists together and bowed to Li Huowang. “Brother Li, take care!”

Zhuge Yuan's figure vanished, and he left not even a single trace behind.

Li Huowang put down his hands and stared blankly at where Zhuge Yuan had vanished.

After a while, he started crying and cursing at the same time. Eventually, he stopped cursing and simply stood like a frozen statue. His indescribable face obfuscated his thoughts, making it impossible for anyone to decipher.

After some time, Li Huowang suddenly moved. He turned and walked back toward the spine sword.

The purple talisman on the sword had been reattached, and the peach patterns protruding from the sword as well as the flesh and blood had vanished; it had become nothing more than an ordinary spine sword.

Li Huowang trembled, and he tore the purple talisman apart. However, the spine sword was quiet; it seemed that it had died along with the illusion of Zhuge Yuan.

Loud footsteps entered Li Huowang's ears just then, and a group of people with the Surveillance Bureau's identity tokens hanging at their waists appeared. Each and every one of them had grim expressions, and they all had a variety of weapons in hand.

"Er Jiu! Er Jiu!" Fo Yulu exclaimed with an ugly look. She led a group of people to surround Li Huowang before asking, "What's going on?! Where's the Imperial Preceptor? Why did His Majesty become a girl? Who killed the spy among the eunuchs?"

Li Huowang remained silent and shook his head indifferently. He bent down to pick up his sword, and then he pushed past the group of people to head out of the palace.

The others wanted to block him, but Li Huowang swung his spine sword and dove into the spacetime rift.

Boom!

A loud thunderclap startled Gao Zhijian, who was in the middle of eating a bowl of noodles in an inn. He walked out of the inn with the bowl of noodles in hand and saw dark clouds gathering over the Great Liang palace.

He also saw multiple purple lightning bolts raining down on the palace.

What's happening? Gao Zhijian had no idea, but there was something strange with the lightning bolts.

Loud hoofbeats echoed, and soldiers carrying military banners rushed down the streets, hitting their bronze gongs with urgent looks.

"The Imperial Preceptor's orders are here! Daytime curfew in Shangjing! Daytime curfew in Shangjing! Those who are still outside after two incense sticks' worth of time will be executed!"

Their words immediately caused a commotion; the people strolling down the streets acted like ants on a hot pan as they frantically ran away.

The vendors on the streets abandoned their stalls and rushed home as fast as possible.

Gao Zhijian didn't understand what was happening, but he followed the bandwagon and returned to the inn with a bowl of noodles in hand.

The frightened waiter hurriedly locked the door and barricaded it with the tables before gossiping with the other anxious customers in low voices

"What's going on? What's up with this sudden daytime curfew? Has Qing Qiu attacked us?"

"No way. However, I saw lightning bolts descending upon the palace. Is His Majesty performing a ritual?"

"Hey, kid, do you want to die? How dare you say such things?!"

"It's fine, it's fine. Our Majesty doesn't punish people for their words."

The people of Shangjing moved frantically, rushing to their homes in the proverbial blink of an eye.

Before an incense stick's worth of time was over, the streets were already empty.

Amidst the tense atmosphere, Gao Zhijian peered outside through a hole in the paper window. Is this daytime curfew related to Senior Li? Should I go out and take a look?

He was rather hesitant at the idea. He'd most likely run into the soldiers of the Great Liang before he could find Senior Li if he were to go out there without any clues about the latter's whereabouts.

Chapter 566 - Curfew

The skies over Shangjing darkened slowly amidst the ongoing curfew. Gao Zhijian didn't see anyone else outside except for soldiers enforcing the curfew.

"Everyone!" someone shouted.

Gao Zhijian turned around in confusion and saw the innkeeper standing on the table. The innkeeper got everyone's attention by smacking the bottom of a bowl using a pair of chopsticks. The innkeeper grinned as he swept his gaze across everyone before saying, "Everyone, it seems that no one can go back today and have no choice but to stay here tonight. We have three rooms of the highest quality and six regular rooms available. I'd love to give it to you for free, but I'm certain that many of you will find it unfair if were to give it to everyone via lottery.

"So I've decided to give the rooms to the highest bidder! However, I'm not trying to take advantage of you here! Those without a room can just sleep here in the hall. We're a well-respected establishment with competitive rates, so sleeping on the floor in this hall will only cost you a hundred!"

The crowd was in an uproar at the innkeeper's announcement.

Seeing that it wasn't important, Gao Zhijian turned around and stared at the streets.

This time, he saw something unexpected—there was an extremely pretty lady walking on the streets!

Gao Zhijian had seen a lot of the world after traveling with Senior Li for so long, but he had never seen such a pretty young lady before.

Why is she outside? The curfew's still ongoing. Is she not afraid of encountering the soldiers?

Gao Zhijian was confused.

“Dad! Dad, where are you?! Don’t leave me alone!” the young lady exclaimed.

Wait, why is her voice so familiar?

The young lady's beauty had astonished him, which made sense, but how come even her voice had astonished him as well? She sounded so familiar that Gao Zhijian felt disturbed.

The young lady's voice grew softer and softer as she walked away.

" Ah! " Gao Zhijian abruptly exclaimed. He had finally recalled the reason the young lady's voice sounded familiar. She had the same voice as that evil entity that Li Huowang had been rearing—the evil entity that always wore a veil and a straw robe. She's looking for her father? Her father must be Senior Li!

Gao Zhijian pushed away the tables that were blocking the entrance and twisted the doorknob with enough strength to destroy it.

Before the people inside the inn could react, Gao Zhijian ran out and chased after Li Sui.

The streets were empty, so he found her in no time.

“Ah! It’s you! Have you seen my dad? He was following someone with a white beard who was calling himself the Imperial Preceptor. They rode a sword and flew away, leaving me behind,” Li Sui said. This was her first time talking to Gao Zhijian, but this wasn't her first time seeing Gao Zhijian, as she recognized him as someone from Cowheart Village.

“Your... your dad.... your dad is...” Gao Zhijian stammered.

Before he could finish his sentence, however, several horses appeared at the end of the street.

The soldiers lightly kicked the bellies of their horses, urging them to charge at Gao Zhijian and Li Sui standing on the street.

Gao Zhijian tensed up when he saw the soldiers raising their weapons. Then, he grabbed Li Sui and ran away.

Gao Zhijian had a towering statue that allowed him to cover a ton of ground with his strides, but he was not as fast as a horse.

The gap between them and the soldiers narrowed swiftly. Soon, the hoofbeats were just behind them. Hearing that, Gao Zhijian knew that he could not run anymore.

Gao Zhijian made a split-second decision, throwing Li Sui into an alleyway before turning around and standing his ground.

The soldiers never thought that Gao Zhijian would stand his ground. One of them couldn't swing their weapon, but their horse crashed against the sturdy-looking Gao Zhijian.

Veins bulged all over Gao Zhijian as he howled and lifted the horse before throwing it and its rider onto a nearby roof.

The other soldiers were shocked by Gao Zhijian's strength, and they dared not get too close to him.

One of them took out a long tube from under his armor and pulled on the string at the bottom.

Swoosh!

Boom!

A red firework painted the skies.

Gao Zhijian unleashed his killing intent upon seeing the red firework before turning around and running into an alleyway. He grabbed Li Sui, who was hiding in the alleyway, before running toward another street.

Gao Zhijian had barely taken two steps when a large-framed man holding two maces appeared before him.

The man wore heavy armor, and he blocked Gao Zhijian the moment he noticed the latter's killing intent.

“How dare you train in the techniques of the army?! Who do you think you are? Die!” the large-framed man roared, raising his maces and charging at Gao Zhijian.

Gao Zhijian wanted to retreat, but there was nowhere else to go. He had no choice but to fight head-on.

Gao Zhijian caught one of the maces with his bare arms. However, the large-framed man took to the sky up and smashed the ground in front of Gao Zhijian. "Moon-Pursuing Meteor!"

Gao Zhijian staggered backward; he managed to stabilize himself in the blink of an eye, but he didn't manage to escape unscathed; his hands were bleeding.

"Where's your weapon?" the large-framed man asked, staring arrogantly at Gao Zhijian.

Gao Zhijian used his pants to wipe away the blood on his bloody hand. "In... in the inn!"

Boom!

The ground cracked as the large-framed man threw one of the heavy maces in front of Gao Zhijian.

"Come! I don't want you to say that I, Ma Wu, had bullied you by fighting you with my weapons when you're unarmed!" Ma Wu let go of his remaining mace and charged at Gao Zhijian with his bare fist.

Li Sui stood between the two, but Gao Zhijian pushed her away.

Ma Wu and Gao Zhijian then crashed into each other; their fists buried into each other's figures.

Ma Wu was clearly trained on how to fight with his bare fist, but Gao Zhijian obviously didn't have any proper training.

Soon, Gao Zhijian's face was full of bruises.

Despite his injuries, he remained powerful and domineering. When Gao Zhijian thought he was going to lose, his body moved on itself, hooking Ma Wu's leg with his right leg, causing the latter to stumble.

Taking advantage of that opportunity, Gao Zhijian swung his elbow toward Ma Wu's throat, but his elbow came to an abrupt halt just a few inches away from Ma Wu's throat.

The two stopped and retreated.

Gao Zhijian was injured, while Ma Wu was virtually unscathed, but the two of them knew that Gao Zhijian was the winner.

"Good! You are a true man! You have the qualifications to learn the army's techniques!" Ma Wu nodded and retrieved his weapons. "There is an ongoing curfew, so stay indoors. We have no idea what our superior is thinking, so you're lucky that you've encountered me. Otherwise, you would have died today."

Gao Zhijian stood in front of Li Sui behind him and nodded. "Thanks."

"But your technique isn't as good as the Ma family's technique! If you want to join the army next time, come and find me. I will make sure that you'll get a good position beneath me!" Ma Wu said. Then, he left with his maces.

The other soldiers left after Ma Wu, and the streets were empty once again.

Gao Zhijian looked around and sighed in relief before pulling Li Sui toward the inn.

Chapter 567 - Death

Li Huowang held the golden fries and examined them carefully. The crystalline salt glittered beneath the morning sunlight. He looked at it for a moment before dipping it in the tomato sauce and eating it. His eyes narrowed as he savored the explosion of flavor in his mouth. Afterward, he proceeded to take a few mouthfuls of the cold soda in his hand before chomping down on his burger. The cheese from the burger oozed out from the corner of his mouth and dripped onto his hospital gown.

“Son, take it slow and easy. I can buy more if you want more,” Sun Xiaoqin said, wiping away the cheese on Li Huowang's gown and eating it herself. She patted Li Huowang's head and stepped away to speak to the doctor.

“Doctor, what's going on with my son? He suddenly has a great appetite, and he's no longer speaking nonsense. Is he recovering?” Sun Xiaoqin asked Yi Donglai, who was writing notes on his observation of Li Huowang.

Yi Donglai frowned at Li Huowang, who was eating voraciously and shook his head. “Miss Sun, please give the two of us some time alone. I have to observe him even further.”

“All right, I'm leaving now. Please take care of him! Treat him, and I will even kneel down to you and give you a pennant!” [1]

Hearing the door close behind him, Yi Donglai approached Li Huowang and sat down on a stool. “What's wrong with you? Did something happen on the other side?”

Li Huowang ignored Yi Donglai. He finished his meal and grabbed the portable gaming console on the side to immerse himself in gaming.

“Is Zhuge Yuan dead?”

Bam!

The gaming console broke into pieces as Li Huowang smashed it to the ground and grabbed Yi Donglai by the collar. He shook Yi Donglai violently and roared, “Do you wanna die?! I can tear apart the artery in your neck with just my teeth!”

Yi Donglai waved his hand at the guards, stopping them in their approach. “Li Huowang, you're a kind person. You're not going to do something like that.”

“Me? Kind?!” Li Huowang roared and smashed his forehead into Yi Donglai's face.

Yi Donglai took out a napkin to wipe away the blood down his nose.

“Do you know how much I have suffered? I can't stand it anymore! Why is it always me?! Why is my life so tough?! I'm a human, too! I'm not made out of steel. Not a single good thing has ever happened to me over there! I've suffered tragedies over and over again! I've had enough of it!” Li Huowang roared. He staggered and placed a hand on the nearby wall before looking out of the window. “I don't want to go back to that world anymore. I don't want to look at that chaotic world filled with despair! It's fake! Everything is fake! It's just a hallucination! I'd rather die than go back there! Yi Donglai, just tell them that I'm cured! I want to go back to school! I want to save Yang Na!”

Yi Donglai pushed up his glasses and shook his head. “No, Li Huowang. You can't just avoid it. You need to go back. The Liang Kingdom's Dragon Vein is still incomplete. The life of everyone in the Great Qi is at stake here.”

Li Huowang turned around and glared at Yi Donglai. “Are you crazy?”

Yi Donglai showed no fear as he approached Li Huowang. He looked out at the window and saw the other patients in the garden. “Huowang, did you know that there are some mental illnesses whose roots are their avoidance of a certain issue? I think it's useless to avoid the issue. You need to face it head-on.”

“It's easier said than done!” Li Huowang's eyes were red as he clutched his chest tightly, and his voice was trembling as he said, “You have no idea what I went through. If you were in my shoes, you'd never say that—never!”

“What about Bai Lingmiao? You still don't know where she is, do you? Do you really not care about her? What about Li Sui? She's your daughter, isn't she? Look at how your mother is treating you and how you're treating Li Sui.”

Li Huowang snarled. He grabbed the railing and smashed his head into it.

“Li Huowang! You need to calm down!” Yi Donglai and the guards exhausted a ton of their energy before they could finally wrap Li Huowang in a straitjacket. They placed him on the bed and injected him with a sedative.

Yi Donglai stared at Li Huowang while wiping away the sweat on his forehead. “Don't be discouraged. Shit happens; life's always been like that. What's done is done; there's nothing much you can do about it other than endure it. If you ever face any difficulties on that side, feel free to talk it out with me. If there are some things you want to know, I can help you look it up on the internet.”

Li Huowang's mind buzzed as he stared at Yi Donglai, and he was slurring due to the effects of the sedative. “Is this what you meant with what you said at the time? Do you really want to stand in my shoes? Do you really think that it's going to work?”

Instead of answering, Yi Donglai took a syringe of medicine and injected it into Li Huowang. “You've been really stressed these days, and it's been two days since you last slept. Have a good rest first.”

As the ice-cold medicine pervaded his veins, Li Huowang's vision darkened until he eventually lost consciousness.

When Li Huowang woke up once again, he realized that he was lying at the bottom of a well. There was a bitter taste in his mouth; it seemed that he had eaten something he couldn't recognize.

Wells were uncommon in the modern world, so Li Huowang instantly realized that he had returned to the other side. However, he didn't stand up immediately but stared at the white circle above him.

He was back, but he didn't want to come back.

Li Huowang looked at his illusions. He saw Peng Longteng, the old monk, the illusion of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member, Qiu Chibao's illusion, and Jin Shanzhao's illusion.

However, Zhuge Yuan was missing.

"Are you Er Jiu? I'm confused. Out of the five elements, you only have the fire and metal. Where are the other three elements?"

"We will meet again, Er Jiu. I am Zhuge Yuan. If you encounter any issues, you can come find me on Xing Island in the Western Seas. I am lacking in many ways, but I will do my best to help you!"

"It is important to know the hearts of people! I just want to do it, that's all! I forbid the appearance of the Simings today!"

"Because I want to save the Great Qi!"

Li Huowang shook his head and wiped away the tears dripping down his cheeks. After a while, he grabbed the rope and crawled out of the well.

He wanted to scold and give Zhuge Yuan a good beating to vent out his frustrations, but he couldn't do that, as Zhuge Yuan was no more.

Li Huowang could no longer revive him.

1. A pennant is something people give to express their gratitude. Usually given to people who achieved exemplary results.

Chapter 568 - Locate

When Li Huowang crawled out of the well, he was surprised to see that the Great Qin's sun had gotten even worse. A huge chunk of the sun had been blotted out, and Li Huowang could only see the edge of it.

Just then, Li Huowang's mouth opened uncontrollably, and he started coughing, which slowly transformed into the cries of a stork. "God Yu'er!"

Li Huowang unsheathed his sword and swung it before launching himself into the spacetime rift to return to the Liang Kingdom.

On the other side, Li Huowang finally managed to fix his dislocated jaw. He was covered in cold sweat when he realized that the Great Qi was going through another Natural Disaster again.

Li Huowang had no idea whether the Natural Disaster would kill the survivors or not, but there was a high chance that it would happen as the previous one had lasted for such a long time.

Li Huowang could still remember what Zhuge Yuan had told him. He took a deep breath and punched the tree next to him. Then, he started moving toward where he had thrown the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom. He needed to find him!

Li Huowang rode his horse and reached the location where he had sent the Qi Kingdom's young emperor through the rift. He had mentioned this location to Li Sui and had decided to forget about it. He examined every nook and cranny to find not even a single trace of the young emperor, which baffled Li Huowang. His senses were heightened, but he still couldn't find anything.

"That's strange. I stabbed him, and he was bleeding so much. There should be some blood here even if beasts had devoured him."

Li Huowang increased the range of his search and found a set of faint footprints.

The Qi Kingdom's destruction was imminent, and Li Huowang had no time to waste.

He followed the set of footprints, and his sharp senses allowed him to track down the footprints until they became clearer.

Soon, Li Huowang found himself approaching the end of the footprints, and he gripped his sword tightly.

Li Huowang found a figure hunching over before a bush, and the figure belonged to an old man with a bed of white hair.

The old man stood there motionlessly like a statue, and his bizarre antics made Li Huowang immediately wary of the old man.

Li Huowang swung his bronze coin sword, which lashed out like a whip, cutting off a tuft of the old man's white hair.

"Ah!" the old man exclaimed, falling to the ground in surprise.

"He's alive?" Li Huowang ran forward and realized that the old man was just a regular old man, who had pissed his pants upon getting the shock of his life, courtesy of Li Huowang.

"Please spare me! Please!" The old man didn't even look at Li Huowang's face as he kowtowed toward the latter.

"Get up!" Li Huowang placed his sword against the old man's neck. "Did you pick up a baby around here recently?"

"Huh? A baby? I'm here to catch ginseng! What baby?"

"Ginseng?"

The old man pointed at the ground, but Li Huowang saw nothing. All he saw was a small hole as well as a red thread tied to some bells.

"Where's the ginseng?"

"It ran away. I've been tracking it here for half a year! I could have sold it in the city if I had caught it!" the old man exclaimed, and he soon began sobbing at his lost income. [1]

"What nonsense... anyway, are you familiar with this region?"

“Yes!” The old man nodded vigorously as if Li Huowang would cut him down if he answered even a beat slower.

“Is there anyone else here except for you?”

“I don’t know, but I do know that only those in my village will come into this region.”

Did someone in his village pick up the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom?

The young emperor of the Qi Kingdom was a palm-sized figure with translucent skin, so Li Huowang believed that the emperor couldn't possibly walk away in that condition.

“Bring me to your village!” Li Huowang demanded.

The old man dared not refuse him and brought Li Huowang out of the forest.

Li Huowang found himself walking on a familiar path. He recalled that it was the same village where he had exchanged that jade pendant for a horse. He had just reached the village entrance when he saw a naked young child around ten years of age hanging from a tree. The red streaks all over him proved that he had just been caned using a willow tree branch. The child was crying and howling in pain. Several villagers stood around the boy, and it looked like they weren't going to rescue him anytime soon.

“Ah! That’s my grandson! What’s happening?” The old man panicked and ran over. He grabbed the large man, who was in the middle of hitting the young boy, and exclaimed, “Son, have you gone mad?! Why are you hitting your own son so hard?”

“I’m going to cane him to death and make another one! Do you not have any idea what he had done? Three days ago, he pooped into our well!”

“What?!” The old man grabbed the willow stick and caned his own grandson.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the people at the entrance of the village. He suddenly came up with an idea, and he jumped onto a tree branch, exclaiming, “Everyone! Please listen to me! Not long ago, my sister had an early birth. We thought the baby was dead, so we buried it in the eastern side of the forest, but an Immortal told me that my nephew was still alive! My sister sent me here to find him. I'll give ten catties of gold to those who'll help me find my nephew.”

Everyone went into a frenzy at Li Huowang's remark, and even the old man stopped caning his grandson. He turned to his son, and the two started whispering to each other.

Li Huowang swiftly looked around to observe their emotions, as well as their Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings.

Rather than relying on rewards, he decided to use the Sitting Oblivion Dao's methods to find the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom.

However, he was disappointed when he found nothing; the villagers hadn't found the young emperor in the forest.

“Sigh. A child unattended in the forest will quickly be devoured by beasts...”

“Yeah. How can we possibly find that child?”

“The Daoist sure is quite attached to his earthly desires. To think that he still cares about his family, even though he's already cultivating.”

“Hey, wasn't he the one who took the horse of the Song family? I've heard that it was a Daoist in red robes that took it.”

Li Huowang was disappointed. The villagers truly hadn't accidentally picked up the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom.

“Sigh~ Maybe someone with a kind heart has taken the baby away. There are people who yearn for a child but can't pregnant, so I can't believe that there are people who'll throw their child away in such a ruthless way. Wait, I think something like that has happened before here,” the old man said. However, the villagers retreated slowly from the old man as if they had enough of his story. “Why won't you listen to my story? Anyway, it happened thirty years ago. Old Yan really found a bloody baby on the eastern side of the forest. The baby looked like a skinned monkey with a wound on his chest. We told him to leave the baby alone, but what if the baby became a ghost and possessed him in retaliation?"

1. An old folklore that ginsengs can run away like a man since it resembles an energetic man 🤔

Chapter 569 - The Young Emperor Of Great Qi

Thirty years ago? How could that be? Li Huowang thought that he had misheard the old man. He couldn't believe it, but he had no choice but to believe, as the old man's description of the baby matched what he knew. It was too accurate to be called a mere coincidence.

Thirty years ago, a baby with a wound in its chest appeared. How could the baby appear thirty years ago rather than recently?

If that was true, then the baby was sent to the Liang Kingdom of thirty years ago rather than the present time Liang Kingdom.

But how? What's going on here? How can a human being travel back in time? Wait. Li Huowang recalled the circumstances when he was fighting the young emperor. Zhuge Yuan's friend, Xu Nian, was there, too, and she had a bizarre ability that allowed her to steal the lifespan of others. But what if rather than sucking away lifespan, she was actually changing the time of her targets?

Li Huowang recalled how his body had changed when he fought her and how the young emperor had regressed to a mere baby against her.

It's the red illusions of the Xu Nian! Li Huowang immediately understood what was going on.

When he sent the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom through the spacetime rift connected to the Liang Kingdom, the rift was within the red line made out of the Xu Nian's illusions!

Li Huowang jumped down the tree and landed in front of the old man. He grabbed the old man by the collar and shook the latter as he asked, "Does the baby really have a wound in its chest? Are you sure about it? And was it really thirty years ago?!"

If Li Huowang's assumption was correct, then the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom was a middle-aged man today!

Seeing that Li Huowang was eager to listen to his story, the old man nodded in excitement and exclaimed, "Yes! I was there, and I can still remember it. Old Yan was hesitating after hearing us out. He was ready to put the baby back into the forest when his wife ran out like a lunatic and snatched the baby away, refusing to let go of it.

"It was understandable, as she couldn't give birth. They fed the baby some porridge and treated his wounds. Afterward, the baby miraculously survived its injuries! What do you think? It was a bad omen, right? It was still alive despite having such a large hole in its chest. The villagers thought that the baby was an evil entity, but it was great news that the baby had survived. At the very least, the two elderly couple finally have someone who'd take care of them once they were old, but what do you think happened next?"

"Stop beating around the bush and get to the point!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He was clearly not in the mood to hype up the old man, as time wasn't on his side.

Just then, a lady walked past with her baby in her arms. "The baby was mentally challenged. You're still telling that story? You've repeated that story so many times now."

"Shh! Why are you talking when it's not your place to talk?" the old man said, chasing the woman away before continuing, "She's right; the baby was mentally challenged! His mouth and eyes were skewed, and his mind seemed extremely slow, too. He can't seem to memorize anything, and when he was three years old, he still couldn't walk straight. When he was six years old, he still couldn't speak."

Li Huowang looked around and didn't see anyone with such disability. "Where is that baby now?"

“Why are you in such a rush? I haven’t gotten to that point yet. When he grew up, he slowly became smarter and could finally recognize people. However, he suddenly kicked up a fuss and ran into the forest without coming back home. Those were some crazy days, I’m telling you...” The old man sighed and patted his thighs, his eyes revealing a hint of fear.

Something’s wrong. Li Huowang had been staring at the old man’s Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings. The old man had been telling the truth up until now. He’s lying! The emperor did not run into the forest on his own.

Li Huowang pondered briefly over it before leaning closer to the old man and whispering, “Thank you. While I cannot give you ten catties of gold, I can still give you one or two. Please follow me to where the money is.”

The old man was delighted. He had never seen someone obtaining money just from telling an old story.

“Gold is both valuable and heavy. I couldn’t take it with me here, so please follow me to where I had stored it.”

Li Huowang led the old man out of the village. When they got to a quiet spot, Li Huowang immediately swung the spine sword and grabbed the old man before running into the rift.

The old man panicked upon seeing the Great Qi’s dark skies.

Li Huowang didn’t even give the old man a chance to speak as he placed the purple-tasseled sword against the old man’s neck and exclaimed, “You lied to me! What are you hiding?!”

The sudden and terrifying changes to the environment shocked the old man so much to the point that he couldn’t even understand what was going on, so the old man easily told Li Huowang the truth.

“It wasn’t us! A Daoist had taken him away! I didn’t dare tell the truth because I feared that the Daoist would come and find me!”

Li Huowang frowned. A Daoist? Just who had discovered his true identity as the Qi Kingdom's emperor?

“What did that Daoist look like?”

“He was a man capable of flying. He's partially bald with leprosy on the scalp.”

Wait, partially bald and with leprosy on the scalp? Li Huowang's pupils constricted as an unbelievable thought came up in his mind. He turned to the old man and said, “Is he dressed in ragged clothes? Were his lower teeth very pronounced?”

“Yes, yes, yes, that's right!” The old man nodded frantically.

Li Huowang understood everything just then. The Daoist in question was none other than the late Dan Yangzi.

Back in Zephyr Temple, he didn't take in many mentally challenged children, as he would have needed more people to take care of them.

The only one that suited the old man's description was none other than Gao Zhijian!

Li Huowang had always thought Gao Zhijian was very weird, and the latter had survived multiple fatal blows. Li Huowang could still remember Gao Zhijian's stuttering, and there was also that time when he had almost claimed that he was an emperor but was stopped by his speech impediment. Li Huowang pieced together these puzzle pieces and reached the conclusion that Gao Zhijian was the Emperor of the Qi Kingdom.

Li Huowang was shocked. He had never thought that the young emperor of the Qi Kingdom had been traveling with him all this while. Of course, Li Huowang still had many burning questions, but he couldn't spare enough time to investigate whether it was the truth or not. He needed to find Gao Zhijian as soon as possible, as the Qi Kingdom would perish if the Natural Disaster were allowed to rage on for much longer.

Li Huowang cleared his mind and brought the old man back to the Liang Kingdom before making haste to Cowheart Village.

“Son~ Come, eat this egg porridge. What a good boy~”

Li Huowang looked at Qiu Chibao's illusion and recalled that he had forgotten something.

Chapter 570 - Emperor

“Dad, are you here?” Li Sui asked as she entered a kitchen covered in dust. A disappointed look marred her face upon seeing that there wasn't anyone in the kitchen.

She was about to enter the next room when Gao Zhijian stopped her. “Don’t... don’t... don’t look for him like that.”

Li Sui scrunched up her nose in dissatisfaction and asked, “You speak too slow. Can I enter your body and listen to you from the inside?”

Gao Zhijian shook his head and took Li Sui out onto the streets.

The curfew was over, and the streets were starting to become bustling once again.

Li Sui looked like a human being, but she wasn't a human being, so Shangjing was dangerous for her. With that in mind, Gao Zhijian had decided to send her back to Cowheart Village.

Afterward, Gao Zhijian would come up with another plan to find Senior Li.

Gao Zhijian was quite disappointed. He thought he could help Li Huowang with his identity, but he was wrong. In the end, he was nothing.

He took the reins of the horse and carried Li Sui onto the carriage. Then, they started moving toward the city gates to head back to Cowheart Village.

Gao Zhijian was still thinking about what he was supposed to do when a familiar figure blocked them.

“Dad!” Li Sui exclaimed in excitement. She jumped down from the carriage and hugged Li Huowang tightly. She then nuzzled her head into his chest.

Li Huowang stroked Li Sui’s smooth hair and muttered, “Sorry.

Many things happened, and I couldn't get to you soon enough."

Li Sui looked up and smiled at him.

"How did you find me, Dad?"

"I used divination and followed the traces. If this happens again, you should just head back home rather than search for me without any leads."

"Dad, where's our home?"

"Our home is Cowheart Village," Li Huowang said. He then looked at Gao Zhijian. He was supposed to go back to Cowheart Village to find Gao Zhijian, but it turned out that the latter was already in Shangjing. It was such a wonderful stroke of fate that Li Huowang still couldn't quite believe it.

Li Huowang held his horse's reins and approached Gao Zhijian before patting the latter's chest. Gao Zhijian smiled and asked where Bai Lingmiao was.

"Shao Zi is dead and she's fine for now. Once I'm done with your issues, I will go and find her."

Li Huowang then entered the inn and got themselves the best room.

Li Huowang didn't want to hide anything from Gao Zhijian, so he told him everything that happened, including how the emperor wanted their children to kill each other to succeed to the throne.

Gao Zhijian was shocked upon realizing that his assumptions all this while were true. He also couldn't believe that there was a so-called Great Qi, and it turned out that he was the emperor of the Great Qi rather than the emperor of the Great Liang. Apparently, he had to become an emperor to save both worlds.

Gao Zhijian's hands were shaking as he took off his shirt, revealing the scar on his chest that Li Huowang had made in the past.

Li Huowang's story was so shocking that he couldn't quite believe it, but he was relieved to find that he wasn't crazy. His memories were real, and Senior Li had truly killed him once.

Li Huowang placed the round jade pendant onto the table and slid it toward Gao Zhijian. He had used it to exchange for a horse, and he managed to get it back for Gao Zhijian.

“I don’t know whether this is good for you or not, but it's your true identity.” Li Huowang sighed with worry.

Any normal person would have jumped with joy upon knowing that they'd soon become the emperor who'd rule above all, but Li Huowang had seen the royal family's evil behind the scenes. In other words, Li Huowang was deliberately pushing his friend into the lion’s pit, but he had no choice. It was the only way to save both the Liang Kingdom and the Qi Kingdom.

Gao Zhijian stared at the pendant for almost an hour before he picked it up and muttered, “Senior... Senior Li! I-I-I'm glad... to help you!”

Gao Zhijian stood up and left the room with conviction. He had decided to become the emperor. Once he was the emperor, no one would dare to bully Xiaoman and the others.

Xiaoman should be willing to marry me once I've become the emperor, right?

Li Huowang and Li Sui followed after Gao Zhijian. They were ready to escort their friend to the throne.

Gao Zhijian walked straight on the long road to reach the palace. He stood tall, and his expression had changed drastically as if his memories as an emperor had awakened.

“It's you again! You really want to die, huh?! Prepare the ballistas!”

Gao Zhijian raised the pendant high up in the air, showing it toward the troops at the palace gates. A few moments later, the palace gates were opened.

A group of eunuchs and consorts rushed out and surrounded Gao Zhijian. They groomed his hair and gave him the dragon’s robe to wear.

“You found him?” the Imperial Preceptor asked, frowning as he approached Li Huowang.

Clearly, the Imperial Preceptor had used a secret method to verify Gao Zhijian’s identity.

Li Huowang didn’t reply; he was unwittingly transfixed on his friend, who had just become an emperor.

“We had nine descendants of the previous emperor, but you killed so many of them. If you hadn’t killed them, we wouldn’t have needed to find someone from the Qi Kingdom to maintain the Liang Kingdom’s prosperity. Tell me, just what are you trying to do here?!” Huangfu Tiangang exclaimed, pointing his sword shrouded in purple lightning at Li Huowang. The Imperial Preceptor was about to do something to Li Huowang.

However, Gao Zhijian noticed it and roared, “What?! What?! What are you doing?!”

The Imperial Preceptor saw Gao Zhijian wearing the dragon robe, and he lowered his arms in frustration. Then, he bowed to Gao Zhijian and said, “Huangfu Tiangang greets the emperor!”

Gao Zhijian scoffed and waved his sleeve before he left for the palace under the guidance of the eunuchs and consorts.

Li Huowang glanced at the Imperial Preceptor before bringing Li Sui inside the palace.

More and more people joined the procession of consorts and eunuchs as they approached the palace. By the time they arrived at the main palace, the procession now had a few hundred people.

Gao Zhijian himself was in a sedan.

Gao Zhijian was being carried up the white jade stairs that led to the entrance of the main palace when a distressed roar echoed from above.

“I’m the emperor! It’s me! Why can’t I become the emperor? You said that the sole survivor of the nine children would be the emperor! Liars! You lied to me! All of you are liars!"

Li Huowang looked up and saw the disheveled Ji Lin. She was holding a sword and was running at Gao Zhijian in despair.

Li Huowang didn't even need to do anything. A group of old eunuchs charged out from the darkness and pinned Ji Lin to the ground.

Ji Lin struggled like a maniac. "Why?! I sacrificed everything! I paid so much! I killed my mother and my siblings! I've become evil, so why can't I become the emperor?!"

Gao Zhijian regarded her with a cold look before instructing the others to carry him into the main palace. Just like that, the procession continued, and no one spared Ji Lin even a glance.

Just a few moments ago, these eunuchs and consorts were still treating Ji Lin as if she were the emperor.

Li Huowang was the only one paying attention to Ji Lin. He stood by her side and helped her up before patting the dust off of her clothes. "You said that you didn't want to become the emperor. You said that you only wanted to survive. Your dream has come true. You're no longer the emperor, and no one wants your life. You ought to be happy about this."

Ji Lin pushed Li Huowang away and threw a tantrum. "I threw away everything to become the emperor! I'd have nothing left without that identity!"

Li Huowang actually thought that Ji Lin was a decent person when he first met her during that festival, so he found her particularly pitiful in her current state.

Li Huowang hugged her and patted her back lightly. "If you don't know where to go, then visit me. I'm going to help you one more time."

With that, Li Huowang turned and started walking toward the main palace.

Before he could even reach the landing of the stairs, he caught a whiff of the distinct smell of blood behind him. Li Huowang came to a halt and turned around to find Ji Lin sprawled out on the ground, drenched in a pool of her own blood. Her vivid crimson blood formed a stark contrast to the white jade stairs as it dripped down, creating a crimson pool at the bottom of the stairs.

“Dad, she’s dead.”

“Yeah, she’s dead.”

Chapter 571 - Ascension

“Hold the plate~ We bow down in worship~ Praise be to the Heavens~ May everyone prosper~”

There was a grand altar in the palace of the Liang Kingdom, and it was built to absorb and amplify the voices of the old eunuchs, allowing their voices to spread far and wide.

Hundreds of officials were standing below the grand altar, and their hands holding bone plates were raised as they knelt toward Gao Zhijian on the east.

The drummers around the altar displayed their perfect coordination to play a rhythm.

Li Huowang and Li Sui were standing far away on a roof, and they were staring at Gao Zhijian’s face hidden behind the veil of his crown.

“Dad, how much longer must we stand here? I’m hungry,” Li Sui asked. She had no idea what was happening, so she decided to focus on her needs instead.

“Soon.”

“Hold the plate~ We bow down in worship~ Praise be to the Earth~ May everyone prosper~”

The eunuchs' feminine voices pervaded the plaza as they chanted in unison.

The officials raised the bone plates in their hands once more and knelt toward Gao Zhijian on the north.

“Hold the plate~ We bow down in worship~ Praise be to the Emperor~ May everyone prosper~”

The scene of Gao Zhijian moving through the cardinal positions under the guidance of the eunuchs made Li Huowang feel weird.

His friend, who traveled with him and went through life-or-death situations, was about to become the emperor.

Regardless of how good their relationship was in the past, their relationship was bound to change today.

Ji Lin was forced to turn ruthless in the palace, and Li Huowang didn't know how much would the simple Gao Zhijian change. He hoped that Gao Zhijian would maintain his character and not turn into someone despicable.

He was thinking about this when he saw Gao Zhijian being escorted down the altar by the eunuchs.

Li Huowang jumped down and asked the Imperial Preceptor, "Lord Imperial Preceptor. Is the ceremony over?"

"It's not going to end so soon! After praying to the Heavens, Earth, and the Emperor, he would still need to go and pray in the temple," the Imperial Preceptor coldly said, "Er Jiu, I won't look into the transgression you've made in the past, but you must understand that the Dragon Vein will affect the entire kingdom. If something bad happens to the Dragon Vein, you'll get swept up in the resulting catastrophe as well for as long as you're still living in this world."

"Oh." Li Huowang nodded and followed Gao Zhijian to the temple. He was worried about Gao Zhijian, and he wanted to look out for the latter himself.

Since it was an important ceremony, the Imperial Preceptor and the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau would send someone over to monitor everything. However, Gao Zhijian was one of his own, so Li Huowang would rather trust himself to do the job rather than trust others that they could do it.

Li Huowang turned invisible and followed Gao Zhijian before reaching the entrance of the temple.

The officials, eunuchs, and the consorts stopped outside. Only the old eunuchs brought Gao Zhijian inside the temple.

No one stopped Li Huowang as he walked into the temple, but he could feel the gazes of many people boring down on him from the dark.

“You. Are you the new emperor of the Liang Kingdom? What is your surname?” A dissonant voice came from the coffin.

“Gao.”

“Such a shame. To think that our Ji family would perish... haha ...” The previous emperor chuckled sadly.

Based on his reaction, Li Huowang assumed that someone else had explained the matter to the previous emperor.

Under the guidance of the eunuchs, Gao Zhijian personally placed the tributes to the Dragon Vein and lit up three incense sticks. He stuck those incense sticks on the incense burner before kneeling three times and kowtowing nine times.

When he had just finished the final kowtow, the Imperial Preceptor rushed forward and produced a jade green scroll. He stood in front of Gao Zhijian and showed the Dragon Vein the content of the jade scroll.

It was a profound jade scroll. The exterior was jade, but its interior was a slice of paper softer than tofu that somehow had information recorded on it.

The thin paper fluttered in the air like the feathers of a phoenix or the scales of a dragon. Dense golden words flickered on the paper.

“The Heavens call for the luck of the world! This is the decree of the emperor! The previous emperor has perished and has returned to the five elements! With the grace of the Heavens, we beseech the current emperor to uphold the mission of the past emperors, to join their ranks, and to follow in their footsteps!” the Imperial Preceptor recited. The roars of a dragon echoed from the depths of the coffin, and the roar resonated with the Imperial Preceptor’s voice.

A powerful pressure manifested from the coffin, and everyone found it difficult to breathe. They only felt better after prostrating on the ground.

Li Huowang pulled Li Sui behind him when he felt something invisible emerge from the coffin to envelop Gao Zhijian.

Gao Zhijian's skin broke open like dragon scales, and his blood covered every inch of his clothes.

"Zhijian! Are you okay?!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He had just raised his right leg when two old eunuchs holding golden horse-hair whisks knelt in front of him.

"Please rest easy. Our Lord is currently shouldering the entire luck of the Liang Kingdom. Nothing must go wrong here."

The two old eunuchs were kneeling, but the tingling on Li Huowang's neck told him that he'd be decapitated if he were to take one more step.

Realizing that this was part of the procedure, Li Huowang stopped worrying and observed the scene with Li Sui.

Soon, Gao Zhijian's body started changing. He became similar to the emperors in the coffin as he sported dragon claws, whiskers, and horns.

Gao Zhijian raised his claws and pulled something in the air. At the same time, everything came to a halt. The powerful presence from within the coffin vanished as well.

Li Huowang found it strange. Gao Zhijian was far from becoming the Dragon Vein, but his aura had changed to resemble one.

The ceremony was over, and Li Huowang didn't need anyone to tell him that. The Liang Kingdom's luck was on Gao Zhijian's shoulders now, and he had truly become the Emperor of the Great Liang.

Senior Li, do you see this? The Qi Kingdom is saved. Li Huowang gingerly stroked the spine sword and sighed. He suddenly remembered the little girl who had cried until her voice became hoarse. She's going to live at the very least.

The old monk's illusion was even more excited than Li Huowang as he said, "Daoist, you did a good deed! This is a major good deed! You've saved so many people that you'd automatically become a Bodhisattva in your next life."

Li Huowang couldn't care less about that. He was more concerned about the fact that Zhuge Yuan had deceived him.

"If one wants to be successful in politics, one must bring fresh changes to it first. One must follow the rules set by one's predecessors. One must be kind and gracious to start a new rule," Huangfu Tiangang said; he was still reciting sentences that were too difficult for Li Huowang to understand.

However, Li Huowang deemed those words as unimportant, as the most important step was over.

The remaining steps were simply for formalities' sake.

Taking one last look at Gao Zhijian's back, Li Huowang pulled Li Sui outside and said, "Suisui, it's time for us to leave."

Chapter 572 - Change

It was time to do his own things now that everything was over. There was no need to say goodbye to Gao Zhijian, as Li Huowang had never been such a sentimental individual.

“Dad, I’m hungry,” Li Sui said as they exited the temple.

“I know. Let’s go eat something before rescuing your mother.”

“Yay!” Li Sui nodded repeatedly in delight, and her black hair bobbed with every single nod. Despite her delicate demeanor, she was giving off a mischievous air.

“Why are you still in that corpse? Come out now. It’s inauspicious,” Li Huowang said. He reached out for Li Sui’s head to try and take it away.

“Ah~ I don’t want to! Noooo~” Several tentacles came out from Li Sui’s clothes and grabbed Princess Anping’s head. “Dad, I like this one. It’s fun. The people aren’t afraid of me while I’m wearing this.”

Realizing that Li Sui wasn’t going to listen to him, Li Huowang retracted his hand. He was fine with it, too. He was just concerned that perhaps Li Sui would stubbornly refuse to let go of the corpse once it started rotting. If that happened, then Li Sui would look even more terrifying by then.

But... Princess Anping has been dead for so long, yet there are still no signs of decomposition. Can the Black Taisui stop a corpse from rotting? Li Huowang stared at his daughter’s jade-like face.

“Hahaha~!” A loud laughter caught his attention.

Li Huowang turned and found the illusion of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member laughing next to him.

“What? Was our conversation that funny?”

The Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion laughed harder rather than replying.

“Crazy bastard.” Li Huowang ignored the illusion and walked toward the exit of the palace with Li Sui.

However, the illusion was still laughing, and he laughed so loud that his voice echoed throughout Shangjing.

Rumble!

The sky suddenly changed, and the ground trembled violently.

“Li Sui! Grab me!” Li Huowang stabbed the purple-tasseled sword into the ground to stabilize himself amidst the earthquake. Something felt familiar about it, and it was bad news.

The earthquake lasted for an hour, and Li Huowang was relieved to find that the outcome wasn't so bad. At the very least, the palace didn't collapse, nor did he find himself at the edge of a cliff.

“Hahahahaha! ” An arrogant-sounding laughter rang out. Li Huowang realized that it was coming from the temple!

“Hahahahaha! ”

Li Huowang, the officials, eunuchs, and the consorts were in disbelief as the temple collapsed with a loud bang. The next moment, a long chain of humans took to the sky.

It was the Liang Kingdom's Dragon Vein, and the one at the head of the dragon was none other than Gao Zhijian!

Gao Zhijian was laughing so arrogantly that his laughter sounded the same as the laughter of the illusion next to Li Huowang.

“Hahaha! Do you really think that a Shai Zi is going to die so easily? Try and recall what's in Gao Zhijian's head! Hahaha!” the illusion exclaimed as he laughed.

Li Huowang combed through his memories, and his pupils constricted upon realizing what the illusion was talking about.

Two years ago, Gao Zhijian suffered a fatal wound after a metal dice pierced his head during his battle with Er Bing!

Putting two and two together, Li Huowang soon deduced what was going on.

Shai Zi was still alive! His death was just a show, and he was using that metal dice to control Gao Zhijian!

“Do you really think that the Storyteller is smarter than a Shai Zi? What a joke! The Storyteller has always been a chess piece on Shai Zi’s board, and it remained true even after his death! Shai Zi knew that the Storyteller would save the Great Qi no matter what! Hahahaha! Aaaaah, this is so refreshing! I’ve waited so long for this sight. Shai Zi, you’re amazing! Hahahaha! I’m so happy!” The illusion faded away amidst his arrogant-sounding laughter.

Meanwhile, Gao Zhijian wasn’t even looking at Li Huowang. Rather, he was staring at the gray sky.

“Yinyang Doulao! You old fart! Hahaha! You definitely didn’t see this coming, did you? Do you really think that you can turn me into your Twisted One? What a joke! I will choose my own fate. Now that I have the human race’s luck, I really want to see what you can do with me. You just got lucky in the beginning, and do you really think that I can’t do what you can do? Listen here; change is coming, as I can change the Heavens!”

Gao Zhijian rose slowly into the sky, dragging the past emperors in a golden chain. The roaring of dragons echoed from the past emperor’s mouth, and Gao Zhijian’s figure was undulating as if he were a real dragon.

“What’s wrong? Scared? I’ve tricked you, and I’ve scolded you, but you can’t do anything to me! You can’t even manifest your true body. You must be frustrated, right? Hahahaha~ Stay frustrated! I hope you die from frustration! Don’t worry; I’ve made sure to save the best part for last. As a sign of respect, I will steal your Heavenly Dao away!”

“Gao Zhijian, wake up!” Li Huowang exclaimed. His figure had erupted into a mighty conflagration, and he ordered Peng Longteng to throw him into the sky.

However, the Dragon Vein extinguished his flames before he could even get close to it.

A golden chain swept toward Li Huowang. He wanted to avoid the oncoming attack by projecting his illusion downward, but he found himself powerless before the Dragon Vein!

The grotesque noise of cracking bones echoed as Li Huowang was swatted away by the golden chain.

Li Sui extended her tentacles, catching Li Huowang right as he struck the ground.

“Dad, are you okay?!”

Li Huowang spat out blood as he stood up. “Go away! It’s dangerous here!”

“Dad! No, I want to help you!” Li Sui exclaimed, disobeying him for the first time.

Li Huowang wanted to say something when the sky darkened. He looked up and saw the Dragon Vein blotting out the sky before him.

Gao Zhijian was just a few meters away from Li Huowang, and he was staring at Li Huowang with a twisted face.

Chapter 573 - Shai Zi

“Hong Zhong! Hahahaha!” Gao Zhijian smiled viciously as he stared at Li Huowang with his twisted face. He didn’t even blink as he continued, “This is all thanks to you. If it hadn't been for you, it would have been impossible for me to take over the Great Qi’s emperor body and the rare Hundred Souls Layered Body. If it hadn't been for you, the Ji family of the Liang Kingdom wouldn’t have been annihilated. If it hadn't been for you, Zhuge Yuan wouldn't have followed our plan! Don’t worry, I’m a good man. Since we did this together, we should enjoy the rewards together!” Gao Zhijian plunged downward and extended his dragon claw toward Li Huowang to take the latter with him to the sky.

Li Huowang gulped a mouthful of his own saliva as he extended his left arm.

The severed left hand shot toward Gao Zhijian's face.

The bone spikes scraped Gao Zhijian’s scaly face, producing sparks. Gao Zhijian’s smile slowly disappeared as he said, “Hong Zhong. You're going too far here. I’m just trying to help you. How could you repay my kindness with hatred?”

Swoosh!

A headless young woman hurled Li Huowang toward Gao Zhijian, and the latter spread his arms as if to welcome Li Huowang.

The two clashed in mid-air; Gao Zhijian used his horns to stop Li Huowang’s purple-tasseled sword. Gao Zhijian parried Li Huowang's sword attack and sent the sword flying upward, which made Li Huowang vulnerable to further attacks.

A dragon claw wrapped with golden chains made a beeline for Li Huowang's chest.

At the critical juncture, Li Huowang manifested Peng Longteng's figure, and Peng Longteng's large figure clad in heavy armor blocked the attack.

Unfortunately, Gao Zhijian's claws pierced Peng Longteng, tearing open a large hole in her chest.

The Dragon Vein was like a stick that shot past Peng Longteng's chest and approached Li Huowang at terrifying speeds.

Li Huowang raised his sword once more, and Gao Zhijian raised his horns without hesitation before swinging his head into the sword.

Gao Zhijian was confident in his move, as his horns were harder than Li Huowang's sword.

I can't continue like this!

Li Huowang was busy trying to figure out a solution when his instincts warned him of a danger. He quickly crushed his left eyeball.

A strange light enveloped Gao Zhijian, slowing him down drastically.

Li Huowang had just sighed in relief when the Dragon Vein flew toward him from behind.

Li Huowang jumped up and barely dodged the attack, but a dragon claw descended upon him, grabbing him by the neck. Before Li Huowang could even struggle, several dragon claws came from all directions. They grabbed his limbs and raised him high up into the sky. Li Huowang's vision swam as five different forces tugged at him from five different directions. Just then, a grotesque cracking noise echoed as Li Huowang's joints were dislocated. However, this was just the beginning of his suffering as his muscles were slowly being torn apart beneath the tugging of the dragon claws.

"Hahaha! Hear me out, people of Shangjing! Look closely! I'll show you all how to do a proper dismemberment! Those with money, please come here and support me, while those without money can just cheer for me!” Gao Zhijian shouted, and his voice echoed throughout Shangjing.

“AAAAAAH!” Li Huowang roared; he struggled to get out of his predicament to no avail.

Right as Li Huowang was about to be pulled apart, several white lotus the size of a house came from out of nowhere. They moved swiftly and surrounded the Dragon Vein.

Someone was sitting on the lotuses, and their chanting soon filled the air.

“The azure sun rises, and the white sun rises, too! The Heavenly Mater protects all. The red sun sets, and the violet sun sets as well. May peace befall everyone!”

The clouds rolled, and something unspeakable manifested. The Dragon Vein’s scales felt something, and they curled upward.

Gao Zhijian ignored Li Huowang and attacked the people on the lotuses.

This was Li Huowang’s opportunity to escape. His temples throbbed painfully as he willed Peng Longteng to appear.

Peng Longteng pried Li Huowang from the dragon claws, and he plummeted weakly toward the ground.

As he fell, Li Huowang saw someone that wasn’t supposed to be here, so he thought that he was seeing things.

A young woman in white was floating like an Immortal before him. Most importantly, she looked incredibly familiar.

The young woman waved her hand, and a long silk scarf floated over and covered Li Huowang before pulling him lightly toward one of the lotus.

An ointment with the consistency of pork lard was brushed on Li Huowang’s wound. The pain instantly disappeared, and he felt so comfortable that he felt like he was sprawled out on a bed of cotton.

When he snapped back to reality, Li Huowang realized that he was on Bai Lingmiao's lap.

"Miaomiao?" Li Huowang asked hesitantly. He wasn't sure what was happening going on as he stared at the young woman before him.

A white lotus motif was on Bai Lingmiao's forehead, and her face was devoid of emotions. Moreover, her eyes were covered with a long white piece of silk cloth.

"Miaomiao, it's really you!" Li Huowang hugged her after becoming sure of her identity.

Bai Lingmiao hesitated before hugging him back.

"Where were you all this while? I was so worried about you!" Li Huowang exclaimed, hugging her tightly. Li Huowang had been missing Bai Lingmiao so much to the extent that he'd stuff her into his pockets if he could do so.

"Senior Li, didn't I send you a letter? Did you not receive it?" Bai Lingmiao asked. Her voice was still soft, but there was no longer any warmth in it.

Li Huowang's heart skipped a little, and he looked at Gao Zhijian. Roughly half of the lotuses in the air had vanished.

"Hong Zhong, what did I say? I told you that I didn't kidnap your woman. We're the Sitting Oblivion Dao. We don't do something like that, but... we're supposed to deceive people, you know that, right? I just deceived you into thinking that I had kidnapped her. Don't be mad at me for that, okay? This was all your doing. I did nothing here, hehehe~ "

Li Huowang glared at Gao Zhijian. "Didn't you say that you'd only use the truth to trick others? Is that what you meant by truth?"

" Hahaha! You actually believed the words of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member? Hahaha! " Shai Zi laughed in mid-air.

Chapter 574 - Xuan Pin

Gao Zhijian laughed in the air and swirled around like a dragon.

More and more lotuses appeared in the air as he laughed.

“Once the fighting starts, bring Li Sui away and wait for me at Cowheart Village.” Li Huowang took out his bag of torture tools to open up his abdomen.

However, Bai Lingmiao's cold hand grabbed his hand.

“Senior Li, you don't have to do that. I can help you now.”

“White Lotus Sect, do you really think that you can stop me?”

Staring at the white lotus on her forehead and the lotuses around them, Li Huowang realized that many things had happened to Bai Lingmiao while she was missing.

Even though he wanted to know more, he knew that now wasn't the time for questions.

“Do they listen to you?” Li Huowang asked Bai Lingmiao.

“Yes, they do.”

“Great. See if you can ask them to restrict Gao Zhijian for a small period of time.” Li Huowang gripped his sword tightly as he looked at Gao Zhijian.

He had done it once, so he could do it again.

The members of the White Lotus Sect revealed their dudous as well as their cheeks with sharp metal rods sticking out of them. Several tiny bronze gourds were hanging from their ear lobes as well.

“Ready!” Bai Lingmiao shouted.

Everyone took out a small knife with a jagged edge, and they used it to tap their forehead at the same time.

“The Dao comes from the heart, but the heart spreads lies! One must hold the true deity before the incense burner. May the true spirit guide us. We shall inform you today, so bring our orders to the nine heavens. May our wishes all come true.” The chanting noises pervaded the air, seemingly suppressing every other noise.

Gao Zhijian coiled the Dragon Vein around him and ignored the lotuses as he glared at the White Lotus Sect members with a taunting look.

“Heed my call or show yourself. The disciples pray thrice for your help. May the gods come and help us, to protect and show us the path. Guide our mouth and guide us!”

When the chanting ended, they all pointed their knives at Gao Zhijian.

Almost immediately, a face appeared on Gao Zhijian’s face. His long body froze in mid-air as the smell of incense filled the air.

To think that the White Lotus Sect would call upon the gods to take over Gao Zhijian's body... Li Huowang truly didn't expect them to make such a move.

Just then, Peng Longteng grabbed Li Huowang and hurled him at Gao Zhijian.

Just like what he had done in the Qi Kingdom, Li Huowang thrust his sword toward Gao Zhijian's back. His goal was to sever that connection just like last time.

It seemed that his attack was going to succeed, as Gao Zhijian looked like he had no intentions of avoiding the attack.

Just as Li Huowang’s sword was about to enter Gao Zhijian’s chest, the latter smiled and taunted, “You actually want to kill me? You better think twice. Kill me, and the Liang Kingdom’s Dragon Vein is done for~”

Li Huowang's sword moved away slightly, eliciting a peal of laughter from Gao Zhijian.

However, Gao Zhijian moved, allowing Li Huowang to stab him.

“Hong Zhong. We're not soldiers, so we don't have to fight like this. We're members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. We fight with our brains! We're weak, and everyone knows that we're weak, so why should I fight you head-on? Now that I've become the Dragon Vein itself, you can't even kill me even if I close my eyes and let you kill me. Hehehehe~ This is what it means to fight with our brains!”

Shai Zi taunted Li Huowang. Shai Zi was right; he could fight Li Huowang freely, but the latter couldn't do the same. He couldn't afford to hurt the Dragon Vein!

Shai Zi reached out to grab Li Huowang when several fingers flew toward them from down below.

Li Huowang looked down and saw a group of people in black robes standing on the rooftops. He could see Zu Yi among the black-robed figures.

The members of many different sects had come as well, and they had surrounded the palace.

Rumble!

The earth shook slightly; a large statue was running toward Gao Zhijian, and it was the Bodhisattva statue carved on the face of the mountain! It had come to life!

The large Bodhisattva lowered his body and stared at Gao Zhijian with eyes larger than a house.

However, Gao Zhijian merely laughed at the sight.

“Hehehe! Looks like the big shots are back. However, do you really think that you can trap me here? You can't fool me. I'm the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Xuan Pin, you are too late~ I've taken what I needed.”

Gao Zhijian opened his mouth and started swallowing his own tail. His mouth widened as he gobbled up the previous emperors. He devoured them as fast as he could until the entire Dragon Vein was gone.

The world around Li Huowang became hazy. When he came to his senses, he noticed the illusions around him fading away. His vision swam once more, and he found himself falling to the ground with Bai Lingmiao.

There weren't that many people; the rest were just illusions, except for the members of the Ao Jing Sect and the White Lotus Sect.

The Chief was wearing the same red robes as he wore the last time Li Huowang saw him, and he was kneeling on the ground. He was in the middle of healing the Imperial Preceptor's injuries.

The Chief's six hands snatched the Imperial Preceptor's gaping chest wound, leaving behind nothing but a patch of gray.

"Shai Zi attacked me while I was doing the prayers! If I hadn't been prepared, I would've died for real!" Huangfu Tiangang gnashed his teeth as blood dripped down the corner of his mouth.

"Stop talking for now." The Chief took a piece of color from a corpse and placed it on the monochrome wound of the Imperial Preceptor.

Li Huowang looked away from the Chief and realized that Gao Zhijian and the Dragon Vein had vanished!

Where did Shai Zi go? What is he going to do with the Dragon Vein?

The cogs in Li Huowang's mind were just about to turn and think about it when Huangfu Tiangang grabbed his sword and swung it at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang raised his sword to defend himself when his vision swam. The next moment, he found himself and the Imperial Preceptor sitting on a table while facing each other.

"Tiangang, do you really think that this is the time to start an internal strife?" the Chief said, sitting down before the table.

"He brought that man here! He's connected to everything that has happened so far! He's working with that Shai Zi! I have to get rid of him now, or we'll be in even more trouble next time!"

Huangfu Tiangang exclaimed, slamming his hand on the table.

Chapter 575 - Twisted One

Li Huowang was furious at the Imperial Preceptor's remark.

“So you think I'm suspicious? What about you?! You never noticed what was wrong with Ji Lin until it was too late, and the same goes for Gao Zhijian! Are you kind of useless here? Or was Shai Zi right when he said that you're his spy?!”

Zhuge Yuan's plan was flawless. Gao Zhijian could save the Qi Kingdom by becoming the emperor!

If it wasn't for the Imperial Preceptor making those mistakes over and over again, things wouldn't have come to this point.

Huangfu Tiangang was enraged. He shoved his hands into his robes and was about to do something when the Chief wiped away the gray patch on Huangfu Tiangang's chest, revealing the same wound from earlier.

Huangfu Tiangang felt drained as if his soul had been taken away. He pressed on his wound and stumbled back into his chair with an agonized look.

“Enough. That is the end of that issue. I will need both of you to keep quiet about this issue. I know that the two of you aren't working for that Shai Zi. This plan wasn't made by that Shai Zi alone; the Shai Zis from both the Liang Kingdom and the Qi Kingdom had a hand in this plan. It's not strange that the Imperial Preceptor failed to see through their scheme.”

The tense atmosphere was diffused so fast that Li Huowang didn't know what to say.

This was indeed not the time to be fighting each other. Dealing with that Shai Zi from earlier was the top priority issue. The Dragon Vein was basically the kingdom's future. If Shai Zi ended up tampering it, the entire world would be in danger.

“What happened after my departure?” The Chief’s layered voice rang out.

Li Huowang looked at Huangfu Tiangang’s ashen face and recounted the experience to the Chief.

More and more people joined in on the conversation, including Bai Lingmiao, Zu Yi, and a skinny Daoist with a solemn expression.

A defeating silence hung above everyone once Li Huowang was done.

Li Huowang looked at the Chief and saw the hazy darkness under the robes. He had a feeling that there was nothing in there.

The Chief suddenly stood up. “Shai Zi has taken the Dragon Vein, so I will keep it short. I hope everyone understands what’s happening here. We need to reclaim the Dragon Vein, so you’re going to listen to my orders, right?”

The Chief’s words sounded like a question but it was more like an order.

Everyone needed a leader, and the Chief’s status and strength meant that he was more than qualified to be a leader.

“Chief, I don’t mind listening to your orders, but can you tell me why Shai Zi has decided to take the Dragon Vein away? What is he going to do with it? I don’t want to go in blind.”

Li Huowang had heard what Shai Zi had shouted to the skies earlier, but he couldn’t understand it.

The Chief said nothing and stared deeply at Li Huowang. Then, he glanced at Bai Lingmiao and the Ao Jing Sect members.

“He wants to get rid of the future where he’d inevitably become the Doulao’s Twisted One. He wants to use the Liang Kingdom’s luck to sever the bond between him and Doulao.” The same layered voice from earlier echoed from beneath the red robes.

“What’s a Twisted One?” Li Huowang asked again. He wanted to know it, as everything in this world seemed to be covered in a layer of veil.

“Cause and effect. The Twisted Ones are the ‘cause’ of the Simings,” the skinny Daoist answered Li Huowang’s question.

“Cause?”

“That’s right, ‘cause.’ Only with a ‘cause’ can a Siming have an ‘effect’ ‘Without it, they’d cease to exist.”

“What’s a ‘cause’? Can you stop answering me in riddles?! Explain it to me properly!”

“Everything has a cause and effect, including the Simings. Their ‘cause’ is the past, so the Twisted Ones are the past selves of the Simings. If the Simings controlling the Heavenly Daos are large trees, then the Twisted Ones are their seeds.”

“I am a Twisted One, meaning that my life will forever be entangled with the Three Ancient Ones both in life and death.” Li Huowang suddenly recalled Zhuge Yuan’s words.

Twisted Ones are the seeds of the Simings? Does that mean that both the seeds and trees exist at the same time? Does that mean the Three Ancient Ones is Zhuge Yuan?! Li Huowang trembled at the thought of it alone.

“No, wait! Zhuge Yuan was the Twisted One of the Three Ancient Ones. Since you said that the Twisted Ones are the past of the Simings, does that mean that the Three Ancient Ones ceased to exist the moment he died?” Li Huowang asked, pointing at the rafters in shock.

“Hehehe, the world is large. Who told you that they only have one Twisted One? To prevent their demise, they’d choose multiple Twisted Ones, and some of them were even manipulated to stay under the control of the other Simings. Since Twisted Ones are the past of the Simings, they could be influenced by the other Simings. That’s why Shai Zi wanted to sever the bond between him and Doulao to get rid of his Twisted One status. I think that rather than Zhuge Yuan getting tricked by Shai Zi or acting in his own version of justice, his Siming, the Three Ancient Ones, wanted to help Shai Zi instead.”

“ Ahem. ” the Chief interrupted, “He is the Chief of Si Qi’s Surveillance Bureau, Zheng Boqiao.”

Everyone looked at the skinny Daoist.

The skinny Daoist nodded and waved his whisk. “I follow the path of the Immortals. Nice to meet you all.”

Li Huowang was even more confused after hearing Zheng Boqiao’s explanation. He truly didn’t expect that the Twisted Ones were the past of the Simings.

What a crazy world! Li Huowang was truly stupefied to know that the powerful Simings controlling the Heavenly Dao didn’t have a past and had to find one for themselves!

“Ridiculous. How can the Twisted Ones be the past of the Simings? Those words are a load of lies that the Surveillance Bureau has been using to deceive others,” said one of the Ao Jing Sect members. The Ao Jing Sect member was wearing a large robe stained with blood, and the image of a bloody skeleton could be seen on his robe. “The Simings were born the moment the universe took shape. They were born to hold the Heavenly Daos.”

“ Hehehehe. ” Zheng Boqiao chuckled hoarsely. “Of course, every Siming has a different way of finding their own Twisted Ones. They also have different names. Ba-Hui chooses its Siming based on the Cang-Qiang Ascension. Those Twisted Ones chosen through that method are who you call elders.”

Li Huowang was shocked. I did that three times. Does that mean I’m Ba-Hui’s Twisted One?

Chapter 576 - Plan

A fight was about to happen when Xuan Pin raised his hands, silencing everyone in the hall.

“Enough. Don't forget that the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom is still in the hands of that Shai Zi!” the Chief said sternly. Then, his voice softened as he added, “Do not panic. That Shai Zi has managed to escape, but I have a way of finding his whereabouts.”

Shangguan Yuting popped out from the Imperial Preceptor's robes and taunted Li Huowang briefly before melting into the Chief's body.

The Imperial Preceptor's mustache wriggled a bit, and he couldn't look the Chief in the eyes.

Zheng Boqiao took over the conversation, saying, “Xuan Pin can easily find that Shai Zi, and we can also easily kill him. However, it would be extremely difficult to kill Shai Zi without harming the emperor. He's our final emperor, and his death is equivalent to the death of the Liang Kingdom. If the Liang Kingdom falls, the other regions will quickly follow. Even the grass in Qing Qiu has become yellow these days.”

Zheng Boqiao looked at the Ao Jing Sect and Bai Lingmiao. “Also, it seems that only Ba-Hui and the Heavenly Mater want to help us. Sigh... There is a catastrophe ahead of us, but everyone is still focused on their own hidden agenda.”

Li Huowang suddenly came up with a thought. “Can't we ask the military to help us? We have many soldiers, so it shouldn't be difficult for us to capture Shai Zi with their help.”

The Liang Kingdom's Imperial Preceptor snorted and said, “You make it sound so easy, but we don't have the authority to do so.

How are we going to do that? The military is the sword of the emperor. Not only has Shai Zi completed the succession ceremony to become the official emperor, but he's also become the Dragon Vein. And he's a Sitting Oblivion Dao, so he excels at deceiving people. Can you really say for sure that the military won't turn their swords on us if we involve them in this affair?"

Everyone's face fell at the Imperial Preceptor's remark. Shai Zi was technically the emperor of the Liang Kingdom, as he had indeed completed the succession ceremony in front of the officials.

They knew that Shai Zi was the fake emperor, but those working in the imperial family would sentence the Surveillance Bureau, the Ao Jing Sect, and the White Lotus Sect for treason the moment they heard them discussing killing Shai Zi.

Li Huowang stared deeply at the Imperial Preceptor before coming up with another plan.

"Chief, there's a dice in Gao Zhijian's head. It should be Shai Zi's body or consciousness. Take control of the Dragon Vein, and I will think of a way to dig out the dice."

Li Huowang told them what he knew since they were all going to do this together.

"Easier said than done; splitting his head is one thing, but how are you going to make sure that he remains alive?" Li Huowang hesitated before telling them, "This should not be an issue. We can find a way to shove an artifact into his body that would resurrect him. For example, an artifact made from the skin of a Strayed One? I saw Prince Ren using it once when I assassinated him."

Li Huowang had actually given that artifact to Gao Zhijian, but he wasn't sure whether Shai Zi had discovered it yet or not.

The Chief was silent. Li Huowang was confused. He looked up and saw both him and the Chief shrinking rapidly until they were the size of ants.

Li Huowang looked up at the massive Bai Lingmiao and saw that she was listening to the others talking to each other. No one noticed that something was wrong.

However, Li Huowang didn't panic, as he knew that these changes were the result of the Chief's illusion techniques.

"There are some things that I need to talk to you about face-to-face and by ourselves," said the Chief. He had also become as small as an ant, just like Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked at the Chief and found the latter familiar for some reason, but he couldn't quite understand why.

"Who are you?" Li Huowang asked about the darkness hidden in the red robes.

"I am Xuan Pin, the Chief of the Liang Kingdom's Surveillance Bureau, but I can also be anyone. Who I am is not important; the important part here is that I need you to get past the danger later. This doesn't concern you alone; it concerns the late Zhuge Yuan as well."

Li Huowang frowned and looked at the others. "Only me? Why can't we talk to each other?"

"Because I need to use your status as a Strayed One..."

Li Huowang felt his hair standing on its end. He felt naked before the Chief.

"You are cultivating the 'Truth,' right? I can help you use your status as a Strayed One to deal with Shai Zi."

Li Huowang managed to calm down his racing heart, but he still felt uneasy. "Why me? Is my method useless?"

"Yes, it's useless. Because our opponent is Shai Zi. The little trick won't fool him. We shouldn't follow the path he made for us, or we'll be forced to get into a passive state. We should just do our own thing while he does his own thing."

Li Huowang slowly nodded. "What's your plan?"

"Fight Shai Zi when you meet him again, but no matter what he says, you must think of it as the truth and make it come true!

Leave the rest to me.”

“What?” Li Huowang was astonished. He didn't expect to hear such a reckless plan. “But I'm not strong enough yet. I don't think I can do that.”

“I'm going to help you, so don't worry about it. Just do as I say.”

Li Huowang went silent, mulling over the plan. The Chief wasn't in a rush and waited patiently for Li Huowang's answer.

“Alright, I will do it, but I need you to understand that this matter is related to the survival of the Liang Kingdom. I don't want it to end up like the Qi Kingdom.”

“Of course. We're both going to deal with Shai Zi, so we are on the same side,” said the Chief. The two then returned to their original size, but everyone didn't notice anything strange.

“I've come up with a plan. All of you, prepare yourself. I will go and collect something first. We'll go after the Liang Kingdom's Dragon Vein in two hours,” the Chief said, and his figure abruptly scattered like sand.

Since the Chief had already come up with a plan, the rest left to prepare themselves for the oncoming war.

Li Huowang pulled Bai Lingmiao out of the hall when someone pounced on him. He pulled the skirt up to reveal Li Sui's tentacles and dog skull.

“She's not who you think she is! She's just Li Sui.”

“Oh.” Bai Lingmiao nodded slightly.

“Miaomiao, what's wrong with you?” Li Huowang asked, putting Li Sui down and holding Bai Lingmiao's arm.

Chapter 577 - Heavenly Mater

Li Huowang carefully stepped down the white jade stairs while looking at Bai Lingmiao nervously.

He slowly undid the white silk ribbon covering her eyes, revealing her white eyes.

Her irises were no longer pink, and her eyes had become completely white. Bai Lingmiao looked just like a statue made out of white jade, especially with her white skin and hair.

“Senior Li, I am fine. Do not worry. I will protect you from now on.”

Bai Lingmiao slowly snuggled into Li Huowang’s embrace and smiled faintly.

Li Huowang pushed her away gently and looked at her blinded eyes.

“Miaomiao, tell me. When did you leave me? What happened? And who are they?” Li Huowang pointed at the White Lotus Sect members, who were meditating nearby.

The White Lotus Sect members were of people of different ages and sexes but all of them were wearing white overalls with a white lotus motif on their forehead.

They were sitting at specific locations inside an incomprehensible formation.

“We are the White Lotus Sect, and we made a different branch when we scattered. We have the surname ‘Lian,’ while the branch with the Saintess has the surname ‘Bai,’” explained Lian Zhibei, the person whom Li Huowang had met while hunting a spiritual sin. [1]

Lian Zhibei had a face of humility rather than the cheerfulness that Li Huowang had seen in her long ago.

“White Lotus? Saintess?”

Bai Lingmiao held Li Huowang's hands and explained, “Lian Zhibei was the one who took me away when you were in the middle of your hysteria. Do you still remember it?”

Li Huowang could still remember it. It was when Yang Na's father carried Yang Na away from the hospital. He could still remember how hard she cried on that day. The next moment, Li Huowang then watched as Yang Na's face overlapped with Bai Lingmiao's face, while Lian Zhibei's face overlapped with the face of Yang Na's father.

“I remember.” Li Huowang sighed and nodded lightly. “But what's this about becoming the Saintess?”

“They said I've been chosen by the Heavenly Mater to become the Saintess,” Bai Lingmiao remarked, and she sounded excited as she said, “Senior Li, do you know that the Heavenly Mater actually exists?! She's actually alive, too!”

Bai Lingmiao's voice became full of longing as she added, “The Heavenly Mater is an ancient Buddha that cannot be killed. She's waiting for me to finish living my life here before accepting me in the heavens. My parents were members of the White Lotus Sect as well. Since they worshiped her throughout their entire lives, their spirit has returned to the side of the Heavenly Mater, as their fleshly body is no more.”

Li Huowang wanted to correct her, but he didn't say anything in the end. Bai Lingmiao had finally pulled herself out of despair. Was he really going to pull her back into the darkness?

“Senior Li, did you know that the Heavenly Mater told me that my parents really missed me?”

Li Huowang frowned, and his heart started to waver at Bai Lingmiao's words.

Bai Lingmiao had regressed to her previous state before she was fed the Black Taisui. If he pulled her out of her delusion, she could return to her previous self, which was in endless torment, just like him.

“Er Jiu, you seem to not believe in the words of the Saintess? I need to tell you that what she’s saying is true! Thanks to the disturbances in the Heavens, the Heavenly Mater is back. If not, how do you explain why the sect members’ strength has improved so much? How will you explain the powers that the Saintess received from the Heavenly Mater? The White Lotus Sect is no longer the same sect that will easily get bullied by others! The descent of the Heavenly Mater means that spring has come for us as well!” Lian Zhibei exclaimed, and the other members of the White Lotus Sect shouted with her.

Li Huowang stared at Lian Zhibei and found that she had become incredibly unfamiliar. He suspected that this was her true identity and that her previous identity was fabricated.

“Senior Li, it’s not what you think. The Heavenly Mater is really back. She wishes to turn everything back to normal, just like her own piece of heaven, the Void Home. There is no pain and suffering there.”

Bai Lingmiao stroked Li Huowang’s forehead, and the scenery before Li Huowang abruptly peeled away. Using Bai Lingmiao as the medium, Li Huowang saw a dense layer of white ribbons.

There was a colossal entity before him, but the entity's figure was wrapped tightly in white ribbons. Li Huowang couldn't see the entity's true body.

Despite that, Li Huowang could still feel the unending pity and mercy radiating off the entity.

The entity was none other than the Heavenly Mater, and Li Huowang could feel her emotions, too. He sensed that she was afraid of hurting him, so she covered herself with white ribbons.

Mercy, love, and concern... Those were the emotions that Li

Huowang could feel from the Heavenly Mater, but for some reason, those emotions were a bit... different than he initially thought.

Li Huowang was intrigued by the sight before him, and he stepped forward to take a closer look at the Heavenly Mater.

However, Li Huowang was suddenly pulled back to where he was standing. He noticed the palace walls around him and realized that nothing had changed. It felt like he had just woken up from a dream.

Bai Lingmiao supported Li Huowang as she asked, “Senior Li. Did you sense it? Are you finally convinced that I’m telling you the truth?”

Li Huowang looked at Bai Lingmiao and took a step backward in shock. “So the Heavenly Mater has obtained the Heavenly Dao related to mercy?”

The pure emotions that he felt from the Heavenly Mater were similar to the extreme pain that he felt from Ba-Hui.

The Heavenly Mater did exist, and she controlled the Heavenly Dao related to mercy—at least, that was what Li Huowang knew at the moment.

“Senior Li? What are you talking about? The Heavenly Mater is the Heavenly Mater.”

“I see,” Li Huowang replied, shaking his head. Ba-Hui ruled over pain, but the Heavenly Mater ruled over mercy, so she could be considered to be benevolent.

At the very least, it was one of the better Simings out there, as it meant Bai Lingmiao was safe for now.

Retrieving the Dragon Vein was a much more pressing matter that he had to attend to, so he was more concerned with it.

Li Huowang was soon going to face a powerful enemy, so had no time to talk much about other matters.

However, Bai Lingmiao shook her head lightly and replied, “Senior Li, don’t worry. I can help you using the techniques that I’ve learned from the Heavenly Mater. Didn’t I help you just now? Also, this is the will of the Heavenly Mater. If Shai Zi succeeds in his plot, the Liang Kingdom will be reduced to ashes. The White Lotus Sect is not going to let that happen.”

1. Bai(白) means white, and Lian(莲) means lotus. However, the Lian they used in the raws is a different character with the same pronunciation 连 instead of 莲. Maybe using 莲 would be too obvious and they might get captured haha 🤔

Chapter 578 - Drum

Li Huowang was perplexed. The Heavenly Mater has taken pity on the people? Wait, am I even dealing with the White Lotus Sect, which was infamous for burying people alive?

Li Huowang didn't know what happened to the Heavenly Mater. He put two to two together and came to the conclusion that the Heavenly Mater had another Heavenly Dao before.

"All right, but you must know your limits. If anything goes wrong, you must run away from me. Don't get close to me because things will become dangerous if you do so."

"Don't worry. We will protect the Saintess. You don't have to worry about her." Lian Zhibei huffed with a hint of dissatisfaction.

Li Huowang ignored her and added, "Your life is the top priority. Once we're done with the issue today, we can slowly figure out the rest."

Li Huowang then hugged Bai Lingmiao. While he was enjoying Bai Lingmiao's warmth, Bai Lingmiao suddenly changed, revealing a gnarly smile. Her mouth grew wide, and a blood-red tongue emerged between her lips, wriggling in the air as if it would enter Li Huowang's ear in the next moment.

"Second Mom?"

"What?" Li Huowang let go of Bai Lingmiao and saw Li Sui staring at them.

"No, Second Mom is gone. It's just Mom."

Bai Lingmiao kissed Li Huowang's cheek and gently hugged Li Sui. "Suisui, have you been obedient?"

Li Sui took off her head and extended her tentacles upwards. "Mom, is my new head pretty? I love it. I like being a human, but my dad doesn't want me to keep it."

“Don’t listen to him. What does he know? Just keep wearing it. You look much better now.”

“I think so, too. No one is afraid of me like this, and I can talk to people, too.”

Li Huowang sighed when he saw Bai Lingmiao taking care of Li Sui. Fortunately, Bai Lingmiao appeared to be normal.

Bai Lingmiao’s appearance had astonished him too, and he was planning on discussing that with Li Sui soon.

“Come with me. We’ll meet at the east wall.” The Chief’s voice suddenly rang next to Li Huowang’s ear, making him flinch.

He looked around and saw that the others were looking around as well. Clearly, the Chief’s voice had echoed in their ears as well.

“Li Sui, let’s go,” Li Huowang said, opening his mouth. Li Sui’s dense tentacle wriggled out of Princess Anping’s corpse and entered his body through his mouth.

“Chief, I thought you needed two hours? I don’t think it has even been two hours,” Li Huowang said, speaking to the air.

“Too late. Shai Zi is doing something. He’s planning on destroying all of us as soon as possible instead of biding his time.” The Chief’s voice echoed within Li Huowang’s brain.

“Where’s that Shai Zi?”

“In the barracks.”

“What?!” Li Huowang stiffened, and he felt cold. The next instant, Peng Longteng materialized and threw him high into the air.

As Li Huowang streaked across the air, he looked down at Shangjing. He could see everything in Shangjing from up here. He saw a massive group of people beyond the east wall of Shangjing. They looked like ants in the distance, and there was a massive centipede in the middle of the ants.

Those aren’t ants! Those are the military troops! And that’s not a centipede... that’s Shai Zi!

Shai Zi had decided not to fight them head-on, and it was a decision that Li Huowang was supposed to have seen coming. Shai Zi had decided to use his identity to deceive the military!

Li Huowang landed on the ground safely, and the Chief appeared beside him without any warning.

“No time to waste. Let’s talk while moving. Shai Zi intends to trick the entire Liang Kingdom into believing that he’s the new emperor. If everyone believes in him, we’ll have to fight everyone.”

Shai Zi wanted to obtain the entire Liang Kingdom in addition to the Dragon Vein.

To make matters worse, Shai Zi was technically the newest emperor of the Liang Kingdom, and Li Huowang couldn't do anything to convince everyone otherwise.

Li Huowang gritted his teeth and started running. “Are you sure your plan is going to work? It's all over if it doesn't work!”

“I have my own plans. If you want to save the Liang Kingdom, you should have to listen to me!” the Chief exclaimed, and he floated like a ghost next to Li Huowang.

“Fine! What should we do first? I have to know what's going to happen now, as things might get messy later!”

The emperor was leading an army from the outside to take over Shangjing. The civilians were terrified to hear the footsteps of the massive army outside; gossip and rumors spread like wildfire, but it couldn't be helped, as everyone was unsure of what was happening.

Li Huowang used Li Sui's tentacles to scale the city walls.

The White Lotus Sect and the Ao Jing Sect quickly arrived as well, while the rest of the Surveillance Bureau was starting to converge on the eastern wall.

Even though they had many incredibly powerful people on their side, the bloodlust and killing intent of the huge army before them made everyone’s heart beat wildly against their chest.

There was a reason why the Liang Kingdom was the greatest nation in the world, and they didn't reach that position through diplomacy alone.

Li Huowang and the others weren't sure of what to think upon seeing the golden banners of the army.

"If we were to fight them, we'd lose many people on both sides. Shai Zi doesn't care about winning at all. He just wants to get rid of as many people as possible. The outcome of this war is sitting on your shoulders," said the Chief.

Li Huowang made a sidelong glance at the Chief, asking, "There are so many Strayed Ones out there, so why have you chosen me? Are you thinking of using me for something else?"

The Chief's plan was simple and easy, but Li Huowang couldn't help but be wary of it. After all, he had been backstabbed so many times by now.

"Regardless of what my plan is, we still have to deal with Shai Zi. Don't forget that you're technically part of the reason why we're here today."

Li Huowang looked away to stare at Shai Zi sitting on the throne. If it wasn't for him, Zhuge Yuan would still be alive, and the world would still be at peace!

"You can use me on one condition: Shai Zi must die!"

Bom, bom, bom!

Rhythmic drumming noises pervaded the air, and everyone felt their heartbeats synchronizing with the beat as if their heart were the drum itself.

"The Surveillance Bureau is working together with the White Lotus Sect to kill the emperor! Kill them all!"

The army below the city wall slammed their weapon to the ground in unison as dense killing intent swept across Li Huowang and everyone else.

"Kill! Kill! Kill!"

The catapults launched three-meter-tall cavalries clad in heavy black metal armor toward the city wall! [1]

1. No, you did not read that wrong. They literally launched heavily armored soldiers using the catapults 🤖

Chapter 579 - Prelude

The prelude to the war started outside the eastern walls of Shangjing.

Shai Zi stood at the helm of the army to fight the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang looked at the cavalries wearing heavy black iron armor, blanketing the skies and crashing down toward them. He frowned and took a few steps back to reach the edge of the wall.

Just as they crashed into the city wall, Li Huowang jumped backward and fell down the wall. Halfway down, Li Huowang swung his spine sword, and a spacetime rift that led to the Qi Kingdom manifested.

Peng Longteng then materialized and grabbed Li Huowang. She used both of her hands to throw Li Huowang into the rift. At the same time, Li Huowang's two legs and Li Sui's four tentacles used Peng Longteng as a wall to jump off of her. He disappeared into the rift in the blink of an eye.

A few breaths later, Li Huowang looked around calmly in the Qi Kingdom.

There was chaos throughout the Liang Kingdom due to the war, but the Qi Kingdom was calm. There wasn't even a survivor in sight, and Li Huowang couldn't see anything other than the ruins of a once peaceful city.

However, the solar eclipse had passed. There were still black spots on the sun, but there weren't that many black spots anymore, and it seemed that the situation was starting to return to normalcy.

The Qi Kingdom was in ruins, but the kingdom was in a better situation compared to when evil entities roamed the kingdom like last time.

“Daoist, look! You saved this world by connecting the Emperor of the Qi Kingdom to the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom! The people of the Qi Kingdom no longer have to worry in despair! Praise be to the Buddha! May the Buddha protect us!” the old monk’s illusion exclaimed with a grin while staring toward the east.

“The Buddha did not protect us! You should thank Zhuge Yuan!” Li Huowang roared.

Then, with a sword in hand, he walked past the ruins to reach the place where he had seen those golden banners in the Liang Kingdom. He didn't have the luxury of time to care about what was happening to the Qi Kingdom.

He had to stop Shai Zi, or the Liang Kingdom would perish.

It would be difficult for him to get close to Shai Zi in the Liang Kingdom, so he decided to travel to the Qi Kingdom and hope that upon his return to the Liang Kingdom, he'd be near Shai Zi.

This approach was much easier than just running straight into an army.

“We're almost there. It should be around here...” Li Huowang muttered.

Just then, Shangguan Yuting emerged from his shadow and looked around before nodding. “All right. The Chief is ready. We will go back in five minutes.”

Li Huowang nodded and waited for the five minutes to pass. He could swear that this was the longest five minutes of his life so far.

Will the Chief's plan work? What if Shai Zi becomes—no! I can't think of that! I'm a Strayed One! I cannot think about those things so easily!

“Now!” Shangguan Yuting shouted.

Li Huowang immediately swung his spine sword. A spacetime rift manifested, and numerous limbs fell into the Qi Kingdom, tainting the Qi Kingdom's ground in a crimson hue. These limbs had come from the troops of the Liang Kingdom.

The Qi Kingdom's side was empty, but the Liang Kingdom's side was packed to the brim with people.

Li Huowang didn't hesitate and propelled himself into the rift using his two legs and Li Sui's tentacles.

Upon appearing on the other side, Li Huowang was taken aback by the intensity of the fight. The rhythmic beats of war drums and the grotesque noises of slaughter echoed nonstop. The killing intent and bloodlust made Li Huowang's veins bulge.

“Oh? Is that you, my Left and Right Jinwu Guard? How come you've just arrived? Have you completed your mission?” A voice echoed on Li Huowang's side. He turned and saw Shai Zi in Gao Zhijian's body beneath the golden dragon banner.

Li Huowang looked at the army, glaring at him along with the other commanders and generals next to Shai Zi.

However, Li Huowang wasn't nervous at all. He took a deep breath and said, “We should stop now. The Chief wants me to deal with you, but I'm technically working under you, so the Chief's plan is destined to fail.”

Li Huowang approached Shai Zi.

The soldiers wanted to stop him, but Shai Zi told them not to do so. He allowed Li Huowang to approach him without fear.

“Come. You've been pretending to be someone else for such a long time now, so you must be tired. Let me toast you a cup.” Gao Zhijian said, offering Li Huowang a cup of wine.

“How could it be hard? We're both from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, Boss Shai Zi. It's actually fun deceiving people,” Li Huowang said, drinking the wine without any hesitation.

The soldiers and commanders were confused, but their confusion was Li Huowang's goal.

“Hahaha~ Now really isn't the time for jokes, as we're facing such powerful enemies.”

Li Huowang chuckled as well and swept his hand across his face. A Hong Zhong's face appeared on Li Huowang's face, and he laughed hysterically as he responded, "Boss Shai Zi, how can this be a joke? I'm just following your orders."

Shangguan Yuting appeared and walked toward Gao Zhijian.

Gao Zhijian's face slowly changed into that of a Shai Zi.

Li Huowang couldn't transform the Dragon Vein itself, but the Chief's illusion techniques could easily trick the soldiers. Once the soldiers were no longer willing to obey Shai Zi, things would go swimmingly from then on.

"Hehehe, not bad. But do you really think that you can beat me with this little trick of yours? You've overestimated yourself." Gao Zhijian's dragon claw tore off the illusion on his face, and his face returned to normal.

"I'm a Hong Zhong. If I'm not a Hong Zhong, then what am I?"

"You're from the Sitting Oblivion Dao! You're a Shai Zi!" Gao Zhijian exclaimed, pointing at Li Huowang.

The Chief appeared behind Li Huowang and made a seal with both hands before pressing it on Li Huowang's nape.

"Now!" the Chief shouted.

When the Chief's seal touched Li Huowang, he felt something infiltrating him. They were clouds of primordial breath, and they slowly entered Li Huowang

Li Huowang could sense the subtle difference between each cloud of primordial breath. These clouds of primordial breath do not belong to the Chief! These are the clouds of primordial breath that he has harvested from the Strayed Ones!

A pair of withered hands holding a set of prayer beads clapped, and an aged, low chanting echoed from beneath the Chief's red robes. The air shimmered, seemingly becoming illusory beneath the incessant chanting.

Even the colors themselves seemed to bleed into the air as they escaped their original containers; the colors of the soldiers' armor and even the color of the earth itself were drained as the world became hazy.

The line between the illusory world and the real world started to become blurry.

Li Huowang realized that the clouds of primordial breath inside of him had become extremely easy to control.

“Huff... puff...” As Li Huowang breathed, the world seemed to contract and expand.

“I’m a Shai Zi! I’m a Shai Zi! I’m a Shai Zi!” Li Huowang repeated. Veins bulged on his temples as his face slowly changed into that of a Shai Zi.

The chanting did not stop as the Chief stared at Gao Zhijian from within the darkness of his robes. Moments later, a voice joined the chanting. “If he’s a Shai Zi, and there’s only one Shai Zi left in the Liang Kingdom, then you must be Gao Zhijian!

“You are not a Shai Zi!”

Shai Zi revealed confusion on his face at the remark. “I-I-I-I’m... Gao...Gao...Gao Zhijian!?”

Gao Zhijian hesitated. He was about to take a step forward when the ground before him abruptly caved in. Several dice rushed past the cavity and flew past his eyes.

Gao Zhijian instantly calmed down upon seeing the dice. He chuckled and remarked, “How devious of you, Xuan Pin. To think you’d use the Strayed One’s technique to erase me. Unfortunately, I’ve become the Dragon Vein, so your techniques are useless against me.

“However, I admit that you’re pretty strong. How about you join me? You can have half of the Heavenly Dao that we’ll certainly obtain later.”

Chapter 580 - Fuse

The Chief said nothing in response to Shai Zi's words, but Li Huowang was different.

Li Huowang grabbed his head with an agonized look and pointed at Shai Zi. "Gao Zhijian, what are you doing?!"

Gao Zhijian hesitated once again, but he recovered even faster this time.

"It's useless, Sitting Oblivion Dao. I am the Chosen One. Your tricks will not work on me," Gao Zhijian said. Then, he swept his gaze across the commanders and asked, "Ma family, Qiu family, Xue family, and Yu family... did all of you come here to spectate? I hope you haven't forgotten your ancestor's pledge."

Gao Zhijian's throne burst open, revealing the previous emperor tied to the tail of the Dragon Vein. Gao Zhijian then swung the bloody emperor in front of the commanders.

The next moment, many different weapons wrapped in a dense killing intent flew toward Li Huowang and the Chief.

"Scram!" Li Huowang shouted.

The projectiles flying toward him transformed abruptly, transforming into something else. No, it wasn't just the projectiles—everything around him except the Chief had transformed into something else.

Li Huowang growled, and the surroundings were starting to transform.

The Chief saw that Shai Zi was trying to run away, so he flew over to the latter to stop him.

"Do not get close to that man! Archers, fire!"

"Fire!" A dense blanket of arrows flew from a mountain not too far away. It blotted out the sky and cast a deadly shadow over Li Huowang as the rain of arrows plummeted toward him. However, the attack didn't harm Li Huowang at all. The poison-coated arrows twisted into raindrops the moment they made contact with Li Huowang.

I can't keep this up! There are too many clouds of primordial breath! I can't control them all! I have to use them NOW! Li Huowang was bleeding from all of his orifices. He let out a roar and a clearing appeared around him as the soldiers frantically ran away from him for fear of transforming into something else.

“Hehehe. How many times must I tell you that your tricks are not going to work on me!” Shai Zi flew high up in the air, avoiding the Chief. Just then, something appeared before Shai Zi.

The man had leprosy and three heads of different ages—young, adult, and old. He was holding a bronze coin sword, and he was covered in black feathers.

“Hm? What is that thing?” Gao Zhijian's slender figure twisted in mid-air, dodging the spacetime rift that Li Huowang's spine sword had sent toward him. Shai Zi looked down and saw a familiar face. It turned out that the attack just now had come from Zhuge Yuan rather than Li Huowang!

Zhuge Yuan swung the spine sword once more before flying toward Shai Zi. “Junior Li, do not be afraid! I'm here to help!”

Li Huowang collapsed to the ground in pain, and his head throbbed painfully, but he smiled at the familiar voice.

Li Sui's tentacles moved, helping Li Huowang up the ground. Li Huowang brandished his purple-tasseled sword and ran toward Shai Zi.

The Dragon Vein had bizarre properties that allowed Gao Zhijian to fight toe-to-toe against Li Huowang, but it didn't matter how great Shai Zi was at dodging; he was still getting cornered by the Chief, Dan Yangzi, Zhuge Yuan, and Li Huowang.

Just as they were about to capture Gao Zhijian, a sharp sword pierced Li Huowang's chest. The next moment, a spear fashioned from the bloody horns of a dragon pierced Dan Yangzi, and his grotesque form dissipated from the attack.

Gao Zhijian instantly felt the weight on him becoming lighter.

This is impossible! How could someone get so close to me without me noticing them? Li Huowang spat a mouthful of blood and turned around. To his surprise, he saw soldiers wearing armor made from bloody dragon scales.

The bloody scales weren't fake scales made from iron. The scales had come from the past emperors on the Dragon Vein. To make matters worse, even the soldiers' weapons were made from dragon bone!

"Hahaha! I knew you guys were going to attack me, so I prepared a countermeasure. Do you really think that I can't handle a crazy Strayed One? Unfortunately for you all, I have multiple contingency plans!"

Several soldiers leaped out from the bushes, each of them donning an armor made from dragon scales. They surrounded Li Huowang, and they seemed unaffected by Li Huowang's ability that he had obtained from cultivating the "Truth."

"Are you crazy?!" the Chief howled upon realizing something horrible. "How dare you scatter the luck of the Dragon Vein so recklessly?!"

"Does it really matter? The end of the world is coming, anyway. Might as well as make it come earlier. I'd prefer if the world ended sooner; that way, we'll be spared of the agonizing wait."

Shai Zi then swept his claw across the past emperors. Large swathes of dragon scales fell from the sky, and cracks appeared in the clouds itself. It looked like the heavens had fractured!

"Kill them! The officials and the military are one! Kill them, and I will give you everything!" Shai Zi exclaimed.

The soldiers clad in dragon scale armor quickly moved to surround Li Huowang. He glanced at the Chief, but he saw that the latter was busy fighting Shai Zi. The Chief didn't have any time to spare for Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked around and saw Shangguan Yuting with her head covered in eyeballs.

I need to do something! Li Huowang grabbed Shangguan Yuting and ate one of her eyeballs. "I need to find a way to defeat Shai Zi!"

An eye manifested on Li Huowang's forehead, but he saw nothing. It made sense, as Shai Zi had already become the Dragon Vein after fusing with it.

However, Li Huowang wasn't going to give up. He ignored Shangguan Yuting's cries of pain as he devoured the eyeballs on her head. Li Huowang's third eye started to shine even brighter as he ate more of Shangguan Yuting's eyeballs.

Unfortunately, the soldiers weren't going to wait for Li Huowang to finish.

One of the soldiers shouted, "Jingyan formation!"

The soldiers lined up in a formation before charging at Li Huowang.

Swoosh!

The air shrieked as a dragon horn made a beeline for Li Huowang. Before the dragon bone could hit him, however, a white ribbon descended and wrapped around the dragon horn, lifting it up.

Li Huowang had barely managed to avoid getting hit by the attack.

The soldiers looked up and saw white lotus lanterns in the air.

Bai Lingmiao was standing at the helm of a group of White Lotus Sect disciples, and they had come here to protect Li Huowang. The disciples looked different from each other, and they were either topless or were wearing dudous embroidered with pearls.

Their eyes were half closed, and their faces were solemn. The metal rods sticking out of their cheeks had talismans attached to them, and the disciples had tattoos depicting white donkeys.

Chapter 581 - Secret

When the commanders of the army saw the White Lotus Sect disciples, their belief in their emperor's words strengthened. The rhythm of the war drums changed, and the soldiers in dragon-scale armor worked together to corner the cultists.

Meanwhile, the archers on the distant mountain began to tighten the strings of their octagonal crossbows.

At the next moment, a mighty fire ignited near the catapults. The Ao Jing Sect had made their move.

The pressure on Bai Lingmiao had decreased sharply, but she still felt immense pressure as she stood before the lines of troops. The pressure was truly immense, as this issue concerned not just herself but Li Huowang's survival as well.

Bai Lingmiao glanced at Li Huowang, who seemed to be immersed in his own world.

A fierce expression appeared on Bai Lingmiao's face as she shouted, "Spiritual communication!"

The disciples around her took out a jagged knife and thrust it into their foreheads. The next moment, they started chanting as crimson blood flowed down their faces.

"Invoke the spirits, please manifest. I invite the spirits and wish to worship the generals of this altar. The revered masters of golden light. Suppress the five generals, take five steps, and turn once to reveal the wheel of characters, the great Bodhisattva Pu'an!"

The mediums' eyes shot wide open. They seemed to have been possessed by the spirits as they charged at the towering soldiers with no signs of fear on their faces. In terms of skills, these spirit mediums were no match for the seasoned military troops. The mediums quickly found themselves riddled with holes of varying sizes.

However, the mediums seemed unaffected. They stood before the towering soldiers, holding them back with their bodies.

Bai Lingmiao made a lotus seal with her hands, and she smacked her head forcefully with the lotus seal. The lotus on her forehead became a twin lotus.

Then she immediately started chatting. "The strong and weak fragrances shall combine and scatter. The east and the west diverge but remain intertwined!"

Bai Lingmiao trembled, and her expression was part angry and part sorrowful. She looked rather bizarre as her shadow began to grow larger.

However, the soldiers didn't care about her bizarre appearance at all. The ground burst open, and a soldier radiating an intense, killing intent jumped out of the fissure. He was holding a weapon made out of a dragon's horn as he rushed toward Bai Lingmiao.

Just as Bai Lingmiao was about to get hit, she split apart, allowing her to dodge the attack. However, Bai Lingmiao's upper body was the only part of her that had split apart; her lower body hadn't changed.

One of Bai Lingmiao's two faces showed compassion and mercy, while the other showed cruelty and ferocity.

Bom, bom, bom!

Four slender palms with black nails moved like whips, slapping the white drums around Bai Lingmiao's waist. As the drum beats intensified, a red veil manifested, covering the two faces.

Behind the red veil, the Second Deity started singing.

"The treasured foal grows wings in the nine heavens, and the iron pagoda shines with the light of the eight treasures! I smile once, my partner smiles twice, and the old immortal laughs three times for reasons unknown!

"I call upon the old Immortal; you must come!"

A patch of fur grew out of the back of Bai Lingmiao's hand. The wolf teeth protruding from behind the red veil gnawed at the palms of the towering soldier, tearing them apart in the blink of an eye.

While Bai Lingmiao and the spirit mediums were busy buying time, Li Huowang had already devoured the majority of Shangguan Yuting's head. The eyeball in the middle of his forehead was bloodshot, and it had become larger than his head.

He had transformed into a terrifying monster, and the tentacles all over him made him look even more terrifying. Li Huowang's expression was frightening too, and he looked like he was having a hard time catching his breath.

Unfortunately, Li Huowang still needed more. Not enough! Still not enough!

Li Huowang's mouth split abruptly, opening up all the way to his ears. His eyes widened to the maximum as he leaned forward, sucking Shangguan Yuting's head into his mouth.

Shangguan Yuting abruptly stopped moving, and she dissipated into nothingness. Li Huowang looked up, revealing an eyeball that had become swollen to the point that it looked like it would explode at any time soon.

Li Huowang's scalp had become almost transparent, allowing others to peek at his skull.

"I-I-I can see it!!" Li Huowang roared hysterically.

His head swelled up, expanding by half its size before shrinking to the size of a walnut. Afterward, Li Huowang's head exploded with a bang as if it were a firework.

At the same time, Shangji Guankou's hidden secrets became available to Li Huowang. He saw what was hidden beneath this world, and everything that was once shrouded in fog became extremely clear to him.

He was a Hong Zhong, and his past had changed completely when Doulao had gifted him with the identity of a Hong Zhong.

One's past wasn't just the past. Whenever a Siming changed someone's past, that someone's past would inevitably change as well! The Simings cared so much about the past because they were fighting for each other's future!

Zheng Boqiao was right—only with a "cause" would there be an "effect."

The Simings didn't actually exist completely, and they'd disappear the moment every single trace of their existence was gone.

In the darkness, Li Huowang caught a glimpse of the secrets of the birth and the death of the Simings. He finally understood what the Simings were all about. At the same time, Li Huowang noticed that many heavenly entities had noticed his existence, but he couldn't care less about them at the moment.

His attention was on the fact that he had found many valuable pieces of information through the secrets of the Shangji Guankou, including the secrets written on Zhuge Yuan's fan at the time.

Li Huowang knelt down and looked up.

"Is this part of your plan?" Li Huowang asked.

He was staring at the stolen Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye, and he saw his own reflection in the eye so colossal that it blotted out the skies.

If he were to become Doulao's Twisted One, then the current Doulao would be his future self. That was the eye's plan...

Li Huowang just had to follow its plan, and the current crisis would be resolved.

Shai Zi has deceived my future self, and I'm going to avenge myself, Li Huowang thought. It seemed to be the most logical course of action.

When Li Huowang got close enough to the eye, his flesh cracked open by itself. The scars that had yet to vanish all split open like flower petals.

Pain... intense pain. The excruciating pain brought Li Huowang back, pulling him away from the Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye in the sky. Upon savoring the familiar feeling, Li Huowang smiled. I had no idea that I was so popular! I should have known of it earlier.

When Doulao was in the middle of setting up its scheme, Ba-Hui was setting up its trap as well. To be more precise, the two of them wanted to turn me into their Twisted One the moment I obtained the Profound Records from the water bandits!

Li Huowang felt like an eternity had passed. His brain matter, blood, and broken bones that were flying in all directions were falling slowly to the ground.

The sudden change stunned everyone, including the spirit mediums and the soldiers. They all slowly stopped what they were doing to stare in disbelief at Li Huowang, who had suddenly lost his head but was still somehow muttering to himself.

Moreover, Li Huowang's fleshly body seemed to be in the middle of being subjected to lingchi^[1]. His flesh and skin were splitting open, revealing the wriggling black tentacles underneath.

Li Sui was inside Li Huowang, so she reacted faster than anyone. Moreover, she knew quite a few things for sure, and one of them was the fact that a person would die upon losing their head.

"Father, are you alright? Your head—"

"Shh!" Bai Lingmiao hushed as her two bodies rushed over to the tentacles that had sprouted out of Li Huowang's broken mouth.

"Suisui, listen to me. Don't say anything to your father!" Bai Lingmiao warned.

Right then, Li Huowang made a move. His mouth was the only part of his face that was somewhat intact as he rushed toward Shai Zi, who was busy fighting the Chief of the Great Liang's Surveillance Bureau.

Bai Lingmiao's fangs closed forcefully as she chased after Li Huowang. The soldiers in dragon-scale armor attempted to block them, but Bai Lingmiao and the spirit mediums put their lives on the line to stop them.

When the Chief and Zhuge Yuan saw Li Huowang's current appearance, they seemed to have understood something, so they didn't say anything.

However, Shai Zi was different. He roared, "Hong Zhong! Where did your head go?"

Li Huowang roared, "Don't think you can fool me again, Sitting Oblivion Dao!"

"Your head really isn't there! If you don't believe me, try and touch your head!"

Chapter 582 - Siming

Shai Zi said, “Your head really isn't there! If you don't believe me, try and touch your head!”

Li Huowang couldn't care less about Shai Zi's tempting words. He looked up at the sky and roared, “You want me to become your Twisted One, huh?! Fat chance! Since I'm the coveted one, then I can just find someone else! Why do I have to settle with you all?!”

“I am Li Huowang!” Li Huowang shouted, pointing fiercely at the sky. “I am destined to become the Siming! The future Li Huowang is destined to come and help me right now!”

Li Huowang immediately felt the rapid depletion of his primordial breath, and it was all because he was currently cultivating his future Siming self. Since Doulao was backing him up, why not take a bigger risk? He was risking his life, anyway.

Shai Zi looked bewildered. He had no idea what Li Huowang was up to.

“What nonsense are you spouting, Hong Zhong?! Have you gone crazy?”

Li Huowang could feel his memories as a Hong Zhong rapidly eroding his own memories, but it seemed that Doulao didn't want to sit idly by.

Unfortunately, his wounds from the past manifested all over him, and his flesh split open. The extreme pain made Li Huowang stagger backward. He could feel his mental and physical self splitting apart. He felt like he was on the verge of death.

However, this torture was what stoked the flames of perseverance in Li Huowang's heart. He decided to persevere with his belief. His method had to be incredibly effective. Otherwise, why were they trying so hard to stop him?

Cultivating a future Siming seemed impossible, but Li Huowang truly believed that it was possible. Li Huowang let out a peal of laughter filled with immense joy.

After an unknown amount of time, he came to his senses, and he found himself in a vast white expanse. Feeling confused, Li Huowang looked around and saw the Chief walking up to him to help him up.

“Li Huowang, are you sure you want to go down this path? You've already gotten involved with the "effect" of the Siming, but it doesn't mean that you have to become one.”

It didn't matter to Li Huowang whether the Chief was real. He just replied, “Do I even have a choice? If I don't go down this path, am I supposed to become Doulao and Ba-Hui's puppet?”

“Anyway, do you know anything about my future self? Am I powerful? Which Siming will I command?”

“Bewilderment,” the Chief answered.

“Oh? Are you saying that I will be able to use the ‘Truth’ and ‘Lies’ like Doulao along with ‘Bewilderment’?” Li Huowang asked curiously.

“Yes, but the bewilderment in your heart will become even deeper the stronger you become. Those two are mutually reinforcing, after all,” the Chief explained. Then, he sounded serious as he said, “Let me ask you once more. Are you sure you want to go down this path?”

“If you go down this path, everything you care about might become illusions. And what you once thought were mere illusions might become real.”

“Hehe, you speak as if I have a clear understanding of everything right now,” Li Huowang replied in a self-deprecating manner.

The Chief nodded lightly at that and took off his red robes, revealing a white robe underneath. It was Yi Donglai's white robe.

The scenery peeled back before Li Huowang, and Yi Donglai transformed into the Chief wearing the red Daoist robes. Li Huowang found himself standing in the middle of a battlefield thick with the smell of blood.

After just a second, the Chief's towering figure shrank as he became Yi Donglai again. The scent in the air changed from the smell of blood into the smell of hospital disinfectant.

“Li Huowang, are you sure you haven't forgotten what you have to do?” Yi Donglai asked, bringing Li Huowang back to his senses.

Li Huowang looked around and saw a spiral iron slide in the ward. The iron slide was long, and it almost reached the ceiling. Li Huowang lifted the covers and walked slowly toward the spiral slide under Yi Donglai's watchful gaze.

The spiral slide became the Dragon Vein in Li Huowang's eyes. Then just as Gao Zhijian was about to fly away, the Dragon Vein became a spiral slide once again. Li Huowang scratched his head and dragged his feeble body up the slide. He was so weak that such a simple task proved exceptionally difficult for him. There were even times when he lost his grip and slid back down.

When Sun Xiaoqin saw what was going on, she had the urge to charge at Li Huowang and help him up the spiral slide.

However, her husband held her back firmly, saying, “Doctor Yi is in the middle of giving hypnotherapy for our son! You can't go in and disrupt the session. Just believe in Doctor Yi's words!”

Li Huowang heard his father's words and glanced at his parents. His mother transformed into the soldiers, while his father became Bai Lingmiao, who stood bravely in the soldier's way.

Eventually, Li Huowang made it to the top of the slide, but he found nothing there. Moments later, he looked up and saw a round energy-saving light fixture hanging from the ceiling. Li Huowang half squatted on the slide, and then he reached out to unscrew the cover of the energy-saving light.

“This is impossible! This is absolutely impossible! I’ve become the Dragon Vein, and I will remain real wherever I am! You cannot control me!” Gao Zhijian roared, his voice carrying a strong protest and unwillingness.

Is this true? Or is this fake? Li Huowang thought.

His eyes revealed his confusion. He was having trouble distinguishing what was real.

Li Huowang finally removed the cover of the energy-saving light fixture, and he pulled out an eighteen-sided die. He placed the cover back on and looked down at the die in his hand.

A smile blossomed on his face.

Yi Donglai approached Li Huowang from the other side of the slide. He reached out and took the eighteen-sided die from Li Huowang’s hand, placing it into the pocket of his white coat.

“Let’s go down,” Yi Donglai said.

He supported Li Huowang down the steps before bringing him back to the bed in the ward.

Yi Donglai enquired, “How do you feel about this treatment?”

Li Huowang turned and saw Gao Zhijian standing in the distance, scratching his head with a puzzled look.

Shaking his head in confusion, Li Huowang responded, “I can’t say for sure, but it seems like the issue has been resolved, at least for the time being.”

“Brother Li, did we manage to save the Great Qi?!” Zhuge Yuan asked loudly as his figure dissipated slowly.

“I guess my illness can be considered cured now.”

Zhuge Yuan revealed a look of relief before disappearing into thin air.

"How are you feeling?" Yi Donglai asked.

"I-I... I feel like both sides are starting to overlap," Li Huowang said, looking down at his bony hands in confusion.

"Well, that is not strange at all," Yi Donglai remarked. "It means that my treatment method is effective. Anyway, remember to take your medicine on time; the medicine will allow you to rapidly recover to full health."

Just then, the door to the ward was pushed open. A group of doctors rushed in, and they stared in awe at Li Huowang.

Sun Xiaoqin pushed them aside and burst into tears of joy.

"My son, you're cured! Goodness, your illness is finally cured!!"

Chapter 583 - Li Huowang

The morning sunlight shone into ward the through the windows of the White Tower Prison, warming up the cold room.

“Son, take it slow. Don't scald your tongue.”

Under Sun Xiaoqin's encouraging gaze, Li Huowang picked up the short spoon with half a scoop of porridge and fed himself with a trembling hand.

It was an action that most people had long taken granted for, but Li Huowang found it incredibly difficult to perform at the moment.

His muscles had atrophied due to the long-term bed rest. He had started rehab, but it wouldn't yield any results until months later.

“Let me feed you, son.”

Li Huowang shook his head gently and refused, “No need, I want to move more by myself. Everything I do is going to be beneficial to my health.”

Bai Lingmiao withdrew her hand at Li Huowang's remark.

Li Huowang ate slowly, a few mouthfuls at a time. Just then, his face distorted in pain, and he clutched his head.

However, he ended up touching a hard and slightly smooth shell rather than his scalp or hair.

“What's this?” Li Huowang muttered. He used his fingernails to scratch at the shell, removing some crisp, yellow crumbs.

“Senior Li, don't scratch it. It's very brittle,” Bai Lingmiao warned.

“What is this?” Li Huowang asked again sluggishly.

“The doctor said that these phase-three psychiatric drugs are going to have some side effects, but they're effective. Huowang, endure it a bit, okay? Once your condition has stabilized, we'll switch to drugs with less severe side effects."

When the intense pain passed, Li Huowang tapped his head with his fingers, and he heard a hollow sound. "Is this lotus root? Is this the result of the White Lotus Sect's techniques?"

Bai Lingmiao cautiously touched Li Huowang's crispy lotus root head. The white hair at her temples swayed gently as she shook her head and said, "No, Si Qi's Chief of the Surveillance Bureau is the one who did this to you. The supernatural powers of the Fangxian Sect truly are strange. The Fangxian Sect says that everything can be used as medicine."

Bai Lingmiao's heart jumped into her throat when she saw Li Huowang missing his head. She was really worried that Li Huowang would realize that he had no head and die on the spot as a result.

Fortunately, they were on the same side as the imperial court, so the Si Qi's Chief intervened to help Li Huowang.

"How long will it take me to recover? I can't bear to live with this on my head for the rest of my life," Li Huowang asked while drinking porridge.

"The Daoist master said that your fate is different from ordinary people, but it will still take you forty-nine days to recover your fleshly body."

"All right." Li Huowang nodded gently. "It's okay. It's been so long, and it's just forty-nine days. We can afford to wait that long."

"Yes, yes, it's been so long. There's hope for your illness. Speaking of which, public medical services are indeed better than private ones. Those private doctors in the past couldn't even compare to our Doctor Yi."

Just then, Sun Xiaoqin heard movement at the door of the ward. She picked up her small purse and welcomed Yi Donglai.

"Oh my, Doctor Yi, thank you so much! You are truly Hua Tuo's[1] incarnation!" Sun Xiaoqin took out a thick red packet[2] from her purse and stuffed it into Yi Donglai's coat pocket.

"Sister Sun, what's the meaning of this? You can't do this... our hospital has rules..."

"Hehehe, there's no meaning behind it. It's just a token of appreciation. Keep it. You've been working so hard for my son, so you deserve it. Anyway, how old are you, Doctor Yi? Are you married yet? If not, shall I introduce you to a nice girl?"

Sun Xiaoqin's words were like a flurry of punches that caught Yi Donglai off guard, and he found himself unable to respond properly, even though he could face Li Huowang without any hesitation.

"Mom," Li Huowang couldn't stand it anymore.

"I got it, I'll leave now."

Once Sun Xiaoqin was out of the ward, Yi Donglai smiled wryly at Li Huowang.

He sat on the chair that Sun Xiaoqin had previously occupied, took out the red packet, and shook it toward the corner of the room where the camera was located before putting it into the pocket of Li Huowang's patient clothes.

"Give it back to your mom once you're discharged. I trust your character. You wouldn't use this money to gamble for some skins in a game, would you?"

Li Huowang opened the red packet and saw a stack of red notes inside. He counted them roughly and estimated the amount to be around four thousand.

"That's hard to say. I'm a delinquent back at school, and I'm not exactly the smartest student at the time."

Yi Donglai adjusted the frameless glasses on his nose and stared deeply at Li Huowang's face. "Actually, I'd be happy if you use that money to gamble for some skins in a game. It means that you have the desire of a normal person. When that day arrives, your illness can be considered to have been truly cured."

Li Huowang put away the red packet, and his expression turned serious as he said, "Your method is indeed effective, but can it really cure me completely?"

"Of course. You need to have confidence in me. Don't think that you're the only one with that kind of illness. I've used that method on others before, and the results were great. I once had a patient who was convinced that he was a wooden stake. He didn't take medicine, sleep, or cooperate with our treatment. But I told him that even wood needs to sleep and take medicine. And to prove it, I showed him an anime involving trees. He watched a few episodes and believed that trees actually need to take medicine and sleep. With that, he started taking medicine and cooperating with us for his treatment. Three months later, he was discharged."

"The last time I checked up on him, he was doing fine. He works as a deliveryman and doesn't earn much, but he can make ends meet and return to society."

Li Huowang nodded slowly, but there was still a hint of confusion on his face. He extended his right hand and clenched it before opening it again.

"The memories of Hong Zhong, which Doulao had bestowed upon me, have completely disappeared. I've become Li Huowang once again. However, my memories of the Profound Records are still there, and the scars on myself are still there. I still have the elevated senses bestowed upon me by Ba-Hui."

"Do you understand what I mean? Even if I become my own Twisted One, the true Li Huowang is always entangled with Ba-Hui's effect."

The Chief looked at Li Huowang silently for a long time. Then, he opened his mouth and spoke in his multi-layered voice. "Bewilderment itself is a kind of pain. You should stay ignorant about some things for the time being."

Li Huowang's face showed a hint of confusion; he couldn't quite understand what the Chief was talking about.

“Very well, keep it up.” The door was pushed open as the Chief walked in, and the Chief before Li Huowang dissipated rapidly like yellow sand dispersing into the air.

Chapter 584 - Shangjing

Lu Zhuangyuan was holding his grandson, Lu Tongsheng, as he sat inside a sedan chair that traveled down the streets of Shangjing. Lu Zhuangyuan swept his gaze across the shops along the streets.

The luxurious decorations inside the sedan chair told him that the sedan chair had to have been expensive to hire. Someone like him couldn't possibly afford to hire one.

Delighted, Lu Zhuangyuan kissed his grandson's face; his white beard scratched the baby's face, making him cry.

"Tongsheng, my little ancestor! Look! Our Lu Family is about to make a fortune!"

"I, Lu Zhuangyuan, have been dreaming about riding a sedan chair throughout my entire life, but I truly hadn't expected that one day, I'd end up riding in one! Hehe, so this is what riding a sedan chair feels like," Lu Zhuangyuan said, patting his bottom with a pleased look.

"Bleeck!"

Lu Zhuangyuan frowned upon hearing someone vomiting outside the sedan chair. He pulled back the curtain and looked out to see Lu Juren's head sticking out of the sedan chair.

Lu Juren was vomiting his breakfast, making it splatter on the ground.

Lu Zhuangyuan winced in pain upon seeing the minced meat and white noodles that Lu Juren had vomited out. "What are you doing?! Juren! Look at the ground! Look at what you wasted! Do you not have any idea just how expensive the food that you just vomited?"

Lu Juren's face was pale as he turned to his father and said, "Father, the sedan's swaying is making me feel nauseous. Can I get out of the sedan and just walk?”

“You can't even recognize a blessing when it's right in front of you, so shut your trap! You better not vomit again, or I'll make you eat what you've vomited!”

Lu Juren nodded bitterly, and then he covered his mouth as he retreated into his sedan chair.

Fortunately, Lu Juren's torment didn't last long, as the sedan chairs carrying the Lu Family members eventually came to a stop.

Lu Zhuangyuan carried his grandson out of the sedan. A three-story green building appeared before him. There were three large characters written on the prominent red plaque above it—Guangde Garden.

Lu Zhuangyuan's eyes widened as he walked in slowly. He dared not blink as he swept his gaze across everything before him.

The roof, walls, beams, and windows...

He was dazzled by the exquisite reliefs, carvings, and paintings. There were even some parts that were gilded and silvered.

Lu Zhuangyuan was completely overwhelmed. He had never seen such a beautiful place before.

Lu Zhuangyuan fixed his gaze on the stage in the courtyard while an eunuch approached them and said cautiously, “Sir Lu, this is the theater that the emperor has bestowed upon you.”

“This... this... this is mine?” Lu Zhuangyuan stuttered, seemingly by Gao Zhijian.

“Yes, are you satisfied with it? Otherwise, you can take a look at the other places throughout Shangjing until you're satisfied.”

Lu Zhuangyuan couldn't even hear the latter part of the eunuch's words. His eyes reddened, and he stuttered out a bunch of gibberish as he rushed toward the stage.

He circled the pillars and inspected the stage; he touched the tiles over and over again. If there were no one else here, he would definitely stick out his tongue to lick the tiles.

“Father, Father! Stop this, will you?!” Lu Juren exclaimed, pulling the crazed Lu Zhuangyuan away with Lu Xiucui's help.

Lu Zhuangyuan still looked bewildered.

Lu Xiucui spat on his palm and slapped Lu Zhuangyuan several times across the latter's face.

Lu Zhuangyuan finally came to his senses, and he looked at Lu Xiucui in astonishment. “You dare hit me?”

“ Hmph! Shame on you, don't say that you're my father whenever you're outside,” Lu Xiucui replied with a look of disdain.

“How dare you hit me?!” Lu Zhuangyuan rolled up his sleeves and raised his tobacco pipe.

In the end, he didn't start a fight with his youngest son, as a group of people surrounded them from all sides of the theater.

“The Feng family troupe pays respects to the master!”

A series of dull thuds echoed as a group of hundreds of people—comprised of men, women, and children—knelt down to Lu Zhuangyuan.

“Oh, please don't do this... you're shortening my lifespan,” Lu Zhuangyuan said in disbelief. He pushed his two sons away and tried to pull them up.

“Sir Lu, please accept it. A theater isn't enough; you need a troupe as well. With them, the entire Guangde Garden will make a fortune every day.”

Lu Zhuangyuan resisted the idea at first, but upon realizing that the other party was sincere, he finally stood in front of them with a nervous expression.

“The Feng family troupe pays respects to the master!” the group shouted.

Lu Zhuangyuan stood steadfast before them, and a tingling sensation spread all over him as he muttered, “Uh... friends... Can you please say that again?”

Although they were a little confused, they saw the eunuch waving his hand gently under his whisk, so they shouted, "The Feng family troupe pays respects to the master!"

"Hehehehe~" Lu Zhuangyuan laughed like a fool, and he felt like jumping for joy. "Don't... don't... don't stop!"

"The Feng family troupe pays respects to the master!"

"Hehehehe~"

"The Feng family troupe pays respects to the master!"

"Hehehehe~"

Lu Juren remained calm as he watched from the sidelines. He was fine, as this theater belonged to his father. He'd have nothing to do with the theater until his father was dead. Of course, Lu Juren was still extremely excited.

The large-framed simpleton actually became the emperor. Lu Juren still couldn't believe it, and he also couldn't believe that Gao Zhijian would bestow upon them such a boon.

It was so unbelievable that Lu Juren felt like he was dreaming.

He turned to look at his brother Lu Xiucan and saw the latter picking his nose with an impatient look.

Lu Xiucan felt Lu Juren's gaze.

He turned and flicked his snot in Lu Zhuangyuan's direction.

"I'm leaving if there's nothing else. Stay here and accompany that old lunatic," Lu Xiucan said. Then, he turned around and walked toward the exit of the theater with the bronze coin sword on his back.

"Hey! Where are you going, Xiucan?"

"The others are preparing to enter the palace to see my master. Of course, I have to go and take a look. My master has become very powerful. Perhaps he can bestow upon me a great power," Lu Xiucan said, running toward the palace gate.

Lu Xiucan ran as fast as he could until he finally caught up with the sedan chairs at the palace gate. It was a good thing that the sedans were slow-moving vehicles.

“Hey! Lu Xiucan! Why are you here? You look like a wet dog,” Puppy teased. He was draped in silk and was leaning out of the sedan chair.

“Damn you! Anyway, only you guys are entering the palace?” Lu Xiucan asked, looking at the other sedan chairs. He only saw Chun Xiaoman, Zhao Wu, Yang Xiaohao, and Puppy.

“Why? Are we not allowed to enter the palace? I don't think you know, so I'm going to tell you this. Being able to enter the palace is a big deal. That simpleton wasn't looking for you, so you shouldn't cling to him in such a shameless way.”

“Hmph, I'm not going to find him. I'm going to look for my master,” Lu Xiucan said. Then, he hopped into Puppy's sedan chair.

“Hey, get off! This sedan chair can only fit one person!”

“Don't be so stingy, all right! If it hadn't been for me saving you on that night, that Daoist would have killed you. You still owe me a favor!”

“It was the other way around, so get lost!”

The sedan chairs swayed as they brought their passengers through the wide-open palace gates.

Chapter 585 - Palace

Puppy and Lu Xiucan stopped arguing upon entering the palace gates. They peeked their heads out of the sedan chair, looking at the vermilion palace walls in awe.

There seemed to be a solemn and oppressive force that made them hesitant to speak loudly, and when they came to a halt before a three-story palace, they felt the urge to kneel down.

“Are you sure Senior Gao lives here?” Yang Xiaohai asked Chun Xiaoman, who had just gotten off the sedan chair beside him.

Chun Xiaoman shook her head silently, and then she took the lead, walking toward the palace.

The others snapped out of their shock and followed after her.

The unfamiliar environment made everyone restrained and obedient. They were uneasy as they traveled down the palace, but their anxiety instantly vanished upon seeing Gao Zhijian's familiar figure sitting on the dragon throne.

Gao Zhijian was wearing dragon robes and was seated on a throne made entirely of pure gold, but he was still the same old Gao Zhijian in their eyes.

A familiar sincere smile tugged at Gao Zhijian's lips as he stood up from the dragon throne and welcomed them.

“Hey! Zhijian! What's going on? How did you end up in the capital and even become the emperor? Puppy asked.

The faces of all the eunuchs in the palace changed instantly, and they cast hostile glances at Puppy. They found Puppy's words to be quite rude.

Chun Xiaoman pushed Puppy aside with the scabbard in her hand, and she addressed the emperor directly, “Zhijian, are Senior Li and Miaomiao here? Your people told us that they're here...”

Gao Zhijian nodded, but he sounded hesitant as he said, "They're here..."

"Ah! You're not stuttering anymore?! That's great! Becoming the emperor is actually a cure to illnesses?" Puppy exclaimed in surprise.

"The imperial physician gave me some medicine, which was quite helpful to me."

Puppy was thrilled. "That's awesome! Can I borrow that imperial physician to see if he can cure the white patches on me?"

"Puppy!! Are you done yet?! Did you come all the way here just to chat?" Chun Xiaoman roared, and she almost drew her sword against Puppy.

Puppy retreated a few steps and obediently shut his mouth in the face of Chun Xiaoman's fury.

Chun Xiaoman took a deep breath, and then he turned to Gao Zhijian again before getting down to business. "Since Senior Li and Miaomiao are here, can you take us to see them?"

"I can take you to see Junior Bai, but Senior Li... I can't take you to see him because he's not in a condition to see anyone."

"What's wrong? Did he peel off his own skin again? What exactly happened?"

Gao Zhijian hesitated, "I don't know how to explain it to you. It's complicated. You can just ask Senior Li himself once he has recovered."

"Never mind, then take me to see Miaomiao first," Chun Xiaoman said with a hint of anxiety in her voice. She wouldn't feel at ease until she saw with her own two eyes that they were still alive.

Gao Zhijian nodded and was about to lead the others toward the imperial kitchen when four eunuchs appeared before him and knelt down on the floor.

"Your Majesty," one of the four eunuchs said, "You are the true dragon emperor with the loftiest status in the world. We can handle these lowly tasks for you.”

Gao Zhijian scratched the back of his head, which made his imperial crown tilt slightly, “All right, you guys take Xiaoman to Junior Bai.”

The others were about to follow Chun Xiaoman, but Gao Zhijian stopped them and said, “Do you guys have anything you want? I'm the emperor, so I can give you anything you want.”

“Are you serious?! Anything?” Puppy's eyes lit up.

“Anything.”

“All right, then give me the throne.”

“How dare you!” the old eunuchs roared, almost scaring Puppy into wetting his pants.

“I... I... was just joking!” Puppy hurriedly exclaimed, “We often joked like this back then...”

Gao Zhijian waved his hand toward the old eunuchs before looking at Puppy with a complicated expression. “I can't do that. It's not necessarily a good thing to become the emperor. Choose something else.”

Puppy glanced cautiously at the old eunuchs before falling into deep contemplation. He leaned close to Gao Zhijian's ear and whispered softly into the latter's ear.

Gao Zhijian nodded and agreed. Then, he looked at Zhao Wu and asked, “How about you?”

Zhao Wu leaned on his crutch and stared in the direction where Chun Xiaoman had left. After a while, he looked back at Gao Zhijian with a complex expression and shook his head. “I don't want anything.”

Gao Zhijian didn't insist and turned to Yang Xiaohai. “Do you have anything you want?”

Yang Xiaohai was a little nervous as he asked, “Senior Gao, can you really give me anything?”

“Yes, anything.”

“Then, can you help me find my parents?! Can you help me find them?!” Yang Xiaohai exclaimed in excitement.

Gao Zhijian hesitated briefly before beckoning an old eunuch over and asking him a few questions.

The old eunuch walked up to Yang Xiaohai and sized the latter up before asking in a delicate voice, “What are your eight characters of birth?”

“What’s that?”

“Your date and time of birth.”

“Oh, I see,” Yang Xiaohai’s face lit up with understanding, and then he shook his head, “I don’t know.”

The old eunuch’s relaxed face twitched slightly. He reached out his eagle’s claw-like hand and placed it on Yang Xiaohai’s figure.

“Come with us.”

Gao Zhijian consoled Yang Xiaohai with his gaze as the latter nervously followed the old eunuch.

While Yang Xiaohai was leaving the grand hall, Chun Xiaoman found Bai Lingmiao making porridge in the imperial kitchen.

“Miaomiao!” Chun Xiaoman exclaimed. She couldn’t hold back her tears as she pounced on Bai Lingmiao from behind and hugged her slender waist.

“Be careful, don’t spill the porridge!”

Bai Lingmiao placed the bowl of porridge next to the stove before turning around to hug Chun Xiaoman.

“Sister Xiaoman, why are you here? Don’t cry. I had something urgent to do, so I couldn’t come back.”

“I left a letter for Senior Li... I thought he’d tell you guys about it.”

Bai Lingmiao comforted Chun Xiaoman until she finally stopped crying.

“Next time, take me with you no matter where you go, okay?”

It's not safe for you to be with Senior Li all the time," Chun Xiaoman said.

"Don't say that, Sister Xiaoman. Senior Li's illness seems to be improving."

Chun Xiaoman shook her head vigorously and said, "No, you're so beautiful. What if something happens to you? This is final, all right?"

"And I've mastered the divine martial arts of the White Lotus Sect, so I've become even more powerful than before. I can definitely protect you!" Chun Xiaoman added.

Bai Lingmiao smiled and said, "I know."

"You know? How do you know?"

"Give me a moment. I have to go and feed Senior Li first, and then I'll tell you what happened afterward. This bird's nest porridge will lose its effectiveness once it's cold."

Bai Lingmiao let go of Chun Xiaoman and placed the bowl of porridge in a food box before walking out of the imperial kitchen.

"Then, I'll go with you... I want to see Senior Li, too."

"No, you can't. Really. It's inconvenient for Senior Li to meet others right now. Anyway, I'll be back soon; just wait for me here, Sister Xiaoman."

Chapter 586 - Gao Zhijian

Bai Lingmiao took the food box outside.

Chun Xiaoman sighed at the sight. She had no idea why Miaomiao loved Senior Li so much.

However, Chun Xiaoman soon recovered and returned to her cheerful self. As long as Miaomiao and Senior Li were fine, she'd be fine, too. She hoped that the two would live happily ever after.

Miaomiao was fine, Senior Li was still alive, and Gao Zhijian even became the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom. Everything had turned out to be fine. Chun Xiaoman felt like a stone weighing down on her chest had just been removed, allowing her to breathe properly, which cleared up her mind.

“Bird’s Nest Congee? I wonder what that tastes like?” Chun Xiaoman said to herself while staring at the congee in the pot. The next moment, she scooped some for herself and tasted it. “It tastes like nothing. Very bland, too.”

Just then, someone entered the kitchen. It was Gao Zhijian, and he was alone.

Chun Xiaoman became nervous when she saw Gao Zhijian walking toward her in his dragon robe. Gao Zhijian's dragon robe was so wide that it blocked the sunlight coming into the kitchen.

Chun Xiaoman took a moment to compose herself before tugging at his robes.

“Your robes suit you. What is it made of?”

“Gold and cloth.”

“You can wear gold?” Chun Xiaoman was intrigued.

“Do you want something like this, Xiaoman? I can give it to you.”

“No, thanks,” Chun Xiaoman said, shaking her head. “It must be heavy wearing so much gold.”

“X-X-Xiaoman.” Gao Zhijian stuttered as he stared at the girl with black hair all over her. Gao Zhijian's gaze became complicated. He had no idea when he started liking her, and he also had no idea why he liked someone with long hair all over their figure.

Regardless, it was a fact that he hadn't been able to forget her.

Gao Zhijian clenched his callused hands as his heart started beating wildly against his chest. Gao Zhijian opened his arms and hugged her.

“The eunuchs and the Imperial Preceptor have been telling me to choose an Empress so that I can give birth to a son. My first thought was you, but...” Gao Zhijian trailed off. Then, he started sobbing as he hugged her even tighter. “I can't choose you. Our children will eventually have to kill each other to decide the next emperor. I'm sure you will be devastated then, and I don't want you to feel that way because I like you! I don't want to make you feel any pain at all.”

Meanwhile, Chun Xiaoman struggled to get out of Gao Zhijian's embrace. “Why are you treating my words as thin air? Did I not tell you that I will not die even if I don't end up getting married? You've become the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom, but my mind hasn't changed! My words are final, and I will keep my word. You have to stop doing this, or I will have to stop being friends with you!” Chun Xiaoman exclaimed. Then, she stomped her way out of the kitchen.

Chun Xiaoman ran for quite a while before she stopped and leaned against a wall. Her expression turned solemn as she slid down the wall and placed her head between her knees.

After a while, she looked up with her bloodshot eyes. She took a deep breath to compose herself before running toward where Bai Lingmiao had disappeared.

Meanwhile, there were three people relaxing in a distant gazebo, but they found themselves unable to relax due to what they had discovered.

Zhao Wu looked at Puppy and asked, “Hey, did Xiaoman just turn down an offer to become the empress? Doesn't that mean that she likes me?”

“ Huh? ” Puppy's expression turned ugly as if he had just eaten a fly. “That's none of your business.”

“Why?”

Lu Xiucui chimed in just then, saying, “I think it's your business. Hurry up and get married to Xiaoman. I'll help you hold the horses once you're married.”

Zhao Wu's mouth fluttered, but no words came out of his mouth.

Just then, Gao Zhijian walked out of the kitchen. He stared at where Chun Xiaoman had disappeared before walking toward a distant gazebo.

“ Shh! Simpleton is coming over here! Quick! Pretend like you're doing something! We can't let him know that we've been following him!”

"What..." Gao Zhijian muttered upon seeing the three squatting down and looking at the same leaf on the ground. "...are you guys doing?"

“Aaah... Ahem. Your house is so big, so we wanted to look around, but we ended up getting lost.”

Gao Zhijian nodded. “Let me find... a eunuch to guide you. You can walk around anywhere in the palace... but there are some restricted areas, so please forgive me for not allowing you to go into such places.”

A eunuch floated down from above the gazebo's pillars, and he kneeled in front of Gao Zhijian. “Your Majesty, I'm available. I can guide them”

Clearly, the eunuch had heard the trio's words earlier.

“ Ah... Hahaha, then we would have to thank you for your help.” Puppy chuckled to cover his embarrassment. The three then followed the eunuch on a tour of the palace.

After just a few steps, Puppy took out some silver and shoved it into the eunuch’s hands, despite the latter’s reluctant look.

Left all alone, Gao Zhijian stared at the ground, cutting a sorry figure. He sat on the stairs of the gazebo and looked at the neat brick path before him.

Fifteen minutes later, Gao Zhijian’s mouth opened as he said into the air before him, “I will follow your suggestion... I will choose an Empress... to continue the lineage. Prepare the consort candidates.”

Gao Zhijian was the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom, and he needed children who would succeed him. The more children he had, the better it would be for the kingdom. At first, he had no intentions of willing anyone except for Chun Xiaoman, but he realized that his marriage affected not just himself but the entire Liang Kingdom as well.

“Understood. I heed your orders.” The Imperial Preceptor appeared out of nowhere and bowed to Gao Zhijian before leaving.

He had just turned around when he saw the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau walking toward them in red robes. The two merely nodded as they walked past each other.

“Your Majesty,” the Chief said, sitting down next to Gao Zhijian. Surprisingly, he was still taller than Gao Zhijian despite being in a sitting position.

“As the emperor, you must focus on the pressing affairs of the nation. The people of the Liang Kingdom barely survived the recent Natural Disasters. I’ve made a divination and found out that things are going to remain difficult for us next year. It’s time for you to get familiar with an emperor’s job.”

Gao Zhijian rubbed his face with his callused hands before standing up. “I understand.”

“Xuan Pin, am I really... cured? Is it true that Shai Zi... cannot control me anymore?”

His job as the emperor could wait. This was more important. The fact that a Shai Zi could control him whenever they wished was too scary for Gao Zhijian. He'd still tremble in fear whenever he remembered how the Shai Zi had taken over his body and had ordered the army to kill his allies.

The Chief didn't nod nor shake his head as he said, “I'm afraid we have to ask Li Huowang about that. He got rid of Shai Zi by himself. I actually don't know whether Shai Zi is dead or alive.”

Chapter 587 - Ji Zai

The emperor listened to what the Chief had to say as the two sat in the gazebo. "The Imperial Preceptor and I have been using our divination nonstop, but we still cannot ascertain whether Shai Zi is dead or alive."

Gao Zhijian walked slowly toward the palace while the Chief followed him from behind.

"Let me see what happened on that day," Gao Zhijian said.

The Chief nodded. He then extended a frail finger covered in dry skin and his own shadow. Moments later, he hurled it toward the sky.

The black shadow blotted out the skies. The Chief and Gao Zhijian soon found themselves on a chaotic battlefield.

Gao Zhijian saw Senior Li in the middle of the bloody battlefield. Li Huowang was facing Gao Zhijian, who was under Shai Zi's control.

Li Huowang's head was left with nothing but his mouth, but he was still alive and standing for some reason.

Gao Zhijian had a feeling that if Senior Li had a face, he'd look incredibly heroic.

Senior Li scratched at the empty space where his head was supposed to be before he started approaching the Dragon Vein.

Shai Zi wanted to run, but Senior Li was steadily closing the distance between them. His speed seemed irrelevant to the chase.

Senior Li would become even faster the faster Shai Zi moved, and the same was true vice versa.

Senior Li wasn't moving step by step, but the distance between him and Shai Zi was getting shorter in fixed intervals.

Soon, Senior Li reached the tail of the Dragon Vein. He grabbed the golden chains and climbed up. He was so slow in his climb that even an old man would look faster than him.

Despite that, Shai Zi could not shake Senior Li off, no matter how hard he struggled.

The past emperors extended their Dragon Claws and stabbed Li Huowang with their claws, but their figures abruptly froze like statues.

“Impossible! I’m the Dragon Vein! I’m real no matter where I go! You cannot control me!” Shai Zi roared, and his voice revealed his unwillingness to perish here.

Shai Zi was trying his best to attack Li Huowang, but the Dragon Vein had frozen up and could no longer move.

“I thought... the Dragon Vein... the luck of the Liang Kingdom... are immune to such techniques...” Gao Zhijian muttered.

Even the Chief had no idea what to say.

Soon, Senior Li reached the top of the Dragon Vein. He looked left and right before grabbing Gao Zhijian’s head.

Then, he easily twisted Gao Zhijian’s head off of his shoulders, but Shai Zi was still alive.

Shai Zi was trying to trick Li Huowang into thinking that he was dead.

However, Li Huowang seemed unaffected by the trick as he reached into Gao Zhijian’s brain to pull something out.

“There. Can you give me a closer look at that?” Gao Zhijian said.

The Chief obliged, and Li Huowang soon appeared in front of them.

However, Gao Zhijian was exasperated. Li Huowang had clearly reached into his head to take something out, but Li Huowang's hand was empty.

“Perhaps what he had pulled out at the time was so profound that my illusions cannot replicate it.”

Gao Zhijian pondered over it before asking, “Did you guys check... my head again? Was there really nothing in there?”

“Your Majesty, please rest assured. I swear with my life that there’s nothing in your head anymore. Shai Zi is no longer there. Moreover, we’ve woven a restriction on your dragon robes to make sure that something like that will never happen again. It’s a restriction created from the combined powers of me, the Imperial Preceptor, and Zheng Boqiao.”

However, Gao Zhijian didn’t feel great even after the Chief’s reassurance. His eyes were unwittingly transfixed on Li Huowang, who looked up at the sun and grinned.

The Dragon Vein collapsed to the ground.

“Junior Li, has the Great Qi been saved?” Zhuge Yuan asked.

Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan and said, “The Great Qi is saved.”

Zhuge Yuan’s face revealed a sense of liberation and relief before disappearing.

Just then, Bai Lingmiao, the Chief, the Imperial Preceptor, and the soldiers surrounded Li Huowang.

However, Gao Zhijian wasn’t sure whether they were there for the Dragon Vein or for Li Huowang.

“Senior Li, are you okay?” Bai Lingmiao asked, staring nervously at Li Huowang. Bai Lingmiao’s figure was split into two, but she was still more worried about Li Huowang rather than herself.

“I’m fine. My illness has just been cured, so don’t worry about me,” Li Huowang said curtly.

The next moment, radiant sunset-like light burst out of Li Huowang’s body.

The light flew upward and disappeared into the skies.

“What... is that? the thing that came out... of Senior Li.”

“I think that was the power of Doulao. I was right; he was being targeted by Doulao. Since Shai Zi had betrayed Yinyang Doulao, I wanted him to fight Shai Zi first so that I could make use of Doulao’s animosity toward Shai Zi, but to think that they’d make a move first.”

“Who is it?”

“Unspeakable. It’s a special Siming. They taught me my illusion techniques. You should know that a normal Siming cannot manifest in the world, all thanks to the Dragon Vein’s existence, but they are different. Even though they taught me my illusion techniques, they had never concerned themselves with my well-being or the well-being of others. Two hundred years ago, the Liang Kingdom found itself on the brink of annihilation, and I swore to sacrifice everything in exchange for their help, but they did not even look at me.”

Gao Zhijian was confused at the Chief’s words, and it was all because the answer he had heard was different from what the Dragon Vein had told him. “I thought... there are no more... Simings...”

“Did they tell you that? Listen to them, then. Since they said that the Simings don’t exist, then they don’t exist.”

Gao Zhijian decided not to pursue it any further as he changed the subject, saying, “Senior Li... should be feeling better by now... we can just... go and ask him... I might... understand it better if it’s coming from him.”

The Chief said nothing and followed Gao Zhijian toward where Li Huowang was located.

Li Huowang was nearby, and Gao Zhijian could actually visit him any time he wished.

They saw Bai Lingmiao exiting the room with a food box in hand.

When Bai Lingmiao saw the Chief standing next to Gao Zhijian, her eyes widened in shock as he asked, "What's happening? Why is there another one here?"

"Another one? What's wrong?!" Gao Zhijian exclaimed.

"The Chief of the Surveillance Bureau entered the room while I was feeding Senior Li some congee."

At the remark, the Chief made a seal with his three pairs of arms and charged at the heavily guarded door as fast as possible. He moved so quickly that he left a trail of afterimages.

However, the Chief heard Li Huowang talking to someone in the room. There really was someone else aside from Bai Lingmiao.

The Chief pushed the door open and saw Li Huowang staring at him with his lotus root head.

Shockingly, no one else was in the room.

"Who were you talking to?"

Li Huowang frowned and tried his best to remember before answering, "Ji Zai."

Chapter 588 - Talk

Ji Zai was the name that Zhuge Yuan had given Li Huowang as a cover for his true identity.

However, the name now belonged to the Siming controlling the Heavenly Dao of Bewilderment, which was Li Huowang's future.

At first, Li Huowang didn't know that it was the name of his future self, but the name felt familiar to him.

Li Huowang deduced that the person who had just disappeared like sand was either Ji Zai himself or a part of him.

Li Huowang wasn't sure if he truly had a conversation with his future self, who was a Siming in the distant future. He could only guess whether that was the case or not.

More importantly, Li Huowang had no idea what Ji Zai had told him before he left.

"I think he's called Ji Zai," Li Huowang said.

However, his answer confused even the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. Isn't Ji Zai his own fake name? Was he talking to himself?

While they were both feeling confused, Gao Zhijian and Bai Lingmiao finally arrived at the room. The two sighed in relief upon seeing that Li Huowang was fine.

They were worried about his safety upon realizing that the Chief whom Bai Lingmiao had seen was fake.

"Men! Send some troops and guard this room! Check the identity of anyone who approaches this room!" Gao Zhijian shouted.

Several eunuchs appeared out of nowhere and kneeled before him.

"You don't have to mobilize so many people just to do something like that. I'm fine. Let everyone do what they're supposed to do. You don't have to keep worrying about me." Li Huowang pulled the blanket back up and laid down on the bed.

"Senior Li, that Chief was fake!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed, walking toward Li Huowang with a food box in hand.

"I know." Li Huowang patted her hands lightly and said, "Don't worry. Even though I'm heavily injured, I can still fend for myself. Those daring enough to assassinate me might end up dying themselves."

Li Huowang was confident. After all, he was Ji Zai's Twisted One at the moment.

Gao Zhijian nodded in agreement. Li Huowang was strong enough to fight Shai Zi, so who could be his match?

"Senior Li... who... was that?" Gao Zhijian asked.

"It was a friend. Don't worry, it doesn't concern you," Li Huowang replied. Then, he sized up Gao Zhijian and nodded in approval. "Not bad. Gao Zhijian, that dragon robe looks great on you."

Li Huowang didn't bother explaining, as he didn't want the others to worry about him becoming his own Twisted One.

In addition, Li Huowang himself didn't know when he would become Ji Zai.

It could be a year, ten years, or perhaps he'd become Ji Zai once he was dead, but he didn't really care. He knew that something like this would happen way before he executed the plan to defeat Shai Zi.

Gao Zhijian scratched his head and looked at Senior Li. The latter still looked the same as always, but something was slightly different about him. Li Huowang's personality had become much more relaxed.

Xuan Pin said nothing.

Gao Zhijian glanced at the Chief and recalled why he had decided to visit Li Huowang. "Senior Li, is Shai Zi... really gone? Will he come back and... control me again?"

Li Huowang recalled the eighteen-sided dice that Yi Donglai had taken away.

"He's gone," Li Huowang said with a nod. "Don't worry. He will never return."

Gao Zhijian sighed in relief. He had faith in Senior Li, and since Senior Li had said so, Shai Zi would definitely never come back.

"Zhijian, prepare a carriage for me to return to Cowheart Village. My wounds are almost healed."

Gao Zhijian shook his head.

Li Huowang only had his mouth left, so there was no way his wounds were almost healed. "No. There are doctors here, and they can take better care of you. Your wounds are too serious. You need to rest here."

"It's okay. Why should I rest here? Do you really think that I'll die with this level of injury?" Li Huowang asked, standing up.

Gao Zhijian ran up and carefully shielded Li Huowang's lotus root head, seemingly afraid that Li Huowang would stumble to the floor and smash it open.

Li Huowang wanted to leave, but Bai Lingmiao dragged him back into the room.

"Senior Li, please stay here. I beg you. We can just go back once your wounds are fully healed. You're too injured to travel right now," Bai Lingmiao begged.

Li Huowang relented and said, "All right, but at least let me walk around. I need some fresh air."

Gao Zhijian was willing to let Senior Li do whatever he wanted to do as long as the latter wasn't risking his life doing it.

They talked for a bit before Gao Zhijian asked out of curiosity, "Senior Li, Senior Bai told me that your illness is finally cured. Is it true?"

“Yes, it’s cured.” Li Huowang nodded. “I never thought that it’d be cured just like that.”

Gao Zhijian was genuinely happy for Li Huowang.

Senior Li was a great person, but his illness was the worst among those from Zephyr Temple.

The fact that he was finally cured meant that he could finally live a normal life.

Moreover, Gao Zhijian was the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom, which meant he could fulfill any of Li Huowang's wishes.

“Zhijian, how does it feel being the emperor?” Li Huowang asked.

"Great..." Gao Zhijian smiled. "It feels great. I can eat a ton of good food, even food that I had never seen before. Once your wounds are healed and you can finally eat proper food again, I will let the chefs prepare some of those great dishes for you. Also... I'm going to have... many wives... a hundred wives."

"That many? You better not tell Puppy, or he'll die from jealousy."

"No, I have to tell him." Gao Zhijian grinned. "I have to brag my wives to him."

The air in the room mellowed out, and everyone chatted like they were back in Zephyr Temple.

In the end, Xuan Pin had to remind Gao Zhijian of his duties.

Gao Zhijian left the room promptly. He had too many things to learn as the new emperor, so he had no time to waste.

He had just walked out of the room when Xuan Pin said, "I can't see through him anymore. Your Majesty, please be careful of him."

Gao Zhijian looked at Xuan Pin with displeasure. "Why? He's Senior Li. He's not going to harm me."

"I'm not talking about that, Your Majesty. All I'm saying is that it's difficult to deduce the hearts of other people. You have to understand that Shai Zi had become the Dragon Vein, but he still managed to defeat him. In other words, he can definitely deal with you quite easily. Can you really sleep peacefully despite knowing that? Also, he has a relationship with the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect. Of course, I've already removed the White Lotus Sect from our bounty list, as they've assisted us greatly. However, you must ponder whether interacting with them is worth the risk.

"Of course, the decision is still up to you. You are the emperor, after all. I'm just the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. This is out of my jurisdiction, but I still felt obligated to warn you for the sake of the Liang Kingdom."

Gao Zhijian's face fell as he started walking away.

"The job of the emperor is hard, but it can be easy. If you have something you don't understand, just go ahead and ask the Dragon Vein. They can teach you everything—from how to control the officials, how to handle national affairs, to handling the sects and factions scattered throughout the palace."

Gao Zhijian remained silent as he listened to Xuan Pin's words.

Chapter 589 - Mental Hospital

Li Huowang was sitting in a wheelchair with his mother pushing him out of the room. His thin arms—the size of chicken legs—were cuffed to the wheelchair.

Despite his condition, Li Huowang was surprised that they didn't make him wear a straitjacket. It seemed that they were convinced that he was cured.

Li Huowang glanced at the four guards around him and said, “I’m just going out for some fresh air. Do I really need this many guards?”

“It’s fine; let them be. They’re here under the orders of the higher-ups. Little Liu’s job is already hard, so don’t make it harder for him.

Li Huowang smiled at his mother’s words. Clearly, his mother was doing well here. Otherwise, she wouldn't have given the people here any nicknames.

“Huowang, it’s raining outside, so let’s just stay inside. We can still stroll inside the hospital.”

“All right.”

With that, Li Huowang was pushed around the hospital. After several turns, Li Huowang found himself in a larger room.

A group of people wearing the same blue-and-white hospital gown were staring at the television on the wall.

Li Huowang wasn't a doctor, but he was quite knowledgeable about mental illness, as he himself had been diagnosed with a mental illness.

He swept his gaze across the other patients and deduced their illness.

Those with a penchant for talking nonsense, or those lucid but had a penchant for talking nonstop were a part of the so-called mental breakdown group. The majority of the patients here had no one to take care of them at home and were sent to the hospital by their relatives, while a big chunk of the rest were those who were caught having an episode on the streets.

Li Huowang deduced that those withdrawn and silent were most likely diagnosed with depression.

Those who were easily excited and incredibly anxious most likely had hypomania, while those with glazed eyes had probably just taken their medicine.

Li Huowang looked around and noticed that some were close to a complete recovery. He judged that they could have anorexia, bulimia, or perhaps they were just pretending that they were about to recover.

Unfortunately, Li Huowang wouldn't know unless he asked them. Perhaps some of them were like him and had been locked up against their will.

However, those allowed to watch television were patients with milder symptoms.

There were many types of mental disorders out there—too many for Li Huowang to know, as he was just a layman.

Just then, Li Huowang saw the patients turning around at the same time to stare at him. They looked like they were having more fun staring at his face than staring at the television.

Li Huowang was confused. "Why are they looking at me?"

A guard, nicknamed Little Liu, answered, "Li Huowang, you're famous here. It's not just them. Your name has spread throughout the fifteen sections of the prison."

"I'm that famous?"

"Yes, but your fame is actually not going up anymore."

However, when news about your daring rescue went viral, your name went on the ‘most searched term’ on the Internet for several days. Why do you think the higher-ups are paying so much attention to you?”

Li Huowang finally had a faint understanding of what kind of status he had in the people's hearts.

Then, he saw the patients distancing themselves from him, staying at least ten meters away from him.

“Mom, let’s stop here. I want to watch TV. I haven’t watched TV in a long time.” Li Huowang looked at the afternoon news. It was boring, but Li Huowang found the experience to be quite refreshing.

“Good afternoon, everyone! Today is the twenty-third day of the last month of the Lunar Calendar. Only seven more days to the new year! Today is the day to pray to the Stove God[\[1\]](#), while tomorrow is a good day to clean up the house!”

“Is it going to be the new year soon?” Li Huowang felt like he had just traveled back in time. He didn't expect that so much time had already passed.

“Yes, and you'd have lived another year by then. What do you want to eat? I'll go and make anything for you. Ah, I've heard that there's a popular game coming out soon. I'll give you some money so you can buy that game once you are discharged.”

“Mom, I'm not a kid anymore.”

“You're only eighteen. You're an adult according to the law, but you're barely a young man.

Just like that, Li Huowang spent quite a lot of time amidst his mother's nagging and the cheery tune of the news.

Li Huowang loved this peace and quiet, and he wanted it to last until he died of old age.

Beneath this peace and quiet, Li Huowang felt like everything he had experienced so far was all just a bad dream.

"Mom, where is Doctor Yi? Haven't seen him in a while."

"I heard that he no longer has time to come to work anymore. He's busy writing a thesis."

"He's a doctor. Why is he writing a thesis?"

"I don't know anything about that. But Sister Ma, who is working in the kitchen, told me that a media outlet has interviewed him. I think he's going to appear on TV."

"Is that so? Then I have to congratulate him."

"Yes. Doctor Yi is a really responsible man. I heard that he's still single, even though he's already thirty years old. How nervous do you think his mother is right now? I'll definitely be nervous if you're still single despite being so old."

Li Huowang felt like scratching his head out of awkwardness. Are middle-aged aunties these days so well informed? How did she even know that Doctor Yi is single?

"Sister Sun, the times have changed. It's normal for people to remain single even in their thirties," one of the prison guards said.

The guards relaxed a lot upon realizing that Li Huowang's condition was improving. They had let their guard down so much to the point that they started joking around Sun Xiaoqin.

"Ah, I think you guys just want to play around. There's an advantage to marrying earlier. If you get married and have children earlier, your parents can help you raise those children. In other words, your wife will have an easier time recovering after birth."

"It's not that we don't want to get married, but we were already twenty-something when we graduated. We have neither savings, cars, nor houses. Who'd want to marry us? We also work in the prison for half a month at a time. How can we even find a girlfriend when we're spending so much time here? In fact, most of the girls we were courting ran away once they discovered that they could only see us for six months throughout an entire year."

"But you guys have a stable job! There's no way you can't find a wife. If you think that your work here is what's hampering your search for a wife, then what about those working as gig workers? You might as well say that they'll be forever alone.”

Upon hearing that, another guard chimed in, but Sun Xiaoqin didn't retreat even against two guards. In fact, she talked with even more vigor.

Li Huowang felt his scalp going numb as he watched them argue with each other, and he couldn't help but look away; his gaze landed on the corridor to his left.

1. The Stove God is a minor deity that reports to the Heavenly Palace about the conduct of a family throughout the year. Praying to it involves bribing it with sweets so that it will report only good news to the Heavenly Palace and in turn the Heavenly Palace would reward the family for their good conduct. Good conduct involves not wasting food, cleaning up promptly, not overeating, sharing their food with their neighbors and the less fortunate, etc 🙏

Chapter 590 - Trouble

Li Huowang had been talking peacefully while basking in the sunlight amidst the beautiful garden when he suddenly looked up.

The cheerful atmosphere vanished in an instant.

Li Sui noticed Li Huowang's strange behavior and asked, "Father[1], what's wrong?"

Bai Lingmiao carefully asked, "Senior Li, is everything okay?"

They were inside one of the palace's gardens. It was winter solstice, but the eunuchs responsible for taking care of the garden used a secret technique to ensure that the flowers would remain blooming.

The eunuchs and consorts trembled and knelt down from afar upon seeing Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's entourage had been enjoying the beautiful scenery, but Li Huowang's abrupt change in demeanor and behavior made everyone feel nervous.

Li Huowang looked down and replied, "Nothing. I just think that the weather is great today."

Everyone sighed in relief, especially Puppy. He really thought that something was about to go wrong. "Senior Li, you scared us. We thought your illness had returned."

"I'm already cured. Wait, I heard that the Lu family followed you to Shangjing. Is that true?" Li Huowang asked, changing the subject.

"Yes. Simpleton even gifted them a theater. Lu Zhuangyuan was so happy that his nose blew bubbles of snot."

At first, Bai Lingmiao thought that the others would become uncomfortable staring at Li Huowang's head made out of lotus roots, but she was mistaken.

Surprisingly, everyone accepted it quickly.

It wasn't really that surprising to them, who had seen Li Huowang suffering severe injuries during their travels. Unfortunately, the eunuchs and consorts were different, and they couldn't quite get used to it.

"Is that so? That's great news. The dream that he had been working so hard for half of his life has finally been fulfilled," Li Huowang said. He extended his hand toward Li Sui and patted her head.

Several tentacles plucked the nearby flowers, placing them on Li Huowang's head.

However, Li Huowang took them away from his head and placed them on Li Sui's head instead.

Since Li Huowang was fine, the innocent Li Sui happily sat on the former's lap without thinking too much about the bizarre situation.

"His theater is so large! I'm sure the Lu family's pink show will become popular with such a large theater. We have to go and support them!"

"Are they still singing that? What a waste of a great theater."

"Huh? What's wrong with the pink show? Who doesn't like it?"

The group laughed and chatted as they walked around the garden. They discovered many things during their stroll, including the fact that the palace had a special greenhouse that they were using to grow vegetables, even during winter.

Everyone was thrilled, and they plucked some vegetables for themselves. They were planning on using the vegetables to make dumpling fillings for the upcoming New Year's Eve.

Fresh vegetables were rare during winter, and the vegetables belonged to Gao Zhijian, so they were more than happy to pluck them. They all believed that what belonged to Gao Zhijian belonged to them as well.

After spending some more time in the garden, everyone to their quarters with smiles tugging at their lips.

Li Huowang needed more rest, so they didn't want to disturb him. They followed him back to his residence before calling it a day.

Once everyone had walked out of the residence, Bai Lingmiao pushed Li Huowang into his bedroom.

"Senior Li, are you really fine?" Bai Lingmiao was technically blind, but the relic that she had consumed allowed her to see clearly.

Earlier, Li Huowang had looked up not because of the weather but because of something else.

"Don't worry. It's a small issue."

Just as they were about to enter the bedroom, Li Huowang raised his hand and stopped her. "Miaomiao, can you call Chief Xuan Pin for me? I need to discuss something with him."

Bai Lingmiao was surprised, but she still nodded and said, "All right, I will."

When she left, she pulled Li Sui from Li Huowang's body. But she was reluctant because she missed Li Huowang.

"Mother, let me stay with Father. I haven't seen him for so long," Li Sui begged. She looked like a pretty young woman right now, but she was still acting like a child.

"No. Your father's head is very fragile. What are we going to do if you end up breaking it by accident? You have to come with me outside!" Bai Lingmiao replied sternly, frightening Li Sui.

In the end, she relented and followed Bai Lingmiao out while staring at Bai Lingmiao.

The room became incredibly quiet upon Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui's departure.

Li Huowang closed his eyes amidst the silence. Eventually, his right hand started tapping on the fine leather armrest, while his left hand started tapping on his wheelchair made out of bamboo strips.

Amidst the silence and darkness, the smell of disinfectant and flowers seemed to have been amplified.

“Li Huowang? You were looking for me?”

Li Huowang opened his eyes and saw Xuan Pin standing in front of him.

Xuan Pin's large frame and big red robes occupied Li Huowang's entire field of view.

Li Huowang stared deeply at Xuan Pin before asking, “Are there ropes that are still untied?”

“Who told you that?” Xuan Pin asked, taken aback by the revelation that Li Huowang knew about the ropes.

“No one. I sensed it myself,” Li Huowang asked. He could remember someone's piercing gaze on him from the hospital's corridor.

Xuan Pin nodded. “Yes, but the Surveillance Bureau is going to deal with it. It's just a small matter, so don't worry about it and focus on recovering.”

“What's going on?” Li Huowang asked once again. Anything related to the Dragon Vein was definitely not a small matter.

Xuan Pin remained silent and turned around to leave instead of answering Li Huowang's question.

“You don't trust me?” Li Huowang asked.

Xuan Pin came to a halt.

“I helped you deal with Shai Zi, and you still don't trust me?” Li Huowang added.

“If you were in my shoes, would you trust yourself?”

Li Huowang said nothing. Their common enemy was dead, but their relationship seemed like it would never progress to the point that they could fully trust each other.

“Come find me anytime whenever you need help. I'm staying in the Liang Kingdom, so I definitely don't want it to fall.”

Xuan Pin's shadow beneath the robes stared deeply at Li Huowang.

“That's what you think, but what about the thoughts of the entity behind you? You're not yourself these days, too. Clearly, the plans of a Siming will never align with the plans of mortals. We're the Surveillance Bureau, and we intend to observe the Heavens at all cost.”

Xuan Pin's large figure disappeared into thin air, and the room became quiet once again.

Li Huowang became immersed in his own thoughts. Xuan Pin trusted him, but he had no trust in Li Huowang's future self.

Since Xuan Pin had no trust in him, there was no reason for him to trust the former.

Unfortunately, Xuan Pin was unwilling to talk about it, so he had no choice but to deal with it himself.

After all, Li Huowang had never been someone who'd merely sit down upon realizing that trouble was knocking on his door.

1. We've decided to use Father and Mother for this world, while Mom and Dad on the other side 🤔

Chapter 591 - Appear

Two days later, Li Huowang finally opened his eyes once again. Sun Xiaoqin wanted to wheel him into the bathroom, but he refused and washed himself.

He was extremely weak, but he tried his best and ended up spending half a day just washing himself.

Sun Xiaoqin was waiting for him when he got out of the bathroom.

Li Huowang's hands were quivering as he grabbed the chopsticks to eat the soup dumplings that Sun Xiaoqin had made for him.

“Eat more. You have to eat more if you want to grow stronger. Anyway, what do you think about going for physiotherapy after all this? Does that sound good to you?”

“Mmhm.” Li Huowang nodded with his cheeks stuffed with soup dumplings. He was too weak; he needed to recover to the extent that he could walk by himself as soon as possible.

If he were to face off against a Strayed One's version of himself, he'd probably die with just a flick of a finger.

After breakfast, Li Huowang went for physiotherapy. He grabbed the rail firmly and exhausted himself just to move a tiny bit.

It was a feat easily achievable by ordinary people, but it was exceedingly difficult for Li Huowang. Soon, he started sweating bullets, and he felt abnormally sore.

Thankfully, he had long gotten used to such pain, so the thought of giving up never popped up in his mind.

After several sessions, Li Huowang laid down on his bed while breathing in ragged pants.

His limbs were twitching; this was a sign that he was recovering.

Sun Xiaoqin massaged his sore muscles to prevent the buildup of lactic acid. Otherwise, his muscles would become even more sore tomorrow.

Sun Xiaoqin had no issues massaging Li Huowang, as she had been doing so every day to ensure that Li Huowang's muscles wouldn't waste away at a fast rate.

“Don’t give up, son! We’ll work together for your treatment. Once you can be discharged, we’ll transfer you to another hospital. To be honest, this place feels more like a prison than a hospital.”

“Why won't we go back home? I still have to go to another hospital?” Li Huowang asked with a frown.

“We can’t go home so soon. Don’t worry. Once you're completely cured... I mean, once the doctors are sure that you're cured, then you can go home.”

“ Hohoho~ ” Sun Xiaoqin thought of it otherwise. Her son's treatment was far more important to her than anything.

She was happy, as she could finally see the light at the end of the tunnel. She no longer had to grasp at straws, and she was no longer terrified by the idea that her son would remain ill for the rest of his life.

Li Huowang's treatment was the reason Sun Xiaoqin had been extremely frugal all this while. She saved as much money as she could for her son's treatment and for her son himself, afraid that no one would take care of his son once she and her husband were no longer of this world. By then, Li Huowang would surely become homeless and would be forced to scavenge for food among garbage. He could also end up dying from hypothermia during the bitter cold of the winter months.

Fortunately, her son's prognosis was great. She no longer had to be that frugal, but she was still saving quite a bit of money for his wedding.

Girls are pretty materialistic these days. I should save more money just in case. Thankfully, he's still young, so there's still plenty of time.

"Mom, you're massaging my neck," Li Huowang said.

Sun Xiaoqin snapped back to reality and let go of Li Huowang's neck. She then patted his cheeks gently and said, "Be good and rest for now. I'll go and get some water to wipe away your sweat."

And just like that, days passed by as Li Huowang continued with his physiotherapy. He still looked emaciated, but he no longer needed anyone's help to walk. He could finally carry a bowl with one hand as well.

Li Huowang's actions were unremarkable these days, so everyone dropped their guard around him.

At first, Li Huowang had four guards around him, but it dropped to three after a few days until only two guards were stationed around him.

The hospital had many people to handle, and they couldn't afford to waste manpower just to keep tabs on Li Huowang.

One afternoon, Li Huowang was sitting on a bench watching television with two guards standing behind him.

Of course, his hands were still cuffed.

The other patients were still avoiding him, and no one dared to sit near him.

Li Huowang couldn't care less; he had no intentions of becoming friends with them. He once approached one of the patients, but the patient was reduced to tears in fear.

Li Huowang stared at the romance drama, and he felt second-hand embarrassment from the absurd plot. "What kind of show is this? Do they have nothing else to do? Can love even earn them money?"

"I think you should watch some more drama, you brat," Little

Liu said. "You can learn techniques from them—techniques on wooing a girl."

Li Huowang was not a criminal, so there was no reason for them to be alert all the time. Sun Xiaoqin also gave them food from time to time, so the guards had a fairly amicable relationship with Li Huowang.

"You need to learn those from dramas? No wonder you haven't been able to find a girlfriend. Anyway, do you have a phone? Let me borrow it. I feel like playing games."

"Yeah, I have a phone—in my dreams! Management doesn't even let us carry a keypad phone," Little Liu said, staring at the TV.

Li Huowang sighed and stood up before walking to the left corridor.

"Where are you going?" asked Little Liu as he stood up immediately, along with the other guard.

"Where else? I'm going to the toilet."

"We'll go with you."

The two guards escorted Li Huowang to the toilet.

This wasn't Li Huowang's first time in the corridor's toilet. The guards stood outside while Li Huowang relieved himself slowly as if he was waiting for something.

"Li Huowang, I think there's something wrong with your kidneys. Why else would you have to use the toilet for so long and every day at that?"

"You should worry about yourself. For your information, I have a girlfriend."

"Fuck off."

Li Huowang washed his hands and saw an old man carrying a trash bag entering the toilet. Li Huowang looked up at the mirror and saw that the old man was wearing a cap and a mask.

Li Huowang turned around and was about to leave when he was struck by that bizarre sensation once again. His figure tensed up as he stared at the reflection of the old man cleaning the toilet.

Sensing his gaze, the old man looked up and saw Li Huowang's eyes through the mirror, but he quickly lowered his head.

It was brief, but Li Huowang recognized the old man through the latter's gaze. The old man was Wang Wei!

"Guys, I need some more time. I've got to dump."

"Hurry up. Do you have any tissues?" Little Liu asked. He didn't seem to have sensed anything wrong, and it was all because Li Huowang's tone of voice didn't sound off at all.

Moreover, Doctor Yi had told them that Li Huowang's episodes would always start with ramblings, so it wasn't that difficult to know that Li Huowang was in the middle of an episode.

Li Huowang stared deeply at the door before walking slowly toward Wang Wei.

"What are you doing here?" Li Huowang asked.

Wang Wei was his previous doctor, and he could still remember the fact that Wang Wei had lost his mind for some reason.

Wang Wei's right hand reached out and grabbed Li Huowang's wrist. His voice was low, but the trembling in his voice spoke volumes of his tumultuous emotions. "I know! That side is real! I know it's real!"

Wang Wei's pupils were quivering violently, and he looked like a patient having a manic episode.

Chapter 592 - Wang Wei

Li Huowang was surprised by Wang Wei's statement, and he was even more surprised by Wang Wei's appearance. I think he really went crazy.

He had no idea what happened to Wang Wei for him to change so much in such a short period of time.

Li Huowang looked at the door and saw that the guards were still outside, so he whispered, "Wang Wei, my illness has been cured. The other side is fake. I merely imagined it. We're done here. Don't come and look for me again, or else!"

Li Huowang shook Wang Wei off and turned around to leave, but he didn't expect Wang Wei to pester him.

"I have video evidence of you producing gold out of nowhere! Do you have any idea what's going to happen to you once I post it on the Internet?!" Wang Wei said.

Li Huowang came to a halt. He turned around and glared at Wang Wei.

He walked up to Wang Wei and whispered into the latter's ears, "You better think before you speak. I'm still a patient here, and if a mentally ill person commits a crime, it is not considered a crime!"

Li Huowang then snarled, revealing his white teeth.

Wang Wei shivered, feeling like he was talking to a beast rather than to a man. Li Huowang was really going to kill him!

However, his excitement was still higher than his fear; he pretended to be calm as he replied, "I don't believe you. You can't kill me because you're not ill! You only have special powers!"

Wang Wei then retreated after saying that, afraid that Li Huowang would bite off his head. "I'm not here to threaten you! I'm here to work with you earnestly!"

“You've lost your mind!” Li Huowang roared. Footsteps echoed from outside just then.

“We have to stop talking! We'll talk again once we get another chance!”

“Little Li?” Little Liu asked as he entered the toilet with the other guard. They saw Li Huowang washing his hands, and an old man was mopping the floor.

“Why are you guys in such a hurry? I'm handcuffed, so I can't move fast.” Li Huowang shook the water off of his hand and left without looking at Wang Wei.

The guards looked at the old man in confusion before following Li Huowang out of the toilet.

In the next few days, Li Huowang never visited that specific toilet and Wang Wei didn't visit him at all. It seemed like nothing had happened between them.

However, Li Huowang knew that it wasn't over yet.

Wang Wei would definitely come and visit him, and he had to be prepared for that.

Several days later, a festive atmosphere enveloped the hospital, and the patients were smiling more often.

Soon, it would be the New Year, and the hospital's food had become better than usual.

Li Huowang even heard the guards talking about how the other hospitals would even set up stages, allowing patients to perform and showcase their talents.

Unfortunately, the White Tower Hospital had no patients capable of performing, so they decided to just make some dumplings to eat during New Year's Eve as well as other traditional activities.

Finally, it was New Year's Eve. Sun Xiaoqin was giggling in joy as she wrapped dumplings with Li Huowang. She laughed at Li Huowang's messy dumplings.

“Wrap them faster, so we can go watch the shows that are only aired during New Year's Eve.”

“Do we really need to make so many dumplings?” Li Huowang asked, shaking his handcuffed hands.

“Of course! We can't just make it for ourselves. We need to share them with the other patients. They've been leading a hard life all this time.”

Soon, they were done wrapping the dumplings, and Sun Xiaoqin took them to the kitchen. There were knives in the kitchen so someone like Li Huowang was banned from even getting close to it.

Little Liu led him to the common area to watch television. Perhaps it was because of the holiday, but Li Huowang only had one guard around him.

“Do you still need to work overtime despite it being a holiday today? You sure have it rough,” Li Huowang said, sitting down on the bench.

Little Liu was unhappy as well. He fished out a piece of candy from his pocket and ate it before replying, “ Sigh. What can I say? I'm just a paid prisoner at this point. I don't feel like working here anymore. Why was I so stupid to take up this job?”

“Hey, look at the bright side. Even though you can't go home during the New Year's Eve, you still have overtime pay. Most people don't even get paid despite working overtime.”

Soon, it was eight o'clock, and the show that Sun Xiaoqin had been waiting for today finally started.

Sun Xiaoqin also served the dumplings.

A group of patients and guards ate dumplings while complaining about the show. The festive air around the hospital seemed to reach its peak, making everyone feel like they were truly about to welcome another year.

Just then, the bizarre sensation came back. Li Huowang said nothing and stood up. He told Little Liu that the show was boring and that he wanted to go to sleep.

Everyone was in the common area, so the wards were quiet, even the corridors were desolate.

Li Huowang glanced at the red light coming from the surveillance camera. Moments later, it disappeared, and the door to his room swung open.

"You're here?" Li Huowang wasn't surprised to see Wang Wei here.

Li Huowang saw Wang Wei, and he was wearing a blue-and-white striped hospital gown as a disguise.

"You're really good at this. To think that you can infiltrate this place so easily," Li Huowang said. He knew that he had to deal with this matter tonight.

Wang Wei merely threw a stack of paper onto Li Huowang's bed. "It's Yi Donglai's thesis. I know what you've encountered over there."

Li Huowang gave the documents a quick read and saw that the majority of what he had said to Yi Donglai was written on them.

While Li Huowang was busy reading the documents, Wang Wei walked up to him with an agitated look. "Since you can bring some gold from there to this side, you can also do the same for lifespan pills! I need you to bring over a pill for me right now!"

Li Huowang stared deeply at Wang Wei before saying, "While you were still my doctor, I ended up getting abducted by a few men. They thought I could produce gold out of thin air, too. Did you tell them about me?"

Li Huowang could still remember how he was abducted by a strange group of people, which ended up in him becoming a vagrant living underneath a bridge.

Li Huowang realized that those men couldn't have abducted him so easily without an insider's help, and he suspected Wang Wei of being that insider.

Chapter 593 - Self Defense

Wang Wei was silent, but it was an answer in Li Huowang's eyes.

“You used them to test me, right?” Li Huowang asked.

Wang Wei took a deep breath, and his expression became serious as he said, “Little Li, I was your doctor, so I'm familiar with you. I have a method that will allow you to make full use of your power! I can let you live like a king on both sides!”

Li Huowang shook his head and threw the thesis onto the bed. “I'm sorry, but no. I can't do it.”

“Are you scared that I might take advantage of you? You're the one who gets to decide what to take from the other side! I can't force you. Bring me a lifespan pill from there, and we'll continue talking”

Li Huowang shook his head once more and explained, “No, I'm saying that I've been cured, so I will never have those illusions again.”

“What did you say?” Wang Wei asked blankly when someone tackled him and pinned him to the ground. Wang Wei's hands were cuffed in the blink of an eye, and then he was forced to stand up. It was only then that he saw several scowling guards standing before him, along with a man wearing a white hospital robe. He recognized the latter, as he was none other than Li Huowang's current doctor, Yi Donglai.

“Doctor Wang, you're sick. You need treatment,” Li Huowang said calmly.

Li Huowang had told Yi Donglai about his meeting with Wang Wei. Since Wang Wei had made use of him, why couldn't he do the same? There was no reason not to capture Wang Wei, as the latter could kick up a fuss, which would delay Li Huowang's discharge from the hospital.

Wang Wei struggled against the guards holding him down as he glared at Li Huowang. "It's useless even if you lock me up! I'm just a pawn! Your potential is too big, and it cannot be kept a secret!"

The guards dragged Wang Wei outside, leaving Li Huowang and Yi Donglai alone in the room.

"Don't worry; his illness is quite severe, so he's not going to be able to bother you for a while."

"I'm worried about something else."

"Is it your illness? Don't worry; you've stabilized. Someone else has brought it up to you, but you did not relapse."

"Is that so? Do you really think that I'm fine? How would you explain Bei Feng's words, then? Why do I feel that you've instigated it?" Li Huowang asked Ji Zai while holding his head made out of lotus root.

Ji Zai was quiet for a while before responding, "It's because something happened, and we need your help."

"Help? How may I help you? Why are you acting as if I were your Twisted One?" Li Huowang asked.

"There's no reason to differentiate between ourselves. I am you, and you are me. We have the same Heavenly Dao."

Li Huowang rubbed his temples; flesh had started growing on his lotus root head.

"The denouement has come. Can't I even live in peace?"

"You chose this, and my choice is your choice, too, so you should not complain."

"Fine," Li Huowang said. He sighed in exasperation before asking, "Tell me what to do."

"The Sitting Oblivion Dao has been annihilated, so this is our golden opportunity. I need your help snatching away Yinyang Doulao's Heavenly Dao of Truth and Falsehoods."

Li Huowang was outraged. He found the suggestion so absurd that he almost laughed. “You need my help doing that? Pfft! I’m just an ordinary person. How can I snatch those away? How can I help you deal with a Siming with two Heavenly Daos? Also, aren’t you responsible for the Heavenly Dao of Bewilderment? Are your hands not full just taking care of your own Heavenly Dao? Why do you need more Heavenly Daos to the extent that you’ve actually considered robbing a Siming for it? I’m tired... I’m really tired. Can’t I rest for a few years?”

Ji Zai replied, “I’m not the one seeking trouble here; I am simply trying to protect myself. Don’t forget that helping me equals helping yourself. If anything were to happen to me, what had happened would change.”

“Protect?” Li Huowang was shocked. He stared at Ji Zai, and asked nervously, “Did something happen at Baiyu Capital? No, even if something had happened, how could that event be significant enough to harm you—a Siming?”

“You’ll know the answer if you think about the reason why the Surveillance Bureau wanted the Sacred Mountain Ghost Eye. You should also think about why Shai Zi even came up with such a complicated plan to obtain the Dragon Vein. Something major is happening, and they can feel it. How about you? Don’t tell me that you don’t feel anything.”

Li Huowang was confused, and he sat down silently, pondering everything that had happened to him. He had the feeling that something major was going down, but he thought that it was none of his business.

He thought that even if the heavens ended up collapsing, someone would be there to hold it up.

However, Li Huowang couldn’t have imagined that his future self would be the figure who’d end up protecting everyone.

“Is it God Yu’er?” Li Huowang asked, recalling the ruined Qi

Kingdom and Qiu Chibao's illusion, whose head was covered with a white cloth.

It was all God Yu'er's fault, along with the Sun-Devouring Heavenly Dog in the Qi Kingdom, which had devoured half of the sun.

"If it were just God Yu'er, it would be easy to handle," Ji Zai said, and his words made Li Huowang feel afraid of what was to come.

"Who could it be other than God Yu'er? Who are they, where did they come from, and what do they want?"

"I can't tell you that, as they'll immediately learn of your existence the moment you learn of their existence. In addition, even your future self did not tell your present self."

Li Huowang was confused; he had no idea what Ji Zai was talking about.

"You want me to help you snatch Yinyang Doulao's Heavenly Daos, but you haven't told me how to do that. What do I need to do?"

"You can probably do it through Bei Feng. Find Bei Feng and the Doulao's Twisted Dao. Kill them and leave the rest to me," said "Xuan Pin." Moments later, his figure started to crumble like sand.

"What?! You could have told me that earlier! The Surveillance Bureau has just captured Bei Feng! They are never going to let me make contact with Bei Feng!"

Ji Zai ignored Li Huowang and simply disappeared into nothingness.

Frustrated, Li Huowang sprawled out on the bed. He closed his eyes and tried to sleep. He didn't want to do anything, but he understood that he had to do it.

It was going to affect his future self and the future of the Liang Kingdom.

Regardless of what was to come, becoming even stronger would not hurt him at all.

Li Huowang knew that he could end up failing to save everyone, but he wanted to save his loved ones, at the very least.

“Ji Zai can’t be trusted. I need to think of a way myself...” Li Huowang muttered to himself.

Almost no one knew what happened on this fateful night, as everyone was in the common area for New Year's Eve. In other words, they had no idea what had transpired in the ward.

The higher-ups in the hospital were the only ones aware of what had transpired, and they ended up removing Li Huowang's restraints.

Li Huowang could move freely now!

Sun Xiaoqin was happy but for a different reason.

Chapter 594 - Transfer

Li Huowang continued with his physical therapy, and Sun Xiaoqin cooked a variety of meals to fill Li Huowang's emaciated body with nutrients.

Li Huowang built more and more muscles as time ticked by, and his recovery rate could actually be considered pretty fast.

He no longer looked like a skeleton beneath his hospital gown, and his arms were slowly recovering their strength.

While Li Huowang was happily eating his tangyuan[1] on his bed, an unexpected visitor arrived.

The bald head of the visitor reminded Li Huowang of a certain someone—a certain prison warden.

“Madam Sun, your son’s condition has stabilized, and he is now eligible for transfer to another hospital. Why don’t you send him to a private hospital that is capable of treating him better? He'd be able to live a more comfortable life in a private hospital. Our facilities here are quite old, after all.”

Sun Xiaoqin stared at Li Huowang, who was busy eating his tangyuan. “Let me call my husband and discuss it with him.”

Sun Xiaoqin walked to the corner of the room and fished out her phone to call her husband and discuss the matter with him. After a while, Sun Xiaoqin returned to Li Huowang's bedside and said, “All right, we will do as you say.”

This was a hospital, but it was more like a government-funded prison for vagrants with mental illnesses.

Li Huowang was already cured, so there was no reason for him to stay in such a depressing place.

The prison warden grinned at Sun Xiaoqin's remark; Li Huowang was finally leaving. He could still remember how he almost died from a heart attack when he saw Li Huowang climbing up an electric fence. If Li Huowang had ended up dying back then, the prison warden's future would have been ruined. Actually, he hadn't been able to sleep or eat well these days; he was so scared that something would go wrong with Li Huowang and that the public would blame him for it.

“Madam Sun, I'm sure you know that we've never mistreated your son, right? Once you have any free time, can you say something nice to the reporters when they come and interview you?”

“Don't worry about that. I'm going to praise this place with my entire life! Your doctors are miracle workers capable of healing any mental disorder!”

“Erm... you don't have to do that. Just tell them the truth. Anyway, I'll leave you alone now, Madam Sun. I'll go ahead and do some paperwork,” the prison warden said and left.

Sun Xiaoqin turned to Li Huowang and said, “Eat slowly, my son. You'll be transferred soon, and it's good news! I'll go and have some brocade banners made for Doctor Yi.”

“We're leaving?” Li Huowang asked, but he was not surprised at all. He was no longer ill, so it was time for him to leave.

Everything went swimmingly. Li Huowang had just finished his meal when they told him that he could finally leave. In fact, the prison was even more excited to let Li Huowang leave compared to Li Huowang himself.

Li Huowang also didn't expect that his transfer to another hospital would be so grand.

The patients of the hospital gathered to send him away, while those who couldn't attend the event peeked out of their windows to stare at Li Huowang's departing figure. Even the guards at the sentry tower were staring at him.

Prison Guard Liu was right. Li Huowang was indeed famous here. Some of the hospital's higher-ups had gathered to send Li Huowang off as well. They were grinning from ear to ear, and it made Li Huowang think that perhaps they had won the lottery. Just as Li Huowang was about to walk past Yi Donglai, the latter stopped him and said, "I said you're stable, but you're not completely stable yet. I'm sorry. I wanted to let you stay here a bit longer so I could observe you more, but they refused my suggestion.

"They wanted you to leave as soon as possible to ensure that you're not going to cause another issue here, but don't worry, I will be detailed in my report regarding your case. The doctor taking over my job as your doctor is my junior, so don't worry; just focus on recovering. They should give you another assessment in three months. Pass that assessment, and you will be allowed to go back home. Of course, you will still be under observation."

Li Huowang nodded quietly.

"Don't forget to drink your medicine, and do not stop drinking them even after you're discharged," Yi Donglai instructed. He gave a few more instructions to Li Huowang when the latter asked a peculiar question, "Doctor Yi, where is Wang Wei being held? Which mental hospital is it?"

"Why do you ask that?" Yi Donglai asked, massaging his nose bridge with a confused look.

"I'm technically the reason he went crazy, so I feel like I should give him something nice to eat once I'm discharged. I also feel quite guilty."

"He's in the Sixth Public Hospital. You don't have to worry about him. Just focus on studying and get into a good university."

Li Huowang shook his head and said, "I'm afraid that would be too hard, Doctor Yi. Anyway, can you give me your phone number? I want to contact you if something happens."

Yi Donglai nodded. He took out a pen and paper to jot down his phone number. "If there are any changes to your illness, call me.”

“I understand. Thank you. You are a good doctor.”

Li Huowang put away the slip of paper containing Yi Donglai's number and entered the bus that would take him and Sun Xiaoqin away from the hospital.

The bus started moving, and the prison warden burst out laughing at the sight. He turned around and spread his arms wide, shouting, “Tell the inmates in the kitchen to cook extra meals for everyone tonight!”

The festive mood erupted in the hospital at the prison warden's remark. If they had fireworks, they would have set them off to celebrate Li Huowang's departure.

Li Huowang's hand was cuffed to a chair as he looked out of the scenery outside the bus. After a while, he turned around and stared at his mother, asking, “Mom, where are we going?”

“We're going to a private hospital called Kangning Hospital. I've done my research about it, and I learned that it's a good hospital.”

“Oh.” Li Huowang nodded. There was nothing he could do about it, as he needed to get rid of his status as a lunatic.

Regardless, Li Huowang was happy. His illness had been cured to the extent that he could be transferred to another hospital.

He could still remember how Yang Na was carried away by her father. He could finally fulfill his promise to her.

He really wanted to see her again and apologize to her. Li Huowang acknowledged that he had wronged her.

The bus traveled for a long time, and Li Huowang ended up falling asleep in the middle of it.

It was already dusk when Sun Xiaoqin woke him up. “Son, wake up. We're here.”

Li Huowang yawned and exited the bus. A building covered in green glass appeared in front of him. If it weren't for the red cross in the middle of the building, he would have thought that he was staring at an office building.

The prison guards appeared and escorted Li Huowang into the hospital. They only left once Li Huowang had signed some documents.

“Please follow me,” a square-faced doctor said courteously to Li Huowang. There were four nurses standing behind him.

Li Huowang looked around and whistled in awe at the main hall's grand interior. We are indeed in a private hospital.

Sun Xiaoqin was about to follow Li Huowang but was stopped. “I’m sorry, but visitors are not allowed to follow our patients. There is a specific day when visitors are allowed, and you can only talk to him by then.”

Chapter 595 - Mental Illness

“Huh? Why can’t I follow him? The public hospital even allowed me to do so! Why can’t you do the same as them?” Sun Xiaoqin asked, visibly upset at the strange rule.

“Even though we’re a private hospital, we still have our rules. I’m just a doctor, so I can’t do anything about it. If you’re unsatisfied with our rules and policies, then you can transfer to another hospital.”

Sun Xiaoqin’s brows furrowed, and her breathing became rougher as fury welled up inside of her.

Li Huowang saw that and intervened to stop her from going berserk.

“Mom, mom. It’s okay. I’m already cured. You don’t have to stay with me every day. You must be tired of taking care of me every day over the past few years, so you can rest now. Go to Dad’s side.”

“I can’t do that yet! You’re so skinny! What if you get bullied by the other patients here?”

“Mom, this isn’t my first time in a mental hospital. Who’d dare to bully me?” Li Huowang persuaded. He even added a phone call to Li Jiancheng, which was finally enough for Sun Xiaoqin to back down.

“You’re such—okay. Listen to the doctor, and don’t do anything rash? Okay, I’m going to do that.” Sun Xiaoqin put her phone down and looked at Li Huowang, saying, “Son, you must not worry about telling the doctor if you’re experiencing any discomfort. Tell the doctor if your room is too hot or too cold!”

“Mom, calm down. I’m already cured, so I’ll be discharged soon.”

Sun Xiaoqin nodded and left to pay the hospital fees, while Li Huowang was pushed into the hospital by the doctor.

“Let me introduce myself. My name is Wu Cheng, and I’m a psychiatrist like Yi Donglai. I was in the cohort two years later than Yi Donglai, so I’m considered his junior. He told me the details of your case through a phone call.”

“Really? That’s great,” Li Huowang said calmly, “Since you know that I’m basically cured, can you uncuff me?”

“Sorry, but I can’t do that. I understand what’s going on with you, but I’m afraid that the director will not. He has specifically instructed me to ensure that nothing would you. Also, I’ve heard that someone has pressured him to accept you. If it weren’t for them, he wouldn’t have accepted you.”

Li Huowang looked down at his cuffs and asked, “Are you saying that I have to wear these until I’m discharged?”

“Just endure it for now. I will talk to the director later. Anyway, we’re here. Let’s go in for your examination. I’m sure you’re already familiar with it.”

Li Huowang nodded. “I know the procedure. Let’s do it.”

To ensure that the hospital wouldn’t accidentally admit patients with the tendency to harm others, the hospital would screen their patients before admitting them. Once the screening and admission procedures were done, Li Huowang finally managed to enter his own room. The room had nothing but a single bed. It seemed that his infamy had given him an unexpected boon, as the hospital had made sure that he’d be living by himself. The travel and the procedures had taken its toll on Li Huowang, and he sprawled out on the bed, fast asleep.

The next morning, a nurse woke him up. He was given a few minutes to wash up before the nurse gave him a tour of the hospital.

There wasn't anything particularly interesting, as the facilities of the hospital were mostly similar to the facilities in Li Huowang's previous hospital.

After the tour, Li Huowang was called over to sit in a circle with the other patients. It was Li Huowang's first time experiencing something like this, so he couldn't help but find it surprising. It turned out that the hospital wanted the patients to talk to each other about their illnesses to cheer each other up.

Although this was Li Huowang's first time participating in one, he had no qualms about doing it, as Wu Cheng had told him that this was the hospital's project to imitate overseas hospitals with more advanced technology.

Li Huowang could only say that private hospitals had more leeway when it came to activities that their patients could do.

Everyone sat on their stools in a circle, and the patients proceeded to take turns confessing their illnesses.

"I have schizophrenia. It's fairly light, so I can manage it with medication," a middle-aged woman said.

"Manic syndrome. My condition is improving, all thanks to the medicine," a bald man said with his fingers twitching intermittently.

"Depression," a young woman in a ponytail said. Her eyes were glazed over, and there were slash wounds on her wrists. Overall, she looked quite terrible.

An old woman, who looked to be roughly fifty years old, said, "Anxiety, but there was no reason for me to stay here. My daughter only insisted that I stay here until I'm all healed."

Soon, it was Li Huowang's turn. Everyone cast a curious gaze at the new face.

"Me? I don't have one. I'm already cured."

At that, the patients turned and whispered to each other while stealing glances at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was too lazy to explain his situation, so he stayed silent. Moreover, he wasn't going to stay here for a long time, so he was planning on taking it easy. He looked around and saw a chubby kid playing with his own fingers.

“Hey, what's your illness?”

The chubby kid ignored Li Huowang without looking up from his fingers.

“Don't waste your breath. He's autistic, and he's not going to respond to you,” the man with manic syndrome said to Li Huowang.

“He's autistic? How did he get here, then? He's not like us,” Li Huowang asked, sounding surprised. Autism required early intervention, and as far as Li Huowang knew, this hospital wasn't the best place when it came to it.

“How else do you think he got here? His family saw him as an eyesore; they didn't want to take care of him, but it's illegal to abandon him on the streets, so they had no choice but to send him here,” the man with manic syndrome explained. Then, he pointed at someone else and said, “Do you see that fatty over there? The one with black spots on his face.”

Li Huowang followed the man's finger and asked, “What's wrong with him?”

“He's fine. It's just that his mind is incredibly slow. He has the same circumstances as this kid right here. Their parents don't want to take care of them, so they sent them here. Really unbelievable, what kind of parents would do something like that? This is a mental hospital, so only those with mental illnesses should be here, but look at that fatty and this kid. I think their family members are convinced that this place is a prison for crazy people.

“Yeah, and that mindset is the reason why people think that those with mental illnesses are dangerous people.”

“Is that even legal?” Li Huowang asked, scratching his chin. Unbeknownst to him, the young woman suffering from depression finally saw that he was handcuffed.

“This is a private hospital. There are no rules here when it comes to earning money. What? Do you really think that they can sue their own family?”

“Actually, I understand them. It takes a ton of money, time, and effort to take care of someone with a disability.”

Just then, Wu Cheng walked over with a clipboard and a pen. He chose an empty stool and sat down before asking, “How’s the conversation going?”

" Ah! " The young woman suffering from depression abruptly jumped up and pointed at Li Huowang with a fearful look. She then let out a shrill roar, “I know him! He was on TV! He barged into a university and killed many people!”

Chapter 596 - Wu Cheng

Everyone in the circle jumped out of their seats and ran away from Li Huowang. No, it wasn't just them; even the patients in the other circles ran away from Li Huowang upon hearing the young woman's remark.

The atmosphere became tense, and the patients started panicking upon recognizing Li Huowang.

When Li Huowang thought the situation would spiral out of control, Wu Cheng stood up and shouted, "Everyone, calm down! It is true that Li Huowang had made many mistakes, but it was his illness' fault!"

Wu Cheng then walked up to Li Huowang and patted the latter's shoulder. "But his illness is finally under control, and he's also going to be discharged soon! You've seen the news, haven't you? Even a lunatic at his level can be treated, so what are you afraid of? Can your illness even hold a candle to his illness?"

"Everyone, you must keep looking forward. I guarantee that as long as you follow our treatment regime and take your medicine on time, you'll recover just like him! You will be able to rejoin society!"

Wu Cheng's speech was effective, as the patients calmed down and sat back down. Li Huowang had to admit that Wu Cheng had a glib tongue.

"Would you like to say a few encouraging words to them, Li Huowang? You are their model patient, after all."

Li Huowang shook his head without saying anything. He had no intention of doing something that would make him stand out here.

The confession session continued, and nothing happened except for the patients stealing glances at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang scratched his nose, realizing that he had stood out. It seemed that he would have to live like how he lived in the White Prison Tower.

However, Li Huowang didn't really mind living that way as long as he'd get discharged.

"Come here. Since you don't know anyone here just yet, you will be assigned to this group. From now on, the members of the group must help each other out. All right, go ahead and introduce yourselves," Wu Cheng said. He wanted the patients to work together.

"My name is Zhang Shuier; it's nice to meet you," said the woman with anxiety.

Seeing that no one was saying anything, the man with manic syndrome said, "Wei Shili."

Li Huowang finally learned the names of his group members. The young woman suffering from depression was Zhao Ting, while the one with schizophrenia was Wang Wangshu.

Under Wu Cheng's guidance and Li Huowang's astonished gaze, the autistic boy wrote his name on Wu Cheng's phone, who promptly showed it to everyone—Zhang Jinzhong.

"Doctor Wu, can this hospital even treat those with autism?"

Wu Cheng put the phone away and said, "This isn't treatment. I'm simply assisting him in expressing himself. People like Jinzhong suffer from disorganized thoughts and fragmented perception. In their eyes, the previous second could be the present, but the next second could be an hour later. This doesn't mean that they don't want to interact with others at all. They simply needed assistance to do so, and they'd be able to express themselves with the right tools."

"Is that so?" Li Huowang nodded and stared deeply at the autistic boy. He had to admit that they had it worse than him. Li Huowang's illness was curable, but the boy had to live a life with disorganized thoughts and fragmented perception.

Under Wu Cheng's guidance, the patients started talking about their illnesses and opening their hearts up to others. They even played some games to break the ice, and the games made Li Huowang feel embarrassed, as he thought that they were too old to play such games.

It was an old trick, but it was working. Once they were done playing, the others could finally talk casually to Li Huowang, even though they were secretly afraid of him.

An entire morning passed just like that, and soon, it was time for lunch.

Li Huowang's condition was stable, so he could go to the canteen by himself to eat. He no longer needed people to send his meals to him.

Li Huowang had just stood up when Zhao Ting walked up to Li Huowang. She was crying as she said, "I'm really sorry... I shouldn't have shouted at you. Now, everyone knows of your true identity, and it's all my fault. I really am so useless..."

Seeing how Zhao Ting was clenching her fists with so much strength that her nails were digging into her own flesh, Li Huowang knew that Zhao Ting's condition was serious.

People suffering from depression had a tendency to amplify their own guilt, even if the issue was trivial at most. At this rate, Zhao Ting's condition was only going to get worse.

"You're doing fine. No need to say sorry. You did the right thing by letting the others know about me so that they'll know how dangerous I am. Your shouting warned the others, so you did great. And you don't have to feel guilty at all, as you simply did the right thing, and you owe the others nothing!"

"Is that so?" Zhao Ting asked, her face softening a bit.

"Yes, so don't think about it and eat your lunch. Take your medicine once you're done eating, and then take a nap. I think you're medicine is wearing off right now.”

Li Huowang expended quite a bit of effort before he managed to send Zhao Ting away. When he turned around to leave, he saw Wu Cheng smiling at him, saying, “Not bad. Do you spend a lot of time with patients like her?”

“Sort of. Patients like her are easy pickings for bullies, so I help them from time to time,” Li Huowang said, following the other patients to the canteen.

“Bullies? What kind of hospital would allow the existence of bullies? Do they not have surveillance cameras? What hospital is so backward that they don't have surveillance cameras?”

“The bullying isn't that serious. It's something minor like taking a bite of the patient's meal, stealing a bag of snacks from them, and so on. They aren't serious enough to warrant the attention of the doctors. Even though everyone here is suffering from a mental illness, they can still be sorted into good apples and bad apples. I think some of them think that taking a bite of someone else's meal without being punished for it means that they're winning in life. They'll bully those with depression because those with depression often don't fight back. Ask them to bully those with manic syndrome or those suffering from schizophrenia; I guarantee you that they'd run with their tails tucked.”

Wu Cheng nodded and jotted down something in his notebook. “Thanks. Even us doctors can't understand every single detail about our patients. I will let my superior know your thoughts.”

Wu Cheng and Li Huowang chit-chatted until they reached the canteen.

Li Huowang carried his metal tray with him to a seat. He picked up a tofu fried in scallion oil and was about to eat it when Wu Cheng's voice echoed from behind him.

“Once you're done eating, stay in your room and don't go anywhere. Your treatment is scheduled for this afternoon.”

Treatment? I'm already cured, so what is that treatment for? Li Huowang thought, looking confused.

Yi Donglai had told him that he only had to stay here for some time, and he'd eventually be discharged. Why do I need more treatment when I'm already cured?

Chapter 597 - Medicine

The patients were having their meal in the canteen. Li Huowang was there as well, but he had yet to touch his meal.

I thought Yi Donglai had already had a conversation with his junior. Did something go wrong? Staring at his meal, Li Huowang had lost his appetite as he recalled what Wu Cheng told him.

If it weren't for his sharp hearing, he would think that he had misheard Wu Cheng.

"I should just eat first and see what he's up to," Li Huowang said, making quick work of his meal.

Lunch was over, and Li Huowang soon found himself in his bed, waiting for Wu Cheng's arrival.

He wanted to see what Wu Cheng was planning to do. If there was something wrong, then he'd call Yi Donglai for confirmation.

Time passed slowly, and the door to Li Huowang's room only swung open when it already was two thirty in the afternoon.

"Sorry. There was a meeting, so there's a bit of a delay," Wu Cheng said, smoothening his hair with an apologetic face. There was a tablet in his hands.

"Don't worry. Are we starting now? What do I need to do?"

"Don't be nervous. You don't have to do anything. It's just speech therapy," Wu Cheng asked. He sat on a stool and told Li Huowang to lay himself down on the bed.

Li Huowang complied.

"Do you miss the other side?" Wu Cheng asked.

Wu Cheng's words made Li Huowang's scalp go numb, and he unconsciously reached for his spine sword. "No."

Wu Cheng nodded and tapped on the tablet, "Good. Now close your eyes and relax."

“Good, good, good... Now, I want you to recall everything about your hallucination. I want you to remember how real it felt.”
“?”

“Now, you've forgotten the reality. You cannot perceive it anymore. You've returned to Shangjing.”

Li Huowang clenched his fists and squirmed. He felt like his head was buzzing and was about to explode.

“Open your eyes. You're back in that world, and you're surrounded by your comrades.”

Li Huowang opened his eyes and swung his “spine sword” at Wu Cheng. “What are you doing to me?!”

Wu Cheng was visibly surprised by Li Huowang's outrage. He tapped on the tablet and said, “Li Huowang, this won't do. You won't pass the assessment like this.”

“Wu Cheng, what is the meaning of this?” Li Huowang stood up and glared at Wu Cheng. “Why are you doing the opposite thing?”

“Because I needed to make sure that your illness has truly been cured. The fact that you've relapsed so easily means that you're still ill,” Wu Cheng said calmly.

“I'm cured! I don't need any treatment anymore! I've become normal once more!”

Wu Cheng let out a regretful sigh and said, “Li Huowang, you're shouting at me. I had a good discussion about this treatment method with Yi Donglai.”

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth, feeling annoyed. “Give me your phone. I need to call Yi Donglai.”

“I'm afraid not. You cannot talk to anyone else in the outside world except for your family members, and it can only be done once a week. It's one of the hospital's rules.”

As Li Huowang stared at Wu Cheng, he realized that the latter had become very unfamiliar to him.

It felt like Wu Cheng had changed in the span of a single afternoon.

“Yi Donglai! Your senior! My doctor! Can’t I call him?”

“I’m sorry, but it is not allowed. Rules are rules. Sit down, and we’ll continue. This is for your own good.”

“No! I’m not going to do that!” Li Huowang roared, “I’m cured! Your ‘treatment’ will only make it worse! I want to talk about the specifics of this ‘treatment’ with Yi Donglai, and I will not let you do this ‘treatment’ to me until then! I need to hear it from his own mouth, or I will not cooperate!”

Wu Cheng shook his head and said, “If you don’t cooperate, your discharge date will be delayed indefinitely.”

With that, Wu Cheng left with the tablet, leaving Li Huowang alone in the room. Li Huowang paced back and forth in the room, thinking about what was happening.

All of a sudden, he found Wu Cheng to be quite suspicious.

They had been talking amiably to each other, but things had changed drastically in such a short period of time. There was something wrong here.

“Unless... unless—Monk, you’re right! Wu Cheng and Wang Wei are probably in cahoots!” Li Huowang exclaimed, and he was certain of his assumption.

Li Huowang suddenly felt like a beast was glaring at him, and it was due to the realization that Wang Wei wasn’t alone!

Someone was controlling Wang Wei from the shadows!

What should I do? Killing intent flashed past Li Huowang’s eyes as he brainstormed ideas to resolve this situation. No, I can’t! If I kill someone again, I’m going to get myself imprisoned for life in a mental hospital!

Li Huowang stared at the camera in one corner of the room.

Soon, it was dinner time.

Li Huowang had just sat down in the canteen when he realized that something was wrong.

The workers in the canteen were staring warily at him.

The man with manic syndrome saw that Li Huowang was sitting by himself, so he walked up to Li Huowang.

Before he could get close, however, a nurse came and took him elsewhere to discuss something.

Li Huowang guessed that the hospital's higher-ups had become wary of him. Unfortunately, this was bad news for Li Huowang.

After dinner and thirty minutes later, it was time for Li Huowang to take his medicine. However, alarm bells started ringing in his head when he saw an unfamiliar red pill among his pills.

He took the red pill and looked at it in the mirror. For some reason, he felt disgusted even though he was just staring at it.

Li Huowang's back was turned to the camera when he put the pills in his mouth and drank a glass of water.

The unfamiliar red pill was between his fingers. He went to the toilet and flushed it down.

Li Huowang then went back to his bed and closed his eyes. He started thinking about how he was supposed to deal with Wu Cheng.

Li Huowang knew that he had to do something about Wu Cheng. He was the doctor, after all, while Li Huowang was a mere patient. In other words, it would be too easy for Wu Cheng to screw over Li Huowang.

Bam!

The door to Li Huowang's room was shoved open, and six, large-framed nurses charged into the room.

“Get up! Why did you throw your medicine away?! You were supposed to take it!”

Chapter 598 - Trap

Smack!

One of the nurses swung his baton toward Li Huowang's arm. The attack was so powerful that Li Huowang's arm swelled just a few seconds after getting hit, but Li Huowang didn't react much to it.

Li Huowang put his arms together and charged at one of the large-framed nurses. He collided with the nurse's chest, and the latter almost fainted from the pain.

One of the nurses charged at Li Huowang and hugged him from behind. Before the nurse could do anything, his ring finger was twisted and bent by Li Huowang.

"AAAAAAAHH!" the nurse let out a shrill cry in response to the extreme pain.

Li Huowang was handcuffed, but it looked like he had the upper hand against six large-framed nurses.

Taking advantage of the battle's brief pause, Li Huowang appeared behind one of the nurses and wrapped the chain links of his handcuffs around the latter's neck.

Upon suppressing the nurse, Li Huowang decisively tore off a chunk of the nurse's skin on his neck, revealing an artery beneath it.

Li Huowang glared at everyone with a bloody mouth.

The gory scene shocked every single nurse in the room. They had never thought that Li Huowang could still fight so well, despite being in handcuffs.

No one dared to move. They were here to earn some money for themselves, and none of them was willing to lose their life working for the hospital.

"Bring Wu Cheng here, or I will kill this man," Li Huowang said, placing his teeth on the nurse's pulsing artery.

"Stop! Don't be rash! I'll go and look for Doctor Wu! Don't do anything stupid!" one of the nurses exclaimed and ran out of the room to look for Wu Cheng.

Li Huowang didn't want to do this, but he had no choice. Since he couldn't go about it in a diplomatic way, then he could only use force.

During the downtime, Li Huowang pondered carefully over his next course of action. What he had done tonight would spell endless trouble for him, but he had no choice.

He had to do something, or he'd find himself in a trap.

Frantic footsteps echoed from outside the room as Wu Cheng and a group of nurses soon made their way into Li Huowang's room.

When Wu Cheng saw Li Huowang's scary and bloody appearance, he turned to his colleagues and whispered, "I was right. The patient in Room Sixteen isn't cured yet; he was simply in remission. A little prodding is enough for his illness to relapse, so he can't be considered cured."

Li Huowang knew that there was no point in telling everyone that Wu Cheng was harming him rather than treating him.

After all, he was just a patient, so no one would believe him. They would certainly believe Wu Cheng and think that Li Huowang was ill once again.

In other words, Li Huowang needed to find someone to vouch for him.

"Wu Cheng, give me your phone! I need to call Yi Donglai!" Li Huowang shouted.

"All right, I will give you a phone. Don't do anything rash." Wu Cheng took out a phone and unlocked it before walking over to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang raised his guard up, afraid that Wu Cheng would do something to him.

However, Wu Cheng couldn't do anything right now. He placed the phone in Li Huowang's arms before walking away.

Li Huowang sighed and opened up the phone's contact list to look for Yi Donglai's number.

When Li Huowang tapped on Yi Donglai's name on the screen, the phone's display abruptly went out, and a strong electrical current shot out from the metallic case of the phone, electrocuting both Li Huowang and the nurse.

This is all a trap! And Wu Cheng doesn't want Yi Donglai to know the truth!

Li Huowang tried to let go of the phone, but his fingers seemed like they were glued to it. He couldn't let go of it at all.

Presented by an opportunity, the nurses behind Wu Cheng charged at Li Huowang.

They used nets, military forks, and even sedatives to suppress Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's expression went blank, and his consciousness dimmed as the yellow-colored sedatives coursed through him through his veins.

The last thing he saw was Wu Cheng walking up to him with a smile.

Jiang~ Jiang~ Jiang~

“Raise~ You must've said something wrong~ Or the mother and son wouldn't have argued~ Now the third aunt is crying alone in the room~”

Lu Zhuangyuan clad in a silk brocade was sitting on his chair and was listening to the performance on the stage with his eyes closed.

His life had gotten significantly better, but he wasn't enjoying it for some reason.

Lu Zhuangyuan abruptly sat up and roared, “Wait! That's wrong! Why is your pitch so high at the end? What? That's how you've been singing that part? I don't care! I've become your boss, so you must follow me!"

The performers performed for four hours on the stage, and Lu Zhuangyuan for half of the time.

When Lu Zhuangyuan left for lunch, the performers sighed in relief.

Lu Zhuangyuan walked out of the theater with his youngest grandson in his arms.

Since he was living a different life now, he no longer needed to be humble. He walked down the streets with his grandson in his arms and with his chest puffed out. He was no longer a despicable performer.

"Ai~ This is the life of the Immortals. Oh my dear Mei~ You've died too young. If you hadn't died two years ago, you would have enjoyed this life with me."

Lu Zhuangyuan entered the house, which was given to him as a gift, and he saw his eldest daughter-in-law sitting on a chair.

The table beside her was filled with snacks and cakes, and there were two maids waiting on her. One of the maids was massaging her legs while the other was massaging her back.

Lu Zhuangyuan frowned and said, "Who told you to hire maids? Don't you know how expensive they are? We're going to have lunch soon, so why are there so many snacks? Can you even finish these snacks by yourself? You're just wasting money here!"

"Dad, the money we are earning is meant to be spent. I've never had a day in peace ever since I married into the Lu Family. I've been traveling with you through the wilderness and prairies for so long, and we've finally gotten our lucky break. We can finally enjoy the money that we're earning, but you still want us to be so frugal?"

After giving birth to a son, Luo Juanhua became bolder and defiant.

“Enjoy? You're wasting money instead of enjoying it! I want you to fire these maids!”

"Father, Juan..." Lu Juren chimed in, "Stop arguing, all right? Come here, and let's eat."

However, Lu Zhuangyuan was still complaining even amidst their lunch. After complaining about how there were too many dishes, he started complaining about how oily the food was.

Once Lu Zhuangyuan had left, Luo Juanhua turned to her husband and grumbled, “What’s wrong with Father these days? Why has he been so annoying recently?”

Lu Zhuangyuan stared at his father’s back while eating his meal. “He’s been working hard throughout his entire life, and he suddenly doesn't have to work so hard anymore. I think he still can't get used to the feeling of doing nothing.”

Chapter 599 - Face To Face

Lu Juren knew what the theater meant to his father. His father had been talking about the same thing over and over again to him ever since he was an infant.

It went so out of hand that rather than saying "Mother" and "Father" for his first word, the infant Lu Juren said "theater" instead.

Lu Zhuangyuan's lifelong goal was suddenly realized, and it was all thanks to someone gifting them a theater. At this point, Lu Zhuangyuan only had one thing he could do—fritter away time until his death.

Listening to his explanation, Luo Juanhua scowled and said, "Hah. I think your father is just being annoying. Who wouldn't enjoy life if given a vast supply of money? How about you tell him to start traveling again? Maybe he'll feel better moving around."

Lu Juren said nothing; he was too engrossed in his own thoughts, thinking about what he could make his father do. Otherwise, Lu Juren was afraid that his father would go crazy one day.

"Xiu'er, come here. Don't eat too much rice; here, eat some meat, too. It's going to fill you up as well," Luo Juanhua said to her daughter.

Just then, someone familiar entered their house, and they were none other than Lu Xiucan.

Upon entering the dining hall, Lu Xiucan didn't even greet his brother and sister-in-law before snatching his own niece's rice bowl.

"Xiucan? Why are you here? Did you not bring your wife with you to follow the Daoist to Cowheart Village for the sake of cultivating?" Lu Juren asked, surprised by Lu Xiucan's return. He could still remember how adamant Lu Xiucan was when it came to learning a few techniques from the Daoist when they were leaving Shangjing. He had tried his best to convince Lu Xiucan against it, but the latter hadn't listened to him at all.

Lu Xiucan drank a huge mouthful of the egg soup to wash down the meat in his mouth. Breathing in ragged pants, he turned to Lu Juren and explained, "Master was abducted by a group of people! I've come here to ask Simpleton to rescue him!"

"Huh? Who's strong enough to abduct the Daoist?" Lu Zhuangyuan asked, looking shocked while holding his smoke pipe. No one had any idea when he had returned, but it didn't matter at this point.

"Ah, you're not going to understand just how strong they were. The six of them formed an array, and one of them was even a half-Immortal! There must've been a mastermind behind it. They had treasures that I'd never seen before, and my Master was abducted just like that. I'm going to leave after this lunch! I have to find Gao Zhijian and ask him to send people to rescue Master!" Lu Xiucan exclaimed. He grabbed a few pieces of steamed chicken drenched in scallion oil and stuffed them directly into his mouth.

"No! You can't go there!" Lu Zhuangyuan exclaimed, and he waved his smoke pipe so fast that afterimages seemed to appear in the air. "Even the Daoist couldn't deal with them, so wouldn't that mean that you'll be seeking your own death?!"

However, his words fell on deaf ears.

Lu Xiucan slammed his hand on the table and shouted, "What do you know?! I'm his disciple! I must help Master now that he's in danger! I'm sure he's going to teach me a technique or two as a gesture of gratitude toward me!"

"Moreover, I'm his one and only disciple. Once he becomes an Immortal, he'll entrust everything to me! Anyway, stop belittling me as well! I've gotten way stronger after cultivating with Master!"

Just then, a loud commotion resembling hoofbeats echoed outside. Lu Xiucan smiled and immediately grabbed a braised goose plate before running out of the house. "I didn't expect Simpleton to organize a rescue team this quick!"

"Brat!" Lu Zhongyuan exclaimed anxiously. He jumped up to his feet and shouted, "Step outside that door, and you will no longer be family!"

Lu Xiucan ran out of the door without any hesitation.

"Hmph! Who cares about being a performer at the bottom of society? Once Master becomes an Immortal, you people better not be expecting that I'll bring all of you with me to the heights of success!"

"Li Huowang? Li Huowang?" someone asked repeatedly while snapping their fingers before Li Huowang.

Soon, Li Huowang woke up, and he immediately realized that he was being restrained with a straitjacket. However, Li Huowang was not surprised at all. He knew this would happen. To make matters worse, they had even attached a steel muzzle to Li Huowang's mouth as if they were afraid of Li Huowang biting their necks apart.

"Have you calmed down? Can we finally talk?" Wu Cheng asked, standing in front of Li Huowang with a tablet in hand.

Li Huowang stared at Wu Cheng before saying, "I know you're working with Wang Wei, but who's the person behind you two? Why does he need lifespan pills? Is he going to die soon and has decided to bet on me? Maybe he's testing me to see whether I can bring something even more dangerous from that side to this side."

Wu Cheng didn't react to Li Huowang's words. Instead, he pressed one of his Bluetooth earphones and calmly said, "Director, this is brand-new. It's different from Yi Donglai's thesis. Yes, I understand. I will handle it.”

After talking to someone through the tablet in his hand, Wu Cheng finally stared at Li Huowang.

“Li Huowang, did you know that Yi Donglai was actually experimenting on you? At this rate, you'll inevitably become crazy.”

Wu Cheng pointed at himself and said, “Trust me. Do as I say, and you'll live a better life.”

“Hehe, so you've decided to show your true colors? Why should I trust you? How many times are you going to try and trick me? I shouldn't trust Yi Donglai but trust you guys instead?” Li Huowang asked, chuckling.

“You have no choice but to listen to me. You are in our hands, and Yi Donglai is not here.”

The flickering red light coming from the camera abruptly disappeared. Wu Cheng then took out a taser and pressed it against Li Huowang.

Bzzt!

A buzzing noise echoed.

Li Huowang convulsed uncontrollably upon getting tased, but he was still smiling as he said, “Do you really think that you can force me to comply using that little thing? Are you looking down on me?”

The current became even stronger, but Li Huowang laughed even louder in response. He laughed and laughed until the taser ran out of battery.

“Come on, continue. Kill me if you dare, or I will skin you alive when I regain my freedom.”

Li Huowang knew that they wouldn't dare kill him, as they needed him to receive lifespan pills.

Wu Cheng looked a bit angry, but he quickly calmed down. He tapped on the tablet, and a video was played in front of Li Huowang.

The video depicted a subway station. A tired-looking young woman was playing with her phone with a sling bag across her chest.

Li Huowang's pupils quivered upon seeing the young woman's jade earring. He could still remember that jade earring, as it was something he had given to her as a gift.

"Her name is Yang Na, am I right? I heard that she's your childhood friend. I know you're a lunatic and that you're immune to pain. However, what if the pain that you're supposed to take was inflicted on her instead?"

Li Huowang was silent.

Wu Cheng smiled and continued, "Cooperate with us. This is going to be better than Yi Donglai's crazed nonsense. You have an unprecedented ability, so it would be a shame to hide it. Also, you're not losing anything at all. In fact, you're going to earn a ton of profit. You won't be locked up here, and you can have money, including women, money, and fame."

Just then, Li Huowang looked up, and he sounded unnaturally calm as he said, "I don't want to talk to a chess pawn. I want to talk to the person behind you."

Chapter 600 - Consuming Medicine

The restrained Li Huowang was in a padded cell somewhere inside Kangning Hospital, and he was staring right into Wu Cheng's eyes.

Wu Cheng chuckled at Li Huowang's words, asking, "You want to talk to the boss? Sure, but you must agree to work with us, or you won't get to see him at all."

Li Huowang seemed to be struggling deep inside, which hinted that he was clearly unwilling to work with Wu Cheng. However, he caught a glimpse of Yang Na on the tablet and sighed.

"Fine, I will cooperate with you. Let me talk to your boss! I can't let you all take the profits, after all!"

Wu Cheng nodded and tapped on the tablet. Soon, Li Huowang saw an old man wearing a suit. The old man's hair was short and white; he was sitting on a sofa and was wearing sunglasses, so Li Huowang had no idea whether the old man was staring at him or not.

The boss wanted lifespan pills, and there was an old man before him. It wasn't that difficult for Li Huowang to deduce that the old man in the tablet was Wu Cheng's "boss."

"Li Huowang," the old man said. The fact that he had said Li Huowang's name meant that he was quite familiar with Li Huowang. "My name is Xu Shou, but you can call me Sir Xu."

Li Huowang glared at the old man and memorized every single detail about the latter. He needed as much information as he could acquire to come up with a plan.

The old man was the mastermind behind Wu Cheng and Wang

Wei. If Li Huowang wanted to resolve this issue, then he had to attack it at the roots, which meant dealing with the old man!

Li Huowang had no plans of working with them and had merely pretended like he was going to cooperate with them.

“Sir Xu? Can I ask you a question? Why have you decided to do this to me? What do you want?” Li Huowang asked.

Sir Xu leaned forward and said, “I have no reason to tell you that. The only thing that you need to do is to show me your value. I’ve seen you whip out gold from out of nowhere, but I know that technology has become mature enough that anyone can easily edit any footage to show whatever they want to show everyone. If you want to show me your value, then you need to whip out something really special.”

Li Huowang chuckled. It seemed that the old man still had no trust in him and was afraid that Li Huowang was just a lunatic.

Despite that, he desperately wanted Li Huowang to bring lifespan pills from the other side to this side.

Clearly, the old man was on the brink of death.

“Wu Cheng, I entrust everything to you. Call me once he has brought out the item,” Sir Xu said before unilaterally ending the call.

Wu Cheng put the tablet down and took out a bottle of pills. He shook it and poured it into his hand before showing it to Li Huowang.

“I guess your decision to cooperate with us just isn't enough for you to start negotiating with the boss. If you want to negotiate with him, then you need to show us your value. Shall we start?”

Li Huowang glanced at the pills before staring at Wu Cheng. “Are you sure these pills are going to work?”

“Of course. They're very effective. Of course, there are some side effects. Anyway, forget everything that Yi Donglai had taught you and go back to that side. Prove your worth and show us your supernatural power... or maybe you're just an ordinary lunatic?"

The metal muzzle was taken off, and the pills were shoved into Li Huowang's mouth.

Li Huowang ground the bitter pills in his mouth and consumed them with a mouthful of saliva.

Upon swallowing the pills, Li Huowang's consciousness immediately started fading away as his brain slowed down. Eventually, his senses blurred, and when he came to his senses, Wu Cheng had become something else.

A metal pen appeared in front of Li Huowang. It moved side to side, writing down Wu Cheng's words from the other side.

"When I say 'now,' you have to close your eyes."

Li Huowang closed his eyes, and everything faded away into darkness.

For some reason, the strange pills were making Li Huowang feel like his true body was somewhere else rather than here.

"You've returned to that strange world. You've returned to the Liang Kingdom. Tell me, what do you see?"

Bizarre, fragmented scenes manifested in the darkness, and they pieced together by themselves until Li Huowang realized that he was inside a dark cave.

There were Sacrificial God motifs on the walls, and they depicted the Sacrificial God sitting down on a distorted cross. Li Huowang immediately realized where he was the moment he saw the cross.

He was being held captive in the Ao Jing Sect's Cross Temple.

He tried moving, but he couldn't move at all. He saw that he was being restrained in a massive array drawn by blood. More importantly, his legs and right arm had vanished, along with three fingers on his left hand.

"So? Have you considered it?" someone asked.

Li Huowang looked up and saw a familiar face. The face of the Imperial Preceptor, Huangfu Tiangang.

“So it's you? I should've seen that coming. There are only a few people capable of wielding lightning in this region, and who else would have such a high achievement at it?” Li Huowang asked. He snarled at the familiar face before continuing, “You are working with the Twisted One of Doulao! How dare you say that you have no relations with the Sitting Oblivion Dao?”

Huangfu Tiangang frowned upon seeing Li Huowang's change in demeanor.

“What are you talking about? The Sitting Oblivion Dao has been eradicated. I am the Imperial Preceptor. I am responsible for the safety of the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom!”

“Scram! How dare you try to disrupt the friendship between me and Gao Zhijian? Do you really think that I'm going to believe your words right now?”

“The emperor doesn't want to kill you, but the previous emperors have a different opinion of you. The fact that you made quick work of the Dragon Vein means that you're a threat. You'd be nothing but trouble for us, unless we can make us of you!”

“Haha! Huangfu Tiangang, you can't even lie properly. You shouldn't join the Sitting Oblivion Dao, as you'd ruin their reputation if you do so.”

Li Huowang chuckled and raised his remaining arm to search for the little saw in his bag of torture tools. He stabbed the little saw into his waist and remained unblinking despite the pain.

“You want lifespan pills? Fine, I will give you some!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He had just raised his left arm when a lightning bolt flashed past him, severing some of his fingers.

He only had one finger remaining on his left hand.

Despite the powerful attack, Li Huowang didn't hesitate and jammed his remaining finger deep into his throat.

“Blegh!”

A thunderous boom echoed.

Li Huowang opened his mouth and spat out the pills straight toward Wu Cheng's face.

Wu Cheng flailed around in disgust before taking off his robes to wipe away Li Huowang's saliva on his face.

When he was done wiping himself clean, he looked up and saw that Li Huowang's abdomen was bleeding.

Somehow, Li Huowang was holding a little saw and was smiling ruthlessly at Wu Cheng.

“Wait!” Wu Cheng exclaimed. His words had just fallen when Li Huowang pounced on him and bit his face hard.

“AAARRRGGGHHH!”

Chapter 601 - Intelligence

If he could bring over gold, it meant he could bring over other things as well.

The moment Li Huowang's straitjacket was cut open, Wu Cheng lost all chances of winning.

Of course, Li Huowang had no intentions of killing Wu Cheng. Otherwise, he would have slashed open Wu Cheng's neck instead of just biting his face.

Wu Cheng's face was drenched in blood, and he was in so much pain that he felt like passing out.

However, Li Huowang was meticulous enough to inflict pain that wouldn't make Wu Cheng faint. He couldn't let Wu Cheng faint, as he still had to interrogate the latter.

Li Huowang stood before Wu Cheng, who was groaning on the ground. He picked up a pen and waved it in front of Wu Cheng, saying, "Where does Xu Shou live?"

Xu Shou was the key here. He had to deal with Xu Shou, or he'd end up facing infinite trouble in the future.

Xu Shou had to be handled with, or Yang Na would never be safe.

Li Huowang didn't care even if he was sentenced to life in prison; he only cared about his beloved, and he would not let any harm come their way.

The kneeling Wu Cheng merely groaned in response to Li Huowang's question.

"All right. I don't know how to hypnotize, so I'll just show you another way to use a pen."

Li Huowang kicked Wu Cheng to the ground and straddled him. Then, he inserted the pen into Wu Cheng's nostril. He slowly pushed it in slowly as Wu Cheng trembled like an aspen tree in trepidation.

Wu Cheng immediately surrendered and exclaimed, "He's usually on his white cruise ship in Beihai Port!"

"Why is he living on a ship? Does he not have any houses?" Li Huowang asked. His hand was still moving, and Wu Cheng's nostril was already bleeding.

"It's all because he knows that things are going to become dangerous for him if something goes wrong. He plans to leave immediately once that happens, so he has only been living on his ship! I don't know if he has any houses here or overseas!"

Li Huowang's hand paused. He pulled the bloody pen out of Wu Cheng's nostril.

He then started sawing off his handcuffs and shackles.

Wu Cheng watched as sparks flew from the saw, and his expression changed from pain and fear to excitement. "It's actually real! You can really conjure things!"

Li Huowang glanced at Wu Cheng and said, "Huh, so you thought it was nonsense? Anyway, you better not move. Don't make me put this saw against your neck!"

After a while, Li Huowang was no longer shackled and in a handcuff. He then started taking off his blue and white patient gown.

"Take off your clothes!" Li Huowang exclaimed. Wu Cheng was caught off guard by Li Huowang's order, but he could only oblige. After all, he was facing a mentally ill individual armed with a dangerous weapon.

The two exchanged clothes. Li Huowang put on the doctor's white coat while Wu Cheng was forced to wear the bloody patient gown.

Under Li Huowang's threat, Wu Cheng obediently put on the muzzle and the damaged straitjacket.

Li Huowang took out Wu Cheng's phone and asked, "What's the pattern?"

"Z pattern."

Li Huowang unlocked the screen and found Yi Donglai's number in the contacts.

However, he didn't press the call button and made Wu Cheng press it instead. This time, the phone didn't electrocute him; it actually went through.

He listened anxiously to the ringing tone as he paced around the room.

"Hello? Junior, do you need something? Have you started writing your new thesis?"

"Doctor Yi! It's me!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He breathed a sigh of relief when Yi Donglai answered the call.

"Huh? Li Huowang? Why are you calling me using Junior Wu's personal phone? Where's Junior Wu?"

Li Huowang glanced at Wu Cheng on the ground and quickly explained, "Doctor Yi, I'm in an urgent situation, so let me get straight to the point! Wu Cheng is in cahoots with Wang Wei! And they have a mastermind!"

Once Li Huowang was done with his explanation, Yi Donglai went silent, seemingly falling into deep thought. "Huowang, have you been taking your medication over the past few days?"

"Why don't you trust me? Have you forgotten how you cured me?! Why does it sound like you don't believe even yourself? I'm not crazy! I'm already cured!"

"Okay, okay... just don't cause trouble in Kangning Hospital. I'll have someone pick you up and take you back to White Tower Prison."

"No! It's too late! They're already targeting me! I'd end up like a pig for slaughter if I were to stay here without doing anything! I must do something; I must address this problem at its roots!"

Yi Donglai seemed to understand what Li Huowang was going to do next, and his voice trembled as he said, “Li Huowang, don’t go anywhere and just wait there. If there really is a conspiracy here, then we can just call the police!”

“It’s too late! They’re already targeting my family! I don’t know what exactly they can do, so please help me, Doctor Yi! Call my parents and Yang Na! Tell them to hide! Tell them that someone wants to harm them!”

“Li Huowang, don’t go anywhere, all right? You can just go ahead and call them yourself!”

“No! They—” Li Huowang paused. Moments later, he said in a low voice, “They think I’m crazy, Doctor Yi. You’re the only one I can trust, so please help me!”

Li Huowang ended the call, but it immediately rang again. Yi Donglai was calling him.

Li Huowang rejected the call, but Yi Donglai called once again.

In the end, Li Huowang blocked Yi Donglai’s number.

Li Huowang stared at Wu Cheng, seemingly pondering over something. After a while, he fished out a bottle of medicine from the pocket of his white coat.

Li Huowang poured out a handful of it and brought it closer to Wu Cheng’s mouth. “Take it.”

Wu Cheng gulped a mouthful of saliva and said, “I can’t take those pills; they’re for the mentally ill. You should be the one to take them.”

“What happens if someone not mentally ill were to take it?”

“Their limbs will start trembling uncontrollably, and their thoughts will become sluggish. The patient’s hormones will be affected as well, and they’d suffer some degree of memory loss.”

“Great! That’s exactly what I want!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He opened Wu Cheng’s muzzle and stuffed the pills into the latter’s mouth.

Soon, Wu Cheng's movements and demeanor changed. His face became like a blank canvas as saliva dripped from the corners of his mouth. He looked not much different from the other patients.

Li Huowang glanced at the surveillance camera and saw that there were no changes to it.

He picked up the little saw on the ground and slashed at Wu Cheng.

A terrifying and gory sight was soon made as Li Huowang made cuts on Wu Cheng's figure. Of course, the wounds were not fatal.

Bang!

The tightly closed door was pushed open from the inside, and a doctor, with some blood on his face and on his white coat, rushed out, shouting, "Quick, bring a stretcher here! The patient is harming himself! He's already in hemorrhagic shock!"

The nurses and doctors rushed over to Li Huowang when they heard his cries for help.

Upon entering the room, they were met with a bizarre scene. A muzzled patient was sprawled out on the ground, and their face was covered in blood. It was a gruesome scene, and the patient seemed like they were already dead.

A deceased patient was a big deal in any hospital, so the group of nurses and doctors worked frantically to save the patient.

Meanwhile, the doctor who had reported the self-harm inexplicably vanished without a trace.

Chapter 602 - Arrival

Li Huowang looked nervous. He was sitting on the plastic seat of a public bus and was biting the back of his hand with his teeth.

His mind replayed everything that he had gone through recently as he stared at the streets outside.

He was wearing a white mask to cover the scars on his face and to make sure that he wouldn't get recognized.

After some hesitation, he took out Wu Cheng's phone and dialed a phone number that he had memorized.

"...Hello? Who is this?" Yang Na's soft voice sounded over the phone.

Li Huowang's heart trembled upon hearing her voice. It had been a very long time since he heard her voice.

"Hello? Who is this?"

Li Huowang quickly regained his composure. He pinched his throat and deliberately lowered his voice, "Hello, is this ID Good Rabbit? There are two parcels for you here. Can you please come out of school to pick them up? They're large, and it's not convenient for me to leave them at a storage unit."

"What? Parcels? I haven't bought anything, though..."

"Perhaps someone sent them to you. Please come out and sign the delivery forms."

"Sorry, I'm not available right now. I'm not at school today, too. If you can't leave them in a storage unit, then just return them."

Li Huowang was reassured upon hearing that. It seemed that Yi Donglai had conveyed his message to Yang Na.

Regardless of where Yang Na was hiding, it was much better than staying in one place.

They just needed to hold on until he reached Beihai Port. Once Xu Shou was no more, Yang Na would be safe.

“...Huowang?” Yang Na asked, sounding hesitant.

Li Huowang’s heart trembled, but he forcibly calmed himself down and said, “What? Anyway, all right. I’ll go and bring these two parcels back to the hub. I still have other parcels to deliver.”

With that, Li Huowang ended the call and blocked the number.

Li Huowang covered his mouth with his hand and closed his eyes in pain. He really wanted to meet Yang Na, but this wasn’t the right time.

She was in danger, and he had to ensure her safety before anything else.

Moreover, Li Huowang reckoned that Yang Na would only feel worried about him if he were to meet her right now.

Yang Na's mental health was already bad, and Li Huowang didn’t want her condition to worsen just because of a selfish decision on his end.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and looked at the others on the bus. For some reason, everything felt unfamiliar to him.

Of course, everything would feel unfamiliar, as it had been a while since he appeared in public.

Li Huowang fell into a daze, and his surroundings distorted, seemingly transforming from a bus to a wooden carriage.

“Beep~ Senior discount.” The voice of the bus' assistant echoing throughout the bus brought Li Huowang back to reality.

Just ten more stops, and I will be at the port. Stay calm, and don’t get recognized. Li Huowang adjusted his collar.

Just then, a bald old man with a fishing rod in hand started walking in Li Huowang's direction from the front of the bus.

When the bald old man saw Li Huowang’s eyes, he shivered in fright. Then, he stopped walking and turned around to hold on to the hanging handrail.

Li Huowang found the bald old man's actions to be suspicious.

Li Huowang tried to ignore it for a while, but he still felt uneasy, so he stood up and walked toward the bald old man to take a closer look at the latter.

Li Huowang's pupils constricted upon recognizing the bald old man. The bald old man was a fellow patient. More specifically, his name was Old Liu, and Li Huowang could still remember knocking out Old Liu's dentures with a punch.

The bus door opened just then, and the panicking Old Liu rushed down the bus with his fishing rod and bucket.

When Old Liu saw that Li Huowang was following him, he abandoned his fishing rod and bucket. Old Liu started breathing in ragged pants as he ran away desperately.

"Old Liu! Why are you running away?! I've recovered!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He caught up to Old Liu and grabbed the latter by the shoulder.

"I... I don't believe you!" Old Liu exclaimed. He struggled desperately and shouted in despair, "Help! Someone help! Call the police! This lunatic is a murderer!"

"Shut up! I'm going to kill you if you don't!" Li Huowang warned. He took out a little saw and pointed it at Old Liu's belly, who closed his mouth immediately.

He dragged Old Liu to behind a bush. Then, he breathed a sigh of relief upon seeing that Old Liu's screams didn't attract any attention from the sparse crowd.

Li Huowang took a moment to compose himself before explaining, "Sorry, I didn't mean to do this to you, but I have something important to do right now! I have to finish it before I get caught!"

Old Liu looked down at the bloodstains on the saw and gulped. "Okay, you... you can go, I promise I won't call the police."

"Heh, I know you too well. You cheated your way to victory in those card games with the other patients. I can't trust you at all. Anyway, is there anyone else at your home right now?" Li Huowang supported Old Liu as the two of them walked away from the bush.

"What.. what do you want?" Old Liu asked with an ashen look.

"There's no one at home. My... my son is at work, and my grandson is in school."

"I'm not going to do anything; I just need to make sure that you won't call the police once I've left you alone!"

"I really won't call the police, Little Li. Please spare me. I really was just sick at the time; I didn't mean to hurt your girlfriend."

Unfortunately, Old Liu's words didn't convince Li Huowang nor weaken his determination.

They soon arrived at Old Liu's home. It was a second-floor apart in a small residential area, and there was no one inside. Old Liu hadn't lied.

However, Li Huowang was still dissatisfied, so he decided to tape Old Liu to the toilet. He did it tightly so that Old Liu would find it difficult to break free.

He ignored Old Liu's pleas, but he didn't leave immediately. Instead, he went into the kitchen to select a handy tool.

A little saw wouldn't be enough to handle his opponent. He needed a handier and more powerful weapon.

"Little Li, I beg you, I really won't call the police!" Old Liu exclaimed. The crisp sound of metal scraping against metal echoed from the kitchen, and it made Old Liu shudder.

Li Huowang picked up a long-handled boning knife and returned to the bathroom.

"Little Li, you can kill me, but can you spare my grandson?" Old Liu pleaded in despair.

Li Huowang frowned deeply and said, "How many times must I tell you? I've recovered!"

"Yes, yes, you've recovered, you've recovered crazy," Old Liu said, nodding repeatedly like a chicken pecking at rice.

Li Huowang gagged Old Liu and even sealed it with tape to ensure that Old Liu wouldn't be able to make any noises. "Sorry, you've recognized me, so I have no choice but to do this."

Having resolved the unexpected danger, Li Huowang pushed the door open and walked out of the apartment.

Li Huowang went down the stairs and returned to the bus stop at the entrance of the residential area. He hopped onto a bus that was heading to Beihai Port.

As the number of people on the bus dwindled, the frown on Li Huowang's face became tighter.

Soon, they arrived at the port, and the stacked shipping containers made him feel oppressed.

Li Huowang was in a dilemma. How could he infiltrate the place?

Chapter 603 - Wooden Ship

The New Year festivities had just ended, so the weather was still cold. It was so cold that the seawater's coldness had to be bone-chilling.

However, this bit of cold was nothing to Li Huowang, who had gone through countless battles.

Li Huowang was beneath a crowded wooden pier. He projected his image and submerged his colored phantom. His invisible figure peeked out of the water and stared at his distant target.

There was a huge wooden ship, and it wasn't just any ship. It was huge and was even larger than the warships Li Huowang had seen around Xing Island.

The bow of the huge wooden ship was like a massive fish as it sat on the water's surface. It had a wooden-yellow color, making it appear like an oppressive mountain.

I finally caught up! Hmph! Trying to escape, huh? Leaving Great Liang immediately when the situation seems amiss? Not that easy! You still owe me for the ambush that you and Huangfu Tiangang had done against me! Li Sui, let's go!

Li Sui's tentacles extended from Li Huowang's wound, and they moved swiftly in the seawater, propelling Li Huowang toward the bizarre flat-bottomed wooden ship.

Li Huowang had lost three of his limbs, and Li Sui's skinned tentacles, which resembled a dog's limbs, replaced his lost limbs. Even his left hand, which only had one finger remaining, was replaced by Li Sui.

Li Sui was attached to Li Huowang, so he could use her limbs skillfully as if they were his own.

At first, he was hesitant about the idea of making a break for it, but he decided to make a break for it after surviving Huangfu Tiangang's ambush.

This huge wooden ship would sail away before he could recover his limbs, so he couldn't wait for them to recover.

Fortunately, Li Sui's tentacles were great tools for swimming, and Li Sui herself was comfortable in the water as if she were a fish.

Soon, Li Huowang was touching the wooden hull of the ship. Instead of immediately making a move, he waited quietly for nightfall to sneak his way onto the ship.

He wasn't afraid that the ship might sail away as he dilly-dallied, as he was already near its hull.

Time ticked by slowly, and the sky gradually darkened as the sun shifted westward.

As the lights in the distant pier disappeared, Li Huowang stuck his black tentacles to the hull, and just like that, he rapidly climbed up the hull.

He placed his one remaining finger on the side of the ship and poked his head out to look around. His projection ability was concealing his figure at the moment, so Li Huowang wasn't particularly nervous about this.

The ship's bow was massive, and the front deck was as big as a soccer field. However, the vast field was desolate. Li Huowang couldn't see anything other than smoke from the three burning incense inside a giant cauldron on the bow.

The three columns of white smoke rising from the incense took to the air and disappeared into the darkness.

There were some offerings before the triangular display stand, which stood right in front of the cauldron.

In addition to the usual pig, cow, and sheep heads, there were incense, candles, yellow paper, and gold ingots.

“Dad, what are they worshipping?”

“Don’t worry about what they’re worshipping. Our goal is to find Doulao’s Twisted One and kill him! Everything else is irrelevant.”

Li Huowang dragged his crippled figure toward the cabin. His senses were heightened to their absolute limit at the moment, so he could feel every single movement around him. He was planning on brute forcing his way in if he ended up getting detected by any of the crew.

Soon, Li Huowang found himself standing before the cabin door. He opened it cautiously, but nothing happened.

What kind of trickery is this? Could it be that the Twisted One really can’t detect my hidden self? Li Huowang thought as he placed his back against the wall and slowly entered the cabin. It was larger and more crowded than Li Huowang had imagined. The cabin was filled with clutter, and both walls were densely packed with wooden carvings of buildings. It was like a three-dimensional version of a famous Qingming painting[1] hanging on the wall.

The wooden carvings were incredibly realistic depictions of wooden tiles, pine trees, sleeves, donkeys, horses, and even cow dung.

Li Huowang was on high alert as he reached behind him and grabbed the hilt of the spine sword.

As soon as he touched the hilt of the spine sword, everything on the wall came to life. A crowd of tiny people rushed to the windows and pointed curiously at Li Huowang.

They can see me! Li Huowang’s figure flickered, and he reappeared a yard away. He had no time to entangle with these things, so he quickly rushed forward.

Thump! Peng Longteng’s tall figure landed heavily next to Li Huowang. She raised her fist, which was wrapped in heavy armor, and smashed it into the wooden carvings on the wall.

Peng Longteng sent a few more punches before she abruptly froze and became a wood carving.

What are those? Li Huowang gripped the spine sword tightly and swung it toward the wall, creating a spacetime rift that sent the wooden carvings flying toward the Great Qi.

When the spacetime rift shattered the wooden wall, a wooden eye socket densely packed with eyeballs in a variety of sizes stared at Li Huowang, making his scalp feel numb.

Li Huowang saw that the path had gotten narrower, so he raised the purple-tasseled sword and thrust it into the ground before carving open a hole in the cabin.

Li Huowang wasted no time and jumped into the hole.

The lower deck of the ship was darker than Li Huowang had anticipated. It was so dark that he could not even see his fingers.

Li Huowang took out a green glowing stone, and a distorted, laughing face abruptly appeared before him.

Li Huowang responded quickly. He raised his sword and slashed out, but he forcefully stopped his attack. He took a step back and took a good look at the face that was over three meters tall.

If he wasn't mistaken, then the towering object before him was one of the Eight Immortals, Tieguai Li[2]. More precisely, it was a root carving[3] of Tieguai Li.

It seemed that the carving was made in a way that would emphasize the growth of the roots rather than make the intertwined roots appear like a person.

The carving depicted densely packed tree burls that had been assimilated by Tieguai Li.

Tieguai Li had no legs, as they had been replaced by twisted roots, which made him look rather bizarre and disfigured.

After confirming that the Tieguai Li before him was just an inanimate root carving, Li Huowang backed away slowly.

Just as he took a few steps backward, he felt someone's gaze boring into him from behind.

Li Huowang whipped around and saw one of the Eight Immortals, Lu Dongbin. It was another root carving, but it looked like he was carved from roots that had been eaten by insects.

Lu Dongbin's overall appearance was exactly the same as Tieguai Li's appearance. However, Lu Dongbin's interior seemed hollow as his figure was riddled with holes in a variety of sizes. Clearly, those holes were made by the insects that had devoured his figure.

Li Huowang stood frozen. After a while, he took out all the glowing stones that he had brought from Zephyr Temple and hurled them in all directions.

In the blink of an eye, the root carvings of Eight Immortals in many different poses were revealed around him.

Chapter 604 - Eight Immortals

The dark-brown root carvings of the Eight Immortals looked extremely bizarre beneath the green light that had pervaded the dim and spacious tweendeck of the ship.

The remaining Eight Immortals looked far more terrifying compared to Tieguai Li and Lu Dongbin. They had the same root-like appearance as root carvings, but they all had their own peculiar characteristics.

For example, He Xiang's neck was twisted like a twisted fried dough[1].

Han Zhongli's chest was bare, and his proportions were inconsistent. He looked particularly disgusting as well, looking like a rotten chunk of fat that had been left outside for too long.

A deafening silence hung over the dim tweendeck. Li Huowang couldn't hear any other noises aside from his own breathing.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the root carvings of the Eight Immortals. Anything related to immortality was always a bad thing in this crazy world!

“Li Sui, let's go! Find Douluo's Twisted One and end this as soon as possible!” Li Huowang exclaimed and projected his image once again. He rushed past the root carvings and headed into the distance.

Just as he walked out of the crowd of root carvings, an eerie creaking noise echoed from behind him.

Li Huowang immediately turned around and saw the root carvings of the Eight Immortals standing in a row; their bizarre eyes were fixed on him—they could actually move!

Pop!

A popping sound echoed as a glowing stone that Li Huowang had thrown burst open.

Unfortunately, it was just the beginning.

A series of popping noises echoed as more and more glowing stones exploded into pieces.

Soon, the root carvings of the Eight Immortals vanished into the darkness.

Li Huowang's vision was excellent, but the surroundings were too dark for him to see anything unless they were only a few feet away from him.

A melody echoed from Han Xiangzi's flute, and a cacophony of voices from both men and women pervaded the tweendeck.

"The superior avoids conflict; the inferior loves strife. The superior is humble; the inferior clings to virtues. Those stubborn do not possess true virtues."

Deafening peals of laughter coming from both elderly and young people pervaded the dark cabin; the laughter sounded bizarre, as if they were layered on top of each other.

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth as the laughter entered his ears. He gripped the spine sword with his right hand and swung it toward where he last saw the root carvings of the Eight Immortals.

Then, he rushed toward the spacetime rift that led to the Great Qi.

Li Huowang lowered himself and got ready to dodge to the left to avoid any possible attacks when Lu Dongbin's root carving appeared on his left without any warning.

When Li Huowang jumped to the left, the large hole in Lu Dongbin's chest opened like a gaping maw, seemingly waiting for him to fall into it.

Li Sui's tentacles burst out of Li Huowang and stuck to the floor, sparing Li Huowang the horrible fate of making contact with Lu Dongbin's gaping maw.

What are these things?! Li Huowang gritted his teeth. He lifted both the spine sword and the purple-tasseled sword and swung them toward Lu Dongbin.

Crack!

Lu Dongbin's root carving was split in half.

At the same time, Li Huowang was tripped by something, and he stumbled to his left.

Han Xiangzi's twisted bamboo flute stood tall, seemingly waiting for Li Huowang on the floor.

It stood tall in a way that it would pierce Li Huowang's temple if he truly ended up falling to the floor.

Just as he was less than an inch away from Han Xiangzi's flute, Han Xiangzi was suddenly dragged away by someone else.

Shiwik!

Li Huowang stabbed the swords into the ground, stabilizing himself. He then stood up with a furious look and asked, "Have you had enough fun, you bunch of rotten wood?"

Sparks flew from a flint as Li Huowang was set ablaze. The flames were like a viral infection as they jumped onto the half-immortal root carvings.

The dark cabin brightened instantly as the root carvings caught fire.

The stationary root carvings of the Eight Immortals made another move. The burning tree stumps and roots writhed as their charred figures crawled toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was about to set fire to the entire ship when the wooden planks on the ground split open, allowing seawater to come in.

The seawater extinguished the flames, plunging the entire deck into darkness.

A piercing noise echoed as the remaining flames resisted the encroaching water.

The submerged Li Huowang convulsed upon hearing the piercing noise. However, he had never been the type to give up so easily, so he took out his rib, which was stored in his belly button, and shoved it into his chest.

The pain wreaking havoc throughout Li Huowang was instantly shared with everything around him, and the cacophony of noises vanished.

“So you want to play, huh? Fine! I’ll sink this entire ship for you!” Li Huowang exclaimed. His charred figure swam to the nearest wall, and he slashed out haphazardly with his spine sword.

Rifts appeared in the hull, and a large amount of seawater was displaced every time Li Huowang swung his sword.

The icy seawater rushed back in shortly upon being displaced, but the rifts in the hull writhed and intertwined with each other to seal the rifts.

To make matters worse, the bizarre-looking root carvings of the Eight Immortals appeared in the dark waters.

A layer of charcoal covered the root carvings of the Eight Immortals, and they looked even more terrifying as the charcoal enveloping them dispersed like black mist in the icy cold waters.

Lu Dongbin's root carving had miraculously recovered, even though Li Huowang had split it into two earlier. He stood firmly with the other root carvings as they surrounded Li Huowang.

Finally, the root carvings of the Eight Immortals made their move. A black mist spread from their charred figures as they rushed nimbly toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang raised his weapons. The spine sword in his right hand blocked He Xiangü’s lotus, while his left hand thrust the purple-tasseled sword into Zhang Guolao’s face.

Li Huowang then opened his mouth wide, revealing a mouth full of tentacles that wrapped around Han Zhongli’s head before twisting it off the latter's shoulders.

Li Sui stood bravely next to Li Huowang, brandishing the bronze coin sword to fight the enemies. Li Huowang was taken aback and was completely surrounded, but he still had the advantage.

Unfortunately, these carvings of half-immortals were difficult to handle. Even decapitation wasn't enough to deal with them; Li Huowang had to crush them into powder to render them immobile.

Li Huowang was making quick work of them, but there was one big issue—he was running out of steam.

The tweendeck wasn't that huge, especially when it was jam-packed with enemies, so Li Huowang had to make agile movements to avoid getting injured. To make matters worse, he was drenched in icy cold seawater. The exertion made Li Huowang feel like his lungs were on fire. His expression became increasingly agonized as time ticked by, and the bulging veins on his forehead seemed like they'd burst open anytime soon.

Li Huowang's instincts were telling him to surface as soon as possible. Unfortunately, Li Huowang was in the lower hold of the ship, and the bizarre root carvings of the Eight Immortals were not letting him go, which made it impossible for him to swim away.

Li Huowang's consciousness became blurrier and blurrier as he was running out of air. His situation eventually became so bad that he started hallucinating.

“Hah!” Li Huowang spat the dagger in his mouth and desperately gasped for air upon surfacing. After a few deep breaths, he dove fiercely and swam toward the depths of the sea.

The deep breaths on the surface had allowed him to come back to his senses and recover his strength.

1. mahua, a fried dough that is lightly twisted and sweetened

Chapter 605 - Strayed One, Twisted One

Despite the darkness, Li Huowang had ample oxygen in his lungs, so he wasn't too worried at the moment.

The fate of the Eight Immortals in the seawater was obvious as well.

Soon, black and yellow wood chips pervaded the seawater around Li Huowang. The root carvings were agile, but he reckoned that they couldn't swim.

Having dealt with the root carvings of the Eight Immortals, the black tentacles that sprouted on Li Huowang's stumps swung rapidly, carrying him toward the sea surface.

Li Huowang soon found himself gasping for air on deck.

The other party knew that he was coming, so stealth had become meaningless. In the end, Li Huowang decided to confront the other party directly.

Li Huowang believed that he wouldn't necessarily lose in a head-on confrontation, as the two of them were Twisted Ones of a Siming.

Swoosh!

A spacetime rift flew and struck the bronze incense cauldron with three sticks of incense sticking out of it. The cauldron shattered, and ash scattered all over the ground.

"Come out! If you don't come out, I'm going to burn this ship down to the ground!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He looked down at his charred figure with barely any skin left. The next moment, he pulled out a flint and scratched his skin.

Sparks flew, and a conflagration erupted, enveloping him completely in an instant.

The raging flames spread outward from Li Huowang's feet.

Swoosh!

The cabin door swung open, and a large group of people rushed into the cabin.

The crowd was dressed in clothes that Li Huowang had never seen before, and their skin was slightly darker than the average person.

When the crowd dressed in strange clothes saw that Li Huowang was trying to burn down the ship, their eyes blazed with anger.

It seemed as if they had gone mad as they brandished their weapons and charged at Li Huowang.

There were some skilled fighters among them, but it was futile. As the flames spread, they ultimately became fuel that further intensified the flames.

The fire grew larger and larger. As the entire ship was about to become engulfed in flames, the flames disappeared rapidly. Time seemed to rewind like a tape as the charred wooden boards reverted to their original color. Eerily enough, the bronze incense cauldron, which had been split into two by Li Huowang actually returned to its original state.

A creaking noise echoed, and a nearby hatch opened.

A man dressed in tattered clothes with a leash around his neck crawled out slowly from the hatch. The rusty chain that linked his neck to the cabin rubbed against the ground, creating a harsh scraping sound.

He wasn't alone. Someone else crawled out of the hatch; more and more people crawled out until there were five of them outside.

They all looked normal, but they had identical pupils.

Li Huowang's expression turned solemn, and he clenched his fists. At last, the mastermind was here.

“Stand up.” An aged voice echoed from the pitch-black cabin. The expression of the five people became dull, and they stood up to repeat the aged voice's words.

“Stand up.”

“Stand up.”

“Stand up.”

“Stand up.”

“Stand up.”

Li Huowang remained calm as he faced the five strange individuals. He stared at the pitch-black cabin behind them and asked, “Are you the Twisted One hidden by Doulao?”

Just then, Li Huowang heard the sound of horse hooves on his left. He turned and saw waves of yellow dust rising from the pier in the distance.

It seemed that someone was coming to the pier. Unfortunately, their efforts were useless, as the ship was already quite a bit distant from the pier.

Li Huowang looked away and stared into the darkness. “Come out. I'm already here, so is there any point in hiding?”

Thump!

The headless Peng Longteng landed heavily next to Li Huowang. She took big strides forward and charged at the five people.

“Break their legs.” The aged voice sounded once again.

The five strange individuals repeated the aged voice's words, and the legs of the charging Peng Longteng were abruptly severed, causing her to slam heavily onto the wooden floor.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the five people, and he suddenly felt creeped out. The other party's ability to make their words come true made him think of something ominous. Strayed Ones? These five people are Strayed Ones?!

If Li Huowang's assumption was right, then it finally made sense how the walls had healed themselves. Li Huowang knew that the 'Truth' of Strayed Ones could do something like that.

The person hiding in the cabin seemed like they didn't want to answer Li Huowang's question.

When the Strayed Ones spoke in unison once again, the deck cracked open, and Li Huowang fell straight down into the lower hold.

Li Huowang recovered his balance and looked up to see the five Strayed Ones getting dragged away by the iron chains around their necks. Eventually, they were hung on the wall, making them look like five hanging ghosts.

As a Strayed One himself, Li Huowang could empathize with them. He found it disgusting how the other party was using these Strayed Ones as tools to fight for him.

The other party had transformed five living people into puppets.

Fortunately, Li Huowang was extremely familiar with Strayed Ones, and he had his own way of dealing with them as well.

When the other party opened their mouth to say something once again, Li Huowang took out an awl and pierced his eardrums without any hesitation.

The next moment, he closed his eyes and charged at the wall where the five Strayed Ones were hanging.

Li Sui watched as her father charged at the wall despite stepping on the fallen objects on the ground. The wooden boards that made up the lower hold were liquifying rapidly, but Li Huowang didn't seem to care as he continued his charge.

A giant wall covered with barbs, and a bucket of boiling molten iron fell toward Li Huowang, but he easily knocked them aside.

"Die!" Two spacetime rifts that led straight to the Great Qi flew toward the five Strayed Ones.

When Li Huowang opened his eyes once again, he saw that the Strayed Ones were dragged away by the chains on their necks, so they managed to dodge the attack.

However, Li Huowang was not disappointed at all. He already knew what he was going to do if his attack failed.

The opponent hiding in the darkness of the cabin was about to open their mouth when Li Huowang took out a bronze bell and shook it vigorously.

He had no intention of summoning the Wandering Gods; he just wanted to use the piercing sound of the bell to interrupt the other party's commands to the Strayed Ones.

Strayed Ones were difficult opponents, so Li Huowang decided to disrupt his opponent's commands instead.

The five Strayed Ones stopped moving. Li Huowang saw that, so he swung his left hand toward the cabin door, hurling two slender tentacles that wrapped around the cabin door itself.

Li Huowang tugged forcefully, propelling himself into the dark cabin next door as if he were a stone leaving a slingshot. He moved so fast that he left behind a trail of afterimages.

Chapter 606 - Truths Or Lies

The cabin next door was made entirely out of wood and was only as big as a classroom, but it resembled more like a chamber of an ant's nest.

The walls were filled with engravings, and the tiny engraved people on the walls were moving and pointing at Li Huowang, making the entire cabin quite lively.

Li Huowang finally saw the true body of Yinyang Doulao's Twisted One.

The Twisted One was a bare-chested man sitting on a brown chair. The man was also wearing a mask similar to the mask in front of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's entrance.

The only difference was that this particular mask boasted tusks that made the mask appear even more menacing.

The man was skinny, but his abdomen was abnormally large. A tattoo of two fishes representing Yin and Yang was on the man's abdomen. Shockingly, the two fishes were alive and swimming!

The chains connected to the five Strayed Ones were in the left hand of the Twisted One.

Clearly, he was the owner of the aged voice. Li Huowang also noticed that the Twisted One didn't have legs—no, his legs had fused with the brown chair.

Li Huowang opened his mouth to start asking questions, but it seemed that the other party didn't want to talk to Li Huowang right now.

The bare-chested man tugged at the chains, and the five Strayed Ones were dragged into the cabin.

They wasted no time and charged at Li Huowang from behind.

The five Strayed Ones said something, and the wooden boards on the ground flew toward Li Huowang.

"Can you guys stop?!" Li Huowang was furious. He gripped his spine sword tightly and ignored the Strayed Ones behind him before charging at the bare-chested man.

Li Huowang had just swung his sword when his supposedly deaf ears heard something from behind the Twisted One's mask.

"One obtains Dao at Mount Tian Tai and becomes Immortal at Mount Ge Zao. The Jade Capital's Golden Gates opens within the Tai Chi. Great Compassion, Great Aspirations, Great Holiness, and Great Mercy. The Supreme Jade Capital hidden within the mechanisms of the Heavens. The Jade Void and Purple Spirit transforms into profound tranquility. The Eternal Dao blends harmoniously," the bare-chested man sang along with the five Strayed Ones behind Li Huowang.

As they sang, Li Huowang and the illusions around him flickered. It appeared like something was disappearing from them.

Rumble!

A spacetime rift came to life and struck the bare-chested man's face. However, the spacetime rift dissipated like a gentle breeze instead of bisecting the man.

It's useless on him? Is he another Dragon Vein?! Li Huowang was stupefied, but he refused to give up.

Peng Longteng's massive figure appeared beside him, and she hurled him toward the bare-chested man.

Li Huowang crashed into the man's mask. The purple-tasseled sword in his hand and the bronze coin sword gripped by Li Sui's tentacles were thrust into the man's enlarged abdomen at the same time.

Shockingly, both swords phased through the man and struck the brown chair instead.

Li Huowang was so surprised that he froze, but he snapped back to reality in the blink of an eye and thrust his swords forward once again.

Unfortunately, his swords were indeed phasing through the bare-chested man. To make matters worse, even the brown chair was unharmed.

“Something’s wrong here!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He raised his sword and stabbed his thigh.

The sharp sword pierced his thigh, but he felt no pain at all. Eerily enough, his sword did not get stained in his blood as well.

Seeing that, Li Huowang realized that the bare-chested man wasn't a Dragon Vein. The issue was with him; something was happening to him!

It felt like he had ceased to exist the moment Yinyang Doulao's Twisted One clapped his eyes on him.

Li Huowang felt like he had become a ghost, as he couldn't touch anything, including himself.

“What’s going on?” Li Huowang asked, sounding confused.

“You’ve become a ‘Lie’! Quick, think of a plan while I distract Doulao!” A familiar voice exclaimed.

Just then, the ceiling of the cabin opened, and Doulao's Twisted One took the five Strayed Ones to kneel toward the skies.

“Not existing, yet not empty. Such is the true void, manifesting its traces in the world. Guard the sage’s chariot in Yanfu. Great Compassion, Great Aspirations, Great Holiness, and Great Mercy. Of a saintly virtue with immense radiance. O’ golden revered one, the Great Sage of Marici, Yuanming Doulao Tianzun!”

The starry sky was blotted out by a clump of darkness. It felt like something was about to emerge.

“Not existing yet not empty? Did I become fake? Did I really become a ‘Lie’?”

Li Huowang's actions couldn't influence reality at all, and it seemed like he had truly lost against his opponent.

No! There must be some other way! As a Twisted One, he can use Doulao's Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies! And I'm Ji Zai's Twisted One, so I can definitely use his Heavenly Dao!

"But how am I supposed to use 'Bewilderment'?" Li Huowang roared in anger.

He was badly injured and was in a bad spot. His weapon was nothing but a knife, and he couldn't defeat Xu Shou's guard dogs. To make matters worse, Xu Shou's men were even equipped with guns!

Boom!

Something exploded up ahead. It was a wooden frame, and its explosion forced him into a corner.

"Woof! Woof! Woof!" Furious barks echoed, reminding Li Huowang of the five pit bulls chasing after him.

Those dogs seemed to have been trained to fight. They were brave and fearless; they were also difficult to shake off once they had latched onto someone.

The pit bulls seemed immune to pain as well, which made Li Huowang's knife useless.

One of them had latched onto him, so he sacrificed his left arm to kill it, but he didn't expect to see more!

Li Huowang heard approaching footsteps, and his expression changed drastically, revealing his unwillingness to lose. "Is this how it ends? No! I need to do something to eliminate their weapons!"

Thankfully, he had a contingency plan in mind for a scenario like this.

Li Huowang took out a bottle of pills and opened it. Then, he dumped every single pill into his mouth.

He chewed on them once and swallowed them with great difficulty.

Moments later, Li Huowang's surroundings changed drastically.

The white walls of the yacht transformed into brown wooden panels. Earlier, Li Huowang had been thinking frantically about how he could use the special Heavenly Dao of Bewilderment, but now, he was no longer worried as he could touch his head once again! He was no longer a spirit that couldn't influence reality!

Chapter 607 - Xu Shou

Li Huowang had no idea what happened, but he knew that it was a good thing that he was real once again.

Li Huowang attacked immediately, afraid that he'd become fake once again.

“Father, my bronze coin sword is missing,” Li Sui said.

However, Li Huowang was focused on the bare-chested man kneeling on the ground as well as the five Strayed Ones. He had no idea what Li Sui was talking about.

“Die!” Li Huowang swung his spine sword toward the five Strayed Ones.

The praying Strayed Ones didn't expect that Li Huowang would become real once again.

The heads of the five Strayed Ones were sent to the Qi Kingdom.

“Touch your head! Your head is missing!” Li Huowang exclaimed.

The five Strayed Ones heard him and tried to touch their head to no avail. They went limp and fell to the ground the moment they realized that they were dead. They never got up again.

Li Huowang then pointed his sword at the Twisted One.

Their gazes met in mid-air, and that was when the deck split open like a monstrous maw. The sharp edges of the wooden floor engulfed the two and shut tight.

The wooden spikes were like jagged teeth as they closed up.

The cabin became silent and devoid of any living being.

The dark clouds in the skies expanded as time ticked by. From the darkest part of the clouds appeared a single eyeball. It was the Sacred Mountain Ghost Eye that Doulao had taken from the Liang Kingdom.

Just then, a blood-red maggot chewed through the wooden floorboards and consumed everything around it.

However, it was just the beginning; more and more maggots chewed through the wooden boards.

Soon, the wooden boards were riddled with holes, and Li Huowang could see the skies once more.

Li Huowang's chest was hollow, and the cavity was filled with wriggling maggots. He didn't hesitate to sacrifice his organs to use Five Elements Intercalation against the Twisted One of Doulao.

Li Huowang obtained a tremendous amount of power in exchange for his life. A whistling sound echoed; the air itself screeched as Li Huowang thrust his spine sword into the Twisted One's bulging belly, pinning the latter to the wooden boards.

Li Huowang twisted his sword, and the dark clouds spread even faster.

It was useless, but the Twisted One extended his arms and tried pushing the spine sword upward.

"You refuse to die?" Li Huowang asked. His tentacles launched the Twisted One into the air, and he thrust his sword into the Twisted One's chest once again.

The sword sunk deeper, and Li Huowang pinned the Twisted One into the wooden board once again.

At last, Li Huowang had fulfilled Ji Zai's request.

Rumble!

The dark skies abruptly changed, and Li Huowang phased through the spine sword!

The spine sword was sticking out of him, but he felt no pain.

Li Huowang instantly realized that he had become a "Lie," but it wasn't just him. The massive wooden ship and the stretch of the ocean around them were vanishing in real time. These "Truths" were vanishing and were being replaced by "Lies."

However, it didn't last long.

The "Truth" reappeared as fast as it disappeared, replacing the "Lie."

Qiu Chibao, the old monk, and Jin Shanzhao suddenly realized that they had fleshly bodies.

"I'm alive? Have I really been resurrected? I can do good deeds again?!" the old monk exclaimed, jumping around on the spot.

What's happening? Li Huowang unknowingly looked up. "Is this how Natural Disasters occur?"

Doulao's Twisted One had been dealt with, so Ji Zai was most likely in the middle of snatching away Yinyang Doulao's Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies.

Natural Disasters occurred whenever a Siming was in the middle of robbing another Siming's Heavenly Dao.

Realizing that she had a fleshly body once again, Peng Longteng decisively abandoned Li Huowang and ran toward the gunwale.

She was about to climb the gunwale and jump overboard, but her figure phased through it—she was an illusion once more.

"Ah~ I'm an illusion again?" the old monk said, sounding disappointed upon sensing the change.

"Is it over?" Li Huowang muttered. He closed his eyes and felt his surroundings.

The Natural Disaster was over, which meant his Siming, Ji Zai, had completely taken over Doulao's Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies.

It was a good thing to have control over two Heavenly Daos, but Li Huowang felt nothing.

Just then, a strange whirling sound echoed from above him.

Li Huowang looked up, and the strong wind blowing across the scene sent Li Huowang's hair flying backward.

The red lights up above revealed that Li Huowang was staring at a helicopter.

Li Huowang smiled when he saw the words painted on the underside of the helicopter.

“So Old Liu still called the police.”

The situation was out of control, and Li Huowang knew that it wouldn't be easy to deal with the aftermath, especially when there was an entire yacht of corpses around him.

He looked down indifferently at the dying Xu Shou.

At least my parents and Yang Na will be safe now.

Li Huowang stared at the mastermind and felt extremely repulsed. He bent down and grabbed the man's sunglasses for himself.

“I'm not blaming you for anything, even though you've put me in such a tight spot. You even made me lose an arm. Anyway, be careful in your next life.”

Xu Shou's lip quivered as if he wanted to say something. His hands, saddled with rings, were pressing on the wound that the bronze coin sword had made.

“Hm? What did you say?” Li Huowang got closer, and his pupils constricted.

He realized that Xu Shou without the sunglasses looked extremely familiar to him!

A strange face appeared in his mind. He soon recalled the nuns covered in filth. He had seen Xu Shou in the Benevolent Nunnery!

“Xu'er? Are you Xu'er?!” Li Huowang hurriedly asked, “Are you really the son of Abbess Jing Xin?!”

Li Huowang closely examined Xu Shou and became even more certain that Xu Shuo resembled the shriveled man hidden in the Abbess' folds of fat.

The man was none other than the son of the Abbess, and he was a Strayed One as well!

Li Huowang felt his hair standing on end. He felt like his skull itself was expanding uncontrollably as a torrent of information surged into his brain like a deluge. He was fine just a few seconds ago, but now, he was filled with many different thoughts.

Chapter 608 - Lies And Truth

“Xu’er...”

It had been a long time, but Li Huowang could still remember the name that Abbess Jing Xin had given to her son.

However, he had never imagined that Xu Shou was actually Xu’er!

The Abbess’ son was a Strayed One, but to think that he’d have another body on this side!

The implications were unmistakable, and Li Huowang felt overwhelmed by the deluge of information inundating his mind.

However, all of it could wait...

Li Huowang needed to ask what Xu Shou was trying to do with him.

“Xu Shou! Why did you do this to me?! What are you planning on doing to me?!” Li Huowang exclaimed, staring at the old man.

“Cough, cough...” Xu Shou coughed up blood as Li Huowang helped him up. Xu Shou then stared at Li Huowang with his glazed but determined eyes.

His pale lips quivered to say something, but...

“... “

Li Huowang looked up and glared at the helicopter, “Scram! You are too noisy! I can’t hear him!”

With that, he pulled Xu Shou closer to him and pressed his left ear against Xu Shou’s mouth to hear what the latter had to say.

Xu Shou parted his mouth once again, and a familiar voice entered his ears.

“Huowang? Huowang, focus now. It’s your turn.”

Li Huowang snapped back to reality and looked around him. His surroundings had changed.

The boat, Xu Shou, and even the helicopter had disappeared.

The chaotic surroundings had been replaced by a tranquil one. The shift was so drastic that he found it extremely uncomfortable.

He looked down at himself and saw that his wounds, even his missing arm, had vanished. It seemed like he had traveled back in time to just a few days ago.

Li Huowang realized that he was back on his plastic chair. He was sitting in a circle along with the other patients back in Kangning Hospital.

The hall was quiet and peaceful.

“Li Huowang? What’s wrong?” Wu Cheng asked. He was in his white robes and was staring at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang stared at Wu Cheng and saw that the latter's face was unscathed. Li Huowang could still remember how he had bitten off a chunk of Wu Cheng's face, but now, there wasn't even a scar left.

Li Huowang had tortured Wu Cheng, but the latter's eyes reflected no emotions except for concern. It seemed like nothing had happened between him and Li Huowang.

“Have you discovered anything strange with your illness? I'm your doctor, so feel free to talk to me. I will do my best to help you while you're here.”

Li Huowang looked at him with a conflicted feeling before opening his mouth, saying, “Doctor Wu, I feel like something has happened just now.”

Then, Li Huowang recounted what had happened to him.

After listening to Li Huowang's recount, Wu Cheng crossed his arms and frowned. “It’s normal for you to have hallucinations since it’s written on the report, but usually, only those with autism suffer from fragmented perception. Actually, it's strange that your fragmented perception happened in your hallucination."

Autism? Fragmented thoughts? Li Huowang looked around in confusion before looking at the autistic boy nearby.

The boy smiled, but he froze all of a sudden and stared out into space. He looked just like Li Huowang earlier, seemingly stuck in an endless cycle.

Was everything fake just now? Was it all my imagination? Impossible! It was too real to be fake! A hallucination couldn't be that real!

Li Huowang knew that there was something wrong going on here, so he needed to investigate it.

"Doctor Wu, lend me your phone. I need to call Doctor Yi."

"All right. The rules actually don't allow me to do so, but I'll make an exception today," Wu Cheng said. He unlocked his phone and passed it to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's suspicion vanished at Wu Cheng's reply. Wu Cheng has actually changed...

Li Huowang took out the slip of paper that Yi Donglai had given him and called the number written on it.

The phone was ringing, but no one was picking it up.

The tiny pond in front of him looked familiar. It was a certain pond in Cowheart Village.

The battle with Doulao's Twisted One, the boat, and even his belly full of maggots were gone. It truly felt like he had gone back in time and entered a timeline where the Imperial Preceptor hadn't done anything to him.

The ringing of a phone vanished. Li Huowang turned to the skies and exclaimed, "Come out here! Did you do this to me?! What did you do to me?"

And that was when something bizarre happened...

Li Huowang watched as his own reflection emerged from the pond before him.

“What’s wrong? Isn’t this great? Everything is back to normal.”

“Good? What do you mean 'good'? What happened? What happened to the boat? Why did it disappear? Are my thoughts fragmented?!” Li Huowang shouted at Ji Zai.

Ji Zai pondered over his answer before replying, “I’ve taken the Heavenly Dao of Truth and Lies from Yinyang Doulao. And I turned everything that had happened into a ‘Lie.’”

Li Huowang was frustrated. “What are you talking about?”

“I told you that everything you care for might become fake, while everything that is fake might become real. Did you think I was lying?”

Li Huowang’s frustration intensified at Ji Zai’s words, “But what happened just now was real! How could it just disappear?”

“What is real and what is fake? Are you sure that everything you’re touching is real? What about everything you’ve experienced so far? Are you sure they’re real? If so, then how are you going to prove it?” Ji Zai asked; his questions stumped Li Huowang. “Stop thinking about the past. What’s done is done. Start looking forward.”

Ji Zai returned to the water and merged with Li Huowang’s reflection.

“I forgot to inform you of a good news. I’ve taken control of three and a half Heavenly Daos—Bewilderment, Truth, Lies, and the Heavenly Dao of Chaos from the Sacred Mountain Ghost. You don’t have to worry about anything else. I can finally defend myself.”

“Stop talking in riddles! You have to tell me what happened just now! I still have no idea what happened!”

“Great. Just keep moving forward,” Ji Zai replied, refusing to answer Li Huowang’s question.

“Screw you!” Li Huowang swung his spine sword at Ji Zai upon realizing that the latter had made a fool of him.

This was the first time Li Huowang detested his future self.

Unfortunately, the reflection of himself in the water sustained no injuries, no matter how many times he slashed his sword at the pond.

“You should be happy as my Twisted One. Since I’ve gotten stronger, you should have reaped some profits as well.”

“I don’t want any of those!” Li Huowang exclaimed and swung the spine sword, parting the water in the pond.

Once the parted water returned to normal, Li Huowang shouted, “I’ve done all of your requests! You better stop bothering me from now on! Scram! I feel irritated just looking at you!”

Surprisingly, the reflection in the water replied, “You know that one day, you’ll stand here and listen to yourself saying those words. You know that, right?”

The reflection in the water disappeared afterward.

Li Huowang stared deeply at the water, and he couldn’t shake off the feeling that Ji Zai was still looking at him.

Chapter 609 - Yang Na

The families of the patients and the workers of Kangning Hospital were all looking at a young lady sitting in the corner.

The young lady had a gorgeous, slender figure and was good looking overall.

Someone as pretty as her was a rare sight here, so everyone couldn't help but look at her.

Yang Na was wearing a white sweater beneath her red jacket, and she had on a small sling bag as well. Her hands were on her thighs as she waited impatiently for someone.

Yang Na had dressed herself up today, and her makeup was heavier than usual to hide her exhaustion. A jade earring was hanging from her left ear, and it jiggled as she looked left and right.

Yang Na looked at the time on her phone before taking out a small mirror and lipstick from her bag.

She redid her lipstick and pursed her lips.

Soon, someone called her name; she picked up the white bag beside her and ran toward a hospital staffer.

Yang Na smiled as she entered a certain room, but her expression froze upon seeing Li Huowang behind a wire fence.

“Wait, why is he locked up when I'm visiting him? The other hospitals are not like this! And this isn't a prison!” Yang Na exclaimed upon seeing Li Huowang's condition.

“Nana, it's fine,” Li Huowang replied.

Yang Na ignored the staffer and walked up to the wire fence. She grabbed Li Huowang's hands, and her eyes became wet with tears upon seeing the handcuffs on him.

Li Huowang hurriedly consoled her, saying, “Stop crying, Nana. I'm really fine. No need to feel bad for me. This is a great hospital, and the doctors are great here. The food isn't that bad, and the patients are much more docile here. I even made some friends. Also, I'm getting better. It's only a matter of time before I get discharged! Once I'm discharged, we can finally meet outside."

Thanks to Li Huowang, Yang Na managed to hold back her tears.

"Nana, why are you here? Who told you that I'm here?"

Li Huowang was surprised by Yang Na's visit. He thought that their next meeting would be outside.

Yang Na lowered her head and pressed Li Huowang's palm on her cheek. "Auntie told me that you're here. She said that your illness has been cured and that you won't become crazy again. She said that you can tell people apart now. Did you know that I couldn't sleep for two nights after I got that phone call? I was so happy to hear that you're finally cured."

Li Huowang couldn't do anything about that. His mother was a worrywart and had the tendency to do unnecessary things.

Li Huowang was planning on calling Yang Na the moment he was discharged, but it seemed that his mother was even more impatient than him.

"Nana, I heard that you're sick. Are you feeling okay now?" asked Li Huowang. He was worried about her.

"I'm fine. I can manage it through medicine," Yang Na smiled and said, "Did you know how happy I was when the doctor told me that I was sick? I thought I could get admitted to the same hospital as you."

Yang Na was lying that she was fine, and Li Huowang saw through her. An illness that needed medicine to manage was serious.

A mild case of depression required no medicine, and there was a massive difference between mild depression and major depression.

A mild case of depression was just like having a cloud above one's head that would go away over time.

However, major depression was like having a dog that would steal someone's ability to feel joy.

The dog, known as major depression, would always follow the individual, and it would grow larger over time.

The dog would vary in size, but it would never leave one's side.

The dog would keep following Yang Na until she was cured. In other words, she'd never be able to feel joy until she was cured.

Someone in the darkness with no light at the end of it would eventually plunge into despair.

It wouldn't be a surprise if Yang Na was already entertaining thoughts of self-harm.

To make matters worse, the patient could relapse after a period of improvement. A relapse was basically guaranteed if the patient went through a traumatic experience.

"Nana," Li Huowang said, looking into Yang Na's eyes. "Once I'm out here, I'll stay with you and face whatever you have to face."

Yang Na bit her lips and nodded. Then, she remembered something and let go of Li Huowang's hands. She picked up the plastic bag on the ground and explained, "Huowang, take a look at these. These are your favorite snacks. I bought many of them. There's liqueur-filled chocolate, crackers, and tomato-flavored chips. Hide these snacks, and don't let the other patients steal them. Also, I bought you some essential daily items."

The atmosphere between the two became better as Yang Na gradually relaxed.

Yang Na smiled often throughout their conversation as well.

Li Huowang was already cured, so their meeting today had a different meaning compared to their previous meetings.

Li Huowang was no longer plagued by those hallucinations, so they could finally see a future for themselves.

Yang Na never let go of Li Huowang's hands as she spoke about her plans with him once he was discharged.

Once he was discharged, Yang Na planned on bringing him with her to explore and eat good food. She wanted to make up for the torture he had gone through over the past few years.

Time flew by, and the visitation hours were up.

"Did your chest get scarred?" Li Huowang looked at her white sweater.

Yang Na's smile gradually disappeared. "Well, there are six stitches, so there's some scarring."

"Nana, I'm so sorry. I was..." Li Huowang muttered.

"It's fine," Yang Na interrupted with a smile. "Plus, you're the only one who's going to see that place, so it's fine as long as you don't find it repulsive."

"Anyway, look. I still have the present you gave me for my birthday," Yang Na said. She parted her hair and revealed the jade earring.

"Oh, but where did you get it? My friends said that it's worth a lot. Did you spend a lot of money on it?" Yang Na asked casually. She then realized something important and looked at Li Huowang behind the wire fence. "Aren't you always in the hospital? How did you get out to buy this thing? There's also the jade pendant."

Li Huowang's pupils constricted. "Huh?"

"Yeah, the jade pendant is apparently worth four hundred thousand."

Chapter 610 - Jade Pendant

“Is that so? Senior Li, where’s the jade pendant, then?” Bai Lingmiao asked, casting a confused gaze at Li Huowang. She had no idea what he was talking about.

Li Huowang was stunned when he heard her say that. How come she doesn't know when I gave it to her?

Even though it was a long time ago, Li Huowang could still remember the jade pendant that represented the Imperial family of the Liang Kingdom, and it was inside Xuan Yang’s quarters within the Zephyr Temple.

However, Bai Lingmiao had actually forgotten it—no, she thought that it didn’t exist.

Something’s wrong here! If Ji Zai had turned everything he had experienced on that huge wooden ship into a “Lie,” then there was definitely something strange here!

Why did Ji Zai turn that into a “Lie”? Why did Ji Zai make it so that he never obtained the jade pendant?

This meant that quite a few more memories were altered, or worse, some past events were altered after Doulao lost those Heavenly Daos.

Li Huowang looked at Bai Lingmiao’s eyes covered in white silk. “Miaomiao, go and summon those who had traveled with us from the Zephyr Temple. I need to talk to them.”

Bai Lingmiao was confused, but she nodded. “All right.”

Soon, those who had been with him in the Zephyr Temple. They were all equally confused as to why Li Huowang had called for them.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across them before showing them a drawing of a jade pendant.

“Have any of you seen me bringing this jade pendant out of Zephyr Temple? Do you remember anything about it?”

“What is that? A jade pendant? I've never seen anything like that. I don't think it's something we'll obtain throughout our lifetime.”

“Yeah, and even if we had that jade pendant, we would have sold it long ago to fund our travels.”

Li Huowang realized just then that everyone had also forgotten about the jade pendant's existence. Bai Lingmiao wasn't the only one affected.

“Master, is that jade pendant important? Where did you lose it? I can go and help you find it,” Lu Xiucan said, wanting to show his worth.

Li Huowang shook his head and dismissed them. “It's fine. You can go now.”

Ji Zai hadn't said anything about it, so Li Huowang found it suspicious.

However, it was just a guess on his end. He still needed to take further action to confirm it.

The others thought that Li Huowang was purposely being mysterious toward them, but they still obliged and left.

Bai Lingmiao wasn't sure what Li Huowang was planning on doing, and she was worried that the lotus root was losing its effectiveness.

“Miaomiao, bring me a messenger pigeon. I need to contact someone,” Li Huowang took out a bamboo slip with the moon engraved on it.

Li Huowang was planning to find none other than Liu Zongyuan from Moongate.

He thought it would take several days for Liu Zongyuan to arrive, but the latter actually arrived at midnight on the same day.

It seemed that Liu Zongyuan was incredibly motivated these days.

“Aiya, Senior Er Jiu, long time no see. Your status has been elevated, and I truly couldn't have seen that you're related to the emperor. I was wondering why you weren't really active in the Surveillance Bureau, so your relationship with the emperor is the reason behind it,” Liu Zongyuan praised, sounding more respectful than usual.

The Surveillance Bureau was outside the jurisdiction of the emperor, and the former never really cared about the emperor's identity.

However, Liu Zongyuan's rank was low—low enough that the friend of the emperor had a higher status than him.

“Sit. It's been a long time since we saw each other, and I need your help as well.”

“Say no more. We survived a mission together, so I will definitely do you a favor,” Liu Zongyuan said, patting his chest with pride.

Staring at Liu Zongyuan's wooden mask, Li Huowang pondered over his questions before asking, “Do you still remember how the Sitting Oblivion Dao wrecked the Sacred Mountain Ghost Eye in Shangjing?”

“Of course. It was such a large-scale event. It would be hard to forget it.”

“Good, now tell me everything you remember about it. Don't leave out a single word!”

“All right, I can tell you that much at least. It was just half a year ago, after all...” Liu Zongyuan proceeded with his recount.

Li Huowang was finally convinced that something was wrong.

It was one thing for his comrades to forget about the jade pendant, but Liu Zongyuan's recount was drastically different from the truth as well.

It seemed that upon losing the two Heavenly Daos, everything about Doulao and its history was altered. Li Huowang suddenly remembered Ji Zai's words.

"What is real and what is fake? Are you sure that everything you're touching is real? What about everything you've experienced so far? Are you sure they're real? If so, then how are you going to prove it?"

The side effects of a Heavenly Dao changing hands from one Siming to another were far more serious than he had imagined.

He thought that such an event would only bring about the manifestation of Natural Disasters, but he couldn't have been more mistaken.

Does that mean that history changes itself every time there's a Natural Disaster? How come I never noticed that until now? Li Huowang suddenly discovered something extremely important about the world.

The past of this bizarre and crazy world was not set in stone. They would change whenever there was a change in the controllers of the Heavenly Daos.

Simings and Twisted Ones... Li Huowang ignored Liu Zongyuan and paced in the room. The cogs in his mind turned rapidly as he recalled every single detail in his past. Li Huowang then remembered what they had written on the walls of the Surveillance Bureau.

"Find the Surveillance Bureau to purchase almanacs. Those who had printed it themselves would be exiled along with the three generations of their family."

Li Huowang unsheathed his spine sword and examined it carefully.

"Uh... Senior Er Jiu, is everything alright?" Liu Zongyuan couldn't help but ask. He found Li Huowang's behavior to be quite erratic and odd. He wanted to approach Li Huowang, but he hesitated and remained frozen in the end.

Li Huowang ignored Liu Zongyuan and talked to the hilt of the sword. More specifically, he was staring at the shrunken head of Zhuge Yuan as he asked, “Senior Zhuge, do you think it’s possible that the Qi Kingdom that you saved was just a part of a changed history that was brought about by the swapping of the Heavenly Daos between the Simings?”

Chapter 611 - Li Sui

“People are good by nature at birth. Their natures are similar, but their habits will inevitably diverge. If not taught the right way, their nature will deteriorate. The right way of teaching is to attach importance to thoroughness..” [1]

Li Sui sat at the front of the classroom and happily nodded along with the teacher’s lesson. Her voice was the clearest and loudest in the entire Cowheart Mountain private school.

While the teacher was in the middle of a tea break, Li Sui proudly proclaimed to a village soldier learning to read beside her. “I’ve learned this passage. Father taught me what this means!”

However, the village soldier didn’t pay attention to what Li Sui was saying at all, and his attention was on Li Sui’s face, which seemed to be shining.

It wasn't just him; everyone in the private school stole glances at her nonstop.

Compared to them, who had spent the majority of their lives working in the fields, the young girl in a flowing dress was like a fairy from the heavens.

Some of the young men looked like they couldn't care less about reading, and their eyes were almost always glued to Li Sui.

Thus, the private school was densely packed with people, even though it usually had quite a few empty seats.

Master Wu, the teacher of the class, was dumbfounded as well. “Ahem, young lady, can you cover your face a little?”

Master Wu had no idea where the beautiful young girl had come from, but the white-haired lady boss had told him not to neglect her.

Master Wu was confused. Li Sui's appearance and demeanor suggested that she knew how to read.

Li Sui looked confused as she asked, "Why would I cover my face? Don't I look human right now?"

Master Wu was stumped, and then his face darkened as he turned away before teaching the class using the textbook in his hand.

Soon, the moon rose, and the class came to an end. The large group of people dispersed and returned to their own homes.

However, quite a few of them decided to follow Li Sui toward the Bai Family Estate. Even if they couldn't talk to her, staring at her graceful figure from afar was enough pleasure for them.

Li Sui was delighted by the revelation. At last, the people were no longer afraid of her, and she didn't have to wear a straw cloak every day.

Li Sui was already planning on chatting with the people in the village the next morning.

"Mother, I'm back!" Li Sui charged toward Bai Lingmiao, who was standing at the door.

Li Sui was about to drag her inside the house to look for Li Huowang, but Bai Lingmiao stopped her, saying, "Wait, your father is discussing something important with an esteemed guest."

"Something important? What is it?" Li Sui asked, blinking her large eyes.

Bai Lingmiao glanced at the window on the second floor; she didn't say anything as she pulled Li Sui into one of the doors to an inner room.

"You've been wearing these clothes for a while," Bai Lingmiao said, "It's about time you start wearing new clothes."

"Why should I start wearing new clothes?"

"Because these clothes easily get dirty. Li Sui, you're a young lady, so you can't be so dirty."

"Is that so? What's a young lady?" Li Sui asked curiously as she followed Bai Lingmiao inside one of the inner rooms.

Bai Lingmiao remained patient as she explained many things to Li Sui, allowing the latter to learn about many things that Li Huowang had never taught her.

Soon, Li Sui was naked and was thrown into a large wooden tub by Bai Lingmiao.

The new clothes that Li Sui was going to wear were brought outside by Bai Lingmiao, who scrubbed them clean diligently.

Li Sui copied her and rubbed her own human skin.

Bai Lingmiao chuckled upon seeing Li Sui's actions, and she patiently taught Li Sui how to wash clothes.

"Li Sui, I'm actually really happy that you're willing to call me 'Mother,'" Bai Lingmiao said. Li Sui's head was being propped up by her tentacles as she stared at the white-haired girl with some confusion.

"I really want to have a child with Senior Li, but... I can't," Bai Lingmiao said with a hint of sadness on her face. "If my child ends up like Puppy's daughter or covered in white fur like me, then... it's going to be bad for both the child and Senior Li. I've suffered that kind of pain before, though. I know that even if others say good things about us, we are ultimately different from others. I don't want my children to suffer like me."

Bai Lingmiao reached out and untied Li Sui's long hair before washing it gently in the water.

"Your appearance is a bit strange. I was a bit disgusted at first, but then I realized that Senior Li and I don't look much better, so I didn't care anymore."

"Mom, what are you talking about? I don't understand."

"It's good that you don't understand. Sometimes, I really envy you, not having to think about so many complex things every day."

Like a real mother and daughter, Bai Lingmiao helped Li Sui wash her hair while talking about many things to her.

Although Li Sui didn't quite understand what Bai Lingmiao was saying, she was still happy to be with her mother.

Her mother would listen patiently to her, and she told her about many things, including topics that her father wasn't willing to discuss with her.

After the comfortable bath, Li Sui put on her human skin, attached her human head, and tied up her hair. Then, she finally put on Bai Lingmiao's clothes.

"Not bad. Our bodies are the same in some parts, so we can wear each other's clothes," Bai Lingmiao said, staring at Li Sui with satisfaction.

"Wait, don't move; let me apply some rouge on you," Bai Lingmiao said. She was about to turn around when she stopped and looked toward the window on the left, "Didn't you promise that you wouldn't get too close to Cowheart Village?"

"Saintess, the Chief wants to see you. He wants to have a good talk with our White Lotus Sect." A deep voice came from outside the window.

Bai Lingmiao sighed softly, "I'll go, but not now."

"And due to the rumors, many of the hidden White Lotus followers had decided to emerge from hiding and pay us a visit."

"How annoying. I'm finally back at the village after a long time, so why are you rushing me like that? What if I end up running away?" Bai Lingmiao asked. Her tone changed drastically, and the figure outside the window dared not respond.

"Li Sui, let's go find your father!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed, looking a bit impatient as she pulled Li Sui toward the bedroom.

Just as the two of them arrived at the bedroom door, Liu Zongyuan stepped out from the inside while bowing repeatedly toward the bedroom.

When he turned around, he caught a glimpse of a black tentacle slipping back under Li Sui's skirt. His expression changed drastically at the sight, and he immediately reached into his arms, exclaiming, “What kind of evil spirit are you?!”

Li Sui’s new clothes were torn apart as black tentacles sprang up in the air. A figure with a skinned beastly face and a mouth full of sharp teeth stood before Bai Lingmiao, growling at Liu Zongyuan.

However, Liu Zongyuan was familiar with Li Sui’s true face, and he realized just then that he had made a mistake.

“What’s wrong?”

Liu Zongyuan smiled and hurriedly said, “Oh, Brother Er Jiu, your... your spirit beast is amazing; it can even shapeshift. I almost failed to recognize it.”

He rushed to the stairs and glanced behind him to see Li Sui and Bai Lingmiao entering the bedroom together. He shuddered with horror and hurriedly walked downstairs.

Chapter 612 - Cowheart Village

“Ah~ Let me tell you, the Shangjing capital is huge! You can walk on foot for days and nights without being able to go to the other side of it!”

“Do you know how big the road to the capital is? It’s wide enough for more than twenty carriages to run side by side!”

“And the girls in the capital... Tsk, tsk, I don't even have to talk about their appearance. Their voice alone is enough to make your bones go weak.”

“The people in the capital eat like it’s New Year’s Eve every day. Even the vagrant dogs raised by the roadside can eat meat every day!”

Puppy was sitting proudly on a large boulder beneath the big tree in the middle of Cowheart Village. He bragged about his journey to the capital unabashedly toward the villagers.

These villagers had never been a hundred miles away from the village throughout their lives, so Puppy’s words were truly astounding to them. They couldn’t even focus on eating the food in their bowls, as they imagined the capital described by Puppy.

Puppy was pleased by their shocked reactions, and a sense of superiority rose in his heart. He waved his hand like a commanding general and said, “Hmph, the capital really is just like that, and I'm actually looking down on it. If we're talking about extravagance, then nothing beats the Imperial Palace!”

“Even the pillars and roof edges of the palace are lined with gold, while the ground is covered with jade stones. Imagine how much money they spent to build the entire thing.”

“Hey, listen. The Imperial Palace is a forbidden place for many people, but I can enter it freely. Do you know why? Remember that simpleton? I'm talking about the head of our Cowheart Village's militia. He's become the Emperor of the Great Liang. I hope you guys haven't forgotten that he's my senior. In other words, I, Cao Cao, am considered a relative of the emperor.”

“Hmph! What a load of bullshit. The more you talk, the more outrageous it gets!” Master Wu exclaimed. He had been eavesdropping and couldn't beat it anymore. In Master Wu's eyes, the emperor couldn't be blasphemed. After all, he might end up passing the imperial exams and become a disciple of the emperor.

“You brat, watch your mouth! You can say this here, but your head will go flying if the authorities somehow hear what you're saying!”

“Ah~! You're just a teacher, so you must be thinking that you know everything just because you have some ink in your belly. Well, guess what? You know nothing!”

“This is absurd! Hey, brat! You better not come to my school in the future!”

“Heh, what a joke. When did I, Lord Cao Cao, ever participate in your class? I wouldn't go, even if you beg me to go.”

The people nearby quickly intervened in the heated argument, and the two soon stopped fighting.

“Hey, Puppy, if your senior is already the emperor and the Shangjing capital is so great, why did you return?”

Puppy took a mouthful of food, and his expression was tinged with contempt as he said, “Gao Zhijian begged me to stay there with him. He said the Shangjing capital was too big, but there was no one for him to talk to.”

“But am I someone who forgets my roots? I told that fool—Simpleton, don't blame your junior for being indifferent to fame and wealth. Even if you are the emperor or an angel from the heavens, I'm not going to go somewhere if I don't want to go there!" Puppy exclaimed, feeling a bit pleased upon seeing the looks of admiration that the crowd directed toward him. He had already figured it out. His appearance meant that everyone in the capital would look down on him; Puppy knew very well that he was a freak compared to ordinary people.

Puppy's skin had always been thick, so it would have been fine for him to stay in the capital despite the potential bullying.

However, his daughter would inevitably become an outcast and the target of everyone's gossiping once she grew up.

Knowing that, why would Puppy stay in the capital?

Zhao Wu and Xiaoman had no intention of staying in the capital either. Puppy assumed that they shared the same sentiment as him.

At least, Cowheart Village was their territory as disabled people; no one dared to look down on them here.

After his boasting to the villagers, Puppy felt relaxed and refreshed. He walked toward the Bai Family Mansion with an empty bowl in his hand.

When he entered the courtyard, he saw Lu Xiucan walking out of the mansion with oil stains at the corners of his mouth.

"Good morning, Xiucan. Have you eaten anything yet?"

Lu Xiucan's eyes were full of disdain at Puppy's free-spirited attitude. Puppy had never really strived for progress. Whenever he was free, he'd go run and brag to the others. Lu Xiucan believed that he'd soon leave Puppy in the dust.

Puppy would certainly regret his actions once Lu Xiucan became an expert as strong as his master in the future!

Puppy didn't take Lu Xiucan's actions to heart. He hummed a tune as he walked into the hall.

He saw Yang Xiaohai and his wife tidying up the bowls and chopsticks.

After a year, Yang Xiaohai had grown a head taller, and it was probably due to the good food in Cowheart Village.

Puppy noticed that Yang Xiaohai had become almost as tall as him, and he looked even more energetic, too.

Puppy threw the bowls and chopsticks onto the table, asking, "How's it going? Has Simpleton helped you find your parents yet?"

Yang Xiaohai shook his head and replied, "The eunuch told me to go back and wait. They'll send someone to inform me once they've found them. However, it might take a while."

"It's been so long, and he still can't find two people? It seems that this emperor isn't very capable," Puppy said smugly, and then he left with his hands behind his back.

After Puppy's departure, the pear-faced woman said, "It's okay, don't be impatient. They will eventually be found."

"Yeah, I'm not in a hurry," Yang Xiaohai said.

And that was when he felt a pair of hands wrapping him from behind, pulling him into a soft embrace.

Yang Xiaohai struggled and broke free. He cast a guilty gaze at the ceiling and blushed before saying, "What are you trying to do here?! Senior Li is upstairs!"

The pear-faced woman smiled innocently, "Don't blush; I haven't even done anything yet."

Yang Xiaohai glared at her, and then he carried the pile of bowls and chopsticks to the kitchen.

"What's with that reaction? Am I not your wife?" the pear-faced woman asked, carrying a bucket of water into the kitchen.

"No! I never said that you're my wife," Yang Xiaohai said. He threw the bowls and chopsticks into the pot of boiling water to clean them.

Yang Xiaohai received no response and noticed that the kitchen had become too quiet.

He turned around and saw that the pear-faced woman was leaning against the kitchen door and was silently shedding tears.

“Are you... are you disgusted with me? Do you find me disgusting because I was rescued from a bandit's den? If that's the case, then just tell me. I'm not going to stop you.”

Yang Xiaohai was at a loss for words. He realized that he didn't want to see her being so sad.

“No.... no, I just... I just don't... I just don't know what to do.”

The pear-faced woman smiled and wiped away the tears on her face. She then walked into the kitchen and casually closed the door. "Ignorance is fine; I'm going to teach you everything that you need to know.”

Chapter 613 - Yang Xiaohai

Clang~

The trembling sound of the gong echoed from afar. The kitchen door was suddenly pushed open, and Yang Xiaohai rushed toward the direction of the sound while pulling up his pants in a hurry.

The long gong attracted everyone's attention in Cowheart Village. When Yang Xiaohai arrived at where the sound was coming from, he saw a group of eunuchs in front of a neat convoy.

They were in the middle of delivering various goods to the village.

There were live pigs, cows, sheep, bolts of silk and satin, as well as piles of gold and silver.

The other villagers were amazed, and they started whispering among themselves.

“Did I hear it correctly? Are these gifts from the emperor to us?”

“No, they’re not for you; they’re for the Daoist master.”

“Wow, could it be that Puppy wasn’t lying? Is the emperor really his senior? Wouldn’t that mean that we’re related to the emperor, too?”

“What’s going on? What’s happening?”

Yang Xiaohai squeezed through the crowd and saw Senior Li talking to an old eunuch with a golden whisk. “Go back and tell Gao Zhijian not to worry about Cowheart Village. I’m here, and everything is fine. Cowheart Village isn’t that poor as well, so tell him to spend his time learning to become a competent emperor rather than mulling over what to send here. After all, his subjects will have a better life if he gets better at his job.”

“Yes, I’ll convey the message to His Majesty.” The old eunuch with a powdered face bowed respectfully to Li Huowang.

The old eunuch noticed Yang Xiaohai’s glance, so he excused himself from Li Huowang and walked up to Yang Xiaohai.

Yang Xiaohai nodded in confusion.

The old eunuch glanced at the bustling crowd. “It’s crowded here. Let’s find a place to talk about your parents.”

Yang Xiaohai’s mind buzzed. He was suddenly overwhelmed with fear at the idea that he was about to face the truth.

“Let’s go.” The pear-faced woman appeared and followed the old eunuch somewhere else.

It hadn’t been that long since New Year’s Eve, so the fields were still frozen. The old eunuch stopped between the field ridges and extended over a piece of paper from his pocket. “Here, take a look for yourself.”

Yang Xiaohai retrieved the paper with trembling hands, and he hesitated for a moment before he handed it back to the old eunuch, “Can you read it for me, please? I’m too scared to read it.”

“Oh, what’s there to be afraid of?” the old eunuch asked. However, he still reached out his hand with long nails and grabbed the piece of paper. Then, he said, “The letter says that your parents are not from Great Liang but from Hou Shu. That’s why it took us so long to track them. We investigated the three generations of your family and found out that your family are all boat people.”

“Sir, what are boat people?”

“Boat people are those who live permanently on the sea without their own land. The women gather pearls while the men fish with nets. Do you understand what I’m saying?”

“Yes... I understand,” Yang Xiaohai said, but he looked confused as he nodded.

“Then... how did my parents lose me?” Yang Xiaohai asked. The pear-faced woman beside him rubbed his arm gently.

The old eunuch glanced at Yang Xiaohai's face before looking down at the paper in his hands. “There was a shortage of fish and pearls a few years after you were born. Your father couldn't feed you, so he decided to sell you.”

Yang Xiaohai's face turned pale, and he would have fallen to the ground if the pear-faced woman next to him hadn't supported him. “Sir, is that really the truth? They sold me just like that?”

Yang Xiaohai had been thinking about many different scenarios while waiting for the results of the investigation. However, he didn't expect that the truth would be so brutally simple.

“What do you think your father could have done? Your family had nine children, and it's normal to sell a child to ease the burden on everyone. My family couldn't support all of us either, so we were castrated and sent to the palace as eunuchs,” the old eunuch said, and then he stuffed the paper into Yang Xiaohai's hands. “Your mother has been pearl diving her entire life, so she's already deaf and weak. She's probably going to die soon. Your father is still out fishing at sea. Out of your father's nine children, two were sold, three have died, so only four are remaining. Half a year ago, your elder brother went out to fish, but he never came back.

“Anyway, they are all boat people and are fishing and diving in a certain region. The location is written on the paper. If you want to find them, find someone literate to help you. We have other things to do, so we'll be leaving first.”

With that, the old eunuch left with his golden whisk, leaving Yang Xiaohai and the pear-faced woman by themselves between the field ridges.

Yang Xiaohai stared deeply at the piece of paper, even though he couldn't read the majority of it.

After a while, he folded the paper neatly and put it away. He then looked up at the woman and smiled wryly. "You see, I thought I was the descendant of someone important, just like Senior Gao. It turns out that I was wrong, and my parents sold me away to ease some of the burden on them."

Yang Xiaohai then turned around and was about to return to the village when the pear-faced woman pulled him from behind.

"Don't hold it in. Cry it out."

The pear-faced woman's words had just fallen, but Yang Xiaohai was already squatting on the ground, crying in frustration.

Yang Xiaohai had always been a steady and sensible individual in the eyes of his seniors, but Yang Xiaohai had never really wanted to be that kind of person all this while.

However, none of his seniors noticed that fact—no, no one noticed it except for the pear-faced woman.

The pear-faced woman hugged Yang Xiaohai and patted his back gently to comfort him.

Yang Xiaohai vented for a long time before standing up once again and walking toward the village with the pear-faced woman.

"Hey! Xiaohai, where are you going? Look at these fat sheep; let's roast one tonight!"

"I can't forget the taste of that roast lamb back when we were in Qing Qiu. I had no idea that sheep is so delicious once it's roasted."

"All right! Senior Cao, there are so many people of us, so you should roast a few sheep rather than just one!"

Yang Xiaohai smiled along with everyone else. When he arrived at the kitchen, he took out his butchering tool and started sharpening the blade with a whetstone.

"Ah." He accidentally cut his finger, and blood flowed profusely out of the wound.

"What's wrong?" the pear-faced woman asked upon hearing

Yang Xiaohai's cry. "Don't move; I'll go get some medicine for you."

The pear-faced woman turned around and was about to leave, but Yang Xiaohai stopped her by raising his bleeding finger. "I want to go see my family."

The pear-faced woman nodded gently and said, "Okay. I'll go wherever you go."

Chapter 614 - People

"Xiaohai, are you really going to leave? It hasn't been that long since we returned, and you're leaving again? Isn't that kind of unnecessary?"

"Xiaohai, Hou Shu is really far. There's also the sea to the south of it. The journey and return trip will probably take you at least a year."

When the others who had come out of Zephyr Temple together with Yang Xiaohai heard his plans to visit his parents, they all tried to dissuade him.

They had endured hardships together, so they were aware of the risks that one would have to take by traveling such a massive distance.

They were all concerned, as the journey was lengthy, and no one could say what Yang Xiaohai would experience on the way.

Yang Xiaohai remained silent, but his belongings were already on his back. In the end, he stared at Li Huowang sitting nearby and asked, "Senior Li, what do you think? Should I go or not?"

"Your limbs belong to you, so it's not up to me to decide whether you want to go or not. Puppy, give him your scepter so he can protect himself on the road."

" Huh? "

"Hurry up. Also, bring a carriage over for him. It's such a long way, and his shoes will wear out with all that walking."

Soon, Yang Xiaohai's luggage for the journey had increased significantly. The carriage was filled with so much dried food that it would last them all the way to Hou Shu.

"Take this bag of silver. You can use it to fund your journey as well as to handle certain issues on the road."

Yang Xiaohai was at a loss for words upon feeling the weight of the bag of silver. "Senior Li, I can't take these. I..."

"Just take it. The village is not going to run out of money anytime soon. Unfortunately, I'm still recovering from my injuries, so I can't go with you. Since you want to go, then go. The world has become more peaceful these days, but you should still protect yourself with the talismans you've learned to draw. Don't forget to practice using that scepter, too."

Yang Xiaohai knelt and kowtowed toward Li Huowang a few times before he jumped onto the carriage with the pear-faced woman.

Soon, the carriage started moving away from the village.

Puppy was holding his daughter in his arms; he took a step forward and shouted, "Xiaohai! Don't forget to visit Sun Baolu once you're in Qing Qiu! Tell him I got married and that I have a daughter now!"

"All right, Senior Puppy!" Yang Xiaohai exclaimed.

When Yang Xiaohai could no longer be seen, everyone dispersed in groups.

On the way, Puppy couldn't help but grumble, "Who's going to cook for us now that Xiaohai is gone? Zhao Wu, how's your cooking?"

"Look at my legs. Do you really think that I can cook?" Zhao Wu asked, leaning on his crutches. He glared at Puppy as if he were worthy of disdain.

"That's too bad. What should we do now that no one can cook? Xiaoman, can you cook?"

"Get lost."

"Since no one is going to cook for all of us anymore, we should stop the communal pot from now on," Li Huowang said. His words attracted everyone's attention. Eating together was an old habit that was made from their arduous journey, but Gao Zhijian had become the emperor, Sun Baolu had back at home, and the Lu family had already settled down in Shangjing; several people had died along the way as well, which meant that they no longer had enough people to fill up the table with dishes.

“We have our own families now, and we don’t lack money anymore. From now on, let’s cook our own meals and stop going to the Bai Family Estate to eat.”

Bai Lingmiao smiled slightly at Li Huowang's words.

“No, Senior Li...” Puppy said, sounding anguished. He wasn't willing to part with the days when they could just open their mouths to eat. Those days were just too comfortable for Puppy to let go.

“Stop talking nonsense and just do it,” Li Huowang said. With that, he led Li Sui toward the Bai Family Estate.

Puppy scratched his head and looked at Zhao Wu beside him. “Hey, you’re still single, so no one is going to cook for you in the future. You better try and persuade Senior Li to change his mind.”

“Don’t count on me to back you up. I can cook for myself,” Zhao Wu said. He then ignored Puppy’s astonishment and limped his way toward the warehouse.

Although it was called a warehouse, it was actually an uninhabited house that was cleared out to store the things that Gao Zhijian had sent over to the village.

Gold, silver, cloth, and various gifts filled up the house.

Zhao Wu placed the abacus on the table and began taking accounts.

This was Zhao Wu’s job, and he was the only one who could do something like this throughout the village. His family's business was selling rice, so he grew up around abacuses. In other words, no one could match him when it came to calculations and taking accounts. When they were still in the middle of their arduous journey, they barely had any money, so Zhao Wu didn't really have to do any calculations and accounting.

However, Cowheart Village's population had exploded, and they had also received an influx of money and grain. Zhao Wu's talent could finally be shown to the world.

Zhao Wu used an abacus to keep track of everything—the village's expenditures, purchases, and what was purchased. Of course, Zhao Wu also tracked the amount of old rice available for consumption and how much new rice they needed to replace the old rice. He was just one person, so his job was extremely exhausting. However, Zhao Wu was more than happy to do it, as he didn't feel like a useless person incapable of lifting even a finger.

Five hundred pearls? Why did Gao Zhijian send so many pearls? There's no one in the village who needs them. Zhao Wu shook his head gently and made a comment with his pen.

It took Zhao Wu an entire day to take everything into account. When it was nightfall, he felt his stomach rumbling, but he still hadn't heard Yang Xiaohai calling them for dinner.

Zhao Wu stiffened and realized that he actually had to cook for himself from now on.

Yang Xiaohai had left the village, after all. Ah, it really feels strange for someone to leave all of a sudden.

Zhao Wu picked up his crutch and limped toward the kitchen. He was planning on grabbing something edible to eat so he wouldn't be late for Master Wu's evening class.

Zhao Wu's heart burned with pride when he recalled Master Wu's evaluation of himself yesterday. Master Wu had told him that he had the highest aptitude for literacy in the entire Cowheart Village.

Master Wu hadn't lied. Zhao Wu could recognize eight hundred words, so he could be considered somewhat literate.

It's really dark. Where's the oil lamp? Zhao Wu fumbled around in the kitchen. His hands found a cool, soft spindle-shaped object.

He picked it up and stuffed it into his arms. Sweet potatoes will do. I'm going to eat them on the way, so I won't be late.

Zhao Wu picked up the pace. When he reached out for the fourth sweet potato in the steamer, he ended up touching a bony hand in the darkness.

“Ghost!”

Bang!

The wooden door to the kitchen was blown apart.

Li Huowang, covered in wriggling black tentacles, stood by the door with a spine sword in his hand. His face was filled with killing intent as he scanned the kitchen.

“Senior Li! There’s a ghost in here! There’s a ghost in this room!” Zhao Wu exclaimed. He didn’t even pick up his crutch as he frantically crawled behind Li Huowang.

“Quiet down!” Li Huowang warned. He took out a green glowing stone from his pocket and threw it into the dim kitchen.

Soon, he saw a man dressed in tattered clothes. The man was cowering in a corner, and his shoulders were trembling as if he was eating something.

”Turn around!” Li Huowang exclaimed, holding his sword horizontally.

The man turned around and froze. The sweet potato that he was about to shove into his mouth fell to the ground. Then, he trembled all over and prostrated on the ground. He kowtowed nonstop to Li Huowang, pleading, “Master, spare my life!”

Chapter 615 - Newcomer

Li Huowang found it suspicious that someone had suddenly appeared in Cowheart Village.

“Li Sui, help me find out his background.”

“All right, Father.”

Li Sui’s tentacles flew out and quickly dragged the ragged man out of the kitchen.

The tentacles pierced the man's seven apertures and probed his innards thoroughly.

The moonlight rose just then, allowing Li Huowang to see the man's face. The man's face was unshaven, and he looked extremely emaciated. Every single one of his ribs was clearly visible under his tattered clothes; he was hugging a small pumpkin and two sweet potatoes.

“Bleck!” The man bent over and vomited as soon as Li Sui’s tentacles were outside of him

“Father, he's human. There’s nothing else but a lump inside his belly. I think he's just an ordinary person.”

Li Huowang stared at the miserable-looking man and finally dropped his guard. Still, he found it difficult to believe that someone would go to great lengths to sneak into Cowheart Village just to steal a few sweet potatoes.

Li Huowang put away the spine sword and asked, “Why did you come to our Cowheart Village?”

“I-I’ve been running away! I’m starving. Master, please spare. I really am about to starve to death. I won’t dare to steal again,” the man said, trembling on the ground. He was so scared that he dared not lift his head.

Li Huowang saw that others were converging on his location.

He took a few breaths and pointed at Puppy, saying, “You go ahead and handle this. Feed him and let him decide whether to stay or not.”

Without waiting for Puppy's reply, Li Huowang retracted the tentacles and returned to the Bai Family Estate.

Puppy's courage grew, as Li Huowang had already confirmed that the man was no threat.

With his hands behind his back, he walked up to the man. The white and black patches on his face frightened the man.

“Fleeing, huh? You've suffered a lot on the road, right?” Puppy asked.

“Yes, yes!” The man nodded repeatedly. He took out a sweet potato from his arms and was about to put it into his mouth when Puppy snatched it away.

“Hmph, you obviously haven't been hungry before. Are you trying to kill yourself by stuffing yourself like that? You can only eat porridge for now! After two days of porridge, you can then transition to eating dried food.”

Puppy pointed at the two village soldiers and said arrogantly, “You two, yes, you two. Go and cook him some porridge. Didn't you hear what your godfather just said? This matter is under my jurisdiction.”

Everyone soon heard about a refugee's arrival in the village, so they curiously gathered around.

Under the gaze of the villagers, the man devoured three bowls of porridge. He wanted to eat more, but Puppy stopped him.

“Enough, you're going to die if you drink more,” Puppy said, forcibly taking away his bowl. Then, he sat down on a stool and asked, “Now that you're done eating, you better start talking. Where are you from?”

The man seemed afraid as he looked around, but he instinctively licked his lips when he saw the pork gel candy in the hands of Puppy's daughter. "I... I'm from Xi County."

"Xi County? Where is that? I've never heard of that place. What disaster has befallen your home? Why are you fleeing?"

The man's expression suddenly twisted in fear, and his figure trembled violently as he exclaimed, "A Natural... Natural Disaster! The Heavenly Dog devoured the sun, so the demons and ghosts from the eighteen layers of hell came out. They... they kill people on sight! I hid in a temple and barely managed to escape with my life. However, I could barely find any survivors after the Natural Disaster, and there was a three-year drought prior to that, so there was no food left for the survivors to consume.

"I had no choice but to flee and look for a way to survive."

Puppy nodded in understanding and said, "Oh~ So that's how it is, a Natural Disaster, huh? I know that. We encountered one before, and it was really scary. Fortunately, it didn't last long."

"It didn't last long?" The man's voice changed, and his eyes became filled with indignation as he exclaimed, "Why did we have to suffer that Natural Disaster for dozens of days?! How come it didn't last long for you guys?!"

The people nearby sucked in a cold breath. A Natural Disaster lasting for dozens of days would indeed be extremely devastating. It was no wonder that the man had to flee.

"Are you not from the Great Liang? Natural Disasters in the Great Liang don't last long," Zhao Wu said, frowning.

"What? Great Liang? Where's Great Liang? I haven't been running for that long, so how come I'm already in a different territory?" the man muttered, looking bewildered.

"You're not from Great Liang?"

"No, I'm from Great Qi."

The crowd broke out in discussions.

"Great Qi? Where's the Great Qi? Isn't Qing Qiu to the left of Great Liang and the sea to the right? Where's Great Qi?"

“Is it above or below?”

“I have no idea, but it’s impossible for him to be from the Great Qi. However, I heard that there was a dynasty called the Great Qi a thousand years ago.”

Li Sui in her human skin memorized their words. She lifted her skirt and went home.

“Father! Father!” Li Sui exclaimed as soon as she entered the house. She eventually found her father cutting open his scalp to check its healing progress. “Father, there’s a man from Great Qi here. Did we go there before?”

“What? A man from Great Qi? Are you sure you heard him right?” Li Huowang couldn't even wipe away the blood on his head. He jumped over the window and rushed toward the kitchen.

Under the coercion of the torture instruments that Li Huowang showcased to the man, the latter dared not conceal anything and told him everything he knew.

Li Huowang compared the man's words to what he knew about the Great Qi and confirmed that the man was indeed from the Great Qi. He hadn't lied to them at all!

Someone from the Great Qi suddenly found themselves in the Great Liang, Li Huowang thought for a while before saying, “How did you get here?! Are there any Twisted Ones around here?”

“What Twisted One? I... I-I just walked down the road,” said the man with a pale face.

“Take me to that road!” Li Huowang urged. He dragged the man away toward the dirt road at the village entrance.

Soon, Li Huowang found himself at a fork in the road at the foot of Cowheart Mountain.

“I-I walked down that road. I saw that the woods here were denser, so I followed the wheel tracks and found your village.”

“Come, let’s keep going,” Li Huowang said. He had no idea what was going on, but he felt that things weren't so simple.

They hadn't walked far before they came to a halt. There was no road up ahead; it was just a dead end.

The man was so scared of Li Huowang's torture instruments that he looked like he was about to cry as he frantically explained, "I-I swear to the mountain spirits! I didn't lie to you at all. I really walked down this road."

Just as the man was about to continue speaking, Li Huowang heard a slight movement from his left ear. He shoved the man away and rushed into the woods on his left.

Soon, he saw an old man with ragged clothes and an unusually large belly standing beneath a big tree. The ragged old man was holding a sharp stone and was swinging it at the bark of the tree before him.

A large piece of bark was peeled away, and the ragged old man carefully peeled off the soft and moist green inner layer of the bark.

Tears streamed down the ragged old man's face as his trembling fingers shoved the tender bark into his mouth, which only had a few teeth remaining.

Chapter 616 - Refugees

Niu San squatted down in the middle of the crowd to slurp up the congee in his bowl.

The congee was watery, but there were wild vegetables, radish leaves, and sweet potatoes inside of it.

Niu San was crying as he ate. The congee tasted delicious—it was so delicious that he could swear that he had never eaten something as delicious as this before.

He licked the bowl clean and walked out from the crowd to make his way toward the food tent.

Niu San was skinny, but his tall figure attracted the militia's attention.

"What are you doing? Stand there!" a few militia members shouted at Niu San while pointing their spears at him.

"Good sirs, didn't they say that we can have two bowls to eat? Can I have another?" Niu San asked gingerly.

They gave him another serving of congee. Niu San bowed and thanked them before returning back to the crowd to eat.

Niu San used to have a decent position in the military, but he was more than ready to lower his ego just to eat something.

He licked the bowl clean again. It was a good meal overall.

Having eaten his fill, Niu San's mind cleared up, and he swept his gaze across Cowheart Village.

The village was pristine and brimming with life. It was a fresh scene compared to the scenes of destruction that the Natural Disaster had left in its wake.

Niu San found it strange. As far as he could remember, less than ten percent of the Qi Kingdom's population survived the Natural Disaster.

There was no way everyone could have escaped the Natural Disaster, so how come Cowheart Village seemed unscathed? That's strange. Is there someone strong protecting this place?

Just then, he saw a strange "crack" appearing out of nowhere in the middle of the fields.

A man in a red Daoist robe popped out of the "crack," and Niu San became certain of his suspicions at the sight.

The Daoist glanced at them before entering the fenced-up village. The Daoist then started talking to a young man with vitiligo.

The bizarre-looking young man then walked toward him and pointed at the few people around him, "You, you, you, and you. Come here!"

The bizarre-looking young man pointed at four people with bigger figures than the average people, including Niu San.

"Listen here, Senior Li is a magnanimous man, and he hates seeing people who are suffering! That is the reason he decided to feed you here for free! But there are too many of you for us to manage, so he told me to choose four people from your group to help supervise everyone in your group! The four of you better manage your people properly! If you need to use the toilet, go to the woods and do your business there! You better not harm anyone, too! If anyone disagrees with you, pull them to the side, and we'll reduce their congee ration by half!"

"Yes!" the four people exclaimed at once.

Puppy was overjoyed by their obedience. He nodded to dismiss them, and the four returned to their group.

Puppy then looked at Li Huowang and said, "Senior Li, we're committing good deeds here, and we don't have a shortage of food, but can we really sustain this? More and more people are coming here."

Li Huowang looked at the refugees and whispered, "There aren't going to be that many of them. The majority of the Qi Kingdom's population has already perished."

Li Huowang knew, as he had gone into the Qi Kingdom and noticed only a few survivors in a ten Li radius.

Just then, the sound of horse hooves came from a distance. Li Huowang turned and saw Chun Xiaoman with several other people on horseback. She was holding the reins with her remaining arm, and she jumped down the horse upon spotting Li Huowang. "Senior Li, you're right. We've also seen refugees in the other villages and counties."

"Did you see anyone wearing a white cloth on their head?"

"Yes, but there aren't that many of them. I think there are only about five of them."

Li Huowang's heart sank. It was not a coincidence that the Qi Kingdom's people had appeared here. Gao Zhijian was the Emperor of the Qi Kingdom, after all, but he was now connected to the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom.

The Qi Kingdom's past had disappeared, but its people still found their way into the Liang Kingdom

Zhuge Yuan's method saved the lives of the Qi Kingdom's people, but Li Huowang didn't expect that they would be saved like this.

It would have been great if only the civilians were transported here, but people with supernatural powers were transported as well. Li Huowang knew that he had to inform Gao Zhijian of these changes as soon as possible.

Li Huowang pondered over his next course of action. After a while, he nodded and took out a letter. "Take this to Shangjing. Give it to either Gao Zhijian or the Surveillance Bureau."

"Understood," Chun Xiaoman said. She put away the letter and disappeared into the woods.

Li Huowang sighed. The majority of the Qi Kingdom's population had died, so the Dharma Sect from the other side had to have suffered a similar fate. Otherwise, they'd become a plague for the Liang Kingdom.

Regardless, the fact that there were survivors from the Qi Kingdom's Dharma Sect was problematic. After all, they could become a massive headache later down the road.

“Senior Li, are you thinking about dealing with them?” Bai Lingmiao asked softly as she walked up to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang crossed his arms in front of his chest and swept his gaze across the refugees. “Yes. Even though there aren't that many of them, they're desperate and hungry. These survivors are fit and powerful as well, so if we let them be, the Liang Kingdom might fall into chaos once again. After all, these refugees will most likely start committing crimes to survive, or they might join the Dharma Sect of the Liang Kingdom.”

Bai Lingmiao bit her fingernails as she thought. Moments later, she suggested, “Senior Li, what do you think about this? I have some authority in the White Lotus Sect. I can absorb some of the refugees into the White Lotus Sect. What do you think?”

Li Huowang was surprised. “White Lotus Sect? Is that your own idea, or is it the idea of your higher ups in the White Lotus Sect?”

“Senior Li, I'm the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect. I'm the higher-up.”

Li Huowang stared deeply at Bai Lingmiao and concluded that it was about time they discussed the White Lotus Sect.

Bai Lingmiao's suggestion was a great idea. The White Lotus Sect was much more amiable than the Dharma Sect, which tried to summon God Yu'er.

“All right, but tell your people to work double time. I think the Dharma Sect is already trying to recruit these refugees.”

“Okay!” Bai Lingmiao nodded and ran into the village.

After a while, she returned to the entrance, but Li Huowang was nowhere to be found. In the end, she decided to return to the Bai Family Estate.

Upon entering the estate, she immediately saw Li Huowang sitting on a bench.

It seemed that he had been waiting for her.

"Sit, let's talk." Li Huowang patted the empty space next to him.

Bai Lingmiao sat down and leaned her head on his shoulder.

"Tell me honestly. Are you hiding anything concerning the White Lotus Sect from me?"

Chapter 617 - White Lotus

Bai Lingmiao was taken aback by Li Huowang's question.

“Senior Li, I haven't lied to you. We've been through such a tough journey, and you know how well I've been treating you. Is there any reason for you to be suspicious about me?”

“I know, but there have been times when the people close to me had lied, either out of ill will or good will. I'm sensitive to such things at this point.”

Bai Lingmiao sighed, “Senior Li, what do you want to know? I will tell you everything, but can you please stop being suspicious of me? It feels uncomfortable.”

Li Huowang held her hands gently and pulled her closer, “Are there any hidden dangers to becoming the Saintess?”

“None.”

“Is that so? Then why were you chosen to become the Saintess? Did the Heavenly Mater choose you to become her Twisted One?”

Bai Lingmiao was confused, “Senior Li, what's a Twisted One? I don't think the Heavenly Mater needs something like that.”

“No! She needs one. She's a Siming, so she definitely has a Twisted One! Tell me everything that happened without leaving out any details. We will face any troubles together.”

Bai Lingmiao remained silent for a very long time before she began. “When Senior Lian took me away on that day, we met with the leader of the White Lotus Sect's branch. They saw me and were thrilled upon seeing me because I was exuding the aura of the Heavenly Mater. They all kneeled and worshiped me.”

“I thought I'd met some liars, but I suddenly felt the presence of the Heavenly Master after they drew some runes and texts on me,” Bai Lingmiao said with a devout expression.

“Senior Li, I'm not sure if you know, but it turns out that my family was wrong. Those worshipping the Heavenly Mater do not need to sacrifice humans. The Heavenly Mater is a good God.”

Hmph! Li Huowang did not believe it at all. The Heavenly Mater had probably gotten robbed of her Heavenly Dao related to human sacrifice, which is why she no longer needs human sacrifice. It's not related to whether she's good or not.

While Li Huowang was thinking about the Heavenly Mater's motive, Bai Lingmiao continued with her recount. “She's a really good God, and She even told me that you were in trouble. The Heavenly Mater also said that She could teach me some techniques; She also allowed me to teach them to the White Lotus Sect members so that we can save you.”

“Senior Li, I'm sure you know that we owe Her at this point. If it hadn't been for Her, you would have been in a lot of trouble.”

“You were the one who saved me, so I owe you not Her.”

“But my powers are from the Heavenly Mater. I couldn't have saved you if it hadn't been for her.”

Li Huowang knew that it was useless to argue, so he changed the topic, saying, “Tell Her that regardless of Her goal, we're allies fighting against God Yu'er. We can form an alliance for now. Once the issue is over, we can talk about the terms.”

Li Huowang was no longer naive. Bai Lingmiao was praising the Heavenly Mater a lot, but he knew that the Simings were nothing but trouble. He didn't want to place Bai Lingmiao's life under the Heavenly Mater's control.

Bai Lingmiao nodded and said, “Don't worry, Senior Li. I think that our situation is fine right now. I'm happy, and my parents are also happy living in the Void Home of the Heavenly Mater. Once I die, I'll return to the Void Home and meet them again!”

Li Huowang couldn't bear it anymore. He wanted to correct her, but he realized that Bai Lingmiao's expression had changed.

The familiar presence reminded him of the Second Deity. The Second Deity was still alive!

Li Huowang wanted to say something when the Second Deity spoke first, "Why are you so annoying? Do you really like to see Miaomiao shrouded in pain and despair?"

"But it's fake!"

"So what? We believe it! Also, who lets you dictate what is real and what is fake? How do you differentiate between the two?"

Li Huowang was stunned as several thoughts popped into his mind.

Bai Lingmiao's expression returned to normal, and she apologized to the silent Li Huowang. "I actually wanted to tell you that the Second Deity is still alive, but she didn't want me to do so. We're technically two people but in one body. Our upper half is separated, but our lower half is fused."

"Wait, let me ask someone about this," Li Huowang said. He stood up and retrieved his phone from his pocket. Li Huowang soon reached the pond, and he stared at his reflection, shouting, "Ji Zai! I need your help! The future is ever-changing, and this world is still alive, so can you revive Bai Lingmiao's family for me?"

"I cannot."

"Why?"

"I cannot do it directly, or everything will change. Also, it was your doing. If I invalidated what you had done, everything that had happened afterward would change, and even..." Ji Zai trailed off.

"Even what?"

"Good. Carry on," Ji Zai said, staying silent afterward.

"Screw you!" Li Huowang scolded. Ji Zai was his future self, but Li Huowang hated the former. He really wanted to use his cultivation base to manifest Ji Zai's physical body and punch the latter in the face.

"Senior Li, what's wrong?" Bai Lingmiao hurried over in a panic. She panicked upon seeing Li Huowang shouting at his own reflection in the pond.

“Don’t worry. I really am cured,” Li Huowang said, patting Bai Lingmiao's shoulder.

“Really?”

“Yes, but there's an issue, and it's a bit confusing. Anyway, let's focus on the refugees first. I think that their issue is a bit more pressing than mine.”

Bai Lingmao nodded and said, “All right.”

They were afraid that the refugees would attack Cowheart Village, but they soon realized that the refugees couldn't possibly attack the village with their malnourished figures. They wouldn't even be able to breach the city walls of Shangjing.

Cowheart Village and its surroundings remained peaceful. Cowheart Village provided the refugees with some straws, tattered clothes, and wood, allowing them to build simple houses around Cowheart Village.

The houses were ugly and crude, but they'd keep the wind out.

Soon, no more refugees were appearing around Cowheart Village. Li Huowang pondered over it and was convinced that the refugees were finally popping up somewhere else instead of around Cowheart Village.

On that same night, a noise woke him up in the middle of the night.

The noise was faint, but he heard it clearly. It was the sound of a wooden fish—a wooden fish that monks usually played.

Chapter 618 - Mercy

Dak, dak, dak~

The wooden fish noises annoyed Li Huowang.

“Li Sui, let’s go! Let’s see what kind of evil entity has come here!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He grabbed his swords and Li Sui before jumping onto the roof to head toward where the sound was coming from.

Li Huowang soon found the source of the sound. It was a group of monks; the monks were so skinny that their bones were visible under their skin.

The monks were sitting near the entrance of the village, playing with their wooden fish.

The refugees woke up from the noise, but they dared not to even take a peek.

They buried their heads deep in the fields and trembled in fear.

When Li Huowang appeared, the monks stared at him at the same time. Some of the monks used the eyestalks sticking out of the scars on their heads to stare at Li Huowang rather than their eyes.

“Amitabha. This humble monk meets the benefactor.”

Li Huowang stared at the old monk in front of him. The old monk was skinny, but he could still recognize the monk.

The monk’s face was similar to the illusion by his side. He was the Abbot of the Great Qi’s Righteous Monastery!

“Amitabha. We are here seeking alms. We hope that the benefactor will help us,” said the old monk. He then showed his bronze alms bowl, and the noises being produced by the wooden fish abruptly came to a halt.

“Alms? No, I don’t want to give any alms. What are you going to do about it?” Li Huowang asked. Li Sui’s tentacles burst out of him, and every single tentacle was either holding a talisman or a torture tool. They were clearly trying to intimidate the monks.

A few moments later, footsteps echoed from behind Li Huowang.

Bai Lingmiao led a group of believers from the White Lotus Sect to stand behind Li Huowang.

In addition, the able-bodied people in Cowheart Village rushed out as well

Li Huowang held the numbers advantage against the monks.

Just as Li Huowang thought the Righteous Monastery would fight them, the Abbot stared alternately between Bai Lingmiao and the White Lotus Sect before putting away the alms bowl and praying in front of Li Huowang. The monks then left with the Abbot at the helm.

“Senior Li, what’s wrong with those monks? And they just left like that, too,” Puppy said, sounding confused.

Li Huowang frowned at the backs of the departing monks. Then, he turned to Bai Lingmiao and said, “Tell your people to guard the Cowheart Village’s perimeter. I’ll go and check what those monks are up to.”

Li Huowang was afraid that the monks were plotting something. A thief harboring ill intention was worse than a thief stealing something once.

“Senior Li, be careful. They have many people on their side.”

“Don’t worry. I’m confident that I can still escape even if I can’t beat them,” Li Huowang said. He projected his image into the ground and tailed the monks in his invisible state.

Li Huowang couldn’t help but admit that he had made a mistake. Since the civilians and the Dharma Sect members of the Qi Kingdom were transported here, then it wouldn’t be strange if the other sects throughout the Qi Kingdom were transported here as well.

The monks weren't wearing shoes, so their footprints were visible on the muddy ground.

Li Huowang slowed down and followed them carefully.

Li Huowang walked for two Lis straight, and just as he was thinking that the old monks were planning on circling back and attacking Cowheart Village, he suddenly caught a whiff of roasted meat—roasted human meat. Li Huowang's eyes flashed with killing intent. He looked around before climbing up a giant tree with the aid of Li Sui's tentacles.

Soon, he discovered where the smell of roasted meat was coming from.

There was a tiny clay Buddha on an earthen altar in the woods not too far away from Li Huowang.

A group of refugees in tattered clothes were kowtowing and praying to the Buddha.

However, what sent chills down Li Huowang's spine was the thing beside the Buddha's statue. Several monks with swollen abdomens were sprawled out on the ground. Their legs were high up in the air as blood and amniotic fluid flowed down the ground. Shockingly, the monks with swollen abdomens were giving birth to bony lumps of meat covered in hair!

The lumps of meat still had their umbilical cords, and they'd pulse from time to time as if they were alive.

The other monks carried the meat and placed it into a large cauldron.

The scent of cooked meat wafted into the air as the lumps of meat were tossed into the boiling water.

The praying refugees lined up with broken bowls in their hands. They frantically scooped the meat from the cauldron before eating it with relish.

Li Huowang was absolutely disgusted by the sight.

"Benefactor, this humble Abbot wishes to speak to you." A voice echoed from beneath Li Huowang, and he felt his nape going cold upon hearing it. He had been spotted!

Li Huowang decisively swung his spine sword.

The old monk beneath the tree was split in half, but the flesh fused together rapidly, and the monk returned to normal.

Li Huowang's attack was ineffective against the old monk!

Li Huowang glared at the old monk beneath him, who had the same face as the old monk's illusion next to him.

"What is this disgusting thing that you're doing here?! What are you feeding the refugees?!"

The Abbot looked up and put his hands together along with the prayer beads before saying, "Benefactor, saving one life is better than building a seven-story pagoda. We're saving the people here. We can't save everyone in the world, but we still can save those in front of us."

"By feeding them those disgusting things? Would you even eat what you're feeding them?!"

"Amitabha. Benefactor, we are monks. We cannot eat meat. Anyway, they do not have a choice. It goes against the teaching, but it's the only thing that the refugees can eat right now. Otherwise, they'd starve."

Li Huowang was stunned, and he had no idea what to say.

The Righteous Monastery is trying to save the refugees by using such a strange method to produce food?

"Benefactor, the world is ending, and we really cannot find food anywhere. We could only borrow the powers of Buddha to save the people," said the Abbot with a face that was the epitome of mercy. His emaciated face radiated an aura of compassion.

"Ah! He's a kind and merciful person!" the old monk's illusion beside Li Huowang praised the Abbot. "Daoist, he looks like me, and he's a good monk!"

Li Huowang glared at him before turning to the Abbot and saying, "Does that mean that you approached my village to find food? You don't have any ulterior motives at all? You really don't have any food left?"

"Benefactor, this humble monk, and the others were really looking for alms. Benefactor, may I ask why you are hostile toward us? We've been kind toward you, and I do believe that we haven't wronged you at all."

Li Huowang disagreed and retorted, "Kind? Why didn't you say that you were kind when you stuffed those girls into those vases?"

"Benefactor, why are you bringing them up? They were abandoned by their family. If we hadn't saved them, they would've been drowned or buried alive. We simply found a way for them to survive. We're doing kind deeds here."

"Is helping the eunuchs give birth to children a kind deed as well?"

"Of course! Why wouldn't it be? Helping others to have children when they cannot have one is a kind deed indeed."

Li Huowang went silent. He had seen enough. The monks were indeed doing kind deeds—deeds that were kind in their eyes.

Li Huowang was convinced that they'd murder without hesitation if they judged that the action was "kind" overall.

Chapter 619 - Visitors

In the dark woods, Li Huowang and the Abbot were still talking, but the atmosphere had become much calmer.

“Who’s your Siming?” Li Huowang asked the Abbot.

“Siming? We’re monks. We believe in the Buddhas and the Bodhisattvas. We do not believe in Simings.”

Li Huowang rephrased his question, asking, “Then, which Buddha do you worship?”

“Amitabha. We pray to Vaicorana from Vajradhatu, the Diamond Realm; Akshobhya from Abhirati, the Eastern Pure Land; Ratnasambhava from Śrīmat, the Southern Pure Land; Amitābha from Sukhavati, the Western Pure Land; and Amoghasiddhi from Prakuta, the Northern Pure Land. Together, they’re called the Five Dhyani Buddhas.”

Five Dhyani Buddhas? Do they control the Heavenly Dao of Flesh? Or is it Life?

Staring at Li Huowang’s horrifying visage, the Abbot placed his palms together and bowed to Li Huowang. “Benefactor, saving one’s life is better than building a seven-story pagoda. Please do give us some alms. Even if you have a history of enmity with us, I don’t think you have any history of enmity with the refugees. Can you really watch them starve to death?”

Li Huowang looked at the Abbot and warned, “I will give you food, but you must leave afterward. Do not approach Cowheart Village!”

The old Abbot immediately broke out into a smile upon hearing that Li Huowang was going to provide them with food. “Thank you for your kindness, Benefactor! I will ask the disciples to chant some sutra so that the Buddha will record the great merit and mercy you've bestowed upon us today!"

"No need. I don't think I can withstand the great merit of your Buddha."

Li Huowang didn't trust the Righteous Monastery of the Qi Kingdom. He just wanted to send them away using a bit of food.

Li Huowang passed down his orders and bags of heavy food were soon pushed toward the entrance of the village.

The monks had been putting up a front, but the way they shoved raw rice into their mouths to eat betrayed their facade.

Li Huowang was starting to have some faith in the Abbot's words upon witnessing the monk's desperation.

Li Huowang looked at the Abbot beside him and asked, "You do know that this is not the Great Qi anymore, don't you?"

The Abbot was not surprised. "Amitabha. This old monk knows that, but no matter where we are, Buddha will still be around. Everywhere is the land of Buddha, and everywhere is the land of freedom."

Li Huowang couldn't stand listening to the difficult terms. "I don't care, but you need to know that the members of the Dharma Sect, which caused the end of the Great Qi, have come here as well. If you're as kind as you said, go ahead and kill them whenever you meet any one of them."

The Abbot's eyes widened with shock, and his mustache quivered even though there was no wind. However, he soon calmed down and said, "Amitabha, this old monk understands."

"If you meet the other sects from the Qi Kingdom, remember to tell them that, too. I'm sure that you don't want this world to meet the same fate as the Qi Kingdom, right?"

"Benefactor is right." The Abbot nodded and looked toward the left side of Cowheart Village. Someone was there.

When the moonlight revealed the face of the newcomer, Li Huowang let go of his sword. The face of the newcomer was familiar to him. The newcomer was none other than the former owner of his spine sword, Fo Yulu.

Li Huowang finally relaxed upon seeing Liu Zongyuan and Hong Da walking behind Fo Yulu. The Surveillance Bureau surely reacted swiftly this time.

“Don’t worry. They’re from the Surveillance Bureau. They probably won’t do anything to you if you just talk to them properly,” Li Huowang said to the Abbot.

Fo Yulu approached them but ignored the Abbot. She stared at Li Huowang and asked, “Er Jiu, what is happening here? Where did you get these monks?”

Li Huowang had actually instructed Chun Xiaoman to send a letter to the Surveillance Bureau, but since they were here, things had become more convenient for him. After all, he could just tell them directly.

Li Huowang quickly described what had happened. He originally thought that they would question him further, but they accepted it without any hesitation.

“You knew that the people of the Qi Kingdom would eventually appear here?” Li Huowang asked, sounding perplexed.

“The Chief gave us such orders a long time ago,” Fo Yulu said. Then, she turned to the Abbot and started talking with the latter.

Li Huowang had just realized that the Surveillance Bureau knew that something like this would happen, but they didn’t tell him in advance.

Li Huowang approached Fo Yulu and the others before asking them, “Is the Surveillance Bureau planning to do something big? If they need help, me and my people can help.”

The Qi Kingdom’s current plight could become the Liang Kingdom’s future plight. Li Huowang called the Liang Kingdom his home, so he would do anything in his power to prevent the Liang Kingdom from meeting the same horrible fate.

In other words, he would be helping himself by helping the Surveillance Bureau.

“You?” Fo Yulu scoffed and asked, “Aren’t you acquainted with the Emperor? Why do you still care about the Surveillance Bureau?”

Li Huowang was too lazy to explain to her and simply came up with a random reason. “His Majesty has ordered me to help the Surveillance Bureau.”

Fo Yulu could still remember how Li Huowang had stolen her weapon, so she was wary of him.

However, she was a Ji Xiang as well, so the Surveillance Bureau took precedence over her personal grudge. In other words, she had to set aside her reservations for now.

“The Chief has personally given us the order to kill members of the Qi Kingdom's Dharma Sect on sight. Three heads are equivalent to one lifespan pill. Also, we have to befriend as many sects from the Qi Kingdom as possible.”

“What about the refugees? Did the Chief say anything about them?”

“They are under the jurisdiction of the Imperial Palace. There is no need for us to care about them.”

Li Huowang nodded in understanding. The Chief had indeed known what would happen if they connected an Emperor from the Qi Kingdom to the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom. Li Huowang was sure that they were already thinking about this scene a long time ago. However, it was great news for Li Huowang. After all, the Surveillance Bureau wasn't going to ignore them, which would minimize the possible damage that this phenomenon would inflict on the Liang Kingdom.

“Amitabha. Benefactor, are you really from the Surveillance Bureau?” the Abbot asked Fo Yulu.

The Abbot was talking to her, so Fo Yulu’s expression became respectful. She showed her identity token and bowed to the Abbot, saying, “I greet the Abbot. I have not renounced my worldly attachments, but I can still be considered as a follower of Buddhism.”

“Benefactor, since you're from the Surveillance Bureau, I should let you know about one crucial piece of information. The high-ranking members of the Dharma Sect are still alive, and they must be here, too. We need to find Taishan Shi first. He's the key. He's adept at deceiving and misleading others. If we leave him alone, he will soon gather a large group of devotees who worship Sir Arrogant Stone.”

“Sir Arrogant Stone?” Fo Yulu was confused.

Li Huowang frowned and whispered, “Arrogant Stone is just another name for God Yu'er. He's a threat that must be eliminated as soon as possible.”

Chapter 620 - Gather

Li Sui was wearing her human skin while sitting on the mossy stairs of the Bai Family Estate.

A child was in front of her, and Li Sui's gaze was on the lard candy in the child's hands.

"Is that delicious?" Li Sui asked, sounding intrigued.

The child was wearing a hat and shoes resembling a tiger. Li Sui wasn't familiar with the child nor his parents, but she could see that the child was interested in her based on how he seemed transfixed on her pretty face.

After a while, the child snapped back to reality and nodded. Then, he pulled Li Sui toward his house.

He brought Li Sui into the kitchen and imitated his mother. He used a pair of chopsticks to scoop out a glob of lard before tossing the lard into the jar of coarse sugar.

He rolled the lard around and coated it with a thick layer of sugar.

And just like that, a lard candy was made...

The child handed it over to Li Sui.

"Is it delicious?" Li Sui swallowed it whole and savored it before nodding. "Not bad. It has a porky flavor. I love pork, but I prefer bones with blood and flesh on them, especially those bones covered in white stuff.[\[1\]](#) Those are very chewy. Second Mother actually loves to eat it, too."

Just then, Li Sui's ears perked up. "Sorry, my father is calling me, and I need to go back. Thank you for the candy. I will treat you to some bloody bones next time."

The tentacles under Li Sui's skirt moved swiftly, propelling her toward the Bai Family Estate.

“Father, did you call me?” Li Sui asked.

Li Huowang was busy organizing talisman papers when he heard Li Sui's voice.

“Yes, let's go. We are going to be busy,” Li Huowang said. Then, he placed all of his three swords on his back.

“Where are we going?” Li Sui asked. She took off the human skin on her and placed it in a jar full of salt.

“We need to find someone called Taishan Shi. He's very annoying, and we need to kill him,” Li Huowang replied. He then opened his mouth, and Li Sui shoved herself into Li Huowang through the latter's mouth.

Her tentacles made Li Huowang's neck bulge, but Li Huowang didn't mind it. He walked out of the door and saw Bai Lingmiao.

“Tell your people to protect the village while I'm not here. Be careful of people luring you out so that they can attack the village.”

Bai Lingmiao nodded quietly.

Li Huowang hugged her gently before exiting the village.

Li Huowang had just left when a pair of white shoes appeared at the doorstep. “Saintess.”

“Alright. I was just about to leave for Shangjing. Anyway, I want you to protect this place properly.”

There were nine people hunting Taishan Shi—Li Huowang, the Abbot, two other monks, Fo Yulu, and her four subordinates.

Once they were ready for the hunt, Fo Yulu said, “Don't act rashly once we find Taishan Shi. We need to observe him first. We can also retreat and request backup if we think he's too strong for us to defeat.”

Li Huowang heard that and frowned. He wasn't a fan of Fo Yulu's conservative approach.

“Stop talking nonsense. Let's just find him first. Have you heard anything from the informants of the Surveillance Bureau?” Li Huowang asked. He clearly favored a more direct approach.

The Surveillance Bureau, the Righteous Monastery, and he were hunting down just one person. Li Huowang thought that they could easily defeat Taishan Shi with their numbers. It didn't matter how strong Taishan Shi was, as they were in the Liang Kingdom rather than the Qi Kingdom. Moreover, Taishan Shi didn't have that many members of the Dharma Sect here.

Fo Yulu hated Li Huowang's rashness, and she glared at him to express that.

"We'll go to Li County, which is fifty Li away from here. The informant told me that the members of the Dharma Sect are in the middle of gathering there. We should interrogate some of them to find Taishan Shi's whereabouts."

Everyone hopped onto their horses and made a beeline for Li County. They wanted to waste no time.

Fo Yulu approached Li Huowang's flank and asked, "Er Jiu! How's my ancient sword? Is it powerful?"

"Why? Do you want to take it back?" Li Huowang asked. He didn't even look at her, as he had nothing to say to her.

"No, but since you have an incredibly powerful ancient sword, you're not going to be a coward and stand at the rear once we find Taishan Shi, right?"

"What are you trying to say?"

"Hehe, nothing. If you don't want to be one of the vanguards, then return my sword to me. I'll let you hide at the back of the group so you can just watch us fight," Fo Yulu said, smiling.

Li Huowang made his horse approach Fo Yulu's horse. He got extremely close to Fo Yulu before saying, "Fo Yulu, I don't care about what you're trying to do here, but don't forget that I have a connection with His Majesty. Do something stupid here, and I will make sure that you will regret it in the future."

Fo Yulu scowled and went silent. She didn't expect that Li Huowang would use that card against her.

Sensing something amiss, the Abbot approached them and said, "Benefactors, I am willing to go up first and fight Taishan Shi as one of the vanguard the moment we find him. I'm willing to do that for the sake of the world."

The Abbot clearly didn't want internal strife, so Fo Yulu steered away from Li Huowang and got closer to the Abbot.

"May I know your name? We're all following the teachings of Buddha, so I don't think it's good to keep calling you 'Abbot.' I also don't want you to keep calling us 'benefactors'."

"This humble monk's given name is Chan Du."

"I greet Master Chan Du. My given name is Yu Se."

Li Huowang guided his horse close to Liu Zongyuan. "How's the new Ji Xiang? Is she good?"

"Brother Er Jiu, you can relax. She knows where to draw the line, so she's not going to do anything stupid."

Li Huowang lowered his guard slightly as they continued on their journey.

Fifty Li sounded far, but they were fast on horseback. Soon, they reached the entrance of Li County's main city.

Li Huowang pulled his reins, and his horse raised its front legs high up in the air. A large pile of metal pots was blocking their path into the city.

Li Sui's swept across the pots, sending them flying.

Metal pots, boiling water, and rocks took to the sky.

Li Huowang immediately unsheathed his sword upon seeing the steam rising from the rocks.

No one would be stupid enough to cook stones and drink its soup except for the members of the Qi Kingdom's Dharma Sect.

"Careful! There are probably traps here. I'll search the perimeter!"

Fo Yulu stared deeply at the empty city. Moments later, her figure trembled, and several thumb-sized golden Buddhas jumped over the big pile of metal pots to enter the city.

Fifteen minutes passed by in a flash. Li Huowang wanted to take matters into his own hands when Fo Yulu took out red prayer beads and made a seal with the prayer beads between her palms. Then, she started chanting a strange sutra.

“Prince Vipassi witnessed the passing of the person with great wisdom, the one foremost among men; there were eighty thousand of such individuals. They followed Prince Vipassi to renounce their worldly desires and practice the Brahman. The honored one, Prince Vipassi, preached the Dharma in the Deer Park at Isipatana, and they all came to the presence of the Buddha.”

1. Cartilage, but Li Sui doesn't know the word for it.

Chapter 621 - Dharma Sect

Fo Yulu was chanting Buddhist scriptures outside the deserted county town.

As time ticked by amidst Fo Yulu's chanting, a cacophony of noises soon pervaded the county town, shattering its silence.

The Abbot of the Righteous Monastery and the two other monks took out a wooden fish. They started tapping it and singing with the beat. Soon, the chanting of the Buddhist scriptures sounded like there was something else mixed into it.

As the chanting of the Buddhist scriptures continued, Li Huowang felt every cell inside of him pulsate as if they were about to leave him at any moment.

Fo Yulu's clothes squirmed, and many different tiny Buddhas fell out of her clothes. They all sat cross-legged on the ground and chanted along with Fo Yulu and the monks.

When the chanting reached its peak, the ground abruptly cracked open.

A tall figure wearing a witch's hood jumped out of the crack with two obsidian daggers in both hands. The tall figure was clearly here to ambush Fo Yulu, who was chanting the Buddhist scriptures.

However, Hong Da was prepared for any sudden turn of events. He promptly leaped from his horse and blocked the attacker.

Hong Da's rusty knife pierced the tall figure's chest, but the tall figure's arms holding the two obsidian daggers split into two and made a beeline for Fo Yulu.

It turned out that the tall figure wasn't a living person. The two dwarves disguised as arms were the real people.

Just as one of the dwarves thought that he'd hit his target, a Daoist priest in a red robe stood in his way.

The dwarf's eyes were focused on the Daoist's bronze coin sword when the Daoist opened his mouth, releasing black tentacles that instantly engulfed the dwarf's face.

The suction cups of the black tentacles clung tightly to the dwarf's skin. At first, it was painful, and then he no longer felt anything.

Having made quick work of the dwarf, Li Huowang turned toward the other dwarf; the bloody tentacles hanging from his chin swayed as he moved.

Peng Longteng had grabbed the other dwarf and was squeezing the latter until the dwarf collapsed into a ball. Peng Longteng then raised the dwarf above her head and exerted force. Crimson blood spurted and flowed down Peng Longteng's stump.

At first, Li Huowang thought that the matter was resolved, but it seemed that things were only getting started as a slender black sword pierced Peng Longteng's heavy armor.

Soon, commoners wearing white scarves emerged from the county town, charging at Li Huowang and the others.

The Buddhist scriptures seemed effective against the commoners as parts of themselves—like their eyes, ears, etc—would abruptly fall to the ground from time to time.

However, the commoners' zeal seemed unending despite losing so many parts of them in the process.

There were skinny people from the Great Qi among them, but the majority of them were the people of the Great Liang.

The propagation of the Dharma Sect's teaching was much faster than Li Huowang had imagined.

These zealots weren't afraid of death, but the difference in strength between the two factions was still too great. They weren't Li Huowang nor Peng Longteng's match.

The tall Peng Longteng plowed through the crowd, carving open a bloody path. She seemed to be enjoying the slaughter, and her figure was trembling incessantly as she used two corpses as her weapons.

“Don’t kill them all! Leave some of them alive! I want to interrogate them!”

The slaughter continued, and Liu Zongyuan's white mist soon enveloped the entire county town. Once the county town was thoroughly enveloped by Liu Zongyuan's white mist, the battle quickly came to an end.

Thump!

The last remaining dwarf fell weakly to the ground and took his final breath.

“This place must be their temporary base. It seems that they really don’t know the whereabouts of Taishan Shi,” Li Huowang said as he put away the bloody torture tools into his bag.

They were still facing the same problem as earlier. Even if they could defeat Taishan Shi, it was useless if they couldn’t find the latter.

If the Dharma Sect were allowed to absorb the masses, the people of Great Liang would eventually become their enemy.

Fo Yulu emerged from her contemplation just then and said, “Let’s go. Let’s go to Yinling City. There’s an expert there that can figure out Taishan Shi’s location.”

“Lord Ji Xiang, who are they? Can they really do that? Taishan Shi is from the Great Qi, after all,” Hong Da reminded.

“His name is Blind Chen. And if he can’t do it, then no one else can.”

Li Huowang was surprised to hear a familiar name. “The Blind Chen with a stall outside the City God Temple?”

“Do you know him?”

“I guess so; we’ve encountered each other before. However, that guy isn't really that great. He was even deceived by the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

Back then, Li Huowang had made a deal with Blind Chen about a complete talisman collection.

"Fortune tellers can't tell their own fortune. He may not be able to do much else, but he's better at fortune-telling than the majority of the people in the Surveillance Bureau. If he can't do it, then what he worships can definitely do it," Fo Yulu said, mounting her horse.

What he worships? Is there a Siming in charge of fortune telling? The past and future are changing constantly. Can that guy still figure out what's going on? Li Huowang pondered.

Soon, everyone left the corpse-littered town.

The crows and vultures in the air eventually gathered to enjoy the unexpected feast.

A crow opened its beak and repeatedly pecked at an eyeball when a bare foot stepped on it; the crow let out an agonized shriek as it vomited its entrails to the ground.

"What did I say? Taishan, this isn't the right time to cause chaos. The Surveillance Bureau will instantly come sniffing around like a dog looking for shit to eat at the tiniest commotion."

A man wearing a robe adorned with colored cloth strips was strolling leisurely amidst the corpses.

A jet-black cloth was draped over his left shoulder.

The man named Taishan was a short, ugly guy with ears covered in black hair. He looked brutish, but he was wearing an exceptionally elegant white robe. The white headscarf on his head complemented the black cloth on the man's shoulder.

"Hmm... Indeed. However, the Dharma Sect doesn't have enough followers yet. If we lay low, wouldn't the descent of our divine army be delayed?"

"Calm down. I'm more familiar with this place than you are. Although you and I both believe in different aspects of God Yu'er, we still are fellow witches. Why would I, He Xinlai, harm you? Anyway, tell your people to lie low and disguise themselves as refugees from the Great Qi. Then, tell them to scatter and gather the other followers.”

“The Great Liang is the strongest kingdom in the world. Our Dharma Sect just has to take down the Great Liang, and it will be much easier for us to take control over the other regions.”

The witch Taishan came to a halt and nodded. “All right, you have more people than me, so I’ll follow your lead. Before that, I need our people to team up and steal that guy’s sword.”

“Whose sword?”

“The bone sword of that brat in the red Daoist robe. He’s wielding the spine of one of the Three Pure Ones’ Twisted Ones. It will prove immensely useful to me.”

“All right, it seems like they’re looking for you as well. You’ll be the bait, and we’ll set a trap to ambush them.”

“We can’t be careless about this; there’s something wrong with him. Also, I think it’s best if we hide our identity as members of the Dharma Sect; that way, we will be able to avoid unnecessary trouble.”

“Don’t worry, I’ll bring in a few experts. In fact, our Dharma Sect isn’t universally despised in the Great Liang. We have quite a few like-minded friends.”

Chapter 622 - Buddha

“Something has gone extremely wrong! I’m about to be discharged from the hospital, but then something like that happened!” A phone was pressed to Li Huowang’s ear as he paced anxiously in the empty corridor. “Don’t talk to me about fragmented thoughts and perception. I’m not autistic; my thoughts and perception aren’t fragmented! I’m not having hallucinations, either. I was cured a long time ago!”

Li Huowang sighed as he heard the reply, and then his voice instantly became much calmer as he said, “I do want to be discharged. I really don’t want to be considered mentally ill for the rest of my life, but...”

A look of struggle and pain suffused Li Huowang’s face. “Everything that happened on that ship was too real as if I had really experienced it! I did indeed get the bronze coin sword! I did indeed have one arm bitten off by the opponent’s dog! But they all... they all disappeared!”

At the end of the corridor, several people from Li Huowang’s group secretly peeked at him.

“You see, this guy still claims he’s not sick. I’ve seen plenty of this in the hospital. This is a typical case of schizophrenia,” a young guard with a buzz cut speculated.

“It doesn’t seem like it. Look at how he talks in circles. People with schizophrenia don’t take their medication, and their minds aren’t that sharp. I feel like it’s more like a personality disorder; I had a neighbor with that disorder.”

Many people were curious about Li Huowang’s illness, and some even secretly bet their snacks on it. Li Huowang’s presence provided a bit of relief from the boredom of the monotonous hospital.

“Doctor Yi, I’m really afraid that everything that had happened before will become meaningless. I-I’m really confused right now; I don’t know whether it’s real or not, and it’s making me hesitate.”

“Okay, then, come over when you have the time. Thank you,” Li Huowang said. He ended the call and frowned while pacing back and forth in the corridor.

At first, Li Huowang thought that everything going smoothly, but the inexplicable experience at sea was truly bewildering to him.

If it were fake, then wouldn’t that mean that what he had experienced at sea was just a hallucination produced by his fragmented thoughts and perception?

If that were the case, what kind of mental illness was he suffering from? Was there even any cure for it?

If it was real... Li Huowang hesitated, sensing that he was in big trouble and that he had to handle it properly.

It had to be handled properly, as making the wrong choice meant that he’d end up digging a bigger hole in the ground for himself.

Li Huowang felt hopeless. He truly had no idea what to do at this point.

Dak, dak, dak~

A strange noise echoed from outside the window. Li Huowang walked over and saw the vast army of the Great Liang beyond the window.

The cacophony of hooves and the overwhelming aura from the soldiers made Li Huowang feel extremely tense.

The sight was the exact meaning of the word "endless."

The powerful officials were with the troops as well, which added to the intimidating scene.

“Where are these soldiers going?” Li Huowang asked in a low voice.

“They’re not going anywhere. The followers of the Dharma Sect will not dare to rebel as long as they are intimidated.”

“Hehe, we don't have to be afraid of their rebellion. The Flying Leopard troops can completely annihilate such sects,” Liu Zongyuan said with a hint of pride.

“Don’t worry; it seems that the higher-ups also attach importance to the changes in the Great Qi. The spies and paws of the Surveillance Bureau are here along with the higher-ups, so we should be safe.”

Li Huowang finally understood the reason behind the army's presence here, and he finally had a clear understanding of Gao Zhijian’s capability.

The Emperor of Great Liang was the type of person to keep his word.

A general sensed Li Huowang and the others' gazes; he looked over but immediately looked away upon seeing the badges attached to Li Huowang and the others' waists.

Once the soldiers of the Great Liang had passed by them, Li Huowang turned to Fo Yulu beside him and said, “Don’t worry about them. Let’s just focus on our task at hand.”

The Great Qi’s Dharma Sect had to be handled properly. Otherwise, the entire Great Liang would become chaotic once again.

Everyone mounted their horses and galloped toward Yinling City; they were going to contribute to the resistance against the Great Qi’s Dharma Sect.

They had spent just a few days on the road, but the three monks from the Righteous Monastery had already changed drastically.

When Li Huowang first met them, the Abbot of Righteous Monastery, Chan Du, was as thin as a skeleton. After a few days of vegetarian meals, Chan Du's flesh and skin had returned to normal.

The incredible sight made Li Huowang look at the divine powers of the Righteous Monastery in a different light.

“Abbot, what other divine powers did your Buddha grant you in addition to the ability to transform into a thousand-arm Buddha? You should tell me because we're working together against the Dharma Sect.”

Chan Du released the reins with both hands and clasped them together. “Amitabha, this humble monk has been meditating for sixty years and has already transcended the realm of heavenly freedom.”

Li Huowang was completely puzzled. What did it mean to transcend the realm of heavenly freedom?

“Abbot, can you keep it simple? I'm a bit confused—”

A black vulture swooped down from the sky before Li Huowang could finish his sentence. When Li Huowang's gaze met with the vulture, he saw a black-robed Lama through the vulture's eyes.

Then, Li Huowang saw the Lama point his finger toward his own forehead with his right hand, which was covered with age spots and was holding a vajra.

“Respected one, reveal your true nature!”

Li Huowang's heart went numb, and he felt empty as if he had lost something important.

However, he didn't feel anything abnormal, which was contrary to his expectations.

Swoosh!

Li Huowang slashed out with his purple-tasseled sword, splitting the vulture in half.

“An ambush!” Li Huowang exclaimed.

And that was when a rain of vultures plummeted toward the others.

The Abbot of the Righteous Monastery put his hands together, and his figure phased through the saddle, merging with the horse.

It didn't end there. When the three monks were finally merged with their horses, their flesh and blood began to merge with each other as well.

Finally, a fleshy creature that resembled a Buddha appeared before everyone.

It was a Buddha that Li Huowang had seen in the Righteous Monastery.

The Buddha had roughly eight pairs of arms. Each hand was holding a different seal—the vajra, lotus, or lion seal. Soon, more than ten mouths chanted sutras at the same time.

“In the heavens, the true Dharma was preached. Abandon the heavenly palace; descend from the mother's womb. Born from the right side of the body, walk as a Buddha; open the gate of Dharma, cleanse impurities...”

The sutras were in different volumes, but they were in harmony with each other, which made the sutras sound extremely sacred and solemn.

As the Buddha's voice pervaded the air, the vultures' wings abruptly stuck to their bodies, and their eyes were eventually stuck to their eyelids as well. Then, they fell from the sky like rocks thrown into the ocean.

Li Huowang looked up at the Buddha—no, at the compassionate face of the abbot. It was then that he finally understood the meaning of the realm of heavenly freedom.

Chapter 623 - Chess

“These birds... I seem to have seen them somewhere before...” Li Huowang muttered with furrowed brows while staring at the vultures on the ground. He was trying his best to remember where he had seen these vultures.

Li Huowang's expression froze. A few years ago, he had encountered a Lama with a vulture just as he left Qing Qiu.

Is it them? Those Lamas from Qing Qiu infamous for conducting sacrificial rituals? Why would they want to ambush the Surveillance Bureau?

Li Huowang suddenly noticed something amiss. He reached behind him, and his heart sank. His spine sword was missing! These vultures were here to serve as a distraction, and their target was his spine sword!

“My sword is missing!” Li Huowang exclaimed. Peng Longteng appeared next to Li Huowang, and she hurled the latter into the air.

Having been thrown into the air, Li Huowang now had a bird's eye view of everything around him. He looked around frantically, scanning his surroundings.

He wouldn't have been so angry if the other party had come to ambush him, but they had actually come to steal his spine sword.

Li Huowang swore to crush them to dust!

“Daoist! Look, your sword's there!” The old monk behind Li Huowang exclaimed, pointing at somewhere in the distance.

The next moment, the old monk's figure solidified. Li Huowang grabbed the old monk's robes, and the two headed into the distance.

When they got close enough, Li Huowang saw a mandrill wearing a Buddha mask. The mandrill was holding his spine sword and was running frantically through the forest.

The mandrill seemed to have mastered a movement technique that allowed it to move so swiftly through the forest.

“Stop running!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He gouged out his left eye and crushed it. The monkey was instantly enveloped in a strange light, and its movement became as slow as a snail.

Li Sui’s tentacles then reached out to retrieve the spine sword, but a cold light flashed, severing those tentacles.

A strange drumming rhythm echoed immediately afterward. Then, an old Lama wearing a black sheepskin stood between Li Huowang and the spine sword.

He was beating the bone drum at his waist, and there was a bone sutra in his hand.

“The Venerable Uruvilva-Kasyapa, Venerable Gaya Kasyapa, Venerable Nadi Kasyapa, Venerable Mahakasyapa, Venerable Sariputra, Venerable Maudgalyayana...” the old Lama chanted.

Strange cries pervaded the air as he chanted, and the vultures gathered at their location, orbiting the skies above them.

“There is no enmity between us, so why are you doing this to me?! Do you really think I haven't changed at all?!” Li Huowang roared at the old Lama as blood streamed down his eye socket.

The vultures in the air swooped down toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was sitting on a plastic red stool and was dressed in blue and white clothes. His brows were furrowed as he stared at the chessboard placed before him.

He was playing chess against his attending physician Wu Cheng. He was playing chess while listening to something with his Bluetooth earpiece.

Li Huowang picked up his left chariot with two fingers and slammed it down on his opponent’s pawn.

Smack!

Li Huowang’s bronze coin sword struck the old Lama, shattering the latter's bone drum.

The spine sword was in Li Huowang's hands once again, and he breathed a sigh of relief at its familiar coldness.

Li Huowang looked up, and he found that he was surrounded by people.

In addition to the old Lama wearing clothes made of black sheepskin, people wearing white headscarves and black armbands stood around Li Huowang as well. Their outfit told Li Huowang everything he had to know, and he became certain of it as well. These people were followers of the Dharma Sect!

“We're not wearing any disguise. Won't this kid recognize us?”

“We're going to kill him, so it doesn't matter. Let's wrap this up.”

“General[2].”

Li Huowang looked up slowly at Wu Cheng, who was smiling slightly.

“Are you secretly using a grandmaster-level AI to cheat against me? I heard people can do that.”

“Calm down, Little Li. It's just a game of chess. You don't need to worry about winning or losing, and losing isn't that big of a deal.”

“Don't burden yourself with so many thoughts. Just think about it as me finding someone to play chess with because I like playing chess.”

Li Huowang took a deep breath and continued with the game. He struggled as hard as he could to make a comeback.

“Take the horse.” Li Sui's bloody burrowed out of Li Huowang's abdomen and gouged out his opponent's intestines.

“Advisor.” Li Huowang's last eye was covered in a black layer.

“Hey! They're playing chess here!” someone exclaimed. The nearby patients heard that, and they crowded around Li Huowang out of curiosity as well as to help him against Wu Cheng.

“Er Jiu! We’re here to help you!”

Li Huowang was annoyed at the cacophony of voices around him.

“Shut up!!” Li Huowang roared.

The patients immediately went silent. Li Huowang's roar had reminded them of his identity, and they dared not speak against him.

Li Huowang continued with the game, even though it was getting more and more difficult to stand his ground.

If Wu Cheng hadn't been going easy on him, he would have lost long ago.

Li Huowang's temper grew as he looked at the chessboard before him. He suddenly grabbed the chessboard and was about to flip it out of fury, but Wu Cheng grabbed his hand and pushed it down firmly.

“Little Li, you should stop flipping the table whenever you're losing. Some things can be resolved through flipping the table, but there are many things that cannot be resolved through that alone.”

Li Huowang stared deeply at Wu Cheng.

Just then, a hand reached out from behind Li Huowang's shoulder, and the hand's five fingers grabbed a chariot before moving it forward three squares.

Li Huowang tilted his head slightly and was surprised to see that the autistic chubby boy was the one who had made the move.

The autistic chubby boy was drooling, but his eyes were transfixed on the chessboard.

Li Huowang let go of the chessboard and allowed the chubby boy to fight Wu Cheng.

The chubby boy's play was incredibly slow, but it was incredibly effective against Wu Cheng's moves.

As time went on, the chubby boy was capturing more and more of Wu Cheng's pieces. It started with just the pawns, but things escalated slowly until the tides were starting to reverse in the chubby boy's favor.

Li Huowang forcefully tore off the old man's loose skin on his face and looked daggers at the old Lama, who was the perpetrator behind all this.

The old Lama had transformed, and he was sporting heads and six arms. Each head represented a unique death—drowning, hanging, and stabbing.

Just as the old Lama's bone sutra was about to start spinning, Li Huowang pulled out his spine sword and thrust himself into Great Qi.

He located the old Lama's position within the Great Qi and carved open another spacetime rift. However, Li Huowang wasn't planning on returning to the Great Liang to ambush the old Lama through this spacetime rift. Instead, he opened the spacetime rift directly on top of the old Lama so the spacetime rift would sever the old Lama's figure into two.

When Wu Cheng moved his final advisor, Li Huowang's lips curled slightly upward. He moved his general and blocked the opponent's general.

“General versus general!”

The old Lama's bizarre and aged figure swelled up. The next moment, tentacles of a variety of sizes emerged from his every orifice, and they writhed as they streaked through the air.

Bang!

The old Lama exploded into a bloody mess of flesh and tentacles.

Li Huowang emerged from the old Lama and turned to the Dharma Sect members, shouting, “General! Checkmate!”

1. Chinese chess terms. A few phrases later on that refer to chess as well 🤔

2. If it's not obvious yet, this is Chess in Chinese 🤔

Chapter 624 - Ambush

“Wu Cheng! Again!”

Smack!

“Pawn retreat!”

Smack!

“Elephant takes cannon!”

Smack!

“Pawn advances!”

Clang!

The purple-tasseled sword collided with a black obsidian dagger. Sparks flew as the tip of the dagger was severed. It spun like a top in mid-air before piercing the bloody ground.

The Dharma Sect witch hurriedly twisted his hand to avoid making any contact with the purple-tasseled sword. Then, he viciously thrust the broken dagger into Li Huowang’s left chest.

It seemed like a great move, but he had unknowingly put himself in danger, as getting so close to Li Huowang was a death sentence.

The next moment, the Dharma Sect witch felt a sharp pain in his chest. He looked down and saw something covered in tentacles protruding from Li Huowang's chest. Shockingly, it had burrowed into his own abdomen!

“No, no, no!” The Dharma Sect witch frantically clawed at his stomach and fearfully scoured his messy insides.

“Yu...er...” The Dharma Sect witch muttered before his neck jerked upward; the tentacles inside of him had stirred his brain until it became mush.

The man was dead, but his corpse was still standing. Moments later, he grabbed his broken dagger and charged at a Dharma Sect disciple attempting to ambush Li Huowang.

Li Sui had taken complete control over his body.

Li Huowang stood still, panting heavily as he surveyed the battlefield. The old Lama had been dealt with, but the situation was far from over. He still had to deal with these Dharma Sect followers.

However, he wasn't too worried about losing, as Fo Yulu and the Abbot of the Righteous Monastery were there to help him.

He was more concerned about the Great Liang, as his assumption ended up being correct! The Dharma Sect of the Great Liang and the Dharma Sect of the Great Qi had somehow created an alliance in such a short period of time.

The Dharma Sect of the Great Liang was strong enough to throw the Great Liang into chaos, and with the addition of the Great Qi's Dharma Sect, the consequences were unpredictable.

Unbeknownst to Li Huowang, quite a few people were staring at him from the shadows.

"Taishan! We have to retreat now! The military families will catch up to us if we wait any further!" He Xinlai exclaimed at the Great Qi witch.

"All right!" Taishan Shi grunted and nodded. The Dharma Sect followers didn't hesitate to take out round stones and swallow them whole. Their eyes then turned red, and they charged forward to cover Taishan Shi and He Xinlai's retreat.

"Trying to escape? Li Sui, chase them!"

Li Huowang took out two pieces of turmeric paper and drew two talismans using his own blood. He then pressed them firmly on his leg before chasing after the retreating pair. He moved so fast that he left a trail of afterimages.

The others were surrounded, but Li Huowang encountered little to no resistance.

"He's really chasing us."

"I know," He Xinlai replied with a smile.

The scenery rapidly peeled away as Li Huowang chased after He Xinlai and Taishan Shi.

Just then, the surroundings brightened, and a field beyond the forest was revealed. Stacks of yellow rice straw were piled between the fields, and smoke was rising from the distant village just beyond the fields.

“You’re not getting away!” Li Huowang sliced off a large piece of his own flesh and hurled it toward the fleeing pair.

The tattered piece of flesh spun rapidly in the air as if it was sentient, and it headed straight for Taishan Shi's back.

Taishan Shi was struck, and Li Huowang's flesh inundated his back. He collapsed to the ground and squirmed violently.

Li Huowang kicked off of the ground and jumped high into the air before bringing down his purple-tasseled sword toward the wriggling figure on the ground.

The feedback was unexpectedly light, and it wasn't the familiar sensation of cutting through flesh.

All of a sudden, a pair of calloused hands emerged from the earth and grabbed Li Huowang's ankles before yanking him downward.

He can burrow into the ground?! Just as the thought flashed through Li Huowang's mind, he was dragged neck-deep into the soil.

It wasn't over yet. Intense pain erupted from Li Huowang's chest and back as something seemed to burrow inside of him.

Li Sui was desperately trying to stop the intrusion with her tentacles.

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and closed his lone eye. I'm underwater! I'm underwater! I have to hold my breath!

The soil immobilized Li Huowang, and he was starting to suffocate.

Just then, he could feel icy cold water permeating his exposed wounds; the water was so cold that its coldness pierced his bones.

Li Huowang shivered as he struggled to draw out the spine sword. He swung it ahead and behind him, and the pain immediately vanished.

Li Huowang raised both hands and swam upward with all his might. He was powerless in the water. He had to get back to land as soon as possible!

Just as he was about to emerge from the waters, Li Huowang pushed his both hands against the soil and pulled himself out as if he were a radish being harvested from the ground.

He gasped for air and opened his eyes to look around, but all he saw was darkness.

Li Huowang trembled and reached out to touch his right eye socket. Three thorns were sticking out of his right eye socket. It seemed that the enemy had blinded him.

Li Huowang thought that they would take advantage of his blindness, but he couldn't hear anything at all. It seemed like there was no one around him.

He Xinlai was several yards away from Li Huowang. A wooden sword was in his hand as he walked toward Taishan Shi, who had just emerged from the ground.

"What do we do now? That kid is blind. Are you not going to deal with him?" He Xinlai asked.

Despite the fact that Li Huowang was blind, Taishan Shi's cautious face showed no signs of joy. As a witch under Arrogant Stone, he had discerned some strange clues.

"Something's wrong with this kid. I think he still has some cards up his sleeve. I need to consult Sir Arrogant Stone," Taishan Shi said. He took out two crescent-shaped stones and knelt down before hugging them close. He shook them in his arms and tossed them to the ground.

"What did God Yu'er say?" He Xinlai asked while staring at the stones on the ground.

“Kill! He must die! And we must take his sword away, too!” Taishan Shi roared, and his figure burrowed into the soil once more.

He Xinlai’s face changed drastically. He had been a witch for a long time, but he had never expected God Yu’er to issue such a straightforward oracle.

Of course, He Xinlai was going to follow the oracle without any hesitation. He had to show his loyalty to God Yu’er, who was about to descend to the mortal realm.

He Xinlai formed seals with one hand, and then he bit his fingertip to smear his own blood on the black cloth draped over his shoulder.

He then used the black blood on his hand to draw peach talismans on his wooden sword.

“Since it has been decided, then we’re going for the kill!” He Xinlai charged at Li Huowang with the black sword in hand.

All of a sudden, two hands emerged from the ground and grabbed Li Huowang’s ankles before yanking him downward.

However, something strange happened just then. Taishan Shi’s hands phased through Li Huowang’s ankles, and he ended up grabbing nothing but air.

The next moment, Li Huowang thrust his sword toward his left, which had no enemies.

He Xinlai was on Li Huowang’s right, but he felt a sharp pain radiating from his back.

Chapter 625 - Join

For some reason, He Xinlai's back was hurting.

He Xinlai felt something amiss. He turned to look behind him but found nothing.

Taishan Shi was sitting cross-legged in the soil, and his hands were clasped tightly together.

Dust billowed out from the ground around him.

The outline of an invisible figure was in the swirling dust; the figure belonged to Li Huowang, who had just projected his image.

The ground trembled slightly as a bulky fleshy figure emerged from the nearby forest. It resembled a bloated flesh-and-blood Buddha with limbs.

“Amitabha! Two benefactors! In the boundless sea of suffering! Return to the shore!”

“Quick! His reinforcements are here! Stop hiding! Take advantage of his blindness and kill him now!”

He Xinlai reached to his shoulder and removed the black cloth on his sleeve. He threw it forcefully toward the sun in the sky.

The black cloth blotted out the sunlight, and the massive area was instantly shrouded in darkness.

Just like that, a tiny Natural Disaster was formed.

“Divine soldiers, ah!” Taishan Shi exclaimed.

Li Huowang suddenly felt a million gazes all over him, and then he could feel Li Sui writhing inside of him.

“Father, I... I feel so happy!” Li Sui's tentacles rapidly propagated inside Li Huowang. Li Sui was trying to assimilate him.

This issue had to be resolved immediately, or Li Huowang would end up like Bun and be assimilated by Li Sui!

Thump!

The towering Peng Longteng stood on Li Huowang's left side as the latter inwardly roared, "Suisui! Hang in there! Don't yield to your instincts! We're about to get out!"

The ground sank as Li Huowang plummeted into the depths of the earth. Some entities hiding in the darkness within made their move; their swaying figures closing in on Li Huowang looked both illusory and real.

Li Huowang brandished the bronze coin sword and purple-tasseled sword to protect himself.

Meanwhile, He Xinlai was waiting for the right moment to strike.

It didn't take him long to find an opportunity, as Li Huowang was blind. He used a sword technique and charged at Li Huowang as soon as the latter stepped on his own shadow on the ground.

Right as his sword was about to pierce Li Huowang's throat, He Xinlai's vision blurred. Then, Li Huowang reached out and accurately grabbed the blade of his sword.

"Huh?!" He Xinlai was stupefied.

Li Huowang looked up just then. Li Huowang's eyeballs were supposed to be on the ground as they had been gouged out. However, a strange eyeball with double pupils was in one of his empty eye sockets.

"Who did you say was blind?" Li Huowang asked. It was true that he was blind, but he could borrow his daughter's eyeball.

He hadn't revealed that fact earlier to deceive his enemies. Fortunately, it worked.

He Xinlai's heart sank, and then he decisively let go of the weapon in his hand before retreating into the darkness behind him.

Unfortunately, he was so close to Li Huowang that there was no way he could escape.

Peng Longteng's towering figure stood before him while Li Huowang's tentacles surged from behind him, appearing like a tidal wave.

“Taishan! Taishan Shi!” He Xinlai shouted, asking for his ally's help, but nothing happened.

Taishan Shi had decided to run away upon sensing that there was something amiss.

When the black cloth in the sky was slashed into pieces by Hong Da's flying knife, everything returned to normal.

Unfortunately, Taishan Shi had escaped.

Everyone surrounded He Xinlai, who was being held down by Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked at He Xinlai. He had just given He Xinlai a taste of his knuckle sandwiches, so the latter's teeth were missing, and his face was black and blue.

However, Li Huowang wasn't done just yet as he whipped out his bag of torture tools and said, “My turn.”

“Wait!” Fo Yulu chimed in, “Capturing a Grand Witch of the Dharma Sect is incredibly difficult. What if you end up killing him accidentally? I need to take him back to the Bureau and have someone interrogate him.”

“Heh, are you looking down on me? I'm from the Ao Jing Sect!”

“Everything must be done according to the rules.”

“Stop the nonsense! When did the Surveillance Bureau ever care about rules? Aren't you just after the reward of lifespan pills? I used to work in the Bureau! You shouldn't have let Taishan escape just for the sake of such a small profit!”

Li Huowang wanted to act tough, but he discovered that even Hong Da and Liu Zongyuan were on Fo Yulu's side.

“Brother Er, you can't be like this. The Dharma Sect of the Great Qi has just arrived here. We wouldn't have been able to obtain much information from him. However, this guy is different. We can dig out some important information about the Dharma Sect from his brain, and then we might be able to annihilate the Dharma Sect in one fell swoop.”

“Er Jiu, I know the methods of the Ao Jing Sect are terrifying. However, the Bureau has people that are better than you when it comes to interrogation.”

Li Huowang frowned as he scanned their faces. It seemed that He Xinlai had a high bounty in the Surveillance Bureau.

In other words, it was highly unlikely that he'd get to interrogate He Xinlai unless he killed all of them.

“It seems that it was my mistake when I thought that I'd be able to save Great Liang with you guys. You people are the same—prioritizing your own profits!” Li Huowang was enraged.

He bent down and placed his head in the soil to look for traces of Taishan Shi. After a while, Li Huowang managed to find some clues. He ignored the members of the Surveillance Bureau and meticulously felt the minute changes in the soil to chase after Taishan Shi. However, he had no choice but to stop, as a towering mountain was standing before him. It seemed that Taishan Shi knew that someone would follow him, so he decided to burrow into a mountain as a precaution. There was nothing Li Huowang could do about it unless he could somehow move the mountain aside.

“Brother Er, don't be angry, okay? Hehehe~ ” Li Huowang heard the laughter behind him.

However, he didn't even turn his head and simply said, “If you have something to say, then spit it out.”

“We've known each other for so long. Do you really have to treat me like this?? Do you still remember how we went through life and death together against that Muddled One back then?” Liu Zongyuan asked, smiling as he walked up to Li Huowang while wearing a wooden mask. “This turn of events is great for us, so why do you look so unhappy? We managed to capture a Grand Witch alive. This is a major blow to the Dharma Sect! There aren't many Grand Witches in the Dharma Sect, after all.”

At that, Li Huowang’s face lightened up.

Liu Zongyuan added, “Don’t be in a hurry~ We have to take things one step at a time. We’ll definitely annihilate the Dharma Sect in due time. Anyway, can you stop being mad at Lord Ji Xiang? Just treat it as giving me some face.”

Li Huowang took a deep breath and exhaled. “Did you know? If it weren’t for the fact that I’d waste time, I really wanted to kill you guys.”

“ Hahaha~ Brother Er really knows how to crack jokes,” Liu Zongyuan said, laughing. He was about to put his arm around Li Huowang’s shoulder, but the tentacles blocked him. “Brother Er, shouldn’t you withdraw your supernatural powers?”

“Suisui, retract your tentacles.”

“...”

“Suisui?”

“I can’t retract them, Father. It’s been like this since the sun was blotted out earlier...” Li Sui sounded aggrieved.

Chapter 626 - Treatment

In a dense forest, a tentacle with spikes and suction cups burst out of Li Huowang's left arm and hooked around a tree. Moments later, another tentacle burst out of his right abdomen and hooked around another tree.

"Hold tight!" Li Huowang took out a short knife and placed it at the base of the tentacles. After a moment of silence, he slashed at the tentacles, withstanding the pain as blood spurted out haphazardly into the air.

He dared not get distracted as sweat ran down his face. He wanted to free himself from Li Sui.

The Natural Disaster at the time had made Li Sui assimilate Bun. Li Huowang knew that it could happen, but he was still caught off guard by the fact that it happened to him.

Li Sui was so smart and obedient that Li Huowang had completely forgotten that she was an evil entity capable of robbing someone else's body—a Black Taisui!

Li Huowang could not let her stay inside of him for too long, or she could instinctively devour him and take over his body.

"Urgh..." Li Huowang trembled. The pain was akin to being sliced by a thousand blades at once.

Li Sui had completely fused to him. Not only were there tentacles outside him, but there were tentacles around his organs as well.

To make matters worse, he'd have to shave his bones as well.

"Father, are you in pain? Do you want to stop?" Li Sui's voice echoed from inside his mind.

"No need!" Li Huowang shook his head and continued. Bai-Hui's blessing of increased regeneration rate was working against him. He had to gouge out his flesh in one go, or it would regenerate before he could remove it.

“Sorry, Father... It’s all my fault!” Li Sui exclaimed, blaming herself.

“No, this isn’t your fault! Don’t say something like that. Now wrap your tentacles tighter! This is just a small issue, and I’m not going to stumble over this. We can easily solve this!”

Unfortunately, Li Huowang was attempting something similar to separating a conjoined twin, which was an incredibly difficult feat.

“Amitabha. Benefactor, what are you doing?” the Abbot asked upon seeing the bizarre scene in the forest.

An unfriendly-looking Daoist was hanging between trees using his tentacles and was gouging out his own flesh using a knife. It was a bizarre sight indeed.

The blood flowing down Li Huowang dyed the ground red.

After learning about Li Huowang’s predicament, the Abbot placed his hands together and bowed slightly to him. “Amitabha. Benefactor Er, you should’ve told me earlier. I can help you with this.”

Li Huowang stopped cutting off his flesh and stared at the old monk. “You? Really? Do you even know what kind of trouble I’m having here?”

“Amitabha. Ratnasambhava from Śrīmat of the Southern Pure Land enlightens the masses. The flesh on their body is limitless, signifying their unbounded kindness. Our body is just a vessel, and since our benefactor is a kind person, Ratnasambhava will bless and protect you.”

“Ratnasambhava?” Li Huowang frowned. He didn’t trust the Abbot completely, but he still said, “Are you thinking of making me give birth to Li Sui like the eunuchs?”

“Ah~ We won’t. Benefactor, please wear your clothes and follow me,” Chan Du said.

Li Huowang wore his clothes and allowed Chan Du to guide the way for him.

They met up with the two other monks, and Chan Du discussed the problem with them. Chan Du then asked Li Huowang to sit on the ground. Afterward, the three monks orbited Li Huowang while playing the wooden fish at a specific speed.

“Xi luo seng he mu ke ye du lu du lu fa she ye de... yi xi li...” As the three chanted a bizarre and complicated mantra, Li Huowang felt his scalp becoming itchy.

He scratched his head and was surprised to find that he had scratched off a chunk of his scalp! Moreover, he could feel himself sloughing away slowly.

He looked down at himself and finally understood how those girls in vases were made.

Li Huowang and Li Sui were separating slowly. At the sight, Chan Du took off the prayer beads around his neck and hurled them to the mass of flesh composed of both Li Huowang and Li Sui.

A reverse swastika made out of golden light appeared on Li Huowang.

Li Sui rapidly separated from Li Huowang until she was out!

The chanting slowed down, and Li Huowang soon found himself in his original body. However, Li Sui was no longer inside of him.

The blind Li Huowang looked around with his empty eye sockets. “Suisui, give me an eyeball!”

Li Sui obliged.

Li Huowang accepted the eyeball and shoved it into his eye socket. He could finally see again.

He looked down at himself once again and saw that he was unharmed.

It seems that the techniques of the Righteous Monastery can be incredibly useful, Li Huowang thought before saying, "Thank you. I owe you one."

"Amitabha, no need to thank us. We are simply repaying your kindness in kindness. You gave us alms, so think of this as repaying what you gave us last time."

Li Huowang approached Li Sui and looked down at the skinless dog sporting some tentacles. "Are you okay? Do you feel anything missing from you?"

"Father, I'm fine!" Li Sui hugged Li Huowang and smiled happily.

"Benefactor Er, is this the evil entity that you're rearing? It's a meritorious deed. Back in the Righteous Monastery, we have many evil entities following the Buddha's teachings."

"They're following the Buddha's teachings?" Li Huowang asked, frowning. "Do they become like those pigs and cows that helped your monks cultivate?"

Chan Du wasn't angry at Li Huowang's provocation. He merely smiled and rotated the prayer beads in his hands. "Your body is still unstable. Try not to move around too much these days."

"I understand." Li Huowang picked up his belongings and left the forest. Chan Du and the two monks followed suit. Since they were willing to help him, Li Huowang was now looking at them in a brand-new light. "Abbot, I apologize for my rudeness. There's another Righteous Monastery here in the Liang Kingdom, and I had a fight with them last time, so I don't really have a good impression of the Righteous Monastery."

"Oh? Why is that?"

"I had a Strayed One friend, but the monks wanted to stop my friend from leaving with his life. They were really despicable—much more despicable than you."

Chan Du shook his head lightly and said, "Benefactor, you're wrong. I'd do the same if I were in their shoes."

Li Huowang's expression froze. "Why? Aren't Strayed Ones human beings as well? Why kill them without any hesitation?"

"Amitabha. A Strayed One is a human being, but they have to be removed for the sake of the world, or they'd harm many people. Also, a Strayed One's body is a natural treasure. We can refine them into artifacts or weapons that we can either use or exchange for other goods that will allow us to save even more people. Benefactor Er, what do you think? Isn't that a kind deed?"

Li Huowang wordlessly stared at Chan Du before looking away and walking away.

Chapter 627 - Strike Tree Flowers

The sunset was so red that it was like a fire that had set the skies ablaze.

It was so red that it made Li Sui appear as if she were blushing.

She was sitting on horseback just behind her father, and she was examining her new body. She was in another woman's body, and it was a slightly older and uglier body than the body she usually wore.

The black cloth on her shoulder indicated that the deceased woman was a Dharma Sect follower. She was one of Li Huowang's ambushers.

Li Sui chose this body, as the body had a skirt that she could use to hide her true form, which was a skinless dog.

Li Sui could have just traveled while staying inside Li Huowang, but she had become afraid of staying inside her father for an extended period of time, especially after what had transpired last time. She didn't want her father to go through that procedure again, as she didn't want to hurt him.

The horse stopped just then, prompting Li Sui to peek out from her father's back.

There were many houses ahead of them.

"It's getting dark. Let's rest at this station. We can travel tomorrow to Yinling City!" [\[1\]](#)

Fo Yulu showed her identity plate to the station master and his subordinate, and they immediately snapped to attention. They made sure to give Fo Yulu the hospitality they deserved as members of the Surveillance Bureau.

The Surveillance Bureau was even more important than regular soldiers around here.

Night fell, and they brought out food for Fo Yulu and her group to eat. They even made vegetarian meals for the monks.

Li Sui was sitting on a bench with a pair of chopsticks in hand. She swept her gaze across the others to try and imitate how they were using two wooden sticks to grab food.

Li Sui had never really bothered attempting to learn how to use a chopstick, as she'd either use her tentacles to eat her food or simply use her mouth.

"Here, eat the egg. You don't need the chopsticks for it," Li Huowang said. He drank a mouthful of the lamb soup and tore off the black cloth on Li Sui's shoulder.

Li Sui nodded and took the bowl with eggs in it. Beneath the shocked gaze of the station master, Li Sui devoured the eggs with their shells. She devoured tens of eggs in one go as if she were a snake.

Li Sui disliked the eggs, as she thought they were tasteless. After filling up her stomach, she stood up and looked around curiously like a child, but nothing attracted her attention.

She walked around and approached the window.

Looking out the window, she saw the city next to the station. She also saw people walking down the streets, and she became curious about what they were doing.

The city was evidently lively with many people going about on their own business.

She looked back and saw her father talking to the bald woman. At the sight, Li Sui secretly made up her mind.

Since her father was going to sleep here, she decided to visit the city and return back before her father woke up.

Li Sui soon made her way into the city, and the city's lively atmosphere made her feel excited and happy. She loved the excitement here.

“Is it going to be the New Year soon? I love the New Year.”

“The New Year celebrations have just ended, so this is just a regular festival,” a pedestrian chimed in.

“Festival? Festivals are fun too!” Li Sui exclaimed. She walked with the crowd and took in the scenery.

There were many people at night, as there were performances all over the place.

Li Sui saw people standing on high stilts while others were spitting fire out of their mouths.

Li Sui followed the crowd until everyone stopped right in front of the city walls. Li Sui looked around and saw that the people seemed to be waiting for something.

“What’s happening?” Li Sui asked.

“Shhh... they're about to strike the tree flowers. Be quiet.”

While Li Sui was wondering about what was about to happen, she saw an old man walking toward the edge of the city wall.

The old man was frowning and was wearing a straw hat with an overall made from lamb fur. He was holding a hot bucket filled with molten metal.

The old man scooped a small portion of the molten metal and threw it forcefully at the city walls. Drops of red and orange exploded upon impact, showering the sky with sparks.

The molten metal emitted a yellow and orange light as it splattered into the air. It looked like a canopy of flowers had appeared in the sky.

The old man hurled the molten metal nonstop, so the dazzling shower was nonstop. [2]

“Wow... It’s so pretty!” Li Sui exclaimed with her eyes glued to the beautiful scene, just like everyone else.

The beautiful flowers appeared again and again in the night sky, and Li Sui enjoyed it a lot.

She had never seen anything so pretty before.

When the performance was over, the people sighed and left the city wall.

“Striking Tree Flowers is pretty, but it’s a shame that they don’t have any music and performers to go along with it. Its true beauty will only appear by then. The fiery sparks lit up the dark skies~ The scent of molten steel~ The instruments going along with the beat~ The performers singing and aligning the chorus with the flowers~” a scholar lamented while shaking his head. Then, he sighed and walked past Li Sui.

Li Sui didn’t care what the scholar was talking about, as she only cared about one thing—learning it. She wanted to learn it to show it to her father and mother. Li Sui was sure that they had never seen something like that before.

“Can you tell me how to Strike Tree Flowers? I want to show it to my father!” Li Sui exclaimed, rushing at the old man to stop him from leaving.

However, the old man didn’t even look at her. “We don’t teach girls!”

The old man walked past Li Sui, but she stopped him again, asking, “Why? Why can’t you teach me?”

“Because you’re a girl! You—” the old man stopped upon seeing Li Sui’s face, which was finally illuminated by the faint moonlight.

“Ni’er? Ni’er?!” the old man exclaimed. His trembling hands covered in scars and boils grabbed Li Sui’s shoulders.

“Teach me. It was so pretty. My father will definitely like it.”

The old man cried, seemingly unable to hold back his tears.

The old man nodded vigorously, and his voice was trembling as he said, “Sure! I’ll teach you! I will teach you everything!”

“Really? That’s great! How do I learn it? Do I need to read books to learn it?” Li Sui asked.

“Come! Come here! Follow me!” the old man exclaimed, pulling Li Sui to his house.

Li Sui soon arrived at the old man's house, which was made out of clay. The old man excitedly pushed the door open and shouted, “My wife! My dear wife! Look who’s back!”

An old woman inside the house was painstakingly trying to thread a needle under the weak flames of a small candle. Upon hearing the old man's words, she licked the needle and placed it in between her black-and-white hair. “Who is it?”

The old woman turned around and was stunned upon seeing Li Sui’s face. She even rubbed her eyes as if she couldn't believe what she was staring at.

Li Sui smiled and nodded. “I’m here to learn how to Strike Tree Flowers.”

The old woman smacked her knees and cried out loud before hugging Li Sui tightly. Her chest heaved strongly as she sobbed and cried, “ Sob! My Ni’er~ Sob! You must've had a hard life!”

Li Sui had no idea what she was talking about, but she found the old woman's actions to be quite similar to the Lu Family’s performance.

With that, Li Sui turned around and stared at the crying old man. “Do we have to do this to learn Strike Tree Flowers?”

1. A station in ancient times was a place where officials could exchange horses and rest for the night. Kinda like motels with a petrol station in modern times 🤔

2. Striking Tree Flowers is a performance where molten iron was flung against city walls to create a shower of sparks; a pseudo fireworks in a sense 🤔

Chapter 628 - Ni'Er

"Ni'er, come. Sit near the stove. Let's drink some sugar water and eat some dried persimmons. You loved eating sweet things when you were younger, so we made sure that sweets were always available for you."

"Maybe you want to eat meat instead? Didn't you like eating meat? Let me go get some for you; your mother will cook it for you."

The old man and old woman orbited Li Sui, frantically taking care of her. The smile on their lips never once disappeared as they offered anything they could offer.

"Wait, Ni'er, how did you manage to come back here? I heard that beast sold you—"

"We're having a festival here," the old man lightly kicked the old woman, interrupting her. "Don't even mention that beast today! We can just talk about it tomorrow."

Li Sui had no idea what the two were talking about, so she was starting to become impatient. "Didn't you say that you were going to teach me how to Strike Tree Flowers? I want to learn it."

"Of course! Come, I'll teach you now!" the old man said, nodding furiously. Then, he led Li Sui deeper into the house. He pulled open a curtain riddled with burnt holes and showed the back half of the house to Li Sui.

Li Sui was surprised to see that the back half of the house was a smithy. Clearly, the couple was only living in the front part of the house.

"Ni'er, only us blacksmiths can Strike Tree Flowers. Do you know why? It's because only we can have enough molten metal to do so."

The old man threw several charcoal biscuits into the forge, which was emitting a dim red color. Then, he took out the forge blower and used it to raise the temperature of the forge.

The charcoal gradually turned red beneath the wind, and the heat increased steadily. The old man turned to Li Sui while fanning the flames, saying, “Ni’er, we cannot charge less than two hundred coins to perform the Strike Tree Flower once. Molten metal is expensive. You must remember to charge at least two hundred coins for each performance.”

When the old man sensed that the temperature was right, he placed a crucible into the burning charcoal. A variety of metals was in the crucible, such as discarded horseshoes and rusted knives.

“We need to charge them for the metal we use, too. Of course, you can just grab some scrap metal instead of buying decent ones. That way, you’ll be able to save a lot of money.”

Li Sui’s gaze was fixed on the burning furnace, and she looked like she couldn’t hear the old man’s explanation.

The old man happily took off his lamb fur coat and smiled upon seeing that his daughter was seriously trying to learn how to Strike Tree Flowers. She’s looking at me just like how she did in the past. Back then, she’d always sit there and watch me work throughout the entire day.

However, the old woman noticed something amiss and approached the old man. “Husband, what’s going on? I feel like something is weird. I feel like Ni’er has become a different person.”

The old man glared at the old woman while fanning the flames. He glanced at Li Sui and whispered, “What do you mean ‘weird’? It’s already a miracle that she made it back alive in one piece. What else can we even wish for? Anyway, be quiet!”

The old man grabbed some good-quality charcoal and crushed it before tossing it into the crucible. “Ni’er, you need to remember to put some charcoal into the crucible. The metal will melt faster that way.”

“I understand,” Li Sui said, sounding serious.

The metals inside the crucible turned red before melting altogether. Soon, Li Sui saw the same bucket of molten metal from the performance earlier.

“Move aside. I’ll pour the molten metal into that bucket. This isn’t a lot, but it’s surprisingly heavy.” The old man gritted his teeth and used two hands to carry the bucket of molten metal toward the city walls.

“Ni’er, you must toss it high up into the air, and you need to use a lot of force. Otherwise, the molten metal will fall on your head.”

The dazzling display of the Strike Tree Flowers appeared once more.

Li Sui’s eyes lit up in excitement at the sight. “It’s so pretty.”

The old man was energized upon seeing Li Sui’s excitement. He tossed goblet after goblet of molten metal toward the city wall.

Once the bucket no longer contained any molten metal, the panting old man walked up to Li Sui, asking, “Ni’er, how was it? Did you learn anything? I can do it again for you to see.”

“Yay! Do it again!” Li Sui happily nodded. She felt like she could watch it forever.

“All right! Then, let’s go back and melt another bucket of metal!” the old man exclaimed and led Li Sui back to his home.

However, he had just taken a few steps when a thug with a tattoo on his arm stood in their way. “Father-in-law, I saw you Striking Tree Flower from afar. It seems that you’ve profited quite a lot during this festival.”

The old man stood in front of Li Sui upon seeing the tattooed thug. Then, he raised the metal bucket up high and scolded, “You rascal! You already sold Ni’er once. Are you not satisfied yet?!”

The old man’s words made the tattooed thug realize the identity of the woman standing next to the former.

The tattooed thug's eyes lit up when he saw Li Sui. "You actually managed to come back? Ni'er, did you come back here because you've been missing your husband?"

"Scram!" the old man roared and threw the metal bucket toward the tattooed thug. The latter retreated and avoided getting hit by it.

"How dare you attack me, old man!" The tattooed thug was furious. He rolled up his sleeves and started beating up the old man. "You better listen to what I'm about to say, old man! Ni'er is married to me, so she's no longer a part of your family! I can sell or pawn her off anytime I want! I have the right to do so, and it doesn't matter even if the guards have already captured me once!"

"Ni'er! Run! Run back to the house!" the old man shouted at Li Sui while defending himself against the tattooed thug.

However, Li Sui remained unmoving. She cast a puzzled gaze at the scene as she tried to understand what was going on.

Her father had never taught her anything like this, so she had no idea what was going on.

A dull thud echoed as the old man collapsed to the ground.

Li Sui saw that and stepped forward. "Why are you beating him? He taught me how to Strike Tree Flowers. Stop beating him."

The tattooed thug turned to Li Sui and replied, "Oh? So you've matured a bit after getting sold? Back then, you wouldn't even say anything while I was beating you up, but you've actually become daring enough to fight back?"

Smack!

The tattooed thug slapped Li Sui in the face. "What's up with that look? Do you want to get beaten up, too?"

Li Sui stared alternately between the injured old man and the tattooed thug. An unfamiliar feeling filled her chest; it was her first time experiencing this kind of emotion.

Smack!

The tattooed thug slapped her again and roared, “What are you doing standing here, you bitch! Go back home and wash my clothes! I want you to clean the house, too!”

Chapter 629 - Death

The two slaps made Li Sui's head jerk to the side, but she was in no pain because the head didn't belong to her.

Li Sui had no idea what was going on, but one thing was for sure. There was a brand-new emotion pervading her chest—anger.

Li Sui slowly raised her hand and mimicked the tattooed thug, giving him a slap.

The tattooed thug's lower jaw was dislocated, and his left cheek ballooned rapidly.

The tattooed thug held one of his cheeks in disbelief. Ni'er had not only gotten even stronger, but she could even fight back now!

"I'll kill you," Li Sui said, slapping him again. The tattooed thug's head started buzzing at the slap.

The next moment, he snapped back to reality and held his dislocated jaw in place before running away.

Li Sui didn't chase after the tattooed thug. She bent down and helped the old man up.

The old man ignored his wounds and looked at Li Sui. "Ni'er, are you alright? Is your face fine?"

Li Sui could now sense emotions, so she could sense the worry behind the old man's voice.

However, Li Sui was confused upon hearing the old man's words. "Who's Ni'er? My name is Li Sui, not Ni'er."

"Nonono! You are Ni'er! You are my daughter!" The old man shook his head furiously and pulled Li Sui toward his home.

Li Sui looked down at her clothes and realized what was happening. The old man had mistaken her for his deceased daughter.

Li Sui wanted to explain, but for some reason, she felt like she wasn't supposed to explain anything.

Soon, they returned to the smithy part of the old man's house.

Li Sui sat near the furnace and stared at the old couple taking care of her.

She felt comfortable, but she didn't know what to do. This place was indeed familiar to her.

As she stared at the talking couple, a scene flashed by Li Sui's mind. It was a scene from the memories of the late Ni'er!

Li Sui felt like she had become Ni'er.

As the hustle and bustle of the streets disappeared, Li Sui knew that it was about time for her to leave, or Li Huowang would be worried sick.

However, Li Sui was feeling conflicted. Something rose in her heart, and it tried to stop her from leaving, but she knew that she had to go.

After all, she was Li Sui, not Ni'er.

Li Sui put down the bowl of sugar water and said, "I'm not Ni'er. Ni'er is dead. I'm sorry."

The elderly couple froze.

The old man frantically said, "Ni'er, don't say such inauspicious words! Did you hit your head on the way here? I'll go and find a doctor for you!"

Realizing that the old couple still wouldn't believe her, Li Sui lifted her skirt, revealing a writhing mass of black tentacles and Li Sui's skinless dog skull.

The next moment, "Ni'er" parted open like a flower, revealing Li Sui's true body.

Li Sui opened her mouth, revealing rows of sharp teeth to the couple. "I'm not Ni'er. I'm Li Sui. The real Ni'er is dead."

The elderly couple seemed frozen and was staring at Li Sui in disbelief.

"What's wrong?" Li Sui extended her tentacles to touch them.

To her surprise, the two fell backward to the ground.

Just then, Li Sui suddenly felt like she had made a mistake, and a torrent of fear inundated her heart. It was an emotion that she didn't want to feel, as she couldn't accept that she had made a mistake so easily.

Li Sui's expression changed into a helpless one as she stood frozen before the fallen elderly couple. She had seen many corpses before, but she had never been afraid of them like she was tonight.

The fear in her heart forced her to move. She smashed the door open and ran toward the station where Li Huowang was located.

Before she could travel far, she saw Li Huowang waiting for her at a corner.

Li Sui was crying tears of blood as she hugged Li Huowang tightly. Then, she opened up a slit in Li Huowang's abdomen and snuck inside. Afterward, she closed her eyes and refused to think or listen to anything.

Li Huowang said nothing. He pushed his hands slowly into his abdomen and patted Li Sui's head.

The emotionless Li Sui was no longer emotionless, and the fact made Li Huowang realize that she had truly matured.

"Come, let's go back," Li Huowang said. He turned around and walked toward the station.

After taking a few steps, he came to a halt and returned to the heart of the city. He had just remembered that he had something to do.

He followed a set of footprints and soon made his way to an old wooden house.

He kicked the wooden door open without even knocking.

"Fuck! Which bastard—" The tattooed thug exclaimed and slapped the table in fury. He was in the middle of applying medicine on himself, but Li Huowang's intrusion had interrupted him.

However, he dared not speak upon seeing Li Huowang's appearance.

Clanging noises echoed as Li Huowang revealed his bag of torture tools. "Choose one, or do you want me to choose for you? What's wrong? You don't like these? That's fine, too."

Li Huowang put away his bag of torture tools and pounced on the tattooed thug.

The tattooed thug let out an agonized scream as Li Huowang bit his ear and tore it apart.

"How dare you bully my daughter, you fucking scoundrel! Die!"

When Li Huowang opened his eyes in the station, it was already the next morning. He groped around and noticed that Li Sui had emerged from his abdomen.

He turned around and saw Li Sui sitting like a dog, staring at the sky outside.

"Are you alright?" Li Huowang asked as he stood up. He washed up at the copper basin in the corner.

However, Li Sui ignored him, which was quite rare. She sat still like a statue in the corner of the room.

After placing the towel on the rack, Li Huowang walked up to Li Sui and stared at her face.

He picked off a scab from his body and shook it in front of her. However, Li Sui didn't eat it.

Li Huowang then realized that last night's event had left a deep impression on Li Sui.

She was no longer the clueless Li Sui who had no idea that Li Huowang would die without a head.

Li Huowang sat on the chair and was about to say something to console her when he saw her looking at him.

"Father, don't die, okay?"

“Hm?” Li Huowang had no idea what she was talking about, but he still nodded after seeing her determined face.

“All right. I promise you that I won’t die.”

Li Sui hugged Li Huowang tightly using her two paws and tentacles.

“Father. I think I finally know what death means. I don’t want you to die, and I don’t want Mother and Second Mother to die, too. I will do my best to protect everyone!” Li Sui exclaimed, sounding emotional.

“Don’t worry. We’ve been through a lot. I’m not going to die so easily.”

Just then, Liu Zongyuan opened the door and entered.

However, he froze upon seeing that Li Huowang was wrapped in tentacles.

“What is it? Speak quickly.”

Li Huowang’s expression turned solemn as he squeezed himself out of Li Sui’s embrace.

“Li Sui, follow me. We should be able to reach Yinling City by today!”

Li Sui hurried to follow him, but she also picked up the scab on the ground and ate it.

Her tentacles quivered and changed ever so slightly as she chewed on the scab.

Chapter 630 - Daoist

The sound of horse hooves faded gradually as Li Huowang looked up at the oppressive city wall.

It took them an entire day, but they finally reached Yinling City.

It wasn't Li Huowang's first visit to the city, as he had come here when Hong Da had vouched for him to enter the Surveillance Bureau.

The city was second only to Shangjing when it came to prosperity and liveliness.

It was evening, so the city gates were being closed.

Fo Yulu saw the closing gates and picked up the pace.

The horse raised up its forelegs and flung the door open. "Surveillance Bureau! Open up and let us through!"

Li Huowang pulled Li Sui closer to him as he followed closely behind Fo Yulu.

Li Sui had returned to wearing straws. No matter what Li Huowang said, Li Sui refused to wear another human skin again.

Meanwhile, their plan remained unchanged, which was to find Blind Chen at the City God Temple.

However, there was an informant near the city gates. They had just entered Yinling City when they were intercepted by the informant.

The informant was dressed like a Daoist apprentice. They leaped down from a nearby roof and landed on Fo Yulu's carriage.

The informant then whispered something into Fo Yulu's ears before turning around to leave.

Fo Yulu pulled the reins and moved in a direction that was completely opposite of the City God Temple.

“I thought we were going to look for Blind Chen? What's up with the change of plans?” Li Huowang chased after Fo Yulu and asked.

“That’s because Chief Zheng is looking for us. He has decided to personally oversee such an important matter. He’s also stronger than Blind Chen.”

“Chief Zheng? Who is that? Where will we be meeting him?”

“Inside the city. I thought you were a Surveillance Bureau member long ago? There's a secret entrance to the Surveillance Bureau in Yinling City. Don't tell me that you don't know where it is...”

Unfortunately, Li Huowang had no idea, as he dared not go there without the spindle made out of the Muddled One’s hair.

He didn’t want to expose his identity as a Strayed One, so he maintained a safe distance from anything related to the Surveillance Bureau.

“Where is it?” Li Huowang asked, sounding annoyed. He hated Fo Yulu's tendency to beat around the bush.

“At the Exquisite Pagoda.”

Li Huowang stared at the Exquisite Pagoda in the distance. He recalled that it was the specialty of Yinling City. The prostitutes with the blue porcelain tattoos could only be found here as well.

Li Huowang frowned, asking, “Is the Exquisite Pagoda part of the Surveillance Bureau’s businesses?”

He could still remember how they used the women of the Exquisite Pagoda. In order to prevent any information leak, they'd use deaf and mute prostitutes.

However, Li Huowang wasn't convinced that they'd find girls born deaf and mute.

“Hoho. Do you really think that the Surveillance Bureau will stoop so low? I really am surprised to know that you were once part of them.”

Li Huowang relaxed a bit until Fo Yulu explained, “The Exquisite Pagoda’s boss would pay tribute to the palace. He’s also a merchant who belongs to the royal family. So to be precise, the Exquisite Pagoda is the royal family’s business.”

“Fuck.”

Li Huowang looked at the Exquisite Pagoda with a complicated look on his face. He never thought that the human-eating pagoda belonged to Gao Zhijian!

Just then, Li Huowang ran past a bookshop. He jumped down and grabbed a brush from a scholar before writing down a letter.

After penning the letter, he chased after Fo Yulu and saw that she was dragging He Xinlai toward an inn next to the Exquisite Pagoda.

Li Huowang glanced at the girls inside the pagoda before chasing after Fo Yulu.

The mission was more important, but he still wrote a letter to Gao Zhijian. He wanted Gao Zhijian to deal with the Exquisite Pagoda.

The inn wasn’t large, but the security inside was tight. Li Huowang felt three sets of gazes looking at him the moment he entered the place.

They walked past the rooms and soon found an open door with a bronze mask that symbolized the Surveillance Bureau.

They walked down the steps, and Li Huowang noticed that the Surveillance Bureau here was also built underground just like Shangjing’s Surveillance Bureau.

“Is Chief Zheng better than me at interrogation? Who is he?” Li Huowang asked as they walked down the spiral corridor.

Fo Yulu didn’t say anything when He Xinlai spat coldly. He was still feisty, even though he had become a human stick.

“Palace dogs! Stop dreaming about trying to get information through me! I have the protection of God Yu’er, and we’d rather die than concede to you!” He Xinlai exclaimed.

“Really? You’d rather die? Then why did that shortie run away? Wasn’t he from the Dharma Sect, too?”

The fearless He Xinlai scowled and resentfully said, “Taishan Shi is not loyal to God Yu’er! He will never go to where God Yu’er is after his death! He’ll go down to Hell and be boiled in a pot of burning oil for eternity!”

Fo Yulu extended her hands and placed several Buddhas the size of her finger into He Xinlai’s mouth.

“You’ll when you see him, and I think you’ll find him familiar,” Fo Yulu said.

“Really?” Li Huowang was confused. He combed through his memories and found nothing.

However, Li Huowang soon understood the meaning behind Fo Yulu’s words. It turned out that Chief Zheng was the Chief of Si Qi’s Surveillance Bureau, Zheng Boqiao.

It was the same Daoist who placed the lotus root on his head last time. Zheng Boqiao was sitting on a cushion as he faced the three statues in front of him with his eyes closed.

“Chief Zheng! We caught one of the grand witches of the Dharma Sect,” Fo Yulu said before doing a quick recount.

However, Zheng Boqiao didn’t even look at her. He remained seated, just like the statues depicting different deities around him.

Zheng Boqiao was patient, but Li Huowang was not. “What are you doing? Stop wasting time! The Dharma Sect of the Qi Kingdom has arrived in the Liang Kingdom! Do you want this place to end up like the Qi Kingdom?”

Zheng Boqiao opened his eyes and gulped. He took his horsetail whisk and turned around to stare at Li Huowang. “Daoist Li, we’re from the same discipline, so why can’t you hold in the Six Angers? Your cultivation is lacking.”

Li Huowang didn’t respond, but Zheng Boqiao was not angry at all. He turned to the Abbot of the Righteous Monastery without sparing He Xinlai even a single glance.

"Abbot, it must've been a difficult journey."

"Amitabha. We had a pleasant journey."

"I'm sure that you need some time to adjust to the Liang Kingdom. I mean, this is your first time here, right? If you need anything, just tell us. The Surveillance Bureau will do its best to accommodate you. Anyway, I know an unoccupied place with decent Feng Shui. Why not rebuild your temple there for now?"

Chapter 631 - Answer

The Abbot quickly put his palms together. Chief Zheng was courteous to him, so he returned the gesture in kind, saying, "Amitabha. Benefactor, you are too kind, but I fear that I won't be able to accept such a grand gift."

"Don't worry, it's just a tiny gift. There's nobody living on that land to begin with." Zheng Boqiao was abnormally kind to the Abbot.

Li Huowang instantly realized what Zheng Boqiao was doing upon seeing his courteous demeanor. The Liang Kingdom's Surveillance Bureau was trying to recruit the sects of the Qi Kingdom.

It was a good plan, and it would increase the number of their allies against the Liang Kingdom's Dharma Sect.

"It's fine. We shall leave it at that. Since this is your first time here, I've booked a table at the Rainflower restaurant. I heard that their vegetarian dishes there are good, so I hope you will join me."

"Amitabha. You are too kind. I've already eaten today."

"Abbot, the food has been prepared. Don't you think it would be a shame to waste the food?"

Zheng Boqiao was about to pull Chan Du away when Li Huowang stood in their way.

"Chief Zheng, don't you think you've forgotten something here?" Li Huowang asked, sounding frustrated. "You haven't forgotten to interrogate this witch of the Dharma Sect because you can't wait to recruit a key figure of one of the Qi Kingdom's sects, right?"

In fact, Li Huowang had never seen Zheng Boqiao being so talkative.

“Daoist Li, there’s no reason to be hasty. How long can a meal take?”

“Can you do it or not? If you can't do it, then I will do it myself.”

Sensing Li Huowang's anger, Chan Du intervened. “Daoist, we can eat anytime. This matter is indeed more important.”

Seeing that even Chan Du thought that the interrogation was more important than a meal, Zheng Boqiao sighed and brandished his horsetail whisk before walking toward the human “stick” on the ground.

“Daoist Li, the Dharma Sect has long been a headache to us, and we know very well that we can't be too hasty when it comes to matters involving them. Do you really think that a single grand witch will give us enough information to destroy the entire Dharma Sect?”

Li Huowang understood that it wouldn't be that easy, but he was still angry that Zheng Boqiao had actually decided to postpone the issue.

Eventually, Li Huowang took a step back upon seeing that Zheng Boqiao had changed his mind.

Fo Yulu retrieved the golden Buddhas from He Xinlai's mouth. Before anyone could react, He Xinlai spat his saliva and blood at Zheng Boqiao.

Rather than avoiding it, Zheng Boqiao snatched the saliva out of midair and shoved it into his mouth.

Li Huowang frowned at the sight.

However, it wasn't over yet. Zheng Boqiao tore off some of He Xinlai's hair before consuming it with some white fibers that he had plucked from his horsetail whisk.

“What are you doing?” Li Huowang asked, repulsed by Zheng Boqiao's actions.

“I'm refining a pill.”

Zheng Boqiao prayed to the three clay deities in front of him before grabbing a fistful of ashes from the incense burner and eating it.

“Refining pills?”

Li Huowang knew how to refine pills. He had learned it from Dan Yangzi, but he had never seen such a method of refining pills.

“Using external objects to refine pills results in External Pills, and it's not the best method to refine pills. I'm using my body to refine pills. That way, I can turn anything into medicine, as every single refinement will result in Internal Pills. It's a superior method compared to using external objects to refine pills," Zheng Boqiao explained as he walked up to Li Huowang.

Before Li Huowang could react, Zheng Boqiao swept his horsetail whisk around Li Huowang before chanting something in a low voice.

When Li Huowang felt the air around him moving around, Zheng Boqiao made several hand seals and placed his face near Li Huowang. Then, he took in a deep breath, sucking in something invisible until his face turned purple, with veins bulging all over his forehead.

“What are you doing?”

Zheng Boqiao opened his mouth slightly and whispered in the lowest voice possible. “You are a Strayed One. What do you think I'm doing here?”

Zheng Boqiao then sat down with his legs crossed. A wisp of white smoke floated out of his head as he sat still like a statue.

Li Huowang finally realized what Zheng Boqiao was doing. He was actually refining pills! I wonder what sect he's from. Using one's own body to refine pills is just too weird.

An hour later, Zheng Boqiao opened his mouth and spat out the pill. The pill was a ball of pulsating meat covered in stomach acid.

Zheng Boqiao stood up with the pill in hand and started walking toward He Xinlai.

He Xinlai panicked at the sight and hurriedly bit down. Unfortunately, Li Huowang had removed all of his teeth to ensure that he wouldn't be able to commit suicide by biting his tongue.

He Xinlai tried his best to resist, but it was to no avail.

Once the pill had made its way into He Xinlai's stomach, his eyes rolled up, and he started convulsing.

Li Huowang was eager to see what was going to happen next, but He Xinlai's figure abruptly became stiff. He was dead.

Before anyone could say anything, Zheng Boqiao took out a small fan and used one hand to make some seals while chanting.

"The head as Taiyi, and the feet as the Heavenly Pillar! The organs form the armor that protects the Heavenly Door! Summon the big dipper and roar! All souls shall follow the orders!"

He Xinlai's brain shrunk in an instant, and the meat pill that was fed to him forcefully suddenly jumped out of He Xinlai's shrunken mouth.

Zheng Boqiao grabbed it in midair and examined it.

The meat pill had gotten larger.

Zheng Boqiao swallowed the pill and closed his eyes as if he was trying to sense something.

Realizing that Zheng Boqiao was indeed a man of multiple talents, Li Huowang stopped panicking and waited patiently for the outcome.

Ten minutes later, Zheng Boqiao opened his eyes.

Li Huowang asked him, "How is it?"

"He's not the leader of the Dharma Sect. The leader is not going to be captured so easily. Still, there's some useful information hidden in his brain. He knows some of the secret bases of the Dharma Sect here in the Liang Kingdom. Moreover, it seems that they are biding their time and hiding, which means they have no intention of fighting us head-on."

“What about Taishan Shi? Anything about him?” Li Huowang asked.

Li Huowang could still remember Chan Du's words about Taishan Shi was the most dangerous among those who had inadvertently ended up in the Liang Kingdom.

“Taishan Shi... Hmm... Let me think.” Zheng Boqiao paced around. Soon, he stopped and said, “He doesn’t know anything. Taishan Shi was the one who found him, and Taishan Shi is a very careful and meticulous man. He never exposes any information about himself unless it's necessary. Hmm... A lone Taishan Shi shouldn’t be that dangerous. I think it’s more important to know how the Dharma Sect ended up becoming an ally of that old Lama from Qing Qiu. I think that matter requires our attention more than this issue.”

Chapter 632 - Antrabhara Temple

Qing Qiu's Lama?!

Li Huowang could still remember the black Lama with three heads and six arms, and he could still remember how each of the black Lama's heads represented a unique death.

"Are you saying that the Lama from Qing Qiu is working with the Dharma Sect?" Li Huowang asked, his expression becoming serious upon realizing the gravity of the situation.

"If God Yu'er's Heavenly Dao was darkness while the black-skinned[1] Lama worshiped death. There's a possibility that the Lama wanted to use the Natural Disaster caused by God Yu'er to bring everyone to death."

It made sense. Although the Dharma Sect was considered an evil sect by both the royal family and the Surveillance Bureau, there would always be people willing to work with such a ruthless sect. They were living in a crazy world, after all.

"That might not be the case. Many masters from the Antrabhara[2] Temple have decided to join the Surveillance Bureau of Qing Qiu."

This was Li Huowang's first time hearing of the Antrabhara Temple, and it was apparently the sect where the Lamas had come from.

"Antrabhara Temple... " Li Huowang recalled the half-man and half-sheep people being laid orderly on Qing Qiu's lush grass meadows.

A sect worshiping death meant nothing but bad news to Li Huowang.

“Could it be that the Antrabhara Temple has complete control over the Surveillance Bureau of Qing Qiu? Doesn’t that mean that the entire Qing Qiu is under the control of the Dharma Sect?” Li Huowang said unconsciously.

Fo Yulu trembled at the idea that Li Huowang had brought up. If it was true, the entire Liang Kingdom was in danger.

Attacks from the inside and the outside at the same time were incredibly dangerous and difficult to handle.

Zheng Boqiao swung his horsetail whisk, creating a crackling noise. “That’s not the case. The reason Xuan Pin was away for so long was that he was trying to convince the Surveillance Bureau to unite and work together. If there really were a problem with the Surveillance Bureau in Qing Qiu, he would have discovered it at that time.”

“Xuan Pin...” Li Huowang could still remember how Xuan Pin had left the city urgently at the time when Li Huowang wanted his help to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao before.

It was only when Shai Zi had taken control over the Dragon Vein that Xuan Pin came back. He had been wondering what business was more urgent than saving the city, but it turned out that Xuan Pin's task at the time was truly more important.

“Hm...” Zheng Boqiao muttered and stared at Li Huowang.

“Daoist Li, there’s no need for you to worry,” Zheng Boqiao said, “The Surveillance Bureau has sent someone to go and investigate this matter. You're right. Things are going to become dangerous if the Dharma Sect from the Qi Kingdom manages to make contact with the Dharma Sect from the Liang Kingdom. Through the pill that I’ve extracted from He Xinlai’s brain, I learned the location of some of their big bases. We might be able to find high-ranking officials of the Dharma Sect in those places. If you're free, how about you volunteer to raid those places and go see the results for yourselves?”

Li Huowang's face stiffened, and he proceeded to reevaluate Zheng Boqiao. It was true that he had come here to help the Surveillance Bureau eradicate the Dharma Sect and obtain some information as well, but now, he had a feeling that Zheng Boqiao was trying to distract him. Was there something wrong with the Antrabhara Temple?

“Chief Zheng, you know that I’m related to the Emperor. He has ordered me to go around the Liang Kingdom to observe the situation. And I’m sure you know that hiding something from him is treason.”

“Hehe, Daoist Li, that’s not true. This is a matter relating to the Surveillance Bureau. I fear that the Emperor doesn’t have any right to interfere in this.”

“The Emperor cannot do anything, but it doesn't mean that he has to remain ignorant,” Li Huowang said. He became even more suspicious of Zheng Boqiao's attempt to change the subject.

Zheng Boqiao sighed, and he looked as if he had decided to relent as he said, “Fine. Once the informants come back from Qing Qiu, we should be able to get some information about the Antrabhara Temple. We will then submit a report to the Emperor. What do you think? Will he help stop the invasion of the Dharma Sect by then?”

Looking at the people around him, Li Huowang decided not to pressure them any longer. Every single one of them was living in the Liang Kingdom, so the Dharma Sect was a problem that they had to resolve together.

“How can you say that, Chief Zheng? I live in the Liang Kingdom as well, and I am a member of the Surveillance Bureau. I will never refuse when it comes to eradicating the Dharma Sect.”

“ Hehehe, I guess I made a mistake. Anyway, let’s not waste more time. I will write down their exact location, and let's work together to make sure that they won't be able to run away.”

Zheng Boqiao approached the incense burner and grabbed another fistful of ashes. He used it to quickly write something on the ground. Soon, several addresses written appeared on the ground. Most of them were villages at the borders of the Liang Kingdom. It seemed that the Dharma Sect was operating just like the White Lotus Sect. They'd disguise themselves as regular people and hide in the border towns to avoid attracting any attention.

After writing the addresses, Zheng Boqiao swung his horsetail whisk toward the addresses. The ashes converged and transformed into a small pile of ashes on his palm.

Zheng Boqiao took the pile of ashes and handed it over to Li Huowang.

"I am versed in refining pills. Daoist Li, stay here for a bit. Let me give you some pills that will heal your wounds."

Li Huowang grabbed the pile of ashes and stashed it in his pocket before turning around to leave.

"No need. I don't like pills," he said

He wanted to do things by himself alone, and he did not want to team up with the Surveillance Bureau for this mission.

After all, there was a chance that they had an ulterior motive.

"The Bureau will send people to locate them. If you run into each other, just reveal your name to them, and they will show you the way!" Zheng Boqiao shouted at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang didn't respond and simply left with Li Sui.

Once Li Sui and Li Huowang were no longer in sight, Zheng Boqiao turned to Fo Yulu and said, "He doesn't have the same mission as us. We can recruit him, but be careful whenever you interact with him."

Fo Yulu nodded. "I understand. He is related to the royal family, and he doesn't belong to the Surveillance Bureau at all."

Zheng Boqiao shook his head and said, "No. I'm afraid that he's not affiliated with His Majesty."

They were discussing secrets here, but Zheng Boqiao had no intention of letting the Abbot out of the loop.

Fo Yulu was slightly taken aback. “He’s not affiliated with His Majesty? Then, who is he working with? Is he a spy from the Dharma Sect?”

“Calm down. There’s no need to talk about him for now. We still have more important matters to handle. Of course, it’s always good to be prudent. The next time you have to work with him, you must notify me as soon as possible.”

“I understand.”

With that, Zheng Boqiao bowed to the Abbot with a smile, saying, “Master Chan Du, these affairs have been settled, so let us proceed to have our meals.”

“Amitabha. Thank you for the meal, benefactor,” Chan Du said. He then put his palms together and bowed.

Chapter 633 - Hospital

Li Huowang was inside a clean ward with white walls. There was a cup of water in his hands, and he showed it to Wu Cheng. Then, he opened his other hand, revealing several yellow and green pills.

Moments later, he hurled the pills into his mouth and swallowed them with some water.

However, it wasn't over just yet. Li Huowang opened his mouth to reveal that he had swallowed every single pill.

With the checkup done, Wu Cheng was about to exit the room when Li Huowang stopped him, asking, "Aren't those pills expensive? I don't mind eating pills like these if it gives both you and Yi Donglai assurance, but I'm not an idiot who's going to take every expensive pill that you prescribe."

"Hehe." Wu Cheng chuckled.

"I'm not kidding. I know that something like that happens frequently in private hospitals."

"If you're free, you should go outside and walk around. Walk under the sun and make some new friends while you're at it. You might get discharged sooner than you think that way."

Wu Cheng took out a key from his white robe and unlocked Li Huowang's leg cuffs.

Li Huowang smiled slightly at the sight, knowing that he was one step closer to getting discharged.

Soon, Li Huowang was left alone, and he started pacing around his room.

As much as he didn't want to listen to Wu Cheng, the latter was right. There was nothing in his room except for a bed.

Li Huowang wouldn't be able to do anything here other than sleeping or daydreaming. He walked out of his room and found that the corridor was full of activity.

Even though most of the patients didn't want to get close to Li Huowang due to his reputation, their reaction toward him had improved significantly compared to last time.

The patients with regular intervention sessions with Li Huowang could greet him now.

"Bro, come here and watch TV with us in the hall. Titanic is playing, and a nude scene is coming up!" the man suffering from manic syndrome shouted at Li Huowang.

"I'm fine. I'm going out to get some sun," Li Huowang replied. Although he had refused, he could understand why the man suffering from manic syndrome was so excited; the latter's condition had stabilized, after all, and he'd soon get discharged.

In a mental hospital, the patients were only looking forward to two things—family visits and getting discharged.

Li Huowang made his way to the small garden behind the hospital. He sat on the ground and closed his eyes, enjoying the warm sunlight. He emptied his mind and refused to think about anything related to the hospital or mental disorders. Right now, Li Huowang wanted nothing more than to enjoy this brief respite.

At the time, he felt like the entire world was against him. He encountered problems and difficulties one after another. Fortunately, he had persevered, which brought him to where he was today.

Just then, a commotion erupted nearby, interrupting Li Huowang's moment of peace. He opened his eyes and saw several patients trying to grab something.

Li Huowang walked over and saw a skinny girl and a young man; they were trying to snatch the apple of another patient.

"This is mine! This is mine!" The patient tried his best to defend his apple.

Li Huowang was familiar with him. Everyone described him as the dullest patient in the hospital.

The young man grabbed the apple with both hands and pulled hard. Once the apple was in his hands, he turned around and ran into the building with the skinny girl next to him.

However, Li Huowang appeared in their way and said, "Give me that apple."

The youth was shocked upon seeing Li Huowang's cuffed hands, and then he was scared upon realizing that Li Huowang had murdered someone prior to getting admitted to this hospital.

"Okay, okay, it's yours!" the young man exclaimed, throwing the apple to Li Huowang before abandoning running away, abandoning his partner.

Li Huowang snatched the apple out of midair and read the name written on the paper pasted to it.

It turned out that the dullest patient in the hospital was named Gao Jingyun.

Li Huowang walked up to the crying Gao Jingyun and gave him the apple.

"Thank... Thank you!" Gao Jingyun exclaimed. He was naive and innocent, and he immediately stopped crying upon receiving his apple.

He looked at Li Huowang with gratitude in his eyes.

Li Huowang saw that and kindly advised, "The next time you get your own food, spit on it so others won't take it away from you. Do you understand?"

Gao Jingyun nodded.

Li Huowang turned around and entered the building. He coincidentally stumbled upon the depressed Zhao Ting. She had seen everything that had transpired.

"Thank you for taking pity on him. The others have been bullying him because of his condition."

“I’m not pitying him at all, but I think he’s going to get locked up in this private hospital for life. His parents must be rich, so they should be able to afford that. I did what I did because I hate bullies.”

“His family is rich? Then, how come they haven’t been visiting him?” Zhao Ting asked. She followed closely behind Li Huowang and asked more questions.

Everyone was afraid of Li Huowang, but Zhao Ting knew that Li Huowang was kind.

“Hahaha, it’s all because people like him are no better than those with mental illnesses. Those from rich families will be shoved into private hospitals, while those with little money are thrown into government hospitals. If their family thinks of them as their family members, then they’ll probably just chain them up in their own house. Otherwise, they’d throw them onto the streets. They would then have to live by rummaging around trash cans.”

Zhao Ting seemed to have recalled a painful memory upon hearing Li Huowang’s words. Her steps came to an abrupt halt, and her face twisted in agony.

Li Huowang didn’t notice that and continued walking down the corridor. He didn’t go to the hall, as it was most likely packed with people. He walked around, inspecting the many different facilities of the hospital to memorize the hospital’s layout.

Unfortunately, the regular wards looked the same as the other wards.

The kitchen and offices were off-limits to Li Huowang, but he walked around until he found the intensive care area.

The patients with severe illnesses and episodes were kept in isolation here.

The place was quite big, but the corridor was quiet.

Li Huowang also felt like he was entering a prison rather than a hospital floor.

Li Huowang walked up to a heavy-looking door and peeked into the room through the window.

He looked around and saw that it was empty.

Li Huowang looked into the second room and saw nothing too.

What's going on? Is the hospital only accepting those with mild issues? I guess that's an easy way to earn money.

Li Huowang was about to leave when he heard a faint knocking on the door at the end of the corridor.

Hm? There's actually someone here? Li Huowang stared at the room and approached it.

It was eerie; the knocking intensified the closer he got to the door.

Bam! Bam! Bam!

Chapter 634 - Qian Fu

Bam! Bam! Bam!

Li Huowang peeked into the room through the window reinforced with wire and saw where the noises were coming from.

The noises were coming from a patient in a straitjacket. The patient looked disheveled and had a chin covered with an untrimmed beard. The knocking noises were coming from the patient's head as he slammed it forcefully into the bed.

The noises had gotten significantly louder. However, the thin and flexible bed frame couldn't hurt him at all.

“W-what illness is he suffering from?” Li Huowang muttered with a frown while staring at the man with curious eyes.

The man was roughly one and a half meters tall. His face was twitching and was constantly shifting between crying and laughing.

It was Li Huowang's first time seeing such a patient.

He should be on some medicine, so the fact that he's here means that there's something going on behind the scenes. Is this a side effect of one of his medications?

Just then, the man inside the room came to a halt and stared right into Li Huowang. “

“It's you! Hahaha! You're here!”

Li Huowang decided to play along and nodded. “Yes. I'm here.”

“Good! I've been waiting for you! I never thought that you'd come and see me first!”

“ Oh? Have we met before?”

“Hahaha! Yes, and we know each other, too!”

After exchanging a few words with the bizarre patient, Li Huowang got bored and decided to leave.

“Li Huowang, you have to be careful! They're looking for you, and there are too many of them! You can't defeat them by yourself! You need help!"

Li Huowang's heart skipped a beat, and he immediately turned around.

He peered into the room through the same window and saw that the bed was empty.

Before Li Huowang could realize what was going on, the patient's face shot up from underneath and was pressed against the window.

Unnervingly, the patient was staring at him without blinking.

Li Huowang was startled, but it only took him a moment to calm down. "You've seen me in the news, haven't you? Is that how you knew my name?"

Li Huowang had almost forgotten that he was pretty popular outside.

"No! I knew you way before that incident. I was one of them, and they told me to capture you and the others! But I didn't want to do it! Everything is over once all of you are captured!"

"What do you mean by 'them'?"

"Them! The family of darkness that was driven away a long time ago! They're working for the aliens from Leo[\[1\]](#)!"

Li Huowang almost burst out laughing at the reply. Sometimes, those with mental illnesses were incredibly funny. "I think you watched too much anime outside. Also, your story earlier is contradictory to what you're saying right now."

"I'm imprisoned, but my comrades were dispatched to find you! They're looking for you! They want to kill you! We don't have enough time! You need to let me out. We must work together so we can survive!"

Li Huowang smiled and shook his head. He was about to say something when a patrolling nurse saw them and exclaimed, "Hey! Which room are you from? This is the intensive care area! You're not allowed here! Get out of here!”

“Bye. Just look for me once you've taken your medicine,” said Li Huowang. He waved his hand and left the intensive care area.

Li Huowang strolled around the hospital until he eventually made his way to the cafeteria for lunch.

Li Huowang took a tray and lined up for food.

The food here was much better compared to Li Huowang's previous hospital. He got himself some stir-fried pork liver with celery as well as a serving of stir-fried water spinach.

Li Huowang walked over to an empty seat and sat down to eat.

The strange incident earlier was already in the back of his eyes. After all, no one in their right mind would believe a mentally ill patient.

Moreover, he was just curious about the patient's condition and his illness.

Their conversation told Li Huowang that the man wasn't a psycho, as his words were somehow logical.

Just then, Wei Shili, the man suffering from manic syndrome, walked up to Li Huowang upon seeing that the latter was eating lunch by himself.

Wei Shili had decided to befriend Li Huowang after spending some time with the latter and becoming convinced that Li Huowang wasn't a psychopath.

At first, Wei Shili was skeptical when Li Huowang said that he wasn't ill, but he was starting to believe Li Huowang's claims.

Li Huowang looked normal, and his behavior was normal as well.

Moreover, he was kind and often shared his snacks with the other patients.

“I've passed my examinations! I'll be discharged in two days the soonest if my family comes by then,” Wei Shili said excitedly as he sat next to Li Huowang.

"I know. This isn't the first time you told me that. No need to keep telling me about it."

"Hehe, that's because I'm just too happy. I've been here for almost a year, and I can finally get out," Wei Shili said as he ate mouthful after mouthful of his rice mixed with a serving of chicken stew and mashed potato.

"Has it been one year? It's been a long time, then. Wait, since you've been here for such a long time, do you know anything about the man stuck in the intensive care area?" Li Huowang asked.

Wei Shili was confused. "Intensive care area? Who is it?"

"The man with the untrimmed beard."

"Oh, him? His name is Qian Fu. I think he's been here for a very long time. He was already here when I was just admitted."

"What illness does he have? And how come he's imprisoned there?"

"Illness?" Wei Shili put his spoon down and replied, "I think he has schizophrenia."

"Really? I don't think so. I've never seen a schizophrenic patient talk nonsense like he did."

Just then, the woman diagnosed with anxiety walked up to them and asked, "What are you guys gossiping about?"

"Nothing much. Just talking about Qian Fu's illness. Doesn't he have schizophrenia?"

"Ah, It's not schizophrenia. Don't talk about it when you don't know the answer. Actually, the doctors have yet to diagnose him of any illnesses."

"Wait, even the doctors don't know?" Li Huowang was shocked. This was unprecedented for him.

"Yes. The doctors aren't omniscient. They won't be able to diagnose someone with an illness if they have never heard of that illness before. Anyway, Qian Fu is really pitiful. The doctors can't prescribe medications for him to take, as they don't know his illness, so they have no choice but to lock him up and wait for him to stabilize."

The curious voice in Li Huowang's mind went silent upon hearing the woman's explanation. He went on with his meal as if nothing had happened.

Li Huowang thought that the incident was over and decided to forget all about it.

Several days later, however, a familiar visitor walked up to Li Huowang while he was busy munching on his bamboo shoots during lunch.

The visitor was none other than Qian Fu!

Their gazes met in midair, and Qian Fu immediately walked over to Li Huowang instead of taking some dishes to eat before anything else.

Li Huowang thought that Qian Fu was going to kick up a fuss, but he was wrong.

Qian Fu had decided to apologize to him instead, saying, "I'm sorry. I think I spoke a bunch of nonsense to you the last time we met. It must've been disturbing for you. I'm sorry."

Li Huowang was presented by a calm and polite Qian Fu, which greatly contrasted with the crazed Qian Fu, whom he had met for the first time several days ago.

Chapter 635 - Beard

Li Huowang didn't immediately reply. He proceeded to take a mouthful of his pumpkin congee and a bite of his bamboo shoots before replying, "Split personality disorder?"

"I guess you can say that, but it's not exactly like that. Anyway, I have another illness on top of that, but it's on my other personality."

Split personality, but one of them is normal while the other has a different mental illness on top of everything? Li Huowang found it strange. He probably has advanced-stage paranoia, too.

"I'm here to apologize; that's it. I'm just glad that my other half didn't cause you any trouble. Please continue with your meal. I'm leaving now," Qian Fu said and bowed before leaving.

He's crazy. I shouldn't have gone to the intensive care area. Li Huowang shook his head and continued with his meal.

Thirty minutes after his lunch, Li Huowang took his medicine and proceeded to watch the news in the common area.

After a while, Li Huowang returned to his bed to sleep.

Regardless of their conditions, the patients still had a healthy daily schedule. No one was allowed to stay up late at night, and no one was allowed to eat junk food. The living conditions were noticeably better compared to outside.

Even so, Li Huowang still couldn't get used to sleeping so early. There was no entertainment in his room, and he could only sprawl out on his bed with his eyes wide open.

When he finally felt drowsy and closed his eyes to sleep, he felt something strange.

He tensed up as he turned to look at the window.

Qian Fu was standing outside the door; his face was pressed firmly against the window as he stared deeply at Li Huowang.

It was a terrifying scene that would scare just about anyone, but Li Huowang felt nothing but frustration.

Li Huowang threw his blanket away and walked up to the window. He stared at Qian Fu's face and warned, "I don't want any trouble. Stop going up to me, or I won't show you any mercy next time."

Li Huowang didn't expect that his leisurely stroll would give him such a massive headache.

However, Qian Fu was not intimidated at all. He grinned and chuckled. "Little Li, let's work together. You can't defeat them on your own. You really need help. We need to help each other to survive. If we lose, it's all over!"

"Defeat them'? Who? The aliens from Leo?"

"Yes!" Qian Fu nodded.

"Stop pretending like you don't know me. I'm sure you know, but I'm even crazier than you. You've seen the news, so you should know what I'm capable of doing!"

Li Huowang closed the curtains and turned to the camera in the corner of the room.

"Are you guys a bunch of useless leeches?! You're getting paid to do your job, so why won't you guys do your job properly? A patient has escaped his room in the middle of the night! Why does it seem like you guys don't care about it at all?!"

With that, Li Huowang sprawled out on the bed and tried to sleep, but he couldn't sleep at all.

Thankfully, there weren't any more movements outside of the room.

Li Huowang tossed and turned before finally falling asleep.

Li Huowang found himself in school, and he was sitting right behind Yang Na.

There was a ribbon on Yang Na's nape.

Li Huowang tried to untie the ribbon with his pen when a dull thud entered his ears.

Bam!

The giant wooden hammer struck the steamed glutinous rice. An old man was standing next to the man pounding the rice.

The old man would use his wet hands to turn over the glutinous rice after each pounding.

Whenever the pounder was exhausted, someone else would take over the job.

The nearby crowd was in awe of the sight.

Everyone in the village was laughing as they stood around the mortar.

They watched as the hammer went up and down, hitting the white glutinous rice in the mortar.

Li Huowang was sitting on a tree branch as he stared at them with a frown.

Is it them? Are they really from the Dharma Sect? Li Huowang carefully observed.

The pounding went on for quite a while until the steaming rice became a white paste.

A man grabbed some of the steaming white paste and shaped it into a ball before throwing it into a bowl filled with black sesame and sugar.

He rolled it around, and a piece of mochi was complete!

For some reason, the sight reminded Li Huowang of the guiding drug. The guiding drug looked just like that mochi.

Dan Yangzi had crushed her into a paste by pounding her with a large pestle.

Everything seemed normal, but Li Huowang had to be meticulous. He was already here, so he had to make sure that there wouldn't be any mistakes.

Li Huowang jumped down. His tentacles burst out of him, making him look like a giant spider falling from the sky.

He projected his image into the ground and gripped his sword tightly as he looked around. Then, he slowly and carefully made his way to the village.

The conversations of the villagers became clearer and clearer as he got closer and closer to the village.

Apparently, one of the villagers gave birth to twins—one boy and one girl. To celebrate, they decided to share their precious food and white sugar with everyone else.

The villagers rarely had white sugar, so the children were thrilled to know that they'd get to eat white sugar! Every single villager was all smiles as they consumed the mochi.

Li Huowang walked into the village and swept his gaze across their dirty and ordinary faces.

The majority of the villagers had shown up here to eat some mochi, so there were very few people in the other parts of the village.

Thus, Li Huowang didn't have any difficulties searching the entire village. He combed through the village but found nothing suspicious.

Li Huowang used his experience at Cowheart Village and found the village's ancestral hall, but he found zero hidden rooms.

Maybe the information in He Xinlai's head is fake? Maybe the Dharma Sect has already left this place?

While Li Huowang was busy engrossed in his own thoughts, a loud commotion erupted outside.

Li Huowang hopped onto a nearby roof and made a beeline for the village entrance.

A large-framed man swinging a monk spade was at the village entrance. Three heads would fall to the ground with every swing of his monk spade.

Soon, the ground was dyed crimson with the villagers' blood blood.

The large-framed man was about to kill some children when Li Huowang appeared and blocked the large-framed man's attack.

Clang!

Sparks flew, and the two of them were blasted away by the impact.

Li Huowang was shocked by the large-framed man's brute strength, while the latter was shocked upon seeing a dent in his monk spade.

An identity plate from the Surveillance Bureau was hanging from the man's waist, so Li Huowang didn't unsheathe his spine sword.

“Are you from the Surveillance Bureau?” asked Li Huowang.

“Hm?” The large-framed man's eyes widened in shock. He sized up Li Huowang and thrust his monk spade into the ground upon realizing the latter's identity. “Ah! What a mistake! To think that we couldn't identify each other as soon as we met! You're Sir Er, aren't you?! I'm sorry for the confusion!”

“Why are you killing these people for no reason? You weren't even going to spare the children. What if they're innocent?” Li Huowang asked with a frown.

“It's going to be fine even if I'm wrong, but I'm right this time. I mean, just look at that.”

Li Huowang turned around and saw the surviving villagers glaring at them.

“Kill the palace dogs!”

They whipped out a black cloth from inside their clothes and tied it around their shoulders.

This is a monk spade

Chapter 636 - Dharma Sect

A single swing was enough to cut the man in front of Li Huowang in half.

Li Huowang couldn't even catch his breath as more and more Dharma Sect members charged at him.

They were regular villagers just a few moments ago, but they had become warriors unafraid of death in the blink of an eye,

The large-framed bearded man danced with his monk spade and charged into the fray.

Li Sui used the bronze coin sword and sliced a man's head in half while Li Huowang was busy staring at the chaos.

Li Huowang had fought with the Dharma Sect numerous times, so he knew that he couldn't waste any time on the cannon fodder.

He had to handle with their leader, or the cannon fodder would never stop attacking them.

Li Huowang reckoned that the leader was among the cannon fodder.

Six tentacles struck the ground, propelling Li Huowang high up into the air.

With a bird's eye view of the entire village, Li Huowang looked around for the leader. His pupils even split in half, allowing him to search more efficiently.

Li Huowang jumped a few more times until his pupils converged and focused on a mountain behind the village.

His eye had captured the word "Witch" over there. "No wonder I can't find the leader here! They're actually hiding in a mountain behind the village!"

Peng Longteng's massive figure appeared in front of Li Huowang, and she threw him toward the mountain.

Li Huowang's bag of torture tools flapped in the air as he fell toward the massive "Witch" word like a meteor.

Li Huowang was about to land when something pierced the character and pierced Li Huowang as well.

A hole the size of a forearm was in his stomach by the time he landed.

"Sui, sui! Are you okay?!" Li Huowang asked, looking around cautiously.

"Father, I'm fine. I managed to dodge it."

Li Huowang cast a wary gaze at the nearby trees. There was no follow-up attack, which surprised Li Huowang a bit.

The assailant seemed to have acknowledged Li Huowang's strength and proceeded to hide rather than risk their life to try and kill Li Huowang in the open.

"Do you really think that I can't find you?" Li Huowang asked. He then told Li Sui to pull out one of his bones.

Li Huowang proceeded to cast divination using his own bone. He stared at the pattern on the bone for quite a while before he shoved the bone inside of him.

Time ticked by, but Li Huowang found nothing. Just as he thought that his divination had failed, he suddenly noticed something. There was a suspicious part on a nearby mountain wall.

Li Huowang stared alternately between the pattern on the bone and the pattern on the growing vines on the wall.

Then, he charged at the wall and slashed out with his purple-tasseled sword.

The wall was cut in half, and a cave appeared in front of Li Huowang.

So they're hiding inside the mountain. It seems that the techniques of the Qi Kingdom's Dharma Sect are closely tied to the earth.

Li Huowang took a stance with his sword and was about to expand the size of the cave when a stone shot out from the depths of the cave.

The stone was heading for his head, but Li Sui easily caught it. Meanwhile, Li Huowang rushed down the cave to catch the attacker.

There was a constant rain of stones, arrows, and sharp objects, but Li Huowang remained unscathed.

Peng Longteng was standing in front of him, after all, and was acting like a massive shield.

Thanks to Peng Longteng, Li Huowang managed to reach the end of the cave.

It was extremely dark, and he couldn't even see his own hands, but he could sense a crowd of people around him.

"Die!" Li Huowang roared and charged into the darkness. He hacked and slashed out with his sword, painting the cave walls crimson.

Li Huowang's demeanor had changed drastically. He was like a tiger leaping into a herd of sheep, and he slaughtered every single sheep around him.

His eye glimmered with a murderous light. He knew that he needed to kill all of the Dharma Sect members, or they'd spread like the plague.

Li Huowang ripped off a man's head from his shoulder when the cave lit up just then, blinding his last remaining good eye.

Before he could adjust to the brightness, something tackled him from the left. He crashed into the wall and fell to the ground. He coughed violently, coughing out some tentacles and chunks of his organs.

Li Huowang grabbed the tentacles and ate them before standing up to see his assailant.

“Xu Nian?!” Li Huowang was shocked to see the familiar beast.

It was the very same Xu Nian that helped him fight against the Dragon Vein in the Qi Kingdom. Li Huowang could even see familiar scars on its figure.

The only difference was that the Xu Nian before him was missing its head. The woman’s head was nowhere to be found, so the Xu Nian only had the body of a beast.

A woman with a veil was riding the Xu Nian as if it were a horse. The veil had the character “Witch” on it, and the woman was staring deeply at Li Huowang.

The woman didn't make a move, seemingly waiting for something.

“Father, your hair is turning white," Li Sui warned.

Li Huowang instantly realized why his hair was turning white. He looked down at his hands and saw that they were covered in wrinkles and were shriveling up rapidly.

“Shit! Xu Nian has stolen my lifespan!” Li Huowang grabbed his gourd and poured the lifespan pills inside of it into his mouth.

After eating dozens of lifespan pills, the wrinkles on Li Huowang's hand disappeared, allowing him to sigh in relief.

Thankfully, he was a Strayed One, so he could take as many lifespan pills as he needed. If it hadn't been for his special identity, the attack just now would have killed him.

Still, Li Huowang was in a bad situation.

This wasn't his first time fighting a Xu Nian, as he had fought one as a result of Zhuge Yuan's scheme.

The attacks he had suffered at the time were devastating attacks that robbed him of his lifespan.

Li Huowang didn't expect that Zhuge Yuan’s friends would end up being controlled by the Dharma Sect's control.

Li Huowang looked around and noted that they were in a limestone cave. Stalactites and stalagmites covered the entire cave, and the cave itself was tilted toward the left.

Just then, Li Huowang noticed something strange. He had definitely killed quite a few people just now, but there were no traces of his slaughter; there wasn't even blood on the cave walls.

Soon, Li Huowang saw a figure hiding in the distant darkness.

The darkness was bizarre as well. He strained hard, but he couldn't see what exactly was in the distance.

To make matters worse, the darkness was disappearing, plunging the cave into a pitch-black darkness again.

Footsteps echoed moments later; the Xu Nian and the figure in the darkness were slowly approaching Li Huowang.

Even more shocking was that the empty cave became crowded once again, and they all charged at Li Huowang from every direction.

Chapter 637 - Xu Nian

Realizing that the Xu Nian could attack him anytime, Li Huowang dared not let his guard down.

Li Huowang had no choice but to go all out. He only had a few lifespan pills left, so he'd definitely die if the Xu Nian managed to land just one hit on him.

Soon, the attacks became unbearable. Li Huowang decisively set his skin ablaze using the flint, filling up the cave with flames. The enemies in the darkness were melted away by flames.

Li Huowang turned and saw that Xu Nian hadn't actually moved.

However, he noticed quite a few flickering crimson afterimages around it.

Li Huowang had just sacrificed his skin to Ba-Hui in exchange for power, but his scalp still went numb at the sight.

The Xu Nian was channeling the same attack that she had used to defeat the Dragon Vein!

"No! I have to stop her!" Li Huowang exclaimed and charged at the Xu Nian.

Shadows jumped out from behind the stalactites, charging at Li Huowang. However, the flames melted them away.

Li Huowang unsheathed his spine sword and swung it toward the Xu Nian. A spacetime rift manifested, and it made a beeline for the woman.

The spacetime rift was about to hit the woman riding the Xu Nian when the ground sank. The Xu Nian inadvertently dropped down, and it accidentally dodged the attack.

The Xu Nian quickly climbed out of the hole, and an everlasting torrent of crimson afterimages manifested.

The situation had just taken a drastic turn!

Li Huowang tried his best to avoid every single attack. He didn't want to get his lifespan stolen or his time rewound. He retreated while defending himself and counterattacking with his spine sword.

Unfortunately, the crimson afterimages were truly everlasting. They soon filled up the entire cave amidst Li Huowang's slow retreat.

Just then, a black modao[1] tied with chains shot out from the darkness and pierced the Xu Nian's scales.

The chains went taut, and someone flew into the cave.

"Stop!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He didn't want the newcomer to get too close to Xu Nian, "Don't touch it!"

Shwik!

A modao was thrust into the ground, and the man stopped just ten meters away from the Xu Nian.

Li Huowang finally managed to take a good look at the newcomer. He thought the newcomer was the large-framed man with a monk spade, but it turned out to be a man wearing tattered armor.

The man looked like he was from the military. He looked pretty young, but his untrimmed beard and exhausted face made it look like he had experienced the many vicissitudes of life.

"Kill the rider!" Li Huowang exclaimed.

The man in black armor's fists trembled upon seeing the purple-tasseled sword on Li Huowang's back. He tugged at the chains and caught the two modaos before sheathing them on his back. "Give me the Tai'a Sword!"

Li Huowang had no idea what the man was talking about. He was about to respond when the Xu Nian charged at them.

Li Huowang retreated and shouted, "Help me immobilize it! I have a plan!"

The man jumped high into the air. He somersaulted and reached behind his back before throwing all four modaos on his back toward the Xu Nian.

The Xu Nian's feet were immobilized by the chains.

Li Huowang immediately swung his spine sword toward the woman on the Xu Nian's back.

The woman tried to dodge the attack, but Li Huowang tore off one of his ribs and stabbed it into his own chest.

A wave of pain erupted from him, and everyone felt the same sharp pain as him.

Swoosh!

The spacetime rift decapitated the woman, and her head vanished into the Qi Kingdom.

The crimson afterimages around the Xu Nian disappeared.

The jingling of chains echoed from behind. The man used his chain to unsheath Li Huowang's purple-tasseled sword before throwing it toward the Xu Nian's neck.

"Wait!" Li Huowang's face changed drastically. His figure blinked and reappeared in midair while Li Sui's tentacles grabbed the purple-tasseled sword. "Don't kill her. She's a friend, and she was just under someone else's control. That is no longer the case, so she's no longer an enemy. She also has no intentions of killing us."

The man took one look at the Xu Nian before retrieving his four modaos with a single flick of his hand. The modaos seemed to sheath themselves on his back.

Xu Nian regained its freedom and jumped into the darkness. After a while, it returned, and a woman's face was on its neck.

The face was still torn, and there were pages beneath it. There were texts on each page, and Li Huowang was familiar with the handwriting. It was Zhuge Yuan's penmanship!

"Is that you?" Xu Nian asked, staring at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang cast a complicated gaze at the woman. He wanted to say something, but his mouth wouldn't move

“No. It’s not you. You are no longer here.” Xu Nian shook her head in disappointment before sprinting toward the entrance of the cave, startling the large-framed man, who was just about to enter the cave.

Li Huowang wanted to chase after the Xu Nian, but he saw that Li Sui was playing tug of war with the man in a black armor. “Li Sui, let go!”

“No! He wants to take our sword! This is our sword! It’s not his sword!” Li Sui exclaimed. She endured the flames as she wrapped the purple-tasseled sword tightly with her tentacles.

A chain and a tentacle were tugging at the purple-tasseled sword.

Li Huowang stared at the man in black armor, obviously asking for an explanation.

“Sir, can you please return this sword to me?” Li Huowang asked, extinguishing the flames around him, which revealed his figure that resembled a chunk of charcoal.

“Why would I return this to you?! This is my sword!” You Zixiong exclaimed, glaring at Li Huowang with bloodshot eyes.

“Zixiong, Sir Er, we’re all from the same team. Let’s not do this, okay? We can talk this out,” the large-framed man said, trying to calm them down.

Li Huowang didn't want to fight the man, as he had been helpful during the fight just now. “Sir, I’m not someone unreasonable. I can give you anything except for this sword. My senior gave it to me, so I can’t part with it.”

“Who’s your senior?”

“Benevolent Nunnery, Abbess Jingxin.”

You Zixiong’s eyes flashed in a peculiar light. He let go of the sword, and his chains returned to his robes.

Li Huowang cast a doubtful gaze at You Zixiong. “You know Abbess Jingxin?”

“No, but I’m from Si Qi. I did give the Benevolent Nunnery my sword as collateral last time, but Si Qi has been destroyed. I was certain that she wouldn't exchange it for money, but... hehe, ” You Zixiong said. His killing intent vanished, and he looked defeated.

Chapter 638 - Change

The charred Li Huowang stared deeply at You Zixiong, listening to the latter's recount.

It turned out You Zixiong was from the military of Si Qi, and he became like floating duckweed after Si Qi's destruction. He had nowhere to go, so he decided to settle down in the Liang Kingdom.

As for his relationship with the Benevolent Nunnery... Li Huowang asked, and You Zixiong replied that he met the nuns from the Benevolent Nunnery halfway through his journey to the Liang Kingdom.

The front liners needed their salary, so You Zixiong used his own sword as collateral to exchange for silver from the nuns.

The silver that the Nuns were transporting at the time was the same silver that Li Huowang had looted from the water bandits in the reed field.

Back then, he had used that money to exchange for a method to deal with Dan Yangzi from Abbess Jingxin.

The Abbess then used the silver to exchange for You Zixiong's sword before gifting it to Li Huowang as a present so that he could defend himself.

With that, the loop was closed as if fate itself had willed it.

As Li Huowang listened to You Zixiong's explanation, a distant memory surfaced in his mind. He felt a complicated feeling bubbling from the depths of his heart.

After a while, Li Huowang stared at the silent You Zixiong and asked, "Then... do you know how the nuns died?"

You Zixiong shook his head and replied, "After exchanging the Tai'a Sword for silver, I returned to camp, and I couldn't get out for a long time. I have no idea what happened afterward. After the Natural Disaster, we fought again with Hou Shu, and then..."

You Zixiong's expression distorted in agony as he said, "Si Qi perished... I wanted to die and drag a few more enemies down with me, but the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau said that it's better for us to retreat and reclaim the nation back day. He took us and several other survivors to the Liang Kingdom."

"Hou Shu's army is that strong? I didn't expect them to capture Si Qi."

"Bullshit!" You Zixiong was furious. "It's the fault of those corrupted officials! They embezzled everything! They gave us no food and money! They're a bunch of useless leeches! We had nothing to fight against the barbarians from Hou Shu! And they even dared to work with the eunuchs from the palace to sell off the entire nation to the Dharma Sect!"

"What?!" Li Huowang's pupil shrank at the remark. "What did you just say? The Dharma Sect is the reason behind the Si Qi Kingdom's fall?"

"Of course! Do you really think that Hou Shu's army can breach our borders? Even without food and money, they'd never be able to enter the kingdom as long as a member of the You Family is still alive!" You Zixiong roared. Then, he took a deep breath and sighed deeply. "If Hou Shu actually had the power to capture Si Qi, then we would have been more than happy to admit defeat. However, I cannot accept the fact that the Dharma Sect has reaped all the profits from behind the scenes while we were busy fighting at the border!"

The jingling of chains echoed as You Zixiong's modaos flew up high in the air. The four modaos descended and chopped the corpse of a Dharma Sect member into pieces.

"Wait, give me a moment to think." Li Huowang pondered seriously over something before asking, "I need to confirm something. Did Si Qi really lose to the Dharma Sect? Does that mean they control the entire Si Qi now?”

“Of course. If it’s just a regular takeover by another nation, the Chief wouldn’t have to bring us all the way to the Liang Kingdom.”

Li Huowang was shocked to learn that the Dharma Sect was an even bigger issue than he thought.

Gao Zhijian had become the Emperor of the Great Liang, so Li Huowang could ask for the military and the Surveillance Bureau's help to eradicate the Dharma Sect.

With that in mind, he believed that the Dharma Sect's destruction was just a matter of time and that it wouldn't escalate into an all-out war.

However, the news of how Si Qi was taken down by the Dharma Sect shocked Li Huowang.

They were talking about the Dharma Sect here—the sect capable of transforming regular people into an army of fearless zealots!

The citizens of Si Qi were definitely members of the Dharma Sect by now.

The scenes that Li Huowang had seen in the Qi Kingdom made him realize that the Dharma Sect was indeed a formidable sect.

Li Huowang felt like a heavy boulder was on his shoulder.

Since the Dharma Sect had already taken over Si Qi, it was only a matter of time before they expanded their territory.

Afterward, they would definitely attack Hou Shu next. Then, Qing Qiu would come afterward.

Once the Dharma Sect had taken over Qing Qiu, then the Liang Kingdom would have to face a terrifying foe.

Li Huowang didn’t bother chasing after the Xu Nian and simply left the cave instead.

The large-framed bearded man turned to You Zixiong and said, “You should have been a bit more humble. That man has a nasty personality.”

“You think I fear death? You know that I should have died at the border!” You Zixiong exclaimed. He felt defeated as he walked out of the cave. “Si Qi has fallen. Why am I still alive? I'm living like a rat just so I can slaughter Dharma Sect!”

A wheel covered in steel slowly rolled down the road. Yang Xiaohai looked around the numerous footprints on the ground.

“My goodness. Why are there so many soldiers running here and there? Are they going to war?”

“Husband, what are you talking about? Why would we go to war for no reason?”

Yang Xiaohai ignored the footprints and focused on driving the carriage at the response from the inside. From time to time, he'd take out a map to confirm their current location.

“Xiumei, how much food do we have left? We're almost at Qing Qiu. There are very few people around there, so it would be hard for us to buy rations,” Yang Xiaohai asked his wife.

“We still have a few hundred taels of food left. It should be enough to last us weeks. Wait, what are we eating later?”

Zhao Xiumei felt that she had made the right decision by marrying a chef. They were camping outside, but Yang Xiaohai could still cook a variety of dishes for them to eat.

“I wonder what we're going to eat...” Yang Xiaohai pondered, and that was when he saw a food stall in the form of a tent in the distance. He read the sign and answered, “Let's eat some spicy wontons.”

Yang Xiaohai stopped the carriage and entered the tent. The majority of the seats were occupied, so he quickly pulled his wife to one of the few remaining seats and said, “Boss, give us a serving of spicy wontons, but split the serving into two bowls.”

“All right! Go ahead and take a seat. Your food will be served soon!”

It was a good thing that they were still quite near to civilization.

Yang Xiaohai looked around and saw some peddlers, a scholar, and a monkey trainer with three monkeys.

The three chained monkeys were licking the spicy red oil on the ground.

The customers ate voraciously as the fragrant scent of spicy oil filled the tent.

Yang Xiaohai and Zhao Xiumei gulped as they were starting to get hungry.

Chapter 639 - Wonton Stall

Soon, two bowls of spicy wonton were served in front of Yang Xiaohai and his wife.

Yang Xiaohai grabbed his chopsticks and picked out the snowy white wontons. He ate it with some spring onions and nodded in approval.

The wontons were clad in chili oil, but they weren't greasy at all. In addition, they were only a bit spicy and were full of fragrance.

As a chef, he approved of the wontons.

Eating a bowl of hot food on such a cold day was bliss, so the two were all smiles as they ate.

“Husband, do you know how to make these?”

“I do, but mine isn't as good as the owner of this stall. They're probably using a secret recipe.”

Yang Xiaohai stared at the stove and saw that the chef had placed some sticks into the pot while the wontons were being cooked.

Yang Xiaohai's curiosity was piqued; he wanted to know the identity of those sticks.

Yang Xiaohai was eating and deducing the recipe at the same time.

Just then, an old woman walked into the tent. The woman was so old that she had to rely on her cane to walk.

“Do you want a bowl of spicy wontons?” the stall owner asked with a smile.

The old woman licked her cracked lips and stared at the boiling wontons in the pot. "I have my own things to eat. Can you please just give me a bowl of hot water? How much would that be?"

Yang Xiaohai glanced at the old woman and took note of her clothes. Her clothes had been mended many times, and the old woman herself looked so skinny that she could be compared to a twig.

"It's okay. There's no need to pay for a bowl of hot water. Just sit down, and I'll bring you a bowl of hot water."

The old woman thanked the kind stall owner, and then she sat down at the table next to Yang Xiaohai.

Soon, the bowl of hot water arrived. The old woman opened her cloth bag and took out a small black jar.

She drank a mouthful of the hot water before using the chopsticks to grab a tiny cobblestone from inside the black jar.

The cobblestone was dripping with black liquid.

"Husband, look. She's eating stones."

Yang Xiaohai turned and saw that the old woman was sucking on the cobblestone.

Having made quick work of the black liquid on the stone, she spat it into the jar and drank a mouthful of hot water.

Zhao Xiumai sighed when the old woman took another stone and sucked on it. "Husband, she's so pitiful. Let's buy her a bowl of wonton, okay? How can she relieve her hunger with just stones?"

Yang Xiaohai nodded. He couldn't bear to see someone go hungry, as he could still remember how bad hunger felt when he was still a beggar.

However, Yang Xiaohai dared not give her too much. He couldn't flaunt his wealth, as it would be too risky. He ordered another bowl of wonton and extended it to the old woman.

"Here, eat this instead, Maam. You won't be hungry for a while with this," Yang Xiaohai said.

The old woman was taken aback, and then she smiled. She didn't have any teeth, so her gums formed two red lines when she smiled.

"Thank you, young man, but I don't need it because I have these," the old woman replied, "Do you see this stone? It tastes like braised ribs, while this one tastes like roasted duck. This one tastes like braised pork trotters."

With that, the old woman gave the bowl of wontons to the three chained monkeys next to the monkey trainer.

The three monkeys were visibly hungry, and they snatched the bowl away from the old woman's hand before making quick work of the wontons.

Bewildered, Yang Xiaohai had no idea what to do, so he simply went back to his seat.

The old woman was still sucking on her stones.

Before long, he sighed and turned to Zhao Xiumai, saying, "Do you think she's crazy like Senior Li?"

"Her family must be very unfilial. Otherwise, why would they let her run around when she's sick?" Zhao Xiumei said, sounding furious.

"What if she's like me? What if she doesn't have a family?" Yang Xiaohai asked.

The two went silent.

However, they had already done everything they could do for a stranger; they couldn't afford to take a mentally ill old woman with them on their journey.

The two were kind, but they weren't that kind.

The two continued their meal, but the wontons no longer tasted as delicious as earlier for some reason.

The wontons in their bowls disappeared slowly as they ate, and once there were no longer any wontons in their bowls, they stood up to leave.

Just then, an old man sitting on a black donkey entered the little tent with his two disciples. The old man's long beard made him look like an Immortal.

“Hm~ Sure. I remember the last time I ate wontons was when I summoned the God of Thunder to punish the wicked being that was threatening the peace of a village.”

Everyone turned around and cast a look of reverence at the old man.

“Of course. Master is going to become an Immortal soon. And he hates evil people!” the two disciples exclaimed, praising their master.

One of the monkeys heard that, and it glanced at the monkey trainer. Upon seeing that its owner was busy eating his second bowl of wontons, it bit the chains on its neck and shouted, "Help! Jiji, help!"

The monkey even knelt as it begged the Daoist for help.

“Hm? ” The old Daoist slammed the table and frowned, seemingly getting angry.

Realizing that his trick was no longer a secret, the monkey trainer flipped the table and took out a dagger. He decided to fight to the death and pointed the dagger at the old man.

“Let's do this, then, you old bastard!” the monkey trainer roared.

The old Daoist’s figure shook, and his eyes rolled to the back of his skull. He sat frozen on the stool, unresponsive to the monkey trainer's challenge.

The old Daoist’s reaction shocked everyone, including the monkey trainer.

“Hahah! So you're just a fraud?!” The monkey trainer laughed boisterously. He then dragged the monkey that had decided to beg for help, and he kicked it until it was bleeding. “How dare you try and escape? Do it again! Show me how you did that!”

The monkey trainer slapped the monkey so many times that the monkey's face looked like it was sloughing off.

Yang Xiaohai hesitated at the sight. Just as he was going to make a move, a cobblestone streaked across the air and struck the monkey trainer's arms.

The monkey trainer's arms snapped with a grotesque crack.

The monkey trainer let out a shrill cry, but the old woman spat another cobblestone. The cobblestone flew into the monkey trainer's mouth, and the latter's head exploded into a bloody mist.

The old woman then walked toward the injured monkey and tore off its skin, revealing the head of a bleeding child.

It turned out that the monkeys were human children! They were made to wear monkey skin and were forced to act like monkeys.

"Ah... Poor children," the old woman muttered. She took out a white cloth and wrapped it around the injured child's head. "Come, this world is full of suffering. Worship Sir Arrogant Stone, and you will reincarnate into a better life."

Chapter 640 - Old Woman

The old woman took out a stone and used it to carefully tear open the monkey skin on the children.

Soon, the children were no longer wearing monkey skin.

Yang Xiaohai's eyes went wide in shock. The skinny old lady that loved sucking on stones had turned out to be an expert!

"Husband! He's dead! He's really dead! His brain is oozing out of his skull!" Zhao Xiumei exclaimed, hiding behind Yang Xiaohai in fear.

She had witnessed many deaths at the hands of that red-robed Daoist during their journey at the time, but she still couldn't get used to witnessing death.

"Don't worry. I think that old lady only kills evil people," Yang Xiaohai said, consoling his wife.

The old woman's action told him that they were not in danger. It wouldn't make sense for someone like the old woman to attack regular people. After all, she seemed to be out here to punish evil people.

Moreover, Yang Xiaohai even gave her a bowl of spicy wonton for free. She hadn't eaten it, but Yang Xiaohai believed that she'd acknowledge his kindness.

The others were visibly afraid of the old woman, which was in stark contrast to Yang Xiaohai's calm and composed demeanor.

They ran away in fear upon realizing that they had just witnessed the death of a human being. The old Daoist, who looked like a sage, ran the fastest along with his disciples.

However, the three monkeys—no, the three children weren't afraid of the old woman at all. "Mother! Jiji... Mother, Mother! Motheer!"

The remaining two children still had their monkey skin, but they were jumping and dancing around the old woman in joy.

“Come now. Don’t move. Let me take a look.”

Yang Xiaohai then saw the old woman tearing off the monkey skin on the children using just the stones in her hands.

“There really is a real, living child beneath the monkey skin!”

“Senior Bai has told me about them before. People would capture children and wrap them in monkey skin to perform tricks for them. Compared to real monkeys, children are easier to train. I thought she was lying, but I didn't expect to actually encounter one today. Anyway, let's go and help her,” Yang Xiaohai remarked. He wasn't brave enough to face dangers head-on, but he was more than happy to help once the danger had passed.

They took a pot of hot water and drenched some towels in the hot water. They cooled the towels down a bit before using them to wipe away the blood and pus from the children’s skin.

The wounds of the children looked painful, but they would survive such injuries. Thankfully, it hadn't been that long since they were kidnapped and wrapped in monkey skin.

Yang Xiaohai also grabbed some of his spare clothes and made the children wear them.

The three children looked just like normal people now that they were clean and were wearing normal clothes.

However, they were still acting like monkeys. It was highly likely that the man had conditioned them to act like monkeys for a very long time, so it would take some time for the children to start living like humans again.

The old woman wrapped a white cloth around the children's heads.

Yang Xiaohai's curiosity was piqued, so he asked, “What are you doing?”

“Once this cloth is wrapped around their head, they'll become as robust and hard as a stone. No one would dare to bully them anymore.”

Yang Xiaohai nodded and thought that it was just a tradition from some random village. It was similar to how others would place a dot of cinnabar on a child's head to ward off evil. He used to believe it, but he was no longer a child.

He knew that a dot of cinnabar couldn't ward off evil. The only one capable of doing so was someone like Senior Li.

“Hehehe. Young man, you are very kind. You will be rewarded for your kindness.”

The old woman patted Yang Xiaohai's head before bringing away the three children.

Staring at their departing figures, Yang Xiaohai came up with a plan and proceeded to follow them with his carriage. “It looks like they're going in the same direction as us, so we should just bring them along with us.”

“I don't think that's a wise decision. She seems weird,” Zhao Xiumei said, sounding hesitant.

“Don't worry. She definitely has a few screws loose, but she's still a kind person. Also, I think it's safer for us to have an expert by our side.”

He could still remember how Troupe Leader Lu had used Senior Li as his bodyguard. He was simply imitating Lu Zhuangyuan.

Yang Xiaohai was also convinced that the old woman wasn't evil. After all, she had saved three children and even peeled off their monkey skin to return them to normal.

“Madam, come sit in our carriage. It must be hard walking around with a cane. Since it looks like we're going in the same direction, we can just travel together.”

At first, the old woman refused the offer, but Yang Xiaohai insisted again and again until she relented and hopped into the carriage.

The carriage now had four additional occupants, but all of them combined were still lighter than Gao Zhijian.

After all, the four additional occupants were just three children and a skinny old woman.

“Young man, how old are you?” the old woman asked, staring at Yang Xiaohai's back from inside the carriage.

“Me? I don't know. No one told me my age when I was young, so I have no idea how old I am. I'm probably thirteen or fourteen, though.”

The old woman seemed to reminisce about the past as she muttered, “Ah... If my grandchildren were still alive, they'd be around your age.”

“What happened to them?”

“My granddaughter was sold off for two pieces of bread, while my grandson was cooked and served as food. Ah... my poor grandson!” the old woman cried upon recalling the horrifying incident.

“Mother? Mother?” The children tried to wipe away her tears, and she spread her arms to hug them all.

“Sigh. Husband, she's been through many hardships,” Zhao Xiumei whispered. She then entered the carriage and shared her hardships with the old woman.

The three children and Zhao Xiumei consoled the old woman, and she eventually stopped crying. Wiping away her tears, she said, “Don't worry. I now have the blessing of Sir Arrogant Stone. He allowed me to see my grandchildren in a dream, and I saw that they were safe and sound. I'll be able to see them again in the afterlife, and all of us will reincarnate into a rich family.”

Zhao Xiumei was surprised. “Is Sir Arrogant Stone that strong? What Bodhisattva is he? Can he give me a son? I should really start praying to him.”

The old woman was thrilled upon realizing that Zhao Xiumei was interested in Sir Arrogant Stone. She then proceeded to talk about Sir Arrogant Stone's greatness as well as the benefits of praying to him.

Yang Xiaohai merely listened to the old man. He didn't believe her at all.

The couple was still full from the wontons earlier, so they traveled nonstop for roughly four hours.

Fortunately, they managed to reach a county town before nightfall, which meant that they didn't have to camp outside tonight.

“Husband, what do you think about this?”

Yang Xiaohai turned and saw a white cloth wrapped around his wife's head.

Chapter 641 - Yamen

“How ugly! There’s nobody dead in the family, so why are you wearing white?” Yang Xiaohai recalled that people would only wear white cloths on their heads when there was a death in the family.

“You don’t understand. The old woman said that as long as we wear this, the Arrogant Stone Buddha will protect us. You should put on one too.”

“The Buddha will protect you just because you wrapped a piece of white cloth around your head? If it were that easy, there wouldn’t be any poor people in the world,” Yang Xiaohai said with a sigh. Sometimes, he really didn’t know who was the older one between the two of them.

Yang Xiaohai saw five people inside the carriage that also had white cloths wrapped around their heads. He then said, “Get off. We’ll stay at this inn for the night and set off tomorrow morning.”

An ordinary inn was to the left of their carriage, with tables and stools that appeared to be covered in a layer of starch. This was exactly what Yang Xiaohai wanted. They would avoid drawing unwanted attention by staying somewhere that wasn’t ostentatious.

The five of them sat around an eight-immortal table. When the meat and vegetable dishes were served, Yang Xiaohai and the monkey children ate heartily. Despite that, the old woman continued to suck on a stone.

“Auntie, have some food. You can’t fill up on that,” Zhao Xiumei urged.

The old woman replied, “You go ahead and eat your stuff. Mine is good stuff.”

Zhao Xiumei wanted to say more, but Yang Xiaohai kicked her under the table.

Yang Xiaohai had previously witnessed the old woman effortlessly smash someone's head with a stone. He figured it eating stones might be a method of cultivation, similar to Senior Li's method of cultivation.

Such personal matters were best left unspoken to avoid crossing any boundaries.

Yang Xiaohai quickly changed the subject. "Madam, where are you going? Perhaps we are headed the same way?"

"Where am I going? My intention was to come here. After finishing my business, who knows where I'll go. I'll take it one step at a time," the old woman replied as she looked around the inn, seemingly in search of something.

As they continued eating, the sound of someone sobbing rang out by the inn's entrance. Everyone looked up to see a long-haired woman in wooden shackles being paraded by several constables.

She cried pitifully, "Why? I was violated in broad daylight, yet the scoundrel counter-sued me! Oh heavens, open your eyes!"

As the woman passed by the inn, everyone, including the waiters and other patrons, turned away and sighed.

Their indignant conversations reached the ears of Yang Xiaohai and his companions.

"How could she win? That scoundrel is the county magistrate's son. So many people witnessed it, but no one dares to say a word."

"That greedy and chubby official is so detestable. He bullies both men and women and twists right from wrong!"

"I heard he bribed higher-ups and is about to be promoted. No wonder he's in a hurry to grab everything he can."

Yang Xiaohai and his group stopped eating and looked at the old woman in ragged clothes.

The old woman picked up a stone with her chopsticks and put it in her mouth and then another, until she had eaten all the stones in the pot. And yet, her cheeks were still sunken, as if she hadn't eaten anything at all.

She then said, “Mmm, I’m full. Kid, help me put this pot away.”

The old woman stood up, grabbed her staff, and started to walk out of the inn.

Yang Xiaohai and Zhao Xiumei exchanged glances. The sound of blades being drawn and screams outside compelled them to follow her quickly.

When they got outside, they saw the constables who had been escorting the woman lying on the ground. Blood seeped from their heads and soaked the earth.

The old woman was holding the hand of the woman in shackles as they headed towards the yamen[1].

This scene drew a lot of attention. Soon after, many curious townsfolk followed them too.

Bang!

The old woman threw a stone, and it shattered the latch of the yamen’s gate. Then the entire gate collapsed together with the plaque above it.

“Great! Destroy it!”

“Finally, someone can stand up to them!”

The commotion quickly drew out everyone from inside the yamen, but it was all in vain. The old woman threw stone after stone at their heads until only a few people were left standing. She had killed everyone except the plump magistrate and his equally chubby son.

The father and son knelt and begged for their lives.

This time, the old woman turned to the crowd outside the yamen. “I’ll take charge here today. If you have a grudge, take revenge. If you have a complaint, seek amends!”

“Kill the corrupt official! Kill the corrupt official!” someone yelled.

Their powerful rallying voice led the crowd, getting everyone excited.

Under the old woman's orders, people found stones of various sizes and hurled them while cursing at the two men.

A sharp-edged stone flew over and struck the magistrate's mouth. Before his broken teeth even fell out, another stone flew over and smashed into his forehead.

No one could withstand such an assault. Shortly after, the two men were stoned to death.

The two corpses were battered and bloody, but this did little to appease the enraged mob.

Yang Xiaohai turned pale and swallowed hard. "Isn't killing a county magistrate a major capital offense?"

"Corrupt official! I'll eat your flesh and drink your blood! My daughter was only sixteen, and you turned her into a wax human!" yelled a single-legged old man with white hair.

He lunged forward and bit the official's corpse with his remaining teeth.

This set off a chain reaction. Anyone with a deep grudge against the official rushed forward and gnawed on the bodies. The people fought fiercely, as if being a little too late meant someone else would eat their share.

Though the magistrate and his son were meaty, they couldn't withstand such a cannibalistic rampage. Soon after, only two bloody skeletons were left on the ground, surrounded by over a hundred commoners with red eyes and mouths filled with blood.

"This isn't enough! Why should that corrupt official keep all our things? We should take them back!" someone yelled from amid the crowd.

"Yes, let's take them back! We deserve our dues!"

"Right! And the official's seven wives too! Why should he have seven when I have none?"

With this instigation, the crowd stormed into the yamen and started looting anything of value.

Greed overtook their hearts when they saw the chests of silver being carried out. Even the dog's bowls were made of gold, which caused their eyes to redden and their breathing to hasten.

"Ahhh!!" a beautiful woman screamed as she was dragged out.

The men quickly stripped her naked and violated her.

The woman in shackles stood in the hall and watched the chaos unfold. She saw the official's family suffer a fate worse than hers. However, she didn't look happy at all; she just stood there dispiritedly as if she had lost her soul.

1. the administrative office of a local bureaucrat 📌

Chapter 642 - Escape

Inside the county's yamen, the angry screams, shouts, and cries of agony continued relentlessly. The place had descended into utter chaos.

Everyone had forgotten the initial purpose they had gone there for. They were now charging inside one after another, behaving like beasts beyond anyone's wildest dreams.

"Grain! Grain! It's all white flour! No coarse grains!" someone shouted from the west wing.

Then the crowd surged in that direction.

The old man who had been the first to eat the magistrate's flesh also tried to follow, but he stumbled and fell to the ground.

He struggled to get up, but someone stomped on his raised right hand. There was a crunching sound, and an agonizing scream left his bloodstained mouth.

Yet, that scream was insignificant amid the surrounding clamor. More people trampled over the old man, bringing an end to his scream.

Those stepping over him just felt there was something a bit soft beneath their feet, and they paid no further attention to it.

Yang Xiaohai and his wife Zhao Xiumei had gotten caught in the crowd. They did not want to be there, but the crowd pushed them in.

He wanted to leave, but there were simply too many people everywhere, making it seemingly impossible for him and his wife to get out.

His face was very pale as he held tightly to Zhao Xiumei's hand and tried to break free from the crowd.

Yang Xiaohai told Zhao Xiumei, "Hold onto my hand tightly!

Don't let go, or we won't be able to find each other!"

After several attempts to get out, Yang Xiaohai suddenly remembered something. He pulled out the scepter that Senior Li had given him, which bore a human tongue.

He raised the scepter and waved it at those on his left. The previously frenzied crowd suddenly froze in place. Their eyes filled with confusion, as though they had forgotten what they were about to do.

"Follow me! Let's go this way," Yang Xiaohai said to Zhao Xiumei.

He maneuvered through the crowd, taking Zhao Xiumei towards the wall.

Yang Xiaohai struggled but managed to get himself and his wife out of the crowd thanks to the scepter.

Still shaken, he glanced at the chaotic scene before him and pulled Zhao Xiumei towards the inn.

"Xiaohai, what's going on? How did it turn out like this?" Zhao Xiumei asked, clearly frightened by the chaos.

An act of justice against a corrupt official had unexpectedly turned into utter mayhem.

"I don't know either. Let's just get out of here! It's too dangerous!"

Despite what he said, Yang Xiaohai, who had quite a lot of life experience, suspected that the old woman was behind it all. Without her, none of this would have happened.

Nevertheless, he didn't think that she had done anything wrong. She was indeed helping the oppressed and doing a good deed by seeking justice for them.

Yang Xiaohai wasn't much of an intellectual and could not figure out why things ended up this way. He just wanted to take his people away from this troubled place.

When Yang Xiaohai rushed back to the inn, he saw the three monkey children squatting on the benches. They were guarding the old woman's ceramic jar.

"Quick, let's go! Follow me!" Yang Xiaohai shouted urgently and headed towards the stable at the back of the inn.

"Auntie?"

"Forget about her! She's powerful; she won't die! If we don't run now, we'll be dragged into this mess!"

They quickly got the horse-drawn carriage ready, and Yang Xiaohai led it back the way they came.

This isn't a peaceful place. I'll take a detour to avoid going through this town, he thought to himself.

Just as his carriage was about to leave the county, he saw a group of oddly-dressed people blocking the road with their horses.

Yang Xiaohai had initially assumed they were travelers like himself, but he saw the badges on their waists, and his face turned pale. Those badges indicated they were from the Surveillance Bureau.

He had learnt about the Surveillance Bureau and their way of doing things from Senior Li.

"I need to t-turn around!"

Yang Xiaohai quickly turned the carriage and frantically whipped the horses to escape in the opposite direction.

However, when he returned to the yamen's gate, he almost cried at the sight before him.

The people who had been looting had now come out and gathered in a large circle. They seemed to be listening to someone inside and shouted in agreement occasionally.

It was alright if they were just talking, but they happened to also be blocking the main road to the other exit.

"Sir Arrogant Stone! We are your personal servants and guards! We will follow you every step of the way and never leave your side!"

The crowd echoed this powerful shout. They then pulled out white cloths and tied them around their heads.

Yang Xiaohai looked angrily at the white cloths on their heads, then at the one on his wife's head. He tore the cloth off her head in frustration.

He now understood that everything was probably part of the old woman's scheme. He had blindly followed her, as he had assumed she was a good person.

Hmph, just as I thought. The more remote the place, the more trouble caused by the Dharma Sect!

Yang Xiaohai turned his head as he heard a sound on the other side. He saw a sinister-looking man on the ridge of a roof, crouching like a roof ornament.

Yang Xiaohai recognized him as one of the Surveillance Bureau members from earlier.

He watched the man reach into his robe and pull out the dried corpse of a child dressed in a red dudou[1]. The corpse had a red dot on its forehead and was tied to a red string.

The man threw the corpse off the roof.

In midair, the corpse moved its hand and moved with the pull of the string. The white-clothed people then started to move towards Yang Xiaohai, terrifying him

“Get off the carriage! We need to leave!”

Before the fighting could start, Yang Xiaohai led his group decisively into a nearby alley. He knew from his days as a beggar that nothing was more important than his life.

The sounds of fighting and shouting continued behind them as Yang Xiaohai led his group through the alleys.

After they scaled a wall to get into someone's yard, the noise finally diminished significantly.

“We'll stay here until the fighting stops outside,” Yang Xiaohai whispered to the others.

The three monkey children blinked, and one of them suddenly said, “Auntie.”

“Shh! No more Auntie talk! It’s because of her that we’re in this mess!”

Yang Xiaohai anxiously wiped his forehead with the back of his hand. He felt the temperature around them rising, though he wasn’t sure if it was due to his anxiety.

1. Ancient Chinese underwear for kids and women. It’s a diamond-shaped cloth that’s tied at the back.

Chapter 643 - Goodwill

Why is it so hot?

As Yang Xiaohai pondered this, he smelled a familiar scent of burning wood. He was a cook, so he was very familiar with this smell thanks to his daily cooking.

His heart sank as the smell of burning wood grew stronger, mixed with the scent of roasting meat.

Using his wife as a step stool, he climbed up by stepping on his wife's thighs and peeked cautiously over the wall. He immediately felt the heat on his face, and his pupils dilated.

The distant inn and nearby shops were all engulfed in flames, collapsing and spreading the fire even further. Fire was being used as a weapon!

Regardless of who started the fire, it was a disaster for Yang Xiaohai and his companions, who were trapped inside the town.

If they didn't escape, they would be burned alive. If they ran, they would get caught in the battle.

Yang Xiaohai frantically paced in circles. "Senior Li, what should I do? Senior Li..."

Then he realized that Senior Li, who could do almost anything, wasn't here with him. He had to figure it out on his own.

Yang Xiaohai looked back at the high wall that he couldn't climb while he repeatedly relaxed and tightened his grip on the scepter.

He took out some painstakingly refined pills, counted them, and then drew several talismans. These were his only means of survival if he encountered enemies.

Seeing the fire approach, Yang Xiaohai steeled himself and said to Zhao Xiumei, "We need to get out. If I get held back, make sure you get out of the county.”

The original route was blocked by fire, so they had to climb past walls and go through doors from the sides.

Fortunately, the three monkey children proved very useful. They were small, so they could crawl through small holes and open gates for the group to get into more yards.

After scrambling around for a while, the five of them were covered in dust and ash. The smell of burning wood had become less intense, which brought Yang Xiaohai a sense of relief. It seemed they had moved away from the center of the battle.

“They must be too busy fighting to notice us. Keep going!” Yang Xiaohai urged the others.

They climbed over a third yard and arrived at the edge of a field.

Yang Xiaohai suddenly sensed something looming over him from behind. He turned and saw a man with yellow hair on his chest, fish-scale tattoos on his neck, and a blood-stained wugou[1] in his hand.

This man had his gaze locked on Yang Xiaohai.

Yang Xiaohai froze, his mind turning blank. He was like a deer caught in the headlights; he completely forgot to defend himself.

The man glanced at the white scarves on the monkey children’s heads. He showed a look of disdain as he raised his wugou.

He said, “Another bunch of Dharma Sect cultists. Why do you always perform these villainous deeds?”

Seeing the wugou’s blade reflect the light of the fire, Yang Xiaohai snapped back to reality.

Yang Xiaohai exclaimed, “We’re not with them! My... my senior is the Liang Kingdom’s emperor!”

“Hahaha, the emperor’s junior dressed so poorly? Then I’m the Jade Emperor!”

The man swung his wugou at Yang Xiaohai’s neck.

“My other senior is Li—”

Before Yang Xiaohai could finish, he saw the blade coming at his neck. He closed his eyes and curled up instinctively as he braced for death.

However, Yang Xiaohai felt no pain. He opened his eyes and saw a shriveled figure standing before him. The attacker had been forced back three feet.

“Auntie!” the monkey children shouted excitedly.

It was the same old woman who had just caused an upheaval and gotten them into that situation, yet Yang Xiaohai thought she seemed different now.

“Kids, go quickly. I’ll hold him off,” she said calmly while facing the man.

Hearing that, Yang Xiaohai came to his senses. He glanced at the old woman again before grabbing the others and running towards the rice fields.

“Sir Arrogant Stone, please protect the children. May they survive and live well,” the old woman cried out.

Yang Xiaohai and the others ran desperately. They dared not stop, for fear that the man with the wugou would pursue them and catch up.

After fleeing for an hour, they finally collapsed by the roadside and gasped for breath. By that time, night had fallen, and the moon could be seen high in the sky.

As Yang Xiaohai lay there and gathered his thoughts, he heard the sound of hooves. He looked up in the direction of the sound and saw his carriage.

There were two people driving the carriage. One was the man with the wugou on his back—the one who had tried to kill him earlier. Yang Xiaohai recognized the second man too. They were both from the Surveillance Bureau. They had caught up with Yang Xiaohai’s group.

At that moment, Yang Xiaohai saw a wealthy-looking plump man who looked to be in his mid-thirties. The man was wearing a flowered headscarf and a purple-flowered robe. He jumped down from the carriage and walked towards them.

Yang Xiaohai was filled with desperation. He pulled out the scepter, aimed it towards them, and then shouted, “Xiumei! Run as far as you can!”

“I won’t leave without you!” Zhao Xiumei cried out, her eyes red.

“Don’t be silly! They’ll kill you! I’m a man, and I must protect my wife!”

Despite his brave words, tears streamed from Yang Xiaohai’s eyes.

As the plump man neared, Yang Xiaohai threw the scepter at him, but the plump man dodged it easily. He walked over to Yang Xiaohai, grabbed his hands, and shook them forcefully.

The plump man said, “Hehehe, young friend, sorry about earlier. My junior is uncivilized. I heard your senior is the Liang Kingdom’s emperor? And you have another senior...?”

Yang Xiaohai was at a loss about how to react to the man’s words.

The plump man continued, “I also heard your other senior is surnamed Li. May I ask what sect he’s from? How does he dress?”

Yang Xiaohai watched the plump man’s smile dissipate very slightly from his eyes, revealing the icy snake-like pupils within them.

This movement caused Yang Xiaohai to shudder. He quickly nodded and replied, “Yes! My senior is the Great Liang’s emperor, Gao Zhijian. My other senior is Li Huowang. He... he’s powerful! He wears red Daoist robes and carries three swords on his back. Do you know him?”

The stout man paused and then smiled broadly. His icy snake pupils were once again concealed within his smile.

“Ah, so it’s Senior Li! Of course I know him. His father used to bring him to visit us during holidays.”

1. a curved type of sword

Chapter 644 - Good Person

Yang Xiaohai was bewildered. Does this guy know Senior Li or not?

If he doesn't, why did he speak so decisively? If he does know Senior Li, then what he said sounds very out of character for Senior Li. He didn't seem like the type who enjoyed visiting others.

Before Yang Xiaohai could react, the plump man became even more enthusiastic. "Come. We must have frightened you earlier, my junior. Please, accept this as a small token of friendship."

A dense, heavy gold brick that had a blood-stained corner slipped from the man's sleeve and landed heavily in Yang Xiaohai's hand, hurting him.

"My junior, as soon as I saw you, I knew you must be related to Senior Li. Look, I even brought your carriage here. It's yours, right?"

The plump man had his companion bring over the carriage. He helped Zhao Xiumei and the three monkey children into it. He even straightened a white head scarf on one of the children.

Yang Xiaohai's lips trembled slightly. He wanted to ask if the plump man really knew Senior Li. Something seemed off to him.

In the end, he wisely kept his mouth shut. It didn't matter whether the plump man knew Senior Li as long as he was willing to let them go.

"Th-thank you," Yang Xiaohai said.

"Hehehe, no need to thank me. Safe travels, junior. I have my duties and can't see you off. When you see Senior Li, do give him my regards."

As the carriage disappeared into the night, the smile fell off the plump man's face. His eyes revealed their cold, snake-like pupils again.

"Serpent Lord, do you really believe them?" the man with fish-scale tattoos and the wugou asked with his arms crossed.

The plump man, the Serpent Lord, replied, "Why not? The boy seemed sincere. Besides, I've heard of a formidable fellow who likes to wear red Daoist robes. I thought his name was Er Jiu, though."

"Does sincere mean it's true? Can't it be a lie? Could it be a trick from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?"

"The Sitting Oblivion Dao is long gone. Besides, what do you gain from killing him? If he's fake, we just let a few Dharma Sect cultists escape."

"But if he's real, we have earned ourselves a big favor. Why not take the chance?"

A look of understanding appeared on the face of the tattooed man. "No wonder you've survived two sexagenary cycles. You don't take any risks."

The Serpent Lord didn't mind the words of the tattooed man. He just said, "Let's go. We've already eliminated four Dharma Sect cultists, which is a great boon. These rats have been harder to find since they went into hiding."

"I don't understand why these people come to such remote places to preach," the tattooed man yawned.

While they talked, one of their other companions from the Surveillance Bureau hurried over with a scroll.

He told them anxiously, "We must go! The Chief has ordered everyone in Hedong to gather! Dharma Sect is making a move!"

In the moonlight, Yang Xiaohai drove the carriage forward. His breath was visible in the cold air, his eyes staring blankly at the road.

He didn't know how long he had been in this state. Everything had happened so fast, and his mind was still buzzing and chaotic.

Even after a while, Zhao Xiumei remained visibly shaken. Still, she gently wiped the dried sweat from Yang Xiaohai's forehead with a towel.

She glanced at the monkey children sleeping with a bag of guokuis and hesitantly asked, "Do you think that old woman was killed?"

Yang Xiaohai shook his head mechanically. "I don't know, perhaps."

"Those people are so hateful. She was such a good person."

"A good person..."

After wiping his sweat, Zhao Xiumei sat beside him for a while before she spoke again. "Who do you think are the good people and who are the bad ones?"

Yang Xiaohai was silent for a long time. Then he answered, "I don't know. I'm not smart enough to know. "

Zhao Xiumei folded the towel in her hands and said, "I think that old woman wasn't a truly bad person. I can tell she genuinely liked the children. I wouldn't mistake genuine love."

"Maybe no one thinks they're the bad guys. They all probably believe they're the good ones," Yang Xiaohai turned to look at Zhao Xiumei's profile.

What he learned from this incident was that he nearly got his wife hurt. He wasn't strong enough to protect her. He had underestimated the situation back when he was still in Cowheart Village. He needed to get stronger.

The morning sun broke through the fog and brightened the dark landscape.

"Xiaohai, look. We're back in Qing Qiu."

Yang Xiaohai saw patches of grass before them and remarked, "Why is the grass in Qing Qiu turning yellow?"

Li Huowang was in red robes by a pond as he paced under Li Sui's gaze. He looked as though he was waiting for something. He occasionally bit his fingers with a rather nervous expression.

Two hours passed. Just as his patience wore thin, he saw his reflection in the pond turn to face him.

"Yi Donglai, you've finally shown up," Li Huowang said with a hint of irritation.

"I have my own matters. I'm your future, not your nanny," Ji Zai replied.

"Cut the crap. Time is short. I don't care if you know what's happening, but I need your help!" Li Huowang demanded while he frowned.

"Help you? Why?"

"Don't tell me you, a Siming, didn't know about the Dharma Sect taking over the Si Qi Kingdom!"

"I really didn't know," Ji Zai said frankly.

"Say that again! The entire Si Qi Kingdom was taken over by the Dharma Sect! The god Yu'er's power has spread so widely, and you didn't know?!"

"I'm in charge of bewilderment. You are confused, and I am even more so. It's understandable for something like this to happen."

"F*ck!" Li Huowang cursed.

Chapter 645 - Help

Every conversation Li Huowang had with Ji Zai made him feel that his flames of anger could never be extinguished.

“I don’t care if you did or didn’t know! We can’t let the Great Liang repeat the fate of the Great Qi! I need your help! Don’t forget that when you asked for my help, I didn’t say any nonsense!” Li Huowang yelled.

“How should I help you, then?” Ji Zai asked.

Li Huowang clenched his fists. “Aren’t you a Siming? Make me stronger. Use your power to keep me in the elevated state of the Ba-Hui’s Cang-Qiang Ascension. This is all to deal with the god Yu’er!”

“I can’t do that. After all, I control bewilderment. You may not be aware of it, but I have helped you.”

“Helped me? Bullshit! How have you helped me? How come I’m not aware?”

“Exactly.”

“What do you mean! I’m asking how you helped!”

Li Huowang’s anger flared at Ji Zai’s nonsensical replies. “I should have chosen to be Ba-Hui’s Twisted One instead of yours!”

“Ba-Hui? That wouldn’t be good. Being her Twisted One is very painful,” Ji Zai said, remaining calm.

Li Huowang calmed down and glared at his reflection.

“Ji Zai, you claim to be my future self, but your actions and words make me doubt if your goals are the same as mine.”

“Would you believe me if I said otherwise? Ever since Zhuge Yuan deceived you, have you trusted anyone?” Ji Zai said, sighing lightly.

“Don’t mention Zhuge Yuan! Aren’t you a Siming? If you have the power, bring Zhuge Yuan back to life!”

“I can’t. In this world, the dead can’t be brought back to life. There’s no such Heavenly Dao in the Baiyu Capital.”

“.....”

A long silence ensued between them.

After a while, Li Huowang took a deep breath and said, “You can’t do this, you can’t do that. Fine. Then tell me, how are the others in the future? The people of Cowheart Village? The Great Liang? Have I really managed to protect them in the future?”

“The future depends on your present actions. You know this world is alive and constantly changing.”

Li Huowang looked seriously at Ji Zai. “Stop with the vague talk. I have no other demands. I’ve sacrificed myself to protect those I care about so that they can survive in this abnormal world. Can you promise me that you will protect them?”

Sensing the seriousness in Li Huowang’s words, Ji Zai nodded with certainty. “I can promise you that much, as long as you’re my Twisted One.”

Li Huowang finally relaxed a bit. If Ji Zai couldn’t guarantee anything, he would have to reconsider his options.

“Alright, enough of that. Let’s talk about the current problem. The crisis caused by the god Yu’er is imminent. I need to increase my strength. There were risks with cultivating the ‘Truth’ previously because the ‘Truth’ and ‘Lies’ Heavenly Daos were controlled by Doulao. Now that you’re in charge, can I continue my ‘Truth’ cultivation safely?”

“You don’t need to ask me about such things. If you think you can, then you can.”

Li Huowang’s heart sank. He suddenly felt like his thoughts were being manipulated by Ji Zai.

As he hesitated and prepared to ask something else, an eagle swooped down from the sky and dropped a scroll in front of him.

Li Huowang’s pupils trembled as he opened the scroll. Across the Great Liang's six divisions, the Dharma Sect was instigating numerous uprisings in large cities and small villages. The Dharma Sect had rebelled.

"God Yu'er is using his power to cause chaos! You're a Siming too. Stop talking nonsense and do something!" Li Huowang said, urging Ji Zai to help.

"I have. I influenced things."

"What exactly have you done?!"

"Early on, I sent people to hunt down the Dharma Sect. I also informed my Twisted One that the Dharma Sect's actions are a diversion. Their real target is Shangjing."

Li Huowang's pupils dilated in alarm. "What?! Their target is Gao Zhijian?"

He rushed to his horse. On the way, he quickly contacted Liu Zongyuan, urging him to relay the message to Shangjing.

As Li Huowang rode off, Ji Zai's wavering inverted image in the water remained and watched Li Huowang leave. Ji Zai looked a little dazed as if he had recalled something.

Soon after, Shangjing contacted Li Huowang.

A black-feathered crow with one leg stood on Li Huowang's horse and said, "Lord Er, His Majesty is aware and assures you that everything will be handled properly."

"Forget His Majesty. Does the Surveillance Bureau know?" Li Huowang asked the crow.

Gao Zhijian said that things would be handled properly, but Li Huowang was uncertain about this. After all, Gao Zhijian had only been emperor for less than half a year, and it was doubtful how much power he actually held in the court.

"They do. Both the Imperial Preceptor and the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau are aware. They will be on guard."

Li Huowang felt slightly relieved.

If the other party wanted to cause a diversion, the biggest fear would be falling into their trap. Since the enemy's plan was exposed, their scheme had already faced setbacks.

This was the first time Li Huowang had received help ever since becoming Ji Zai's Twisted One.

"Tell them to be vigilant. I'll head there myself to ensure everything is secure."

The crow replied, "No need, Lord Er. Please return. The Surveillance Bureau definitely won't allow a repeat of what happened last time."

"You know nothing. Get lost!"

Li Huowang waved the crow away and spurred his horse towards Shangjing.

After learning of the Dharma Sect's high-level plans from Ji Zai, Li Huowang decided he had to oversee the protection of Gao Zhijian himself. This was more important than dealing with the scattered remnants of the Dharma Sect.

He had to go even if it could be a wasted trip. The Great Liang couldn't end up like the Great Qi. The victims from the Great Qi could come over to the Great Liang, but there was nowhere those from the Great Liang could head to.

The one-legged crow circled overhead and repeated this message. "Lord Er, you really don't need to. Please return."

Li Huowang was lying on his ward bed as he shouted at the voice outside the window. "Enough! Get Lost!"

However, it didn't stop speaking.

"What is mental illness? Who defines it, and who gave them that right? I believe this label is wrong. Mental illness doesn't exist. It's a false label defined by external politics, economics, or culture! It's just a means to maintain the existing social order!"

Chapter 646 - Psychiatric Patient

Upon hearing the chatter outside the door, Li Huowang sprang up, angrily tearing off his blanket and striding towards the door.

As soon as he opened it, he saw two men in hospital gowns leaning against the wall and eating snacks while they debated about something.

One of them was tall, wore plastic-framed glasses, and had his hair swept back in a scholarly look. This man was the source of the nonsensical rambling that Li Huowang had heard from his room.

Li Huowang didn't care too much about it; he just felt that that newcomer's incessant chatter was very annoying.

Li Huowang snapped, "Get out of here! It's only seven in the morning. Why are you so noisy??"

"Hey! Young man, don't interrupt me! Do you know what I'm doing? I'm fighting for our special group's essential rights!" the bespectacled man replied.

Just as he was about to continue arguing, his companion noticed the handcuffs on Li Huowang's wrists and quickly pulled him away.

Although the people had left, Li Huowang was now wide awake. He sighed, went back inside, and put on his shoes.

Being a sane person enclosed together with these psychiatric patients was torture. He couldn't even vent his frustration on them without the doctors thinking he was having an episode, which would further delay his discharge.

Li Huowang had nothing else to do in his empty room, so he decided to head to the cafeteria for breakfast.

“Suisui, are you hungry?” he asked.

There were no surprises in the psychiatric hospital’s breakfast, just steamed buns and porridge.

Li Huowang took his tray to a corner and started to eat.

He pondered how much longer he had to stay there for before getting discharged. The man with mania has already been discharged. I should be the next in line.

Then, just as Li Huowang was about to resume eating his breakfast, he felt a chill run down his spine. He turned around to see Qian Fu, a schizophrenic patient looking at him from a distance.

Nevertheless, Qian Fu was just watching him, so Li Huowang ignored Qian Fu and continued eating.

Encounters like this were common in the psychiatric hospital, so Li Huowang just had to stay calm. With surveillance everywhere, he doubted Qian Fu would do anything extreme.

As for the conservation he had earlier, Li Huowang did not take them to heart. He could not be bothered with the ramblings of a stranger who was also a psychiatric patient.

After breakfast, it was time for the patients’ support group. Li Huowang doubted that this was effective in any way. If mutual encouragement could cure mental illnesses, medication would be unnecessary.

The plastic stool to Li Huowang’s left was empty, which didn’t surprise him since the guy who used to sit there had previously mentioned his imminent discharge. However, the schizophrenic Wang Wangsu’s stool was also empty, which puzzled Li Huowang.

“Where did Sister Wang go? Is she cured too?” he asked the depressed girl next to him.

Zhao Ting’s face looked pale as she shook her head. “No, she’s not cured. Her husband didn’t pay the bill, so she was discharged.”

“We shared a room and her condition was improving. But the doctor said the hospital isn’t a charity—there’s no treatment without money.”

Li Huowang sighed.

Outsiders thought psychiatric patients would eagerly escape if given the chance to. But in reality, those with some rationality knew they were sick and wanted to be cured. Some even checked in alone voluntarily without telling their families.

Only people who were completely out of control, like those in television series, needed to be forcibly admitted. Psychiatric patients were just like any other patients. The illness was just affecting a different part of their body. Most preferred to be fully cured before leaving, just like a normal person walking out of a hospital healthily.

Nonetheless, reality was cruel. Hospitals needed to make money too, especially private ones. Even if the doctors knew a patient's condition was not optimistic, the patient would be emotionlessly asked to leave.

This often led patients into a vicious cycle where they couldn't get better without money. They couldn't earn money while they were sick, so that would eventually lead to a downward spiral that worsened their condition. Then, they would transition into disabled people or lunatics.

Li Huowang did not want to add to the psychological burden of this depressed patient, so he comforted her. “Sister Wang's condition was mild. As long as she keeps taking her medication, she should stabilize. Don't worry about her.”

While they talked, Li Huowang noticed Wu Cheng bringing two new patients over. One was the bespectacled newcomer from earlier, and the other was an emaciated old man.

Wu Cheng greeted the group. “Good morning, everyone. We have two new members in our group today. This gentleman here is Yuan Heping, and this is Wang Gang. Let's give them a warm welcome.”

The applause was sparse. Li Huowang didn't bother joining in. Instead, he thought about how to pass the time.

When the two new members were seated, Li Huowang noticed the bespectacled man looking at him. When he looked up, the person quickly averted his gaze.

Wu Cheng said, "Alright, how about the two of you introduce yourselves?"

The session dragged on slowly, tormenting Li Huowang as time passed. After what seemed like an entire year, the long support group session finally came to an end.

Nothing in the session had helped Li Huowang. His only takeaway was a glimpse into the illnesses of these two newcomers. The old man had an obsessive-compulsive disorder, while the bespectacled man had schizophrenia, which was nothing strange there.

The other people stood up separately and left with their stools.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang let out a deep breath, relieved that the tedious morning was over. He then headed to the cafeteria for lunch.

On the way there, Gao Jingyun, the simple-minded man he had helped in the past, approached him.

"Brother, for you. It's nice," Gao Jingyun said, holding out the small steamed bun in his hand.

Just as Li Huowang was about to thank Gao Jingyun, a figure brushed past and whispered urgently to Li Huowang, "Be careful! They're coming! Danger is approaching us!"

The figure quickly vanished.

Li Huowang had only seen the back of that person's head, but he recognized that person as Qian Fu—the schizophrenic man who had been staring at him.

Li Huowang frowned and pondered briefly about what Qian Fu had said. Then, he shook his head and walked to the cafeteria.

Chapter 647 - Needle

The lunch served at Kangning Hospital's cafeteria was decent. There was one meat dish, one vegetable dish, and soup. It wasn't bad even though it was cooked in large portions instead of single serves.

However, Li Huowang was rather distracted while eating.

Just a moment ago, Qian Fu had approached him again with more nonsensical words.

Initially, Li Huowang thought Qian Fu was just approaching him on a whim, but now it seemed like Qian Fu was focused on him specifically.

Since Qian Fu was not giving up, Li Huowang had to think of how to get rid of this fellow.

They were under surveillance everywhere, so he definitely could not kill Qian Fu here. Giving Qian Fu a violent beating to deter him was not an option either.

As Li Huowang continuously pondered on this problem, he picked up some vegetables with his chopsticks and bit into them forcefully.

He felt a sudden sharp pain and tasted blood in his mouth, causing his muscles to tense up. He opened his mouth and placed his finger inside tremblingly. Amidst the pain, he quickly found several needles embedded in his tongue.

A nearby nurse noticed Li Huowang's distress and walked towards him.

The nurse asked, "Are you okay?"

Seeing Li Huowang pull needles from his mouth, the nurse's face turned pale with shock as he grasped the severity of the situation. He immediately shouted for the patients around to stop eating.

The discovery of needles in the food of the psychiatric hospital caused an uproar, and the entire hospital quickly descended into chaos. However, their inspection revealed that only Li Huowang's food was contaminated.

Such a serious safety breach couldn't be ignored. The hospital director and a team began to review the surveillance footage, while all patients were sent back to their rooms.

In his room, Li Huowang considered the suspicious aspects of the incident. He was more concerned about the meaning of this act than the pain, which was secondary.

Who did this? I haven't offended anyone here. Could it be... Li Huowang thought, recalling the cryptic warnings Qian Fu had given him.

At that moment, Wu Cheng entered Li Huowang's room alone. "How are you? This was clearly our hospital's fault. We will waive part of your hospital fees to express our apologies.

"Also, since you are an adult, can we refrain from informing your mother about this small incident?"

"Wait, does that mean you guys found the culprit?" Li Huowang asked in surprise.

"Yes, we did. The culprit's method wasn't very sophisticated. Here is the cafeteria's surveillance footage."

Wu Cheng placed his phone before Li Huowang and softly tapped it to play the video on the screen. Li Huowang quickly found out who had placed needles in his dish.

"Qian Fu? It's actually him?!"

"Yes," Wu Cheng said, confirming Qian Fu as the culprit. He then put his phone away. "From the surveillance footage, I noticed that he's been approaching you frequently lately. Have you had any conflicts with him?"

"What conflicts would I have with him!? Where is he now? I need to confront him!”

Li Huowang was genuinely angry. Qian Fu has gone too far. He actually fed me needles to try to make me believe his crazy talk.

There were no Leotians[1] that were a threat to me. In the entire psychiatric hospital, it was likely Qian Fu's the biggest threat to me!

“Come on, Little Li. We need your help. Ask Qian Fu where he got those needles. Such items shouldn't have been brought into the hospital.”

Li Huowang was brought to the intensive restraint unit, where Qian Fu was bound in a straitjacket.

Li Huowang stepped on the soft floor and looked coldly at Qian Fu's excited face. “Why did you do this? How did I offend you?”

Qian Fu shouted, “No! I wasn't trying to hurt you! It's them! The Leotians!”

An orderly replied sternly, “The surveillance footage clearly shows you doing it! Now, tell us where you got those needles!”

Qian Fu ignored the orderly and stared intensely at Li Huowang. “Don't believe them! The footage was altered! Their technology is advanced, so they can edit it! It wasn't me, really!

“Do you know why they're doing this? They want to sow discord among us! They want us to kill each other so they can pick us off one by one! They've infiltrated us like the lizard people!”

Li Huowang felt insane for trying to get a lunatic to speak logically.

“Forget it. Just keep him restrained. Don't let him out to harm anyone else,” Li Huowang said to Wu Cheng and turned to leave.

Qian Fu called out desperately, “Little Li, do you understand? Only you can understand me! The Leo aliens are here! Danger is imminent! Hiding won't solve anything! We must strike first!”

Li Huowang ignored Qian Fu and headed back to his room. Since Qian Fu was now restrained, Li Huowang hoped for some peace.

He did not want anything else to happen; he just wanted to be discharged without complications. That way, he could leave with the status of a normal person.

As Li Huowang had been unable to have his meal, Wu Cheng arranged a roast duck takeaway for Li Huowang, in what seemed like an attempt to placate him.

Li Huowang grabbed a few green onion and cucumber strips and dipped them in the sweet sauce. Then he spread them on the bun and covered the bun with a few slices of the roast duck. Finally, he rolled it all up and took a big bite.

The taste was a welcome change from the usual hospital fare.

While Li Huowang was enjoying the meal alone, he suddenly felt someone watching him. He looked up sharply to find no one.

Li Huowang frowned. Is someone spying on me?

After a few minutes, two people carefully peeked through the window. However, Li Huowang was sitting by that window and noticed them straight away.

They jumped in fright and quickly backed away.

Li Huowang recognized the two people as the newcomers. They were the bespectacled Wang Gang and the old man Yuan Heping!

Seeing Li Huowang look at them unkindly, Wang Gang muttered indignantly to the older guy, "This is ridiculous. Why does he get roast duck?"

"Come on, don't make trouble. Maybe he has connections with the hospital."

"Unbelievable, using connections in a psychiatric hospital to get special treatment."

Chapter 648 - Discharge

The commotion at Kangning Hospital soon subsided. Qian Fu was locked up, and Li Huowang didn't find any needles in his food again. This pretty much confirmed that Qian Fu was the one who had put them there.

Life in the psychiatric hospital consisted of eating meals, taking medication, watching TV, support groups, therapy, outdoor time, and sleeping. Two months passed in the blink of an eye. Aside from feeling bored sometimes, everything was normal for Li Huowang.

During this time, his mother and Yang Na visited him, and they were both delighted to learn that he hadn't had any more episodes.

One morning, Li Huowang was sitting in his room as he waited for his cup noodles to soften. The psychiatric hospital didn't provide braised beef cup noodles, but Yang Na had brought a carton of them on her following visit after Li Huowang mentioned he wanted to eat them.

Li Huowang waited three minutes for the noodles to cook. Just as he was about to open the lid, a familiar face appeared at the door.

"Yi Donglai, you're finally here," Li Huowang said.

"I have a lot of things to deal with. I'm your former attending physician, not your nanny. Besides, I keep in touch with Junior Wu, so I'm regularly updated on your condition," Yi Donglai replied.

"Looks like you're recovering well."

He sat on the bed and watched Li Huowang eat his noodles with a folding fork.

Li Huowang sipped some soup before saying, "I'm alright. I've been here for three months now and have gotten used to things."

"You sounded rather anxious on the phone before. How about now? Are you not anxious anymore?”

Li Huowang swallowed his noodles and pondered for a moment. Then he said with some hesitation, “Those memories are becoming blurry as time goes by. I’m not sure if those were delusions or real events.”

He had clearly done those things, but they hadn’t happened in reality. The only possible explanation seemed to be that the problem lay within himself.

Yet, Li Huowang knew he wasn’t ill.

Yi Donglai nodded approvingly. “Since you started the new medication, have those incidents occurred again?”

“No.”

Li Huowang continued to eat his noodles.

Since it had only happened once, Li Huowang decided to monitor the situation first. If it never happened again, he would consider it a bizarre dream.

At that moment, Wu Cheng walked in and whispered something to Yi Donglai. Then, they both stepped outside for a detailed conversation.

They talked for half an hour and made several phone calls.

When Yi Donglai returned, he held out a tablet to Li Huowang. “Here, Huowang. Please complete these questions.”

“Questions?”

Li Huowang took the tablet and saw multiple-choice questions.

[I always insist that others follow my ideas and get very angry when they don't.

Yes? No?

I never trust others to handle things and prefer to do them myself.

Yes? No?

I am often troubled by intrusive thoughts.

Yes? No?]

After reading through the questions, Li Huowang looked at Yi

Donglai and asked excitedly, “Is this the Minnesota Personality Inventory? Or SCL-90[1]? Does this mean I can be discharged if all the results are normal?”

Yi Donglai was surprised. “You know quite a bit about this. Just complete it first. It’s just the first test.”

Li Huowang gathered his focus and began to answer the questions seriously. His fingers even trembled slightly in anticipation. He was finally going to be discharged!

Once Li Huowang was done with the questions, the hospital staff conducted various tests on him. They even hooked him up to a few machines to have his brain activity monitored for any abnormalities.

After all the procedures, they asked Li Huowang to wait in his room. The wait felt extraordinarily long, and Li Huowang finally understood how slowly time could crawl.

Finally, when Wu Cheng came to remove Li Huowang’s restraints, Li Huowang was so overwhelmed that he almost cried. He was really going to be discharged.

As soon as the restraints were removed, Wu Cheng locked a black device that resembled an electronic watch around his left ankle.

“What’s this?” Li Huowang asked, feeling a little less happy.

Yi Donglai said, “Given your past actions, you’re lucky to only have electronic monitoring for a year.”

“Will this thing constantly track my location?”

“This device not only tracks your location but also restricts you. It’s fully connected to the internet and meant to keep you at least 500 meters away from all schools—be it a kindergarten, elementary school, junior high, or high school,” Yi Donglai explained. “If you stay near one of those for more than five seconds, it will alert the nearest station. No doctor’s clearance can change that.”

He continued, "This device can't be removed. If it's damaged or doesn't detect your pulse, it will trigger an alarm. After you go home, don't wander around. Technically, you still need two months of home treatment to stabilize your condition."

Li Huowang nodded in understanding. It seemed like all these restrictions were because of his past actions.

He would still face restrictions after being discharged, but he didn't mind them as long as he could leave with the identity of a normal person.

"Li Huowang, remember to take your medication regularly after your discharge. You mustn't stop taking it. You can go now. Your parents are waiting for you in the hall," Yi Donglai said.

"Yang Na didn't come?"

"We only notify immediate family for patient discharges. Hurry up, they're already here."

Li Huowang was accompanied by Yi Donglai and Wu Cheng. He changed out of his blue and white patient clothing into normal clothes.

Sun Xiaoqin wept with joy upon seeing Li Huowang in regular clothes for the first time in a very long time.

Beside her, Li Jiancheng was carrying Li Huowang's belongings. He struggled to control his emotions, as his trembling hands betrayed his inner turmoil.

Overcome with gratitude, Sun Xiaoqin tried to kneel before Yi Donglai, but Yi Donglai and Wu Cheng quickly stopped her.

"Ms. Sun, there's no need for this. Please stand up. I simply did my duty by helping your son," Yi Donglai said.

After the hectic discharge process, Li Huowang finally left the hospital.

He stepped outside and looked up at the sky. Li Huowang appreciated the beauty of the white clouds and the freshness of the air like never before.

Chapter 649 - Return

Li Huowang hadn't felt much before he stepped out of the hospital. However, the moment he walked outside, a belated sense of joy suddenly spread from within and washed over him.

He was free; he was no longer a psychiatric patient. He could go back to school and live a normal life!

Sun Xiaoqin said, "Come on, let's ride home. Your dad brought his old taxi just to pick you up."

Once in the car, the first thing Li Huowang did was take his mother's phone from her bag and log into his WeChat[1] account.

Then he hesitated for a moment as he held the phone with the cracked screen, seemingly lost in thought. Eventually, he opened the chat with the familiar rabbit avatar. He typed words and then deleted them, repeating this loop for half an hour.

Li Huowang looked at the hundreds of words he'd typed out and hovered his thumb over the send button for a long time before ultimately deleting all of them.

I want to surprise Yang Na. Telling her over WeChat won't do. I'll wait for her outside her school!

As he imagined the scene, his gaze fell on the "smartwatch" on his ankle.

I'll wait for her 500 meters from the school gate!

Li Huowang had made up his mind.

He rolled down the car window, and a smile gradually spread across his face as he looked at the unfamiliar scenery outside. He felt incredibly happy, happier than he had been in years.

As they passed an intersection, a fruit vendor on the roadside stared at Li Huowang, and Li Huowang waved gently at him.

Throughout the long journey from Kangning Hospital back to his home, Li Huowang never stopped smiling.

It felt surreal to finally see the gate of his neighborhood again.
“Shangjing, I’m finally back.”

Li Huowang looked up at the imposing city walls, took a deep breath, and pulled on the reins.

Once inside, he slowed the horse’s pace and silently observed everything within the city. He was relieved to see that the bustling crowds and everyday life remained the same.

There was a bridal procession with music and fanfare nearby. It proved that people were still going through life events, celebrating as well as mourning.

Though the Dharma Sect caused great turmoil outside, it seemed it hadn’t affected the imperial city.

Li Huowang circled the inner and outer cities of Shangjing, finding no traces of the Dharma Sect. Then, he finally galloped towards the imperial palace.

Around ten meters from the palace, he felt a numbness between his brows and a sharp tingling sensation all over his body. He pulled on the reins sharply, causing the black horse beneath him to rear up before stopping.

Li Huowang realized that the palace guards might have attacked him if he had charged straight in.

“What’s going on!? It’s me! Have I been gone for so long you don’t recognize me?” Li Huowang shouted at the palace guards.

The guards, both inside and outside the walls, remained silent like statues.

“What kind of game are you guys playing!?”

As Li Huowang pondered how to bypass these brutes, an old eunuch wearing a purple robe and white shoes glided out from a side gate.

The eunuch said, “Lord Li, the emperor has summoned you to see him in the palace.”

Li Huowang was rather irritated as he dismounted. He was about to follow the eunuch when he glanced back at the bustling street, as if searching for something.

“Lord Li? What’s the matter?” the eunuch asked.

The eunuch’s voice caused Li Huowang to turn back. “Nothing, let’s go.”

Li Huowang had been to the imperial palace many times and had nothing more to say. He quickened his pace and followed the eunuch to see Gao Zhijian.

As Li Huowang walked, he could feel numerous gazes on him, from both obvious and hidden sources. It appeared that the security had been heightened since his last visit, perhaps due to the aftermath of Shai Zi’s incident.

“Imperial Preceptor, long time no see,” Li Huowang shouted to an old man inside the imperial palace.

Huangfu Tiangang did not say anything. He just stood there with hands behind his back and stared silently at Li Huowang.

“Father, he doesn’t look happy,” Li Sui said from behind Li Huowang.

“Ignore him. He’s never happy,” Li Huowang replied, holding onto Li Sui’s tentacle while they walked.

In the imperial bedchamber, Li Huowang was startled by Gao Zhijian’s appearance.

Gao Zhijian used to be a burly man who had been as sturdy as a wall. But now, he looked frail and pale, as though he was on the verge of death.

“What happened to you? Did the Dharma Sect send assassins to ambush you? Are you hurt?” Li Huowang asked.

Gao Zhijian waved off Li Huowang’s concern. “It’s nothing. Being emperor isn’t easy.”

Unlike before, Gao Zhijian spoke more fluently. He had made significant progress in overcoming his stutter.

“What’s going on? Give me more details. You’re the emperor now; you can’t afford any mishaps.”

Gao Zhijian’s face flushed with embarrassment, seemingly finding it difficult to speak. Eventually, he approached Li Huowang and whispered into his ear.

“Three a day? That many?” Li Huowang uttered in surprise.

With a sigh, Gao Zhijian pulled Li Huowang to the front of the hall and sat on the jade-white stairs.

“Senior Li, I’m going to be a father. Sixteen concubines are pregnant.”

After finding out that Gao Zhijian was fine, Li Huowang let out a sigh of relief. “Then that means there’s an heir to the Dragon Vein. You can rest a bit; you don’t need to overexert yourself.”

He had made it in time to prevent any threats the Dharma Sect would pose to Gao Zhijian.

“Senior Li, how is Cowheart Village? Is everyone alright?” Gao Zhijian asked wistfully.

“Everyone is fine. Thanks to your generous gifts, the village is now very wealthy.”

“That’s good to hear. Sometimes, I dream of returning to the village,” Gao Zhijian said as he stared at the empty courtyard.

“It’s not possible now, with the Dharma Sect causing so much trouble,” Li Huowang stated seriously. “Did you get my message from before?”

A voice came from behind. “Of course, but don’t worry. The Surveillance Bureau will protect the emperor from those with ill intentions.”

Li Huowang turned to see Xuan Pin, the towering Chief of the Surveillance Bureau, behind them.

Chapter 650 - Smoke Signals Rising

Li Huowang stared at the figure in the red robes. “Xuan Pin? Why are you here?”

Xuan Pin’s robes fluttered as he walked towards the two. “With the world in chaos, we need the combined strength of the Surveillance Bureau to get through these difficult times. As the Chief, why shouldn’t I be in the palace?”

Li Huowang scrutinized him for a moment and then turned back to Gao Zhijian. “The Dharma Sect is likely to make a move soon. I’m worried, so I came to check things out.”

Li Huowang suggested, “How about this? I’ll stay in the palace to protect you more closely.”

Before Gao Zhijian could respond, Xuan Pin interjected. “No.”

“I wasn’t asking you.”

“We’ve received your information. Rest assured. The Imperial Preceptor, the military, and the Surveillance Bureau protect the emperor's safety. You can leave.”

Li Huowang slapped his knees and stood up. He angrily said to Xuan Pin, “What are you worried about? I’m Ji Zai’s Twisted One. You learned your illusion techniques from him. Who exactly are you guarding against?”

The gazes he received when he entered the palace, the attention from the Imperial Preceptor, and the Chief’s sudden appearance all made Li Huowang realize they didn't trust him.

Li Huowang exclaimed, “If it weren’t for me, Shai Zi would have seized the Dragon Vein long ago! If I had ulterior motives, why would I have saved it? I could have just watched it all happen!

“And now you’re guarding against me? What does this mean? Aren’t you Ji Zai’s follower? Didn’t he say he’s hunting down the Dharma Sect? Doesn’t that include you?”

“First,” Xuan Pin said, pausing briefly. Then he continued, “I’ve confirmed that if it weren’t for you, Shai Zi wouldn’t have nearly seized the Dragon Vein. Saving it was the least you could do to offset your demerits.

“Secondly, my knowledge comes from enlightenment. I know someone named Ji Zai, and that person is you.”

Li Huowang almost laughed. “Xuan Pin, are you pretending to be confused, or do you genuinely not understand?

“In front of you, I used my ‘Truth’ cultivation method to conjure the Siming that controls bewilderment. Don’t tell me you didn’t see that!”

Xuan Pin said nothing. Instead, a strange gaze shot out at Li Huowang from beneath his robe.

What’s going on? Does he really not know? Is he deceiving me, or has the past changed again? Li Huowang thought.

Li Huowang was taken aback, and he looked up at the sky.

The Chief began to drift away, but Li Huowang grabbed him.

Li Huowang called out, “Wait, I need to confront Ji Zai with you! We need to clear this up.”

Both Li Huowang and Xuan Pin looked up at the sky beyond the layers of roof tiles.

As though startled, a flock of birds suddenly soared from the imperial gardens and circled in the air.

“Something seems wrong,” Li Huowang muttered.

His heart sank. He didn’t know what was happening, but he instinctively felt that the world was changing.

Xuan Pin’s six slender fingers emerged from his red robe as he pinched them together and began to calculate.

After a few breaths, he lowered his hand.

A deep voice then emanated from within Xuan Pin's robe. "A Natural Disaster."

"Natural Disaster? The sky is clear. What Natural Disaster?" Li Huowang said.

His eyes widened. He knew disasters weren't limited to just Sun-Devouring Heavenly Dogs.

At that moment, three black smoke columns rose swiftly in the sky to the east.

"What does that mean?" Li Huowang shouted as he pointed at the smoke.

"Enemy at the gates."

"What enemies?"

Three more black smoke columns rose from the south, west, and north.

Xuan Pin answered, "That's not from outside the city; it's inside. Someone has infiltrated the city."

Li Huowang forgot about questioning Xuan Pin and sprang into action. "I'll check it out. You and the Imperial Preceptor protect Gao Zhijian! Li Sui, let's go!"

Li Huowang widened his mouth and swallowed Li Sui. Two of her tentacles emerged from Li Huowang. Li Sui quickly drew talismans on yellow paper with his blood and slapped them onto Li Huowang's knees.

The moment the talismans were plastered to Li Huowang's knees, he became a blur as he dashed towards the palace gates like the wind.

Meanwhile, in Shangjing, Lu Juren held his daughter Xiu'er and walked into the inner courtyard through the back of the theater house. He carried a box of pastries wrapped in oil paper.

He entered the second door and saw his wife lounging on a chair. She was listening to the show being performed on the stage as she gently tapped her long nails.

Two young maids massaged her legs and shoulders beside her. Few people in Shangjing could enjoy such luxury.

Lu Juren said, “Juan’er, you should move around. You’ve gained weight since coming to Shangjing.”

“So what if I’m fat? Only the wealthy can afford to be fat,” Luo Juanhua retorted as she opened her eyes.

When she saw the pastries in Lu Juren’s hands, she asked with surprise, “Juren, what’s that?”

Embarrassed, Lu Juren dismissed the maids and sheepishly placed the pastries on Luo Juanhua’s slightly bulging belly.

Luo Juanhua was a little confused. Nevertheless, she opened the box and found the long, white cakes within.

Her face lit up with joy. “Wick cakes[1]!”

Luo Juanhua picked up two of them and placed them in her mouth, savoring their flavor.

She said, “Delicious, I haven’t seen these since we left Si Qi! You specially bought these for me?”

Lu Juren scratched his head. “I didn’t plan to. A new pastry shop run by a refugee from Si Qi opened in the market. I just saw them and bought some.”

Sweetness permeated Luo Juanhua’s mouth and heart. She knew that these things were not easily found in the Great Liang.

Back then, they couldn’t afford such treats, except for their wedding when they had scraped together six taels for them. She had eaten them all then.

Luo Juanhua had not expected her husband to remember that after all these years.

Lu Juren told his wife, “About the harsh words I said on the road, don’t take them to heart.”

Luo Juanhua tried to cover her laughter when she saw her husband’s embarrassed expression and recalled the young man who would blush as red as a monkey’s bottom.

Lu Juren blushed. “What’s so funny?”

He set his daughter down and headed towards the theater house.

This is the first time I've seen Wick Cakes. I should try them one day.

Chapter 651 - Theatre

“Alright, alright. I won’t laugh at you anymore. Don’t leave me, my dear.”

Lu Juren sat back down with Luo Juanhua pulling onto his sleeves.

It was a bit cramped with two people lying in a single chair, but they didn’t mind it.

“Husband, I never regretted marrying you. You might be a wimp at times, but you are very kind.”

Lu Juren said nothing as his wife opened up to him.

“If anyone else got rich, they would’ve immediately gone and gotten themselves a mistress, but you are different. When I first gave birth to Xiu’er, I remember how your father had been very upset since she was a girl, but I also remember how happy you looked. You looked just like a monkey dancing in joy.”

She suddenly remembered something when she said that. She lifted her head and revealed a sly expression.

“Hey, did he say that he would hand down the theater to you after his death? Maybe there’s some paper or document that details that.”

Lu Juren coughed out of surprise and turned around. “Why are you bringing my father into the equation?”

“Tsk. You have to be very careful with matters like these. Your brother might look careless and stupid on the outside, but he’s actually quite calculative. I just don’t want others to take advantage of your kindness.”

Lu Juren sat up and was confused.

Luo Juanhua thought he didn’t understand her and explained, “Wait, stop running away every time I’m trying to talk to you about these things. Do you expect us to go beg for food when we are old if we don't have the theater?"

Lu Juren replied, "No, it's not about that. Listen, why did they stop performing?"

Luo Juanhua craned her neck and was confused by what she heard too. Rather than hearing the sound of a performance, she heard what seemed to be a commotion instead.

She asked, "What's going on? Is there trouble with the performers?"

"Take Xiu'er and don't leave this place. Let me go and take a look," Lu Juren said.

Lu Juren walked towards the door. Just as he placed his hand on the wooden door, someone kicked the entire door open. A group of people charged into the room. Some of them had a white cloth wrapped around their head, while others had black cloth wrapped over their shoulders.

The first person to enter the room was a beggar with sores on his face. Lu Zhuangyuan had seen him at the entrance of the market.

The beggar swung the cleaver and slashed at Lu Juren's chest, laughing happily when he heard Lu Juren's painful cries.

"To think that you know how to feel pain! You, who were born in opulence?! Do you know how painful being hungry was? Do you know what true suffering is? Do you know how it feels to be humiliated by others? If the Heavens were unjust towards us, then we shall change the Heavens today! I shall let you feel what being poor feels like!"

Lu Juren endured the pain and pushed the old beggar away. His usual cowardly self was gone.

He looked at the group of people and immediately shouted at Luo Juanhua, "Juan'er! Run!"

Lu Juren tried to block the people but was hit in the head by a hammer.

Iron was harder than bone. Lu Juren didn't stand a chance.

His head immediately caved in, and he slumped onto the ground.

"Junren!" Luo Juanhua shouted in despair and rushed over to Lu Juren's corpse. She completely ignored the people from the Dharma Sect.

One of the old ladies ran out from the group and stabbed Luo Juanhua's neck with a pair of scissors.

The old lady's eyes were filled with hatred as she spat, "How dare you enjoy your wealth while others suffer?! We are all women, so why are you in bliss while I have to suffer?!"

Luo Juanhua's eyes glazed over as she died. The old lady then carried her bloodied scissors as she walked towards the crying Xiu'er.

She almost killed Xiu'er, but the old beggar pushed her away. He carried Xiu'er in his arms.

The old beggar exclaimed, "What are you doing?! The child is still young! Are you crazy?! How could you try to kill such a young child?!"

"Get lost!"

"No!"

As they were bickering, the others started rummaging around the rooms.

The two of them saw what the others were doing and immediately stopped. They quickly rummaged around too for fear that the others would take all of the valuables.

But it wasn't long before the group left the place with frustration. There weren't a lot of valuables in the theater.

"I know where their house is! Follow me!" someone shouted.

Hearing this, everyone followed the person who had spoken.

One of the gangsters with tattoos on his arms even threw a torch and burned down the theater.

The old beggar was carrying Xiu'er as he tailed the group. He wasn't physically fit to begin with, and he was even slower now since he was carrying Xiu'er.

He wanted to place Xiu'er down, but he decided against it when he saw how chaotic everything around him was.

Just then, he heard someone shouting from the front.

"Monster!"

"He's a monster!"

"Don't be scared! God Yu'er is strong! We are not afraid of monsters! Go!! Kill him!"

Before the beggar could figure out what was happening, he saw the people in front exploding into a mist of blood.

All of them were cut down like grass in a field.

He finally saw what the monster was.

It was a Daoist wearing red robes with black tentacles sprouting out of his body. He wore a bronze coin veil and had only one remaining eye, which, curiously, had two pupils. Each of the tentacles was holding a weapon. It was no wonder others called him a monster.

The old beggar couldn't do anything but raise his cleaver. He put the child down so that he could kill the monster, but just as he placed Xiu'er onto the ground, the old beggar split apart.

Li Huowang suddenly realized the crying child in the pool of blood was Xiu'er. He never thought this was how he would meet the Lu family again.

Xiu'er was crying as she pulled on Li Huowang's sleeve and pointed at the theater. Li Huowang held her with one tentacle and immediately rushed towards the theater.

Soon, he saw the signage of the theater belonging to the Lu family.

The sign that had been wrapped in gold and silver was now enveloped by flames.

Staring at the collapsing building, Li Huowang steeled himself and ran into the burning theater.

The stage itself was burning too. An old man was standing on the collapsing stage. He was crying and laughing hysterically as he loudly sang lines from the show.

Beside him were the corpses of his son and daughter-in-law.

“The bright moon rises early to the east as I think of my mother back at home! Accompanying you, I feel like a sheep accompanying a tiger! While I have fulfilled my loyalty to you, I have failed to be filial to my family! As the star shifts and the Big Dipper soars through the Heavens, I sit restlessly without being able to sleep as the second section of the night passes.

“I have never let the people of Gu County down, so why am I being summoned with the gold medallion? I listen to the bell tolling on the tower signaling the third section of the night, while my eyes dared not shift from the sight of the moon illuminating the hall.”

The deaths of his son and daughter-in-law had driven Lu Zhuangyuan mad.

1. A song that expresses the conflict of trying to balance being loyal to one's superior and being filial to their family. Gold medallion refers to the message of the highest urgency, meaning that any message with the gold medallion would be delivered the fastest. A famous story involving it is how General Yue Fei was recalled by the emperor with twelve golden medallions. 🙌

Chapter 652 - Death

The Lu family's theater was made of wood, so it burned down easily.

The red flames burned everything inside the theater. The smell of charred wood continued to assault Li Huowang's nose.

But the crazed Lu Zhuangyuan ignored everything around him as he stood on the stage and sang as loud as he could. He was performing one last time with his son and daughter-in-law.

Li Huowang burned the scene into his mind as his heart felt a pang of pain.

"Hahaha! Good! They died a good death!" Qiu Chibao laughed from Li Huowang's left.

She was holding the decaying corpse of her child. As if triggered by something, she stared at the corpses in the fire as she danced around happily.

"Uuuuuu..."

Someone was crying on Li Huowang's left. He turned and saw it was Jin Shanzhao[1] groveling on the ground and crying.

Just as the old monk started to chant, Li Huowang walked over and saved Lu Zhuangyuan.

He barely made it out of the building with Lu Zhuangyuan just before the entire theater collapsed. Li Huowang watched as Lu Juren's and Luo Juanhua's corpses were engulfed by the fire.

He wasn't close with the Lu family, and even though he knew they were using him as an escort throughout their journey, he chose not to reveal their plan and played along with it.

Still, he felt his heart hurt when he saw what had happened.

"Troupe Leader Lu! Snap out of it! Your granddaughter is alive! Don't give up!"

Li Huowang brought Lu Zhuangyuan and Xiu'er towards where the palace was. The entire Liang Kingdom was in chaos, and the only safe place was the palace.

The palace also came to life due to the invasion of the Dharma Sect.

The red palace walls were surrounded by six layers of soldiers, three on the outside and three on the inside. The security in the palace had increased substantially.

“Look after them!” Li Huowang pushed Lu Zhuangyuan and Xiu'er to the soldiers. “I will kill you if they are harmed when I come back!”

Peng Longteng appeared behind Li Huowang after he warned the soldiers. She grabbed one of Li Huowang's tentacles and threw him high up into the air.

As the wind soared past his head, he looked at the Liang Kingdom from above and saw the entire city was in chaos.

The Dharma Sect surged in from the outside like ants.

There were various battlefields forming inside the city as the Dharma Sect poured into the city.

The Dharma Sect people were chanting incomprehensible words as they released all of their resentment towards the people of the Liang Kingdom.

Thankfully, the city guards and the Surveillance Bureau were already moving in full force. They fought at different corners of the city as explosions and flames engulfed the city.

Li Huowang knew about how dangerous the Dharma Sect was. If they were given free rein, the entire world would be destroyed.

In his heart, he had always thought of defeating the Dharma Sect as an act to defend himself and his family. He didn't have a grudge against them—it was just something he had to do to protect himself and the people he cared about.

But now everything has changed. Hatred and anger filled his heart when he looked at the Dharma Sect.

The Dharma Sect would not only destroy the world, but it would also cause suffering to the innocent!

Whatever god Yu'er was, it was spreading suffering and pain to everyone!

Li Huowang hated it. He knew what it felt like to go through such suffering. He would rather bear the brunt of it all alone if it meant the others would be at peace.

“Ji Zai! Do something! The Dharma Sect is attacking the city! Are you fucking blind?! So many people are dead!”

Li Huowang was soaring in the air as he shouted towards the sun. Upon getting no response, he gritted his teeth with resentment.

He could only rely on himself now.

Peng Longteng appeared beside him and threw him towards the most chaotic battlefield in the city.

Li Huowang sank into the earth as if it was water, then he swam upwards. He wielded all sorts of weapons as he charged into the mass of the Dharma Sect.

Li Huowang unleashed all of his rage on them. He feared that he would go crazy if he did not do so.

An explosion of blood happened everywhere he went. The usual Dharma Sect fodder were not his match, nor were the witches hidden in the darkness.

Li Huowang was undefeatable as he killed everything in his path, leaving nothing but blood and gore in his wake.

He had a single thought in his mind: killing the members of the Dharma Sect.

The more surviving Dharma Sect members there were, the more tragedies like the Lu family would occur.

When Li Huowang's body was completely coated in blood, the murderous aura on his baleful purple-tassel sword solidified and released a dragon's roar. The sword came alive and started pulsing waves of hot energy into Li Huowang's body. He suddenly felt invigorated.

Li Huowang swung the sword and a blood-red sword energy flew forward before bisecting both people and houses.

He realized that he had been suppressing the true potential of the purple-tassel sword. He killed too little in the past!

Li Huowang held onto the sword as he killed the Dharma Sect fodders. He slaughtered from morning to midnight until even his eyes were covered in a dense veil of blood.

He finally stopped when all of the Dharma Sect members around him were dead. By then, Li Sui was already dragging her tentacles on the ground out of exhaustion.

The city became quiet. The people from the Surveillance Bureau stood on the roof like vultures as they looked around.

Each of them was enveloped in bloodlust and a murderous aura as they searched for the next Dharma Sect member to kill.

Li Huowang looked at his own body. He saw his robes were drenched in blood and gore.

Staring at the corpses lying around him, Li Huowang knew his side had won, but he felt no joy. Only exhaustion awaited him.

“Father, I’m hungry. Can I eat some of your flesh?”

Li Huowang nodded and sat on a stool. “Sure, eat some.”

“Thank you, Father.”

“Ji Zai,” Li Huowang called towards his shadow, but there was no reply.

He then looked at the palace. Xuan Pin, Zheng Boqiao, and the Imperial Preceptor didn’t appear.

It seems that they are protecting the Emperor. Gao Zhijian should be safe.

Why are they doing this?

Li Huowang stared at the corpses of the Dharma Sect members.

Even though the battle was intense, the only casualties on Li

Huowang's side were the civilians. No one from the royal family, military, or the Surveillance Bureau was killed.

It was as if the Dharma Sect was committing suicide instead.

1. Jin Shanzhao was a character that briefly traveled with Li Huowang and his companions. He was introduced in chapter 189 and was killed by Peng Longteng in chapter 208, becoming one of Li Huowang's illusions 🤞

Chapter 653 - Disappearance

The imperial family was not the only faction in Shangjing; the Surveillance Bureau was a significant force too.

The city was in ruins. Even though it appeared that many had died, the majority of the casualties were from the Dharma Sect.

The hidden danger within Shangjing had been completely removed thanks to today's incident. As horrific as it was, at least the Dharma Sect from the Liang Kingdom wouldn't be able to make any major moves in the near future.

Still, no matter how much he thought, Li Huowang couldn't figure out what the Dharma Sect's end goal was.

Wait, I thought there was a Natural Disaster? What happened to it? Which Heavenly Dao changed owners? I don't feel anything strange, Li Huowang remarked inwardly.

While thinking about that, he suddenly heard a faint rumbling. He looked up and saw a piece of green brick fall from the top of the wall. Then, more and more started falling down.

Before he could react, the city wall exploded. A massive stone statue with a tiger's head squeezed in from the hole in the wall. As it did, it smashed the ground with its paws. Yellow smoke erupted outwards from the impact.

Everything that came into contact with the yellow smoke turned into stone. Living humans, burning fire, and even black smoke all turned into stone without exception.

Just as the yellow smoke was about to engulf the entirety of Shangjing, a mysterious sound came from the palace. As the sound spread outwards, the yellow smoke suddenly stopped its advance. It was as if a barrier had contained it, but the yellow smoke continued to build up inside.

When Li Huowang thought that the Surveillance Bureau's method was containing the threat, he suddenly heard a different sound. This time, it came from inside the yellow smoke. The sound of footsteps marching in unison filled the air as rows of stone soldiers emerged from within the smoke.

The soldiers held stone spears and wore stone armor. The yellow smoke and the stone soldiers reminded Li Huowang of something familiar.

Hm?! Isn't that the Terracotta Army?!

A war chariot emerged from the smoke, and one of the stone soldiers standing on it raised its right arm. The stone soldiers charged forward in unison the moment the command was given.

You Zixiong was the first one to attack the stone army. He leaped up in the air and threw four modaos[1] towards the stone soldiers. The four modaos pierced the stone soldiers without any difficulties. You Zixiong then swung his chain around and a large swathe of the stone soldiers were cut in half.

But no matter how many he cut down, an endless tide of stone soldiers kept marching out from the yellow smoke.

The primary threat was the tiger-like stone statue. If it was not taken down, the stone army would never stop marching out!

Li Huowang stood up and shook his throbbing head. Peng Longteng appeared and threw him towards the statue.

Once Li Huowang got close, he swung his spine sword.

A crack to the Qi Kingdom flew towards the statue, but something unexpected happened just as Li Huowang thought the statue's head would be cut in half.

A metallic fluid sprayed out from the crack!

What's happening?! What's happening to the Qi Kingdom?

Li Huowang had never seen this happen before. Something had happened to the Qi Kingdom again!

However, Li Huowang was too busy dealing with the current situation and couldn't afford to think about it.

The black metallic liquid sprayed onto the stone statue. Flowers sprouted at every spot the liquid touched.

But the flowers looked wrong. Rather than having a single color, their color shifted like a rainbow on an oil slick. And as the color was changing, the flowers were rotting. The sight of the rotting flowers and their shimmering colors nauseated everyone who witnessed it.

Now that the statue was covered in those flowers, it looked even more horrifying.

“Retreat!” Li Huowang shouted.

Peng Longteng reappeared and threw Li Huowang backwards.

But Li Huowang refused to give up. He swung his purple-tassel sword, sending a beam of sword energy towards the stone statue. The murderous sword Qi crashed into the stone statue without any incident.

The shimmering flowers were cut and the liquid flowed down their stems.

The statue suddenly moved. As it did, more flowers continued to grow on its surface.

Just then, Si Qi's Chief Zheng Boqiao flew down from the sky.

He hovered midair and made a seal, then spat towards the statue. White smoke spilled forth from his mouth and covered the statue's head.

The Imperial Preceptor was also rushing over with his sword. Li Huowang knew this was a good chance so he quickly rushed towards the statue too.

“The Supreme Pure Jade King rules over the Thirty-Six Heavens and Universe. He manifests from all ten directions with his hair unbound as he rides the Qilin! He threads on a layer of ice with his bare feet as he commands the winds and thunder with his Nine Heavens Whip!”

Purple lightning struck the statue again and again.

Despite this, the statue was still moving. It was as if the attacks barely did any damage to it.

As they distracted the statue, Li Huowang took advantage of the chaos and got near its body. But the statue could somehow sense Li Huowang. Every time he got close, the statue would always shift just enough to remain out of reach.

“Closer! I need to be closer!”

Li Huowang tiptoed as he tried to grab the balloon on the tree. When he saw his fingertips were close to the balloon’s string, he jumped up and grabbed it in his hands. Just as he held the balloon in his arms, the balloon suddenly popped.

Li Huowang scratched his head in embarrassment and looked at the students in front of him. “Erm... I’m sorry. I think I used too much strength. How much does the balloon cost? Let me pay you back.”

The students walked away in disappointment, and Li Huowang shook his head in shame. He picked up his portable game console to continue his game but saw that the game was over.

Back in Shangjing, everyone saw the statue’s head shattering to pieces and didn’t know what to say.

Li Huowang looked at the statue and asked tentatively, “Ji Zai?”

“Yes,” replied a familiar voice.

Li Huowang immediately got angry when he heard that.

“You still dare to show yourself here?! Where were you just now?!”

“I vanished.”

“Vanish?! What do you mean? The Dharma Sect invaded Shangjing and you disappeared? Do you know how many people died because of you disappearing? The Lu family is gone!” Li Huowang shouted angrily.

Ji Zai replied, “I didn’t want to harm them. It’s all because of you.”

“Bullshit!”

“Think carefully. What did you tell the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau?”

“I said—”

Li Huowang stopped. He knew why Ji Zai disappeared. The Natural Disaster that occurred just now happened due to the disappearance of the Heavenly Dao of Bewilderment.

Ji Zai vanished because Li Huowang said that Ji Zai was born from his imagination.

1. A modao is a unique weapon that looks like a combination between a large sword and a spear 🗡️

Chapter 654 - Star

Li Huowang lowered his head and looked at his own shadow without knowing what to do after everything that had happened to Shangjing.

Ji Zai's existence depended entirely on Li Huowang. His presence was unstable, and he would disappear every time Li Huowang thought that he wasn't real.

Ji Zai controlled bewilderment, or perhaps it would be more accurate that he himself was an embodiment of bewilderment. He would appear and disappear from time to time. His existence all depended on the whims of a single person.

No wonder he kept telling me to carry on and not think about anything else.

"Are my thoughts right?" Li Huowang shouted to his shadow.

This time, Ji Zai did not answer him. His shadow remained as a shadow.

Li Huowang thought Ji Zai was off doing something else again, but this time he knew why. As Li Huowang was about to leave, he saw Shangguan Yuting floating out from the walls.

It was one of Xuan Pin's illusions. The ruckus caused by Li Huowang had compelled her to come over and check what was happening.

Li Huowang looked at her and said, "I now know what you were talking about. You were actually trying to ensure that his existence wouldn't get erased by me. No wonder you called him Unspeakable."

"What?" Shangguan Yuting uttered puzzledly.

"You were right. He really is Unspeakable."

Li Huowang left after that.

He walked past the corpse-littered street and found a well. Looking down the well, he saw two corpses beside his reflection. He also saw half of the moon peeking out from the clouds through the reflection.

Li Huowang stared at his reflection before he closed his eyes and murmured a chant.

Everything around him twisted and changed. Stones became soft, strings became oil, even the grass beside his feet uprooted and ran away.

After chanting, Li Huowang opened his eyes and saw that the grass had grown on a brick somewhere else.

Li Huowang asked, "Are you the only Siming that's so fragile, or are the others the same?"

"I don't know. Maybe. Sometimes I remember certain things, but I cannot tell you about them. You just need to remember what I told you last time. I am you, and you are me. Without you, there is no me. Now tell me, who am I?"

"You are Ji Zai," Li Huowang answered coldly.

Ji Zai replied, "How did I come into existence?"

"I don't know how you came into existence, but I only know you are useless! You can't be relied on when the situation calls for it! I would rather rely on myself! I won't look for you anymore, and I will figure everything out myself!"

"Good. Carry on. You will protect yourself well, and you will always have help."

Li Huowang glared at Ji Zai and turned to leave. Suddenly, Li Huowang felt something was staring at him.

He looked up into the night sky and extended his hand. He held onto the corner of the starry night and pulled it aside to reveal the scenery outside the window.

A short old lady with white hair and a ribbon on her sleeve was staring at him from the corner outside of his house. She tried to peek into Li Huowang's room.

"What are you staring at?"

"Mom, there's someone staring at our home," Li Huowang said indignantly.

Sun Xiaoqin walked over and pulled on the dark blue curtain adorned with little stars. The room instantly lit up.

"Oh, it's Madam Qi. She's the president of the Neighborhood Office. She even held you when you were a baby."

"Why is she staring at our house? Does she have nothing to do?"

Li Huowang's tone was filled with a hint of hostility because Madam Qi kept staring at him.

He had always felt that someone had been staring at him for the past few days.

To think it was her.

"Oh, it's probably nothing. I think the hospital informed her about your discharge. Look at how many people worried about you!"

"Is she really? I fear that she actually thinks I'm a crazy serial murderer."

Li Huowang grabbed the curtains and pulled them shut.

He'd thought he would be free once he was discharged, but that was not the case. Everyone in the neighborhood avoided him like the plague, regardless of whether they were his neighbors or acquaintances.

There was also surveillance coming from Madam Qi. Even though Li Huowang was discharged, the others didn't trust him and looked at him with apprehensiveness. Being in the neighborhood was worse than being in the mental hospital.

Li Huowang turned on his table lamp and started studying. He needed to learn fast because being accepted to Yang Na's university would be extremely difficult. After going through so many harrowing experiences, he had forgotten almost everything in the book.

But Sun Xiaoqin was horrified when she saw that Li Huowang was studying. She immediately grabbed the book out of his hands.

She asked, “Why are you studying? I thought you were having a good time playing games?”

“Mom, since I’m cured, I need to continue studying so that I can enter university.”

Li Huowang tried to take the book back but Sun Xiaoqin stepped out of his reach with the book in her clutches. “No, you cannot have any stress right now. Going into university is the least of your worries.”

“Mom, but I’ve been held back for two years in my final year of high school. What should I be worried about other than getting into university?”

“You don’t need to do anything. You just need to play and enjoy yourself. Here, this is some pocket money for you.” Sun Xiaoqin stuffed several hundred yuan into Li Huowang’s pocket. “Play as much as you want. Buy whatever you want. Eat whatever you want! You still have some friends in school, right? Ask them to come and play with you! Go and eat barbecue, or visit the anime street, or maybe even stay overnight in a cyber cafe!”

Sun Xiaoqin stopped momentarily and then said, “If you do want to stay overnight in a cyber cafe, you need to let me know which one it is so that I can bring your medicine over.”

She had researched a lot for Li Huowang’s recovery. She learned that most teenagers suffered from mental illnesses due to how strict their households were, as well as having a lot of stress from their studies.

Her son finally came back after suffering through a lot. She was adamant about making sure he didn’t get hospitalized again.

“Mom, mom. Let me think about it. I need some time alone,” Li

Huowang said, pushing her out of the room.

Even while being pushed, Sun Xiaoqin scrambled and grabbed all of Li Huowang's textbooks from his room. She didn't even leave a pen in there.

“Remember to play. Don't study! Do you want to buy those VR... or 3D glasses? I don't know what they are, but I think you would like them!”

Chapter 655 - Gaze

After chasing out his mom, Li Huowang sighed and sat on his chair. He stared at his messy room, then he checked his calendar and noticed that Yang Na's birthday was coming up.

Li Huowang silently thought about what to do for her birthday. What gift should I prepare other than the fact that I've been discharged?

"Wait, how much do I need to score in my final exams to get admitted into her university?"

Li Huowang checked his phone and hissed in surprise when he saw the astronomical number of points he had to achieve to even apply for that university. Still, he quickly recovered and grew resolute.

"I need to fight for this! I promised her that I would do it. I've gone through so much. I won't get intimidated by this!"

Li Huowang decided to study immediately, so he started studying on his phone.

The door of his room creaked, opening slowly.

It was Sun Xiaoqin, already in her pajamas. When she saw Li Huowang was on his phone, Good. Young people like him should play on their phones more often.

Sun Xiaoqin nodded in satisfaction and left.

Time slowly passed, and his neighborhood gradually grew silent. In the darkness of the night, Li Huowang massaged his temples as he stared at the phone.

It was close to one o'clock at night when he closed his eyes in despair and lay down on his bed. His head was buzzing.

"I was wrong. I'm really worried now. Why is it so complicated? I remember learning this in school, so why can't I understand it now?"

Sometimes things in life couldn't be done with just hard work. There was nothing he could do if it was too hard to comprehend. It was definitely not something he could learn on his own.

Li Huowang understood that he needed a systematic approach. He would never be able to enter Yang Na's university if he continued to study by himself in his room.

"What should I do? I need to find a way to keep up with her. Even if I can't catch up to her in the second year of university, I still need to find a way to catch up to her in the final year so we can graduate together."

Li Huowang closed his eyes and suddenly felt the money in his pocket. He had a great idea.

"Should I use the money to register for some courses online? The money from my mom and Yi Donglai should be enough."

Li Huowang perked up and started searching through his phone again. He ignored his fatigue even though it was already late at night.

While he was trying to come up with a plan to enter the university, he felt like someone was staring at him. He frowned at this familiar sensation.

"Seriously? Is Madam Qi still trying to keep an eye on me even though it's this late? Isn't she taking her job too seriously?"

Li Huowang lifted a small corner of his curtain and peeked outside, but he saw no one.

Am I too tired?

Li Huowang returned to his bed and lay down. He closed his eyes and tried forcing himself to sleep. He tried to ignore the sensation, but no matter how hard he tried, it was so intense that he couldn't sleep.

Li Huowang was now certain that someone was still watching him!

Fuck! Let's see who's the bastard that keeps looking at me!

He jumped out of his bed in anger. Then, he peeked through his window and slowly looked around outside. However, it was too dark, making it hard for him to find the person who was staring at his room.

After half an hour, Li Huowang finally found them. The person stood motionlessly on the corner of the street, where it was extremely dark.

Li Huowang thought that the person seemed very tall and skinny. It was too dark to make out their face though.

Li Huowang closed his eyes and shook his head. When he opened his eyes again, he saw the person's appearance had somehow changed a little. He thought his eyes were playing tricks on him due to how dark it was.

“Unless...”

Li Huowang recalled what Qian Fu had told him last time.

“Impossible! Why am I thinking of him? Am I crazy?”

Li Huowang needed to go and confirm who the person was, no matter who it was. Nevertheless, he was certain that the person was not Madam Qi.

Li Huowang quickly placed a pillow on the stool and stacked several things on top of it to make the figure at the window look like him.

He wanted to make sure that his disappearance did not alert the person. Li Huowang got on the floor and slowly crawled out of his room.

To prevent himself from making any sounds, Li Huowang made his way downstairs barefoot. Using the greenery and foliage for cover, he slowly approached the spot where the person was.

Li Huowang got close and could finally see the silhouette of the person.

“Huowang!”

Someone suddenly shouted his name, and Li Huowang raised his head instinctively.

He looked at his room and saw Sun Xiaoqin peeking out of the window and looking around.

Li Huowang looked back at the corner where the person had been and realized they had disappeared. There was nothing in the darkness.

“They are gone? Where are they?”

Li Huowang quickly searched around the place.

“Huowang! Where are you? Don’t scare me!” Sun Xiaoqin yelled, pushing herself halfway out the window and looking around the neighborhood.

When Li Huowang saw how worried his mother was and how the lights of other homes were lighting up in response to her cries, he begrudgingly stood up. “Mom! I’m here! Don’t worry! Something fell, and I came here to pick it up!”

“Why are you picking it at night? You can do it tomorrow! Come up, quick!”

Li Huowang took one last look at the darkness before returning to his room. He couldn’t sleep a wink throughout the night afterward.

The next morning, he was still trying to figure out who that person was even as he ate his breakfast.

Firstly, no matter what their goal is, I am certain that they exist.

He felt that while Madam Qi had also been keeping an eye on him, the sensation of being watched had mostly been due to the mysterious person.

But why?

Li Huowang could not figure it out. He was not rich, nor did he have any valuables on him. Moreover, it would be expensive to hire someone to monitor him.

“What’s wrong? Do you like daydreaming now?” Sun Xiaoqin said as she washed the plates and wiped the table clean. “Why aren't you playing your games? I've turned on your computer."

"Mom, I don't want to play."

Li Huowang held his forehead in pain. He couldn't tell his mother about the mysterious person. If he did, she would think that he had gone crazy again.

"Nonsense! You are still young, so there's no way you don't want to play! Hurry up and go! Don't live like an old man. I will slice some fruits for you later, so what fruit do you want?"

Li Huowang sighed and went back to his room.

Chapter 656 - Surveillance

“Don’t forget to take your medicine!” Sun Xiaoqin yelled.

Once Li Huowang was back in his room and could not hear his mother’s nagging anymore, he sighed and tried to remember what happened last night.

He couldn’t come to any conclusions yet because what he had seen yesterday was very unclear. He even thought that it could’ve been nothing but an illusion.

He needed proof that someone was following him. Otherwise, the others would think that he was going crazy again. What he saw was not what the others perceived.

More importantly, even Li Huowang himself could not fully believe what he had seen.

Li Huowang hesitated before typing on his phone.

Why do I feel like someone is constantly staring at me with ill intentions and trying to harm me?

He searched for his symptoms and quickly found something that might explain it: delusional disorder, persecutory type. [1]

Patients with this disorder always believe that someone, or an organization, is trying to harm them by committing acts of crime against them, such as assault, framing, murder, destruction, defamation, insults, poisoning, stalking, or other acts of oppression.

The illness warps the patient’s rationality and beliefs. They have assumptions that are not in line with either the situation they are in or their level of education. Their assumptions are usually very illogical, but they always firmly believe in them. It is impossible to convince them otherwise, as they are unwilling to accept the truth even when they are confronted with irrefutable facts from their own personal experience.

Li Huowang's fingers trembled when he read the symptoms.
Am I mentally ill again?

He opened his contacts and scrolled to Yi Donglai's name. Li Huowang hesitated for a moment before closing the app.

He had finally gotten discharged. He refused to go back.

Li Huowang didn't want to worry the people around him. He knew his mother would be devastated if she learned that he was mentally ill again.

He continued to look up more information on the internet. Li Huowang checked different keywords such as stalking, surveillance, mental illness, and being harmed just to see if there was another possibility.

He found an interesting article.

Hai Mingwei's mental health deteriorated when he became older and complained to others about how he was being stalked by someone. He told others that his conversations were being wiretapped and that his mail was being intercepted. While eating his lunch one day, he pointed at two people across his table and told the others that the two were stalking him. Everyone thought he had persecutory-type delusional disorder.

Hai Mingwei's mental health soon deteriorated further, and everyone firmly believed that he was mentally ill. He got admitted into a mental hospital and accepted the electroconvulsive therapy that was popular back then.

He committed suicide one day, as everyone had expected. He was written off as being unable to endure the pressure and committed suicide. His case was recorded in books and journals.

However, fifty years later, someone managed to prove that Hai Mingwei had indeed been stalked. An organization had placed under him surveillance and had been tracking him all the time.

"Hah!"

Li Huowang closed his eyes and threw his phone onto the bed. Being in a difficult position was not scary, but not knowing what to do was. Whatever he decided to do might be wrong!

“What should I do? Is it real? Do I need to go and find out the truth?”

Li Huowang wasn't sure what he could do, but then he sensed the gaze again. This time, he didn't act because his window was open and it was daytime.

Li Huowang moved slowly and took out a handheld mirror from his drawer. He lowered his head and used the mirror's reflection to see outside the window.

He slowly moved the mirror and finally saw a pair of women's shoes. His heart started racing.

Li Huowang moved the mirror again, then he saw Madam Qi's face in the mirror.

“Fuck!”

Li Huowang turned around and looked out the window. “Madam Qi, aren't you tired from doing this all day? Is there no one to take over from your shift? Why don't you come to my house for a drink so you can stare at me all you want!”

Madam Qi left as if nothing happened.

At the same time, a phone rang inside Li Huowang's home. Li Huowang recalled that it was the ringtone of his mother's phone.

He walked out and found the phone on a cabinet. It had a cracked screen.

Li Huowang picked up the phone and held it next to his ear.

“Hello? Who is it?”

There was no response from the other end of the line.

“Who is it? Sun Xiaoqin is not here. I'm her son. Who are you looking for?”

—Li Huowang?

The caller's voice seemed weird, as if it had been altered digitally.

Li Huowang frowned and suspicion arose in his heart. "I'm Li Huowang. Who are you?" However, there was no response, again. He adjusted the phone's position, trying to hear more clearly.

He could faintly hear the sound of someone wailing in the background. Li Huowang took out his own phone and slowly dialed the police's number.

Sun Xiaoqin walked into the house with a bag of fruit when she saw Li Huowang was using her phone.

She asked, "Huowang, what are you doing?"

"Someone called you. I think they had the wrong number," Li Huowang answered as he placed the phone down on the cabinet.

"What? But my phone is broken."

"What?"

Li Huowang quickly checked the phone and saw nothing on the cracked screen except for his shocked face reflected on it.

"What's wrong? Don't frighten me," Sun Xiaoqin said.

She walked over and hugged Li Huowang while stroking his head.

Li Huowang suddenly laughed. "Haha, how was my act? I fooled you, didn't I?"

Sun Xiaoqin released him and pushed him slightly. "You rascal. Don't make jokes like that! They scare me!"

"Haha, I thought you were worrying about something, so I thought I would lighten up the mood."

Li Huowang walked back towards his room.

When he entered his room, he snarled and howled quietly. "What the fuck is going on? Is someone surveilling me!?"

1. Sounds like a cool technique name.

Chapter 657 - Answer

Li Huowang sat on the floor with a blank expression as he recalled what happened.

He picked up his mother's phone and the other party even told him his name, but then his mother told him that her phone was broken. The phone was clearly dead. Who was he talking to, then?

If this was his hallucination, then was the sensation of someone staring at him fake too? Was he actually mentally ill? Was he not cured?

Li Huowang closed his eyes in pain as he scratched his head forcefully.

He didn't want to deal with this problem, but he had no choice but to face it. He didn't even trust himself.

"I..."

Li Huowang hesitated a little before he called Yi Donglai. The phone rang for a long time before Yi Donglai picked up.

—Hello? Little Li? Why are you calling me? Is something wrong?

Li Huowang clenched his fist before he spoke in a trembling voice, "Doctor Yi, do you think that I have a delusional disorder?"

—What do you mean? Do you have a new symptom?

Yi Donglai's tone turned serious.

"I don't know, but I have the feeling that someone is constantly looking at me. I suspect they are planning something because this is not the first time I've felt their gaze."

—Did you have the feeling when you were in the hospital, or did you first notice it after you were discharged?"

"I never had it in the hospital. Wait, it's back again. Someone's staring at me."

Li Huowang used the mirror's reflection to see who was staring at him. This time it wasn't Madam Qi. Instead, it was a lady using an umbrella to hide her face.

It was spring, so seeing someone dressed like that was weird.

Is she real? Or is she an illusion? Li Huowang questioned himself.

Yi Donglai was still talking to him when Li Huowang hung up.

I'm willing to get admitted if it's an illusion, but first, I need to confirm whether it's an illusion or not!

Li Huowang placed his phone down and retrieved several items from his drawer. He then quickly went down and exited his unit. When he walked out of the fire exit, he saw that the woman was still there.

He stealthily went out through the left entrance and circled around to slowly approach the woman from behind.

The closer he got, the more he noticed about the woman. She wore high heels and very skimpy clothes, which seemed inappropriate for the season. This made Li Huowang even more suspicious. Li Huowang gradually grew fearful as he got closer to the woman.

When he was just a few steps away from the woman, a black car suddenly stopped beside him, and two people ran out of it.

One of the assailants covered Li Huowang's nose and mouth with a wet cloth while the second assailant restrained him and started dragging him into the car.

When Li Huowang smelled chemicals on the cloth, he felt excited rather than fearful. He finally got his answer.

I'm not crazy! Someone really is trying to harm me!

Li Huowang started losing consciousness due to the chemical on the cloth. He instinctively opened his mouth and bit his tongue. Intense pain and blood filled Li Huowang's mouth, waking him up.

Li Huowang then opened his mouth as wide as he could. The cloth and fingers of the first assailant were forced into his mouth.

He then bit down hard and tried to sever the first assailant's fingers.

"Yikes!" the assailant wailed,

They smacked Li Huowang's head in an attempt to get their fingers out of Li Huowang's mouth, but it was useless.

During the struggle, the assailants shoved Li Huowang into the car. Once they were all inside, Li Huowang released the first assailant's finger, and the first assailant, propelled by their own momentum, crashed against the window.

Li Huowang opened his bloody mouth and looked at the assailants.

"Want to know why I let you move me into the car? Because once I'm inside here, I can tell others that I was defending myself even if I kill or cripple you!"

Li Huowang took out a box cutter from his sleeves and stabbed it into the second assailant's legs.

In pain, the second assailant released Li Huowang. Li Huowang grabbed the box cutter firmly and started stabbing the first assailant, who was in front of him.

The black car started shaking wildly before the doors opened, and Li Huowang fell out. He was covered in blood by then.

Li Huowang saw the car speeding away and threw the bloody box cutter onto the ground before he took his phone and dialed the police.

"Hello? Police? Two people just tried to kidnap me. I killed one of the kidnappers and the other is probably going to die soon too. They were driving a black car when they departed from Wuyi Road."

Kidnapping was a serious crime, especially when the victim killed the kidnapper. Li Huowang was soon taken from the police station to record his statement.

As Li Huowang gave his statement, Sun Jianye felt a headache coming on. He looked at Li Huowang's information on the terminal and then at Sun Xiaoqin, who was crying.

“Don’t worry, your son is fine. Wait here. Let me go find out what’s going on.”

Sun Jianye then brought his junior into the interrogation room to listen in on the questioning.

“Li Huowang, you’ve said that you were kidnapped? Do you know why? Have you angered anyone recently?”

Li Huowang was clutching onto the paper cup as he pondered. “I killed a few people in a previous incident. I think that the kidnappers could be their accomplices trying to take revenge on me. Maybe you can approach the case from that angle.”

The room was silent, and no one spoke.

Just then, another officer entered the room. “We’ve checked the security cameras. There’s no kidnappers on the video.”

Sun Jianye and his colleagues checked the footage too and then looked at Li Huowang with suspicion.

“What do you mean? That’s impossible! I have evidence here!” Li Huowang took out two dismembered fingers from his pocket and placed them on the table.

Chapter 658 - New

The fingers on the table had turned pale due to the loss of blood. Everyone, except for Li Huowang, was stunned and surprised.

Li Huowang was naturally handcuffed.

“Wait, I’m the victim here! Are you kidding me?! Why am I being handcuffed?!” Li Huowang shouted, but everyone ignored him.

Two officers stood guard while the others went outside.

Sun Jianye listened to Li Huowang shout as he read the information they had about the unusual youth.

He hated people with mental illnesses. Their statements could be false, and their way of thinking diverged so much from the norm that Sun Jianye’s interrogation techniques were useless.

If the suspect didn’t provide any leads, he could only investigate the case from another angle.

Sun Jianye picked up Li Huowang’s phone and checked the call log. He saw that Li Huowang had called a person today and dialed the number.

—Hello? Li Huowang? Why did you hang up on me just now? Oh, I’m sorry. How is he? Yes, I’m his doctor. Was there anything strange about him? He did call me to ask if he had a delusional disorder.

Sun Jianye nodded. He had gained a small lead.

He obtained more details from Yi Donglai before he returned to the interrogation room. He sat across from Li Huowang. “Can you tell me where you got the two fingers?”

“How many times must I say that the fingers came from the kidnappers inside the car?” Li Huowang explained as he tried to remain patient.

Sun Jianye took out his phone and showed it to Li Huowang. “Is that so? There’s no car in the video footage, and no kidnappers either.”

“What? That’s impossible!” Li Huowang shouted and looked at the video.

He looked at the date and time on the top before confirming that the video was from today.

Li Huowang saw himself in the video. The footage was from when he tried to get close to the woman with the umbrella. But there was no woman in the video. Li Huowang was the only one in the video.

In the video, Li Huowang suddenly stopped and struggled in an empty place as if someone invisible had been pulling him. Then, he stumbled away from the camera’s surveillance range.

“Wait! That’s impossible! I really saw and felt them! I know I did!”

Sun Jianye sat in his chair with a headache. “Have you considered it could all be due to your hallucinations?”

“What are you talking about? You have my medical records, right? I’m cured and was discharged from the hospital! Also, there are many kinds of mental illnesses, and this is clearly different from the one I had!” Li Huowang stood up from his chair.

The two officers standing guard gently pressed Li Huowang’s shoulders, pushing him back down onto the seat.

Sun Jianye said, “Li Huowang, you are not crazy, and we know that, but we need evidence. There are no kidnappers in the video, and that’s the truth.

“Wait, is there a possibility they tampered with the footage?” Li Huowang asked. He then recalled something and froze from the realization.

“The time from your call to our inspection of the footage was too short for that. It's impossible to tamper with the footage in such a short amount of time. How about you stay here for a few days so that we can protect you from the kidnappers?"

"Wait, don't you need evidence? What about the two fingers? They are evidence, and also"—he took off his bloodied shirt—"this is their blood. You can check their DNA and find them!"

Li Huowang was certain that the kidnappers were real. Someone really was trying to harm him! No matter what organization they came from, he knew he was in danger.

Since there was a first time, there would most certainly be a second time. The organization spent a lot of resources just to monitor him, so Li Huowang was certain that they would not stop if their goals weren't achieved. He was worried not because of the sudden threat, but rather because he realized that Qian Fu's warnings were coming true.

Who are you talking about?

The Leotians! They have very advanced technology and could easily place someone to observe you! I didn't place the needle in your food, they did! They are trying to separate us!

The carriage wheels slowly rolled across the yellow grass of Qing Qiu. Yang Xiaohai spurred the horses onward as he gazed at the large grass meadow.

He checked his map and hesitated. "It should be here, shouldn't it? I hope we're not going in the wrong direction."

Even though he had a map, there was nothing in the empty grassfield for him to get his bearings. He wasn't sure if he was going the right way.

Zhao Xiumei and Yang Xiaohai continued their journey, then Yang Xiaohai saw a small hill in the distance.

The small hill was covered in yellow grass and looked like a steamed bun from a distance. Yang Xiaohai had seen many of these hills over the past few days. He remembered them because their shape was very special.

"I remember seeing something like this when I traveled with Senior Li last time. We should be close to Sun Baolu's house."

Just as he said that, he saw tents on the horizon, which got him excited.

"Go! Go! Run faster!" Yang Xiaohai shouted, using a horse whip to urge the horses to run.

Various Qing Qiu natives with tanned skin were walking in and out of the tents, but some of them had visibly lighter skin. Sun Baolu was one of them.

Sun Baolu was excited when he saw Yang Xiaohai. He never thought they would meet again.

"Sun Baolu! Gao Zhijian became the Emperor! Puppy got married and had a child! Senior Li's sickness is cured too!" Yang Xiaohai reported all of the joyful news that happened recently.

Sun Baolu listened to Yang Xiaohai and asked what happened to the group after they left Qing Qiu.

"Is that so? It's a blessing for everyone to live so happily now." Sun Baolu was very happy for them. They were once comrades who braved against death just to reach home.

"Wait, Xiaohai, why are you here in Qing Qiu?"

"Gao Zhijian helped me find my parents. They are boat people from Hou Shu. I want to go find them." Yang Xiaohai told him his goals.

"Hou Shu?" Sun Baolu panicked and held Yang Xiaohai's hands.

"No, you can't go! Hou Shu is now in a war with the new Yu'er Kingdom. The war is terrible and I don't want you to die there!"

Chapter 659 - Sun Baolu

“Yu’er Kingdom?” Yang Xiaohai was confused. He had never heard of the place when he was traveling with Senior Li.

Sun Baolu was confused too. “You never heard of it before? The Dharma Sect destroyed Si Qi. The Dharma Sect attacked different nations and absorbed them into their own land. They called it the Yu’er Kingdom, and their official religion is, naturally, the Dharma Sect’s. I’ve heard that the war was very intense, to the point that even Immortals descended from the Heavens. You will die if you go to Hou Shu right now.”

Yang Xiaohai frowned when he heard the news. He had finally made it to Qing Qiu and was about to reach Hou Shu, then something unfortunate like this happened.

He could've waited a few years if he had caught wind of these events while he was in Cowheart Village, but now he was already halfway through his journey. It was too dangerous to continue, but it would be a waste of time if he returned now. He didn't know what to do.

“Also, I’ve heard from the refugees from Hou Shu that Hou Shu could not win against the Yu’er Kingdom. Hou Shu forcefully conscripted any male taller than a carriage wheel. Xiaohai, you can’t go there now.”

Yang Xiaohai was worried, “They’ll be forced to fight in the war as long as they’re male...?? Then doesn’t that mean my father and brother will have to fight?”

“Are they from Hou Shu? If so, then I’m afraid they won’t be able to avoid being sent to war.”

Yang Xiaohai became even more anxious. I finally received news about my family, and now they are going to be gone?

He hesitated and looked at Zhao Xiumei for reassurance. He then looked at Sun Baolu. "Baolu, can you help me? Let my wife stay here for the moment. I want to go and check out Hou Shu myself."

"No!"

"No!"

Both Sun Baolu and Zhao Xiumei refused at the same time.

"I will follow you wherever you go. I'm your wife, so don't you dare try to leave me!"

"Xiaohai, I'm not trying to scare you, but you really can't go to Hou Shu. Even merchants with escorts were done in!"

"Listen to me!" Yang Xiaohai's eyes were red when he shouted over them. "Do you know how much I envied other children with caring parents back when I was a beggar?"

"Their parents would buy them candy and goods from peddlers while I was stuck scrounging for rainwater to drink with the other beggars! Their parents would buy them new clothes while I could only go to unmarked graves and take the clothes of the dead just to have something to wear!"

Yang Xiaohai sobbed, "Do you know just how much I wanted to see my parents at least once? I just want to let those who insulted me and called me a mongrel know that I still have my parents!"

Sun Baolu's mother walked in and heard their conversation.

Yang Xiaohai slowly calmed down and tried to reason with them. "Since my family is in danger, I must go and rescue them. Even if my brother and father have gone to war, I could go save my mother. She could live at Cowheart Village so she won't have to go hungry anymore. I was once a beggar. I know that the easiest targets to bully among the beggars are the old ladies."

Zhao Xiumei looked at Yang Xiaohai with a pained expression. Even though her husband had grown a little, he was still young, and he still missed his parents.

“Xiaohai, I know you are worried about your parents, but—” Sun Baolu was trying to persuade him when his mother whispered to him. “Alright, let me go and start the fire then.”

Sun Baolu got up.

His mother consoled Yang Xiaohai by hugging him. “Don’t worry. We’ll think of a way to solve this.”

Yang Xiaohai soon saw a bizarre scene. Sun Baolu lit a bonfire, and his fellow tribe members gathered around them. Sun Baolu pointed at Yang Xiaohai while explaining the situation in Qing Qiu's native language. Everyone discussed and talked in the same native language. Yang Xiaohai didn’t understand what they were talking about.

“This is a tradition of Qing Qiu. The gist is that if someone has a problem, they can start a fire to signal the others to come to help figure out a solution using the wisdom from the Immortal Heaven,” Sun Baolu explained to Yang Xiaohai.

“Will it work?” Yang Xiaohai asked.

He was anxious. He didn’t want to risk his life by going to Hou Shu, but if there was a way for him to meet his parents, he wasn’t going to give up so easily.

“We have many elders in the group. As they say, an elder is a treasure to the family. They have a lot of experience, so this method usually works well.”

The smoke from the bonfire slowly floated upwards. Since there wasn’t any wind, some of the smoke enveloped them.

“Cough, cough!” Yang Xiaohai coughed from inhaling the smoke, feeling dizzy.

He felt weird. He had never had this feeling when he inhaled smoke before. Borrowing the wisdom of the Heavenly Immortal seemed to be a unique experience.

The tribe members carried on with their discussion, their voices slowly quieting down as Yang Xiaohai listened to them.

“Hei!” They shouted in unison and clapped.

The smoke dispersed instantly.

Sun Baolu listened to some elders talking before explaining to Yang Xiaohai. “They have a method. You said your parents are boat people living on the sea, right?”

“Yes.”

“Then the elders have a plan for that. Rather than traveling on land, travel through the sea instead. The elderly remembered there was a boatman who operated on the border between Hou Shu and Qing Qiu. If you pay him money, he can send you to where your parents are. That way, you won’t encounter the soldiers.”

“Really?!” Yang Xiaohai said excitedly.

“Yeah. Their memory is probably accurate since they rode it ten years ago. Wait here. I will ask them to draw a map and write a letter. Make sure to give it to the captain so that he doesn’t try to rob you.”

Sun Baolu set to work.

Yang Xiaohai had finally found a way to return home. He looked at the map that showed the border between Qing Qiu and Hou Shu.

He looked at how close they were and he got excited. Soon, he could finally see his family.

“Thank you Sun Baolu. You’ve helped me greatly!” Yang Xiaohai gave him a dense gold bar.

“What are you trying to do? Are you looking down at me?” Sun Baolu refused the gold bar but then whispered to Yang Xiaohai, “Xiaohai, do you have empty rooms at Cowheart Village?”

Chapter 660 - Earth Dragon

Sun Baolu's words confused Yang Xiaohai.

"Senior Bai took in a lot of foster children, so they were almost full. What's wrong? Do you want to come and stay with us?" Yang Xiaohai asked.

Sun Baolu looked at his tribesmen and whispered, "Our leader thinks we are not in danger, but I disagree. If Hou Shu falls, Qing Qiu will be next. Even though the tribe leader said that they will help Hou Shu, I still think that we have a low chance of succeeding. The Yu'er Kingdom is strong, and if the Liang Kingdom doesn't help, we might not be able to win. I want a safe place that my fellow tribesmen can go to."

Sun Baolu frustratedly said, "I wonder what that useless Emperor of the Liang Kingdom is thinking. Doesn't he know that everyone needs to work together to defeat the Dharma Sect? If they don't help Qing Qiu and Hou Shu, the two nations will collapse and get taken by the Yu'er Kingdom. By then, they will have to face the massive army by themselves."

"Baolu, the Emperor you are scolding is Gao Zhijian."

Sun Baolu was shocked. "Is he really the emperor? I thought you were joking!"

"I don't lie nor joke."

Sun Baolu smacked his head with regret. "Jeez! What's happening to the Liang Kingdom? Why did they choose a mentally challenged person like Gao Zhijian to become the emperor? No wonder they haven't sent any soldiers to help us. Where else can we go if the Liang Kingdom falls?"

“Sun Baolu, don’t be so negative. Maybe the Yu’er Kingdom is not as strong as you think?” Yang Xiaohai was very optimistic since he didn’t know what happened in the Liang Kingdom.

“Qing Qiu’s grass has turned yellow. This means that the Immortal Heaven is angry. Ever since the last Natural Disaster, the Earth Dragon has moved numerous times in Qing Qiu. My mother is right in saying we need to prepare more. It doesn’t hurt to have backup plans. That said, just what is Senior Li doing?”

Even though Sun Baolu sometimes thought Senior Li might be crazy, he always solved their problems in the end.

Yang Xiaohai wasn’t sure what to say. “I don’t know. When I set out, Senior Li had a lotus root in place of his head. He was still receiving treatment in the village back then.”

“Alright. I hope I can contact him by letter. You have a safe journey, alright? If you can’t endure it, then you should return as soon as possible.”

Sun Baolu cheered him up and wished him a safe journey. Yang Xiaohai nodded, and his carriage soon started to move again.

Sun Baolu’s mother had actually hoped that Yang Xiaohai would stay for a meal, but having learned that his family was in danger, Yang Xiaohai set off as soon as he could.

When he and his wife left the tents, there were several goats attached to the back of their carriage. They were gifts from Sun Baolu and were meant to serve as food during their journey.

Yang Xiaohai naturally would not accept it without reciprocating. He asked Zhao Xiumei to silently place the gold bars from earlier into Sun Baolu’s tent.

They traveled for several days as Yang Xiaohai followed the map. Getting their bearings was challenging, as yellow grass stretched as far as the eye could see.

Sun Baolu was clear in his explanation, though. All he needed to do was to find the border wall between Qing Qiu and Hou Shu—the landmark he could use to locate the sea

“We should be there soon,” Yang Xiaohai remarked when he saw jagged rocks in the distance amid the sea of yellow grass.

He stroked his newly grown beard a little apprehensively.

“Xiaohai, come and have some goat soup. The goats here are very nutritious.”

Zhao Xiumei handed him a warm bowl of soup.

Yang Xiaohai took the bowl and drank the soup. It warmed his cold body, and even though it was only seasoned with coarse salt and wild vegetables, the delicious goat meat of Qing Qiu still made the meal amazing.

“Carefully wrap the unfinished goat meat and drain the blood. Even though the weather is cold and it probably won’t spoil, the stench of blood might attract beasts,” Yang Xiaohai said.

“Alright.”

Zhao Xiumei was always impressed by Yang Xiaohai's cooking skills. That was why she chose him as her husband. She fell in love with how focused he looked when preparing his meals.

After finishing their simple meal, they resumed their journey again. However, they had only traveled a short distance when the horses began bucking wildly as they tried to run away. Even the goats that had been following their carriage without any issues tried to run away.

“What is happening?” Yang Xiaohai exclaimed, unsure of how to deal with the sudden chaos. He was about to say something when the ground started shaking violently.

“The Earth Dragon is moving! Get down!” Zhao Xiumei shouted, pushing Yang Xiaohai beneath her.

The weather changed. The two of them shrank in fear as they waited for this horrifying event to pass. Once the tremors subsided, Yang Xiaohai squirmed out from underneath Zhao Xiumei. He looked around and saw an incredible sight: the grass fields were moving like the sea, and Qing Qiu was almost like a yellow ocean! Yang Xiaohai's gaze was fixed on this sight when suddenly, a large crack opened up towards them!

The crack split apart, and the two of them fell into the ravine—it was as if Qing Qiu had been split apart.

A long time passed before Yang Xiaohai woke up. The first thing he remembered was his wife, Zhao Xiumei. He tried to look around, but it was so dark that he couldn't even see his fingers.

“Xiumei! Xiumei!”

His voice echoed loudly, but the space around him was vast. Yang Xiaohai looked up and saw that it was completely dark. He suddenly realized he was underground.

Yang Xiaohai's voice trembled as he called out. “Xiumei, where are you?!”

He knew what was underneath Qing Qiu. He carefully reached into his shirt, only to find that the scepter Li Huowang had given him was gone.

Yang Xiaohai panicked. He learned from Sun Baolu that the Earth Dragon had recently moved a lot in Qing Qiu, but he had never imagined it would end up swallowing them!

As he fretted over what to do, Yang Xiaohai heard something from his left. He didn't even want to think about the kind of monstrosity that might be lurking underneath Qing Qiu.

He tried to scuttle backward when he heard a familiar voice. “I remember this voice. Are you Yang Xiaohai?”

Yang Xiaohai calmed down a little upon hearing that the other person had recognized him, but he didn't let his guard down.

Yang Xiaohao asked, “Who... Who are you?”

“It's me.”

The person approached Yang Xiaohai.

Yang Xiaohai soon saw the familiar face. It was Lu Juren! But his face was oddly greenish.

Chapter 661 - Someone Familiar

“Lu Juren?” Yang Xiaohai was shocked to see the man in front of him.

He recognized him as one of the troupe members who had followed him and Senior Li throughout their journey.

But didn't he follow Troupe Leader Lu to Shangjing to enjoy their lives? Senior Gao even gifted them a theater. Why is he here alone underneath Qing Qiu?

“Why... Why are you here?” Yang Xiaohai took a step back carefully. He wasn't sure if the Lu Juren in front of him was an illusion conjured by an evil entity.

“Why am I here?” Lu Juren was confused too. “I don't know. Yang Xiaohai, where am I?”

“How would I know?” Yang Xiaohai suddenly remembered something and panicked. “Wait, have you seen my wife? Zhao Xiumei, the woman that kept following me around.”

They had fallen into the hole together, but now he was alone. Yang Xiaohai was worried about her safety.

But Lu Juren stood still as he stared blankly at Yang Xiaohai and tried to think.

“Do you know how to get out of here? Where is the exit?” Yang Xiaohai scanned the darkness with fear.

Lu Juren remained still and couldn't provide an answer. However, Yang Xiaohai considered it good luck since the “Lu Juren” before him hadn't attacked him yet. At least “Lu Juren” wasn't an evil entity.

Even so, as happy as he was that “Lu Juren” was harmless,

Yang Xiaohai was still racking his brain to figure out how to escape the place.

“Wait, I remember Senior Li also got stuck here before. How did he get out last time?”

Yang Xiaohai stuck his thumb into his mouth, then raised it up high to feel the wind. He had to tiptoe before he felt a cold breeze coming from the south. He then started to make his way towards that direction.

He took a few steps and tore off a piece of his clothes. He wanted to leave a message for Zhao Xiumei in case she passed by, but then remembered she couldn't read, leaving him stumped.

I should find the exit and then find someone to help me locate her. Maybe she didn't fall in. Yang Xiaohai decided and walked towards where the wind was coming from.

He turned around and saw Lu Juren standing still. “Do you want to follow me?”

“Follow you? Where?”

“Out!” Yang Xiaohai felt that Lu Juren had turned into someone like Gao Zhijian. He didn't know what had happened to Lu Juren to make him act like a simpleton.

“Out? Alright.” Lu Juren nodded and followed him.

Yang Xiaohai took shallow breaths as he followed the direction of the wind using the saliva on his finger.

They stumbled through the dark cave and Yang Xiaohai felt that they were heading downwards.

He didn't know if this was good or bad news. He only knew that this was the same method Senior Li had once used to escape Qing Qiu's subterranean caves. He just had to follow suit.

The other thing that made him feel better was that even though the place was dark, no evil entities were harming him. He started to think that his wife might be alive after all.

Just as he felt that, a sound came from the distance. He carefully made his way towards the direction of the sound. The closer he got, the louder the sound was. But he felt it was weird because those sounds were made by humans. What is this place? Why are there so many people walking underneath Qing Qiu?

Five minutes later, Yang Xiaohai finally saw what was making the sound. It was a group of people wearing various lengths of cloth.

They were very tall, to the point that Yang Xiaohai could only see the lower half of their bodies, with the upper halves hidden in the darkness above. They moved in unison in the darkness.

As Yang Xiaohai focused on the darkness above him, it somehow receded a little, revealing the silhouette of the strange giants. They were holding something that Yang Xiaohao could only describe as an umbrella. He still wasn't completely sure about what he was looking when he saw a horrific scene. The giants were dragging something...

Humans! The giants were dragging humans of all ages, but all of them were stabbed with a mourning staff[1] just like a kebab.

The giants dragged the mourning staves wrapped in white tassels as they walked. The humans wailed in pain every time the staves were dragged on the ground. Some of them planted their hands on the ground in pain and begged for mercy, but the giants ignored them even as the humans' fingers were ground from being dragged.

What is this?! What is going on?! Yang Xiaohai didn't know what to do.

Just then, Lu Juren suddenly regained his vigor and snapped out of his stupor when he saw one of the impaled humans was his wife, Luo Juanhua. "Juan'er! Run!"

The giants stopped when they heard Lu Juren shouting. They turned around and moved towards Yang Xiaohai and Lu Juren. Lu Juren charged towards the giants while Yang Xiaohai felt his entire body had been plunged into icy water. Fuck.

Just as Lu Juren tried to free Luo Juanhua from the mourning staff, one of the giant's hands shook in the darkness. A new mourning staff was conjured from the darkness and then impaled Lu Juren's chest.

But it was not over. The mourning staff started flying towards Yang Xiaohai after it impaled Lu Juren.

Yang Xiaohai started running out of fear. The sound of whistling wind neared him, and he started to despair. Just as he thought he was going to end up like Lu Juren, a sudden gust blew from the back, and there was a loud thud. Yang Xiaohai was safe.

His entire body was trembling from fear when he slowly looked back. He saw a familiar face standing on top of the giant's corpse.

"Senior Li?!" Yang Xiaohai was dumbfounded when he saw the familiar face.

It was none other than the Senior Li he knew, who wore a red Daoist robe with a bronze coin veil.

"Yang Xiaohai? What a special treat." Li Huowang walked down the giant's corpse as if he was walking down a set of stairs. He stared at Yang Xiaohai with glee.

Chapter 662 - Feng Capital

“Senior Li, is that you? Did you come to save me?”

Yang Xiaohai knew he was safe when he saw Li Huowang appearing in front of him. He immediately told Li Huowang what had happened to him.

But when he finished his explanation, he saw Li Huowang staring at him with a weird gaze.

“Follow me.” After saying that, Li Huowang ignored Yang Xiaohai and started walking toward the west.

Yang Xiaohai hesitated, but Li Huowang had just killed the giant to save him, so he thought that Li Huowang wouldn’t hurt him. He quickly followed Li Huowang.

But what Yang Xiaohai had not noticed was Lu Juren struggling to stand up after getting impaled by the mourning staff.

The two of them walked in the darkness. With Li Huowang leading the way, Yang Xiaohai felt completely safe.

“Senior Li, where is this?”

“Where else? This is the bottom of Qing Qiu, the Feng Capital.”

“Feng Capital? Wait, Senior Li, is my wife down here too? Could you help me find her?”

“You have a wife already? That’s good!” Li Huowang smiled and nodded.

“Thank you, Senior Li!” Yang Xiaohai thanked him after Li Huowang agreed to help him find his wife.

“We are all companions. There’s no need to be polite. Be quiet now—we will reach it soon.”

The two of them continued walking and soon found themselves in a rugged space.

There were various large pillars stabbing the darkness above, but there were also various dark pits around them. It was a bizarre yet horrifying sight.

There were even green candlelights coming from the bottom of the pits. Yang Xiaohai saw more giants dragging the mourning staff full of impaled humans before they jumped into the pit.

Yang Xiaohai sensed something was wrong as he hid behind one of the pillars. "Senior... Senior Li, this isn't the exit."

Li Huowang said, "This is your exit. Do you see the pits as well as the various mounds?"

Without waiting for Yang Xiaohai to answer, Li Huowang told him what it was. "This is actually Kui Lei, the Siming that controlled the Heavenly Dao of Death. As for why it's not moving... well, it's already dead since it controls the Heavenly Dao of Death! Hahaha!"

Li Huowang thought he had made a really good joke and laughed so hard that he almost cried.

"Senior Li, what are you talking about? I don't understand." Yang Xiaohai panicked.

"Do you not understand? You died when you fell down here. Since you are dead, Kui Lei will take care of you. Go ahead and merge yourself with it. I even took you here specially."

Yang Xiaohai slumped to the ground when he heard that. "I'm dead? Am I really dead?"

He pinched himself so hard he wounded himself, but no blood flowed. He cried, "I'm really dead?! I haven't seen my parents! I don't want to die! I want to live!"

Yang Xiaohai cried in despair, but Li Huowang suddenly clapped his hands and laughed heartily. "Hahaha! I tricked you! You're not dead yet! Your ten emotions and eight sufferings are still intact."

As he laughed, Li Huowang's face shifted into Hong Zhong's face, then back to his own.

Yang Xiaohai abruptly stopped crying out of shock and stared at Li Huowang. He didn't know what to feel right now.

"Come, let me show you the real way out." Li Huowang smiled and extended his hands to pull Yang Xiaohai up.

Yang Xiaohai didn't know if he should accept the hand because he felt that Li Huowang was acting weirdly. "Senior Li, you won't fool me again, right? This is not the time for jokes."

"Hahaha, relax. I know when to stop. I'm just messing with you just now." Li Huowang pulled Yang Xiaohai up. They then retraced their steps.

They soon encountered Lu Juren again. Lu Juren saw them and said in a daze, "Young Daoist? And you are Yang Xiaohai? Why are you here?"

"Juren, what happened to you? Didn't we meet just now?" Yang Xiaohai was confused.

"We did?" Lu Juren stared at Yang Xiaohai and tried his best to remember.

Li Huowang said, "No need to talk to him anymore. His ten emotions and eight sufferings are gone. Even his soul has dispersed. The only thing he has left is his death Qi. He's already a part of Kui Lei, and his memories will be reset after a certain time period has passed. He won't know what happened in the past and the present."

Yang Xiaohai looked at Lu Juren with pity. "Senior Li, why is he like this? Is he dead?"

"I don't know." Li Huowang continued to walk.

Yang Xiaohai hesitated before quickly following Li Huowang. This time, Lu Juren did not follow them but just stood there motionlessly.

Yang Xiaohai followed Li Huowang in the darkness as they started moving upwards.

Just as Yang Xiaohai thought he would get out for real this time, there was another earthquake. The sound of a mirror cracking came from both above and below them.

Li Huowang frowned and quickly turned around to look at the place they had escaped from. He saw that the area with the large pillars and pits was changing. Li Huowang cursed when he noticed that the pits were shrinking.

“Senior Li, what’s coming for us?” Yang Xiaohai was worried.

“Evil entities, and those that came from a different world! Someone is trying to revive Kui Lei! We need to run now or we will get affected!”

Li Huowang pulled on Yang Xiaohai and hastened their escape.

“Senior Li, what happens if Kui Lei gets revived?”

“Kui Lei controls the Heavenly Dao of Death. What do you think will happen if he comes back to life?”

The earthquake intensified. Yang Xiaohai suddenly heard the sound of crashing waves that came from the depths of the darkness.

“They are here! We need to go up!” Li Huowang stomped onto the ground and jumped onto the ceiling with Yang Xiaohai.

They hung upside down from the ceiling as they ran. Even though they were upside down, they showed no signs of falling downwards.

Yang Xiaohai soon noticed something had changed on the ground above him. He saw a dark, iridescent sea of water that resembled an oil slick.

The weird-looking water surged towards where the pits were. The vapor of the strange liquid started melting Yang Xiaohai!

He felt his body melting like a lit candle as the wax dripped upwards!

Chapter 663 - Qing Qiu

Yang Xiaohai looked up as he hung from the ceiling. He didn't know what the strange water was, but he felt his body melting and his consciousness fading.

“Quick! We need to run faster!” Li Huowang dragged Yang Xiaohai and ran even faster. Their bodies gradually shrank as the sea started to come alive. It howled and hissed at them.

The waves crashed upwards and became like tongues that lapped on everything that melted off the bodies of both Li Huowang and Yang Xiaohai. The sea was trying to consume them!

Yang Xiaohai felt his brain begin buzzing as he lost strength in his limbs. Just as he thought that he was going to collapse, he saw an upside-down temple in front of him.

The temple had golden Buddhist stone pillars[1] with treasure vases on the roof of the temple. It was built on a large mountain with various stalagmites that resembled spines.

The temple was as large as a mountain. The tip of some of the pagodas were submerged in the strange sea of water but the tips remained unaffected.

“Senior Li, there's a temple there!” Yang Xiaohai shouted excitedly.

“I see it! That's the Antrabhara Temple[2]! It's the exit, so quickly go there!” The closer they got, the larger the temple was. For some reason, the temple exuded an oppressive feeling.

Just as Yang Xiaohai entered the range of the Antrabhara Temple, the sound of a bell came from it. Li Huowang stopped just in front of the temple.

Li Huowang said, “Oh? Yang Xiaohai? What a rare guest.”

Yang Xiaohai saw that Li Huowang was staring at him while smiling curiously. Li Huowang was acting just like Lu Juren.

“Yang Xiaohai, why are you here?” Li Huowang beckoned for Yang Xiaohai to come out of the range of the temple.

Yang Xiaohai hesitated and shook his head.

“Why are you standing there? Come here. Let me ask you something.”

Li Huowang had just raised his foot to walk toward the temple when the bell rang again. Li Huowang stood at the same spot and repeated, “Yang Xiaohai? Why are you here? What a rare guest.”

“Senior Li, are you dead too?” Yang Xiaohai stared at him in fear.

“Dead? Maybe, but I think it’s more correct to say I was abandoned. Come here, let me show you the way out.”

Yang Xiaohai ignored Li Huowang calling for him as he ran towards the upside-down Antrabhara Temple.

Senior Li is actually dead, just like Lu Juren! He’s not even a ghost now—he’s just a fragment of his previous self repeating for all eternity!

Yang Xiaohai had just stepped into the temple when everything behind him disappeared. The sounds of Li Huowang shouting and the churning water both disappeared.

Yang Xiaohai became nervous due to the silence. The temple was strange because there wasn’t a single monk there.

“What’s happening? Didn’t he say that this is the exit? Is he fooling me?”

Just then, Yang Xiaohai heard something from above. He looked up and saw that both the monks and the Buddhas’ statues were up there.

Rows of Lamas[3] were wearing red robes as they chanted in unison. They were also turning a prayer wheel in their hands.[4]

Yang Xiaohai realized that the reason he saw nothing when he first came in was because he was upside down!

Before he could react, the verses of the mantra forced their way into his ears. Yang Xiaohai felt his body go numb before his consciousness faded.

“Weng Ni Yi ma Ha Yan Ah Mi Ah Niu...”

He lost consciousness and fell downwards as his body merged with the mantra scroll. Then, the Lamas spun their prayer wheels repeatedly with their skeletal hands.

“Xiaohai! Xiaohai! You can’t die!” Yang Xiaohai groggily heard a familiar voice calling for him.

“Xiaohai! How am I supposed to go on living if you’re gone?!” the person wailed.

As the voice got louder, Yang Xiaohai struggled to open his eyes, finding that they were sealed shut by his own coagulated blood. With some pain, he forced his eyelids to open slightly and saw Zhao Xiumei’s crying face.

“Husband! You are awake! You are finally awake!” Zhao Xiumei quickly took out some pills from her gourd and forced them into Yang Xiaohai’s mouth.

“Ugh, I can’t eat too many Blood Nourishing Pills, or all of my blood will get clotted.” Yang Xiaohai ate three and spat the rest out.

Zhao Xiumei placed a gourd filled with water near his mouth. Yang Xiaohai took some sips and felt his mind clear up. He struggled to stand up and saw that they were stuck in a ravine. The water had disappeared, and all he saw was the ground.

“Xiaohai, are you okay? Do you still remember me?”

Yang Xiaohai inspected his body. He realized that his left arm was twisted in a strange direction, and even his fingers were twisted.

He felt his head hurt. Apparently, he hit his head when he fell.

“Xiaohao, how are you feeling? Don’t scare me... Are you okay?” Zhao Xiumei saw Yang Xiaohai staring at her blankly and almost cried.

The three children were jumping around, scratching their ears and cheeks like monkeys.

Yang Xiaohai touched the top of his head and felt a large blood clot on the top of his head. He checked the inside of his clothes and saw the scepter that Li Huowang gave him was there too.

“I think I had a strange dream. I dreamed that Lu Juren and Senior Li were dead.”

Even Yang Xiaohai wasn't about whether everything he saw had actually happened.

“Xiaohai, that's enough. Let's get out first.”

Zhao Xiumei tied him to herself with a rope before she climbed up the ravine. The three children had prepared a rope, which they tied to the top of the ravine.

“Xiumei, don't do this. Let me rest a bit first. We can't go up like this.”

“Don't worry. I'm not a weak damsel. I followed my father and worked in the fields ever since I was ten. I'm actually very strong.” Zhao Xiumei pulled herself and Yang Xiaohai upwards while holding onto the rope.

The three children climbed up like monkeys and didn't need a rope.

Zhao Xiumei was sweating buckets when they finally crawled out from the ravine.

Yang Xiaohai raised his head in pain and saw that Qing Qiu had completely changed. The hills had moved. Areas where hills once stood were now flat, while new hills had formed in other places.

Chapter 664 - Dismiss

Li Huowang was wrapped in a dense murderous aura as he slowly walked into Shangjing with his horse. His red robes were now even redder. No one dared to get close to him.

His appearance naturally attracted the informants inside the city but they were already used to it.

The informants knew that Li Huowang was close to the Emperor. There was no reason to dig into Li Huowang's identity unless they wanted trouble.

Li Sui was currently wearing the skin of Princess Anping. She sat sideways on the horse as her head nodded in sync with the gait of the horse. She seemed tired.

Cowheart Village was quite far from Shangjing, but Li Huowang had gone back to clear out the bases of the Dharma Sect surrounding the village. Li Sui used this opportunity to take Princess Anping's skin. She also let them know she and Li Huowang were safe, and told them about the Lu family's tragedy.

Li Huowang went straight to the Surveillance Bureau, taking no detours.

"Where else are the Dharma Sect hiding? In which places are they instigating rebellions?" Li Huowang questioned the man behind the counter.

"Eeek... Dear Sir, please wait a moment." Nangong Yun was sweating as he checked his record.

Nangong Yun was a careful person. He knew that Li Huowang was now related to the Emperor and had a different position now.

"Dear Sir, most of the larger bases have been cleared out, all thanks to you. Also, let me calculate your rewards for all the missions you've completed."

Li Huowang waved his hand in dismissal. “No need.”

He didn’t accept the missions for the rewards—he did it because he really wanted to destroy the Dharma Sect. He needed to stop their expansion and prevent the Liang Kingdom from ending up like the Qi Kingdom.

Li Huowang exited the Surveillance Bureau and decided to go find Gao Zhijian. After working in the Surveillance Bureau for so long, he knew that the information disseminated by them was often incomplete.

Li Huowang would not rest until the Dharma Sect was completely eradicated.

He had just exited the Surveillance Bureau when he saw someone he didn’t expect. Lu Xiucui was standing in front of Li Huowang with a bronze coin sword behind his back. Lu Xiucui had stubble and his eyes were bloodshot as he held onto the reins of two horses. Both horses were foaming at their mouth and looked like they could collapse at any moment.

“Master, where is my father?” Lu Xiucui’s voice was hoarse, as if he already knew the answer.

Li Huowang said nothing and guided him to the small estate. Lu Xiucui hadn’t even entered the estate when he heard a familiar singing voice. Lu Xiucui trembled as he entered. He finally saw the crazed Lu Zhuangyuan behind a room with iron bars.

Lu Zhuangyuan was singing grandly like a general on the stage.

“I miss my mother and wife~ For there’s no one I can rely on here~ I looked in the direction of my home and saw how far away it was~ I fear that the distance has delayed our reunion~”

Even though there weren’t any instruments, his years of experience in performing still stirred the emotions of his listeners.

“Father!” Lu Xiucui held onto the iron bars and shouted.

But Lu Zhuangyuan didn’t react as he continued to sing.

Just then, an old eunuch came down from the second floor with Xiu'er in his hands.

The eunuch knelt to Li Huowang. "I greet you, dear Sir. When you were away, Sir Lu was living well. He could eat and sleep."

Li Sui carried Xiu'er in her tentacles and played with her, but Xiu'er remained silent.

"Master, what about my brother? And my sister-in-law?" Lu Xiucan's eyes were red when he asked.

Li Huowang looked at the corner of the room. Lu Xiucan followed his gaze and saw the two urns on the cabinet. The urns were white and had red paper stuck onto them.

Lu Xiucan walked over and held onto the two urns as he cried.

He had a family. He didn't like his family because his father was stubborn, his brother was a wimp, and his sister-in-law was very calculative. But now he had lost all of them. He just didn't like them—he never wished for his family members to be gone.

He cried for a long time before he asked Li Huowang, "Master, where is my nephew? Where is Lu Tongsheng?"

"I don't know. He was supposed to be with your father. He was missing by the time your father became crazy. I tried divining but couldn't find him. I fear that he's dead in the war," Li Huowang answered simply.

Lu Xiucan stood up suddenly and pointed at Li Huowang as he cried. "You! It's all your fault! And also Gao Zhijian's! Why did you bring them here?! Why did you give them a theater? WHY DID YOU LET THEM ENJOY THEIR RICHES? IF THEY WERE STILL AT THE VILLAGE THEY WOULD STILL BE ALIVE!"

Li Huowang stood still and didn't react.

After he cursed Li Huowang and Gao Zhijian, Lu Xiucan crumpled to the ground while he cried. He kept slapping his own mouth out of frustration. He slapped again and again until his hands were swollen. Blood dribbled from his mouth without any signs of stopping.

It wasn't until Lu Xiucui's cheeks were swelling due to his own slaps that Xiu'er jumped down from Li Sui's embrace and hugged him. Lu Xiucui stopped slapping himself and hugged his niece. Both of them cried together.

Li Huowang turned and made his way towards the palace when he saw them hugging. He wasn't cold-blooded. It was just that he had seen the same scene too many times. If he didn't deal with the Dharma Sect, these kinds of tragedies would happen again.

Li Huowang entered the palace without anyone stopping him, though he still felt a lot of people gazing at him from the dark.

However, Li Huowang was used to it.

Li Huowang entered the main palace and saw that Gao Zhijian was having his morning assembly. Li Huowang projected his body image into the ground and turned invisible as he waited for the morning assembly to be over.

"My Lord, Qing Shang is still having a drought without a single drop of water."

"My Lord, He Dong's granaries were burnt in a fire. The people don't have anything to eat."

Gao Zhijian was massaging his temple when he heard the reports. "These were already reported by someone else. Is there anything new?"

No sooner had he said that, a martial officer^[1] looked at Li Huowang before he reported, "My Lord, Hou Shu's envoy committed suicide yesterday by swallowing gold.^[2] Before he died, he had written a letter with his own blood and tears. My Lord, please dispatch the troops to save Hou Shu."

He had just said that when another martial officer stepped forward. "My Lord, the envoy from Qing Qiu brought the Khan's personal enamel gold blade to request for an audience."

Gao Zhijian sighed and waved his hands. "Dismissed."

Chapter 665 - Gao Zhijian

After leaving the noisy hall and entering the peaceful inner palace, Gao Zhijian felt more relaxed. He looked at the greenery and flowers in the garden and sighed.

He entered the garden and sat down on a stone stool to enjoy the peace and quiet.

Suddenly, he stood up and approached a boulder in the garden before he lifted it up.

He threw the boulder up high and caught it with his bare hands. He then used the boulder to practice the martial techniques he had learned from the military cultivation manual. The eunuchs observing him from the darkness were frightened.

Gao Zhijian sighed when a thin film of sweat covered his body as he placed the boulder down.

Even though the palace had everything he wanted, he still preferred the days he lived in Cowheart Village. He could see the woman he loved, and he could use his strength to protect his comrades. More importantly, he was not as smart as he is now. He didn't have to worry about so many things.

"You are lacking as an emperor. What kind of emperor merely listens and does nothing?" Li Huowang appeared from a shrub.

Gao Zhijian sighed and sat on the boulder, seemingly unsurprised by Li Huowang's sudden appearance.

Gao Zhijian said, "The Dharma Sect is causing a lot of trouble, and the refugees from the Qi Kingdom as well as the war have drained the palace of much of its money. What else do you think I could do? I can't conjure money out of thin air. Senior Li, being the Emperor is not as simple as it looks. Still, it's reassuring that there are many officials in the palace who could deal with it, albeit simply. The people would have to compromise.”

“Compromise? Deal with it simply? If those issues aren’t dealt with properly, people will die!”

“Then what do you think I should do? What would you do if you were in my position?” Gao Zhijian didn’t know what to do.

He continued, “Everyone says that the Liang Kingdom is the best kingdom in the world, but only the people working inside know that this ‘best’ is nothing but a sham. We have leaks everywhere, and all the Emperor can do is patch up some of the leaks here and there.”

Gao Zhijian took a deep breath before he said, “Senior Li, I’m so sorry. I know that I shouldn’t talk to you about this, but I have so many things to worry about.”

Li Huowang shook his head. “Don’t worry. I understand your predicament, and I don’t blame you, but the issue with Hou Shu and Qing Qiu is of utmost importance. You need to prioritize it. They are fighting the Dharma Sect directly. If we don’t help them and they get taken over, the Liang Kingdom will be in big trouble.”

“I know, I know. But the Dharma Sect in the Liang Kingdom hasn’t been dealt with yet. We haven’t even sorted out our own problems, so how could I have the strength to go help the others?”

Li Huowang suddenly pieced the news together and frowned. “Zhijian, do you think the reason why the Dharma Sect suddenly attacked the Liang Kingdom was so that they could distract and keep us here?”

Li Huowang had been perplexed as to why the Dharma Sect had suddenly attacked Shangjing with those cannon fodders. It was unrealistic for them to think that they would win.

But what if they didn’t want to win? What if they just wanted to stall the Liang Kingdom rather than kill Gao Zhijian?

Li Huowang then remembered how the cannon fodders of the Dharma Sect could, at best, catch their eye then die like flies, without achieving any significant goals. Even though it was troublesome to deal with them, Li Huowang realized that they hadn't encountered any significant foes—even Taishan Shi was absent. All of this made Li Huowang think that this possibility was very plausible.

“And what if you know that they are using this tactic?” A voice came from the small forest to the left.

Li Huowang saw the Imperial Preceptor walking out from amongst the trees.

The Imperial Preceptor said, “Are you not afraid that they would attack us if we send out our forces? Do you really think the world would be at peace if the Dharma Sect is eradicated?”

“Then would you rather they expand without any restriction?”

“Of course not. We have our methods.” The Imperial Preceptor took a step back.

Gao Zhijian stood up and looked at Li Huowang. “Of course, we need to help. The Surveillance Bureau had sent people over there. We will see how many troops we can squeeze out to help them after the situation stabilizes here.”

“How much you can send?! Zhijian, we're talking about the Dharma Sect that worships god Yu'er! Do you understand how terrible it is to fall to them?! We need to fight to death against them! Do you know what happened to the Qi Kingdom when they were overtaken by god Yu'er?! Do you know what happened to the Qi Kingdom?!” Li Huowang unsheathed his spine sword and swung it at a vase.

A rift shot forward and a strange liquid poured out. The liquid splattered onto the flowers and grass. A strange sound arose as the flowers and grass started crawling around as they tainted the ground itself.

The Imperial Preceptor frowned and pointed his sword at the sky. Lightning fell from the sky and burned the mutated plants to a crisp.

“I don’t know what that is, but the Qi Kingdom is gone.” Li Huowang sheathed his spine sword again.

“I know. I know that. But Senior Li, do the generals and officials know? Do the soldiers know? Do the people of the Liang Kingdom know? Will they gladly work for half a year without pay? Will they pay their taxes early? Will they join the military and fight? I might have the ability to command them since I’m the Emperor, but I cannot do so on a whim. Every decree I give out will affect a lot of people, and many might die. Senior Li, being the Emperor doesn’t mean I can do anything I want. Those are the actions of a tyrant.”

Gao Zhijian was silent before he worked himself up to console Li Huowang. “Don’t worry. The battle is not as bad as you think. We have our own expectations. Qing Qiu and Hou Shu are also strong, so they won’t get defeated so easily. Also, Xuan Pin brought Zheng Boqiao over. The Chiefs of Qing Qiu, Hou Shu, Si Qi, and the Liang Kingdom will work together so the Dharma Sect won’t be able to do much. Don’t worry. Once the Liang Kingdom stabilizes I will send out the troops.”

Li Huowang doubted his strategy. The Dharma Sect wasn’t an evil entity, but rather an endless army of civilians. The Surveillance Bureau might have a lot of members, but against an entire kingdom of people, they wouldn’t be able to do much. The Surveillance Bureau alone wouldn’t be able to go a long way.

Leaving aside how strong the higher-ranking officials of the Dharma Sect were, an endless amount of enemies was not something the Surveillance Bureau could deal with. More importantly, those who were contracted by the Surveillance Bureau were only working for the lifespan pills. Once danger came, they would abandon their loyalty and run away.

The only organization that could destroy the endless amount of cannon fodder from the Dharma Sect was the military that craved blood and war.

Li Huowang looked at Gao Zhijian and nodded. “Fine, but be quick.”

Li Huowang was about to leave when Gao Zhijian stopped him. “Senior Li, where are you going?”

“Where else? I’m going to Qing Qiu to destroy the Dharma Sect!”

Chapter 666 - Confidant

“Senior Li, Senior Li, wait a moment!” Gao Zhijian hurriedly stopped him upon seeing Li Huowang’s determined expression.

“Senior Li, it’s too dangerous for you to go to Qing Qiu alone. Why don’t you stay here?”

“No need. I’m not that weak. Besides, if I stay by your side, some people might not sleep well at night,” Li Huowang said as he glanced at the Imperial Preceptor.

Since Li Huowang was about to head to Qing Qiu to confront the Dharma Sect, the Imperial Preceptor was naturally very pleased, “Good! Brother Li, you are truly righteous! I admire you!”

Li Huowang snorted coldly, said nothing more, and left Shanjing imperial city, which had been uncomfortable to stay in.

Qing Qiu was far away, and given the unknown state of the battles there, Li Huowang decided to depart that very day to prevent wasting more time.

As Li Huowang stepped out of the main gate, he saw Lu Xiucan standing there with his eyes wide open.

Suddenly, Lu Xiucan bent his knees and knelt in front of Li Huowang. He banged his forehead on the ground and gritted his teeth. “Master, I want revenge! I want to avenge my family!”

Li Huowang looked at him and asked, “Who do you want to seek revenge on?”

Lu Xiucan lifted his head, his eyes filled with extreme hatred. “The Dharma Sect! It was the people of the Dharma Sect who killed my elder brother and sister-in-law. They also drove my father insane!”

During the short time Li Huowang had been in the palace, Lu Xiucan seemed to have figured out some things.

“Against the Dharma Sect’s witches, can you survive with just your mediocre skills?”

“When the time comes to fight, don’t expect me to help you. If I have to take someone along, it will be someone useful and not a burden. Remember, I am not your master. We are done with each other.”

“I am not afraid of death! I am ready to give up my life! Killing one is breaking even. Killing two is a gain!” Lu Xiucan puffed out his chest and roared.

Li Huowang saw the fearlessness in his eyes and knew he was serious this time.

In Li Huowang’s memories, Lu Xiucan had always been carefree. This was the first time he was seeing this side of Lu Xiucan. It seemed the tragedy that befell the Lu family had finally made him mature. He was no longer the ignorant youth he once was.

Li Huowang looked at him for a while, then tossed the Surveillance Bureau’s waist badge and a gourd containing lifespan pills to him.

“If you dare to go through with this, take this to the inner vault of the Surveillance Bureau and exchange it for some life-preserving items. Just say that Er Jiu sent you.”

“Yes, Master!” Lu Xiucan took the items without hesitation and left. He seemed to have already made up his mind.

After returning to his residence, Li Huowang spoke to the eunuch who took care of Lu Zhuangyuan and Xiu’er. “I may have to leave for a while. Take good care of them until I return. If Xiu’er comes of age, find a scholar to teach her. If I die, ask His Majesty what to do with them.”

“Understood, your orders are as good as His Majesty’s. I will not delay in executing your orders!”

After settling his worries, Li Huowang took out a map of Shangjing city and began to plan his travel route.

“Dad, are we leaving again?” Li Sui asked while holding Xiu’er.
“Yes, we are. Go pack up. Once Lu Xiucan returns, we’ll set off.”
Li Sui nodded obediently and went to prepare.

These days, she had followed her father to many places and knew very well what to prepare. She was a great help to her father with these little things.

As Li Huowang replaced his tired horse with a much more energetic one from the inn, there was a knock at the door.

He opened the door and saw Lu Xiucan standing there, his eyes slightly red. “Back already? That was fast. What did you get?”

Lu Xiucan tremblingly pulled out a scroll of blood-red bamboo slips from his chest and handed it to Li Huowang.

“The Profound Records?”

“Yes.” Lu Xiucan nodded. “I didn’t recognize some things and wouldn’t be able to use the others, but I have seen Master use this before. It’s very useful, and it doesn’t require cultivating or breathing techniques. I can use it right away!”

“Do you know the price you have to pay to use this?” Li Huowang opened the scroll and looked at the various horrifying tortures and rituals depicted on it.

“I am not afraid of pain! I want revenge!” Lu Xiucan responded firmly, his eyes filled with a deep intensity.

“Maybe you should reconsider. You are the last male of the Lu family. If you die, your family line ends.”

Li Huowang’s heart had softened a bit, so he tried to persuade him to go lead a peaceful life.

However, Lu Xiucan’s attitude was resolute. “No! I want revenge! They killed my family! I must get back at them!”

“My family was destroyed! If I don’t pay them back tenfold or a hundredfold, what is the point of all the abilities I painstakingly cultivated? Should I just let it go to waste?”

Li Huowang stopped trying to persuade him. He tossed the Profound Records back to Lu Xiucan and prepared to set off.

As he was about to open the door, someone knocked on the courtyard's gate again. Someone else? Who could it be? I shouldn't know anyone else in Shangjing.

When Li Huowang opened the door, a delicate and refined face appeared before him. Her bright, clear eyes looked at him excitedly. This was his confidante in this world.

"Huowang!" Yang Na couldn't contain her excitement and threw her arms around him.

Yang Na's body was very light. She almost jumped onto Li Huowang, who caught her steadily with both hands.

Li Huowang was momentarily dazed when he smelled the faint fragrance of her hair.

After a few seconds, Li Huowang came to his senses. Yang Na had come to find him, and he was seeing her again!

"Nana?" Li Huowang released her, looked at the girl in front of him carefully, and hugged her tightly once more.

"It's me! It's me!" Yang Na hugged him back as she jumped with joy.

After embracing for a while, Li Huowang suddenly felt something was amiss behind him. He turned around and saw Sun Xiaoqin holding a bowl of fruit, standing there with a knowing smile.

Yang Na blushed slightly, then pulled Li Huowang into his bedroom and closed the door.

The two of them looked at each other and then hugged tightly once again. They had waited too long for this moment and felt that no amount of time spent embracing would be enough.

Li Huowang's face moved closer, and he gently kissed her soft, lipstick-coated lips.

Chapter 667 - On The Way

The atmosphere in the room was just right. As Li Huowang was about to continue kissing her, Yang Na suddenly burst into laughter.

Why are you laughing?” Li Huowang was confused.

“I’m just happy. Huowang, I’m genuinely delighted that you’re really out of the hospital. I can’t help but laugh.” Yang Na gave him a heavy kiss on the cheek.

Upon seeing his expression, she coughed lightly and quickly straightened her face, then gently closed her eyes.

“Alright, let’s not talk about it. Let’s start over as if that didn’t happen.”

Li Huowang looked at her delicate face and moved closer. Suddenly, he felt a gaze from outside the window.

When he turned around, he saw Madam Qi holding a pair of binoculars and peering in their direction.

Li Huowang lost all interest. “Madam Qi! Are you enjoying the view? Care to join us? I don’t mind!”

Yang Na could not hold back her laughter as she playfully punched his chest. She walked over to the window and drew the star-patterned curtains.

“She’s so old. How can you joke like that with her?”

“If she weren’t that old, I’d be swearing at her. She’s been keeping an eye on me so closely that I can’t even leave the neighborhood,” Li Huowang said, pulling up his pants to reveal the electronic monitors on his ankles.

“Haven’t you recovered and been discharged? Why are there still so many restrictions?” Yang Na squatted down to curiously inspect the devices on Li Huowang's ankles.

"It's because of what happened before," Li Huowang said. He sat down on a nearby chair as he recounted his experiences with a hint of irritation.

"I gave evidence that those two severed fingers must have belonged to the kidnappers. However, they said the blood on me was all my own, and the fingers had no DNA match. No injured people showed up to claim them either, so they still couldn't fully believe my story."

"I've clearly recovered, which even the doctors have certified, but they still don't believe me. They think I might still have episodes."

Yang Na leaned back on her hands on the bed as she patiently listened to Li Huowang.

"You saw the monitors on my ankles. They say it's to prevent me from being kidnapped again and that it's for my protection. But I know they're just doubling down on precautions."

"Huowang, was there really someone who kidnapped you? Who are they?" Yang Na was worried, and she tilted her head in thought.

Li Huowang recalled what the mad Qian Fu had said in the psychiatric hospital, which cast a shadow over his heart.

"How would I know? Who knows why those people went crazy and decided to kidnap me. Maybe people like me are just rare." Li Huowang changed the subject.

Whether it had to do with Qian Fu or the mysterious Leotians he mentioned, Li Huowang didn't want to drag Yang Na into it. Even more so since Yang Na had been mentally unwell before, as it would be a terrible loss if things got too complicated and caused a relapse.

Once he had a bit more freedom, he would personally go question Qian Fu.

Yang Na brushed a lock of hair behind her ear, revealing her exquisite green earrings, “Huowang, since that’s the case, you should stay home for now. It’s safer that way.”

“I wasn’t planning to go out. I’ve been taking online classes to catch up on the basics. It’s really tough.”

“Online classes? Why—”

Yang Na’s eyes started to well up. Even after all this time, he still remembered their promise to get into the same university together.

“Huowang, I really, really like you.” Yang Na felt touched and hugged him again. The two of them enjoyed the brief moment of warmth.

Soon, Li Huowang’s words broke the tranquility. “Nana, do your parents know you’re here?”

“They don’t. If they knew, they wouldn’t have let me come.”

Yang Na’s expression darkened, but it quickly brightened up again. “Never mind that. You said you’re taking online classes? Let me, the top scorer, help you!”

Li Huowang said, “Can you? I heard that once you get into college, you forget everything from high school faster than you learned it.”

“Don’t underestimate me. What are you studying?”

Yang Na picked up Li Huowang’s phone and skillfully entered her birthday as the password. She opened the newly downloaded educational app, and a series of videos popped up.

Having Yang Na’s help was much better than studying alone. At least, it wasn’t as hard as the previous days, where studying felt like a battle.

Li Huowang took a deep breath, shut off his senses, and concentrated. He pushed the inner sight between his eyes and wrapped it with his primordial breath.

Next, he painstakingly pushed the wrapped primordial breath toward his abdomen.

The ‘Truth’ cultivation method had seven levels, and Li Huowang had already reached the third.

Although the method came from Doulao’s memory and seemed dubious, he didn’t mind.

Since all true and false Heavenly Daos were under Ji Zai, the method was genuine now, despite it being possibly either true or false before.

Li Huowang’s forehead dripped sweat as he struggled to control the wrapped primordial breath.

Each push felt like moving a mountain.

After what felt like an eternity, when he had no strength left, he released all his effort and slowly opened his eyes.

He was close, but there was still progress. He would soon break through the third level.

As he opened his eyes, various objects that floated in the air fell to the ground. Dawn was breaking.

He was almost at Qing Qiu. Since Ji Zai couldn’t help, the stronger he was, the better his chances against the Dharma Sect.

Not long after, Li Huowang saw a convoy, with most of the people having red lotus tattoos on their foreheads. Many had tattoos on their exposed skin, but their clothes obscured the details.

Li Huowang ignored their stares and walked straight into the largest carriage pulled by four horses.

As he entered, Bai Lingmiao handed him a steaming bowl of food.

While he ate, Bai Lingmiao removed his socks and shoes, and then brought over a basin of warm water to wash his feet.

After quickly finishing his meal, he wiped his face with a towel and lay down to rest.

Due to the unusual phenomena caused by his cultivation, he had been traveling at night and hiding by day. The only time he could train was in the secluded spots where the convoy rested at night while they were on their way to Qing Qiu.

“Nana, thank you. You’ve been a great help,” Li Huowang whispered with his eyes closed.

“Senior Li, there’s no need for thanks between us.”

Chapter 668 - Li Sui

A gray wild rabbit hopped swiftly through the forest in the darkness before dawn. In the dim light, its dull fur made it nearly invisible and impossible to spot.

However, the rabbit seemed panicked, and it almost crashed into a tree at one point. The ground's trembling suggested that something was chasing it.

The leaves behind the rabbit were forcefully parted as a large bear charged out, frothing at its mouth and frantically chasing after the rabbit.

As the rabbit was about to be caught, several barbed tentacles suddenly emerged from the bushes and ensnared it like a net. The sudden appearance of these writhing tentacles in the dark forest frightened the bear, as it hastily turned and fled. The tentacles tightened and retracted, dragging a red-eyed gray rabbit to Li Sui's feet.

At this moment, Li Sui focused entirely on the rabbit, paying no mind to the fleeing bear. Li Sui grabbed the rabbit securely as the tentacles slowly retracted back under her skirt. Li Sui gently stroked the rabbit's furry head, then opened her small mouth and forced the upper half of the rabbit in.

Her cheeks bulged as she chewed, and her eyes squinted with pleasure. She enjoyed meat that had many bones. It was juicy and flavorful when she chewed. The only downside was having to spit out the fur before she swallowed.

After finishing the upper half of the rabbit, Li Sui didn't continue with the bottom half. She ran happily toward the nearby dirt road while she held onto the half-eaten rabbit.

"Mom, here you go. This is delicious." Li Sui presented the half-eaten rabbit to Bai Lingmiao, who was trying to start a fire.

“A rabbit? Did you catch this? Such a good girl.” Bai Lingmiao received it, and then quickly skinned the rabbit with her long black nails.

She had gotten along well with Li Sui. Just like a child, some praise would delight her for a long time. As long as Bai Lingmiao treated her sincerely, Li Sui would genuinely regard her as her mother.

“Mom, why aren’t you eating? It’s really tasty and hard to catch.”

Bai Lingmiao smiled gently and shook her head, then cut the rabbit meat into small pieces to add to the white porridge later. “It’s almost dawn. I’ll prepare this for your Dad.”

“Oh.” Li Sui nodded, then jumped back into the nearby woods. “I’ll go see if Dad’s back and receive him.”

“Wait,” Bai Lingmiao stopped her and touched her exposed waist. “Look, your clothes are torn and frayed. If you keep wearing them, they’ll turn to rags. Take my clothes instead.”

After being pulled into the carriage, Li Sui emerged a while later when the sky had lightened. She was dressed in a crescent white outfit, and she dashed toward the woods.

Bai Lingmiao warned, “Suisui, don’t get too close! It’s dangerous when your Dad is cultivating!”

“I know. I’ll just watch from a distance.” Li Sui disappeared into the woods instantly.

Back in the woods, Li Sui didn’t hold back anymore. Various tentacles emerged from her clothes, substituting her feet and making her even faster.

As she neared her destination, she heard a noise from the woods and approached cautiously.

She soon found the source of the noise. It was Lu Xiucan, trembling as he held a red bamboo slip and raised his thumb.

Lu Xiucan gritted his teeth as he pierced three long needles into his nail bed, then pressed his thumb against the ground. “Ahhh!”

“What are you doing?” Li Sui asked curiously and came closer.

Lu Xiucan relaxed his guard when he saw who it was. He knew she was the evil spirit his master raised.

Despite the pain in his finger, Lu Xiucan took a deep breath and forced a response. “I wanted to test how to use this thing so that I don’t mess up when I actually need it.”

“Does it hurt?” Li Sui asked.

“No! Compared to my dad’s madness and my brother’s death, this pain is nothing!” Lu Xiucan gritted his teeth and replied fiercely.

“Oh, then you carry on. I’m leaving.” Li Sui was left confused. She turned and dived back into the forest.

Li Huowang’s cultivation spot was easy to find, as there were few places where trees flew in the sky.

Li Sui climbed to the top of a large tree and watched Li Huowang from afar. He was sitting cross-legged while upside-down, with his head buried in a rock. His body and everything around him floated erratically.

After a while, Li Huowang’s head emerged from the rock and collided with a flying tree, which shattered like bubbles. It was as if all of the world’s rules had ceased to exist around him.

Li Sui quietly observed Li Huowang’s strange cultivation. Though he rarely spoke to her, she understood some things through silent observation. Her father wanted to become stronger to protect them and prevent their deaths. Lu Xiucan had the same goal. He wanted to become stronger too.

Li Sui recalled her father’s opponents. If he wasn’t strong, he would have been killed. This thought made her anxious. She didn’t want her father to die, and she began to ponder how she could help him.

They all want to become more powerful. What should I do to help

Dad?

Usually, she burrowed into her dad and served as an extra hand for him, but she wanted to do more.

The question was complex, and Li Sui couldn't figure out what to do even after thinking for a long time.

She was only a year and a half old, and she had never seen how anyone became strong. Her father was an exception, but she couldn't understand his methods.

She saw Li Huowang's shadow float out from the ground along with his body. She quickly descended the tree and ran towards the carriage. She wanted to ask the others for advice.

"Why do you want to become more powerful?" Bai Lingmiao asked with surprise as she tested the porridge's saltiness with a careful sip from a spoon.

"I want to help my dad and protect him. I want to be useful too."

Bai Lingmiao thought hard, then gently shook her head.

"Suisui, I don't know either. You're an evil spirit and not human. Maybe... you could follow them and worship the Heavenly Mater? She's very compassionate. If you're fated, she might accept you."

Li Sui turned to look at the White Lotus Sect followers gathered by the carriages. They knelt and worshiped a glowing white jade lotus amidst white incense smoke.

Chapter 669 - Stronger

Will worshipping that lotus make me stronger? Li Sui was somewhat confused, and she followed the White Lotus Sect followers in their rituals.

However, after a while, she felt no change and became discouraged. At that moment, a small centipede crawled past her and burrowed into the clothes of a nearby follower.

Li Sui's skirt quickly bulged as the head of a skinned dog shot out. It bit the centipede with its sharp teeth and shook it violently.

Li Sui watched the centipede get torn apart, and she suddenly realized how she could become stronger. She had always imitated her father, but now she understood that she and her father were different.

What her father could do, she couldn't, but there were also things she could do that he couldn't.

Am I Li Sui or Bun? Li Sui didn't want to ponder this question. Instead, she focused on her unique abilities.

When she merged with Bun, she gained its sharp teeth and claws. If she merged with other creatures, wouldn't she become even stronger?

The more she thought about it, the more possible it seemed. Her father often said that Black Taisui was born to possess others. This was her innate ability.

She decided to test this, and she got up to hurry into the forest to find a suitable host.

There weren't many options in the forest, and even fewer that could enhance her power. Fortunately, she had recently encountered one.

As daylight broke, Bai Lingmiao waited for Li Huowang to join her for breakfast. Suddenly, a bear covered in tentacles walked out of the forest, as the ground shook with each step.

“Protect the Saintess!”

Bai Lingmiao stepped out from the protective circle of followers, and looked up in surprise at the huge mass of flesh.

“Suisui?”

The bear opened its mouth, revealing Li Sui’s happy face.

“Mom! How did you know it was me? I thought you wouldn’t be able to guess it. Look at all the meat on me. I’m really strong now.”

Li Sui controlled the bear’s body and walked to a large tree, then shook it with her powerful paws.

The soil scattered, and as the roots loosened, she pulled the tree from the ground. “Mom! Look! I’m really strong now! Aren’t I powerful?”

Li Sui was not just thrilled by her strength, but also by her discovery of how to become stronger.

The Black Taisui’s ability to possess was innate. She could use the strength of more powerful beings by possessing them.

It was not just limited to a bear. As long as she possessed more powerful beings, she could better protect her dad in future.

“Alright, I know you’re strong. Now, get out of that bear skin. You’re getting your new clothes dirty again by burrowing into its belly.”

“Mom, I’m not inside it. It is me!”

Li Sui, Bai Lingmiao, and the nearby White Lotus followers suddenly felt a tugging sensation from deep in the forest, as if the whole world had become a piece of fabric that was being pulled.

“Dad?” Li Sui called out towards the direction of the sensation.

After a moment, a smiling Li Huowang emerged from the forest. Around him, bushes and tree trunks twisted and collapsed to clear his path.

another step!” Li Huowang announced the piece of good news to Bai Lingmiao.

“Brother Li, that’s so quick! We haven’t even reached Qing Qiu yet!” Bai Lingmiao understood what he meant, since she had spent a lot of time living with Li Huowang.

According to Brother Li, there were seven chakras in his ‘Truth’ cultivation. His ‘Truth’ cultivation abilities were enhanced each time he advanced through a chakra.

“I don’t know why it was so fast this time. Maybe I’m talented.” Li Huowang knew that the stronger his cultivation, the better he could deal against the Dharma Sect when he went to Qing Qiu and Hou Shu.

This way, not only could he materialize things in a faster and simpler fashion, he could maintain them for a longer time as well.

Li Huowang noticed Li Sui inside the bear. “Suisui, what are you doing?”

“Dad, you became stronger! Look, I became stronger too! I can help you now!” Li Sui explained in excitement.

Li Huowang took the rabbit porridge from Bai Lingmiao then sat down to eat. As soon as he tasted it, his expression turned serious. Although the porridge looked delicious, it had no flavor.

Li Huowang handed the bowl to Bai Lingmiao to see if it was just him affected. “Taste this.”

Bai Lingmiao tasted it and was puzzled. “Strange, I added salt, but there’s no flavor.”

“It’s not just the salt. There’s no taste of meat or rice. This is a Natural Disaster!” Li Huowang looked up at the sky and wondered what was happening in Baiyu Capital.

Natural Disasters signified changes in the Heavenly Daos or problems with the Simings.

“Senior Li, it’s true! There’s no taste or smell at all!” Bai Lingmiao exclaimed in surprise.

Li Huowang conducted several tests. The disaster only affected taste and smell for now, and he did not know if this was good or bad news. It was not too scary to lose these two senses for now, but it could be just the beginning.

Ji Zai was also a Siming. If someone seized Ji Zai's Heavenly Dao, the previous troubles that had vanished could return. Doulao's fate showed that even Simings could die!

Is this related to god Yu'er expanding his influence? Is he seizing the Heavenly Daos of other Simings? Li Huowang pondered.

He didn't know which Siming governed taste and smell, nor whether that Siming had followers on earth.

"Let's go. We need to reach Qing Qiu as soon as possible!" Since the Surveillance Bureau existed to prevent Natural Disasters, they must know something.

As Ji Zai was useless now, the only way to gain more information was through the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang wasn't sure how much he could contribute in this catastrophe, but he was determined to give his best.

He urged the horses forward and the carriage sped off, leaving trails of yellow dust behind.

Chapter 670 - Bintie City

The iron wheels of the carriage rolled slowly, leaving deep tracks in the yellowed grass.

Li Huowang sat in the carriage and gazed at the grasslands, recalling his last visit to this place.

He didn't know much about Qing Qiu other than that most of its people were nomads, generally lean, and dark-skinned.

He also remembered two unique factions in Qing Qiu: the Antrabhara Temple, which worshiped death, and the bizarre Lion Dance Palace.

The grass in Qing Qiu really has turned yellow. Is this some premonition? Li Huowang leaned slightly to the left and ran his fingers through the yellow grass.

He then thought about the recent Natural Disaster that caused loss of taste and smell, which had lasted only three days. This wasn't comforting. The recent Natural Disaster had been minor, but what if the next one was extremely severe?

Li Huowang wanted to understand what was happening, but nobody outside the Baiyu Capital would know what was happening in the heavens.

At this point, his sharp eyesight spotted a small black dot on the yellow horizon in the distance. As the carriage drew closer, the small black dot became larger as they approached and eventually revealed the outline of a city.

"This should be Qing Qiu's Bintie City?" Li Huowang muttered to himself.

He had made some preparations before he came. This was the only city in Qing Qiu and also the capital.

Building a city seemed impossible in a place without wood or stone. Bintie City was an exception that rose starkly in the barren land.

The Great Khan of Qing Qiu and the Surveillance Bureau of Qing Qiu were also located here.

Since Hou Shu was battling the Dharma Sect, rushing into Hou Shu to kill the Dharma Sect members wasn't feasible. It would be inefficient and alert the enemies, resulting in minimal casualties to the Dharma Sect while harming some civilians. It was better to first contact Qing Qiu's Surveillance Bureau to gather more information.

Additionally, the Imperial Preceptor mentioned that the Chiefs of the Surveillance Bureau from the Great Liang and Si Qi should also be here.

As Li Huowang pondered, the distinctive smell of sheep and horse dung gradually filled his nostrils.

Perhaps due to Qing Qiu's suitability for breeding livestock, the outskirts of Bintie City were littered with cow and horse dung. Sparse patches of grass were interspersed with piles of dung from both livestock and humans.

When Bai Lingmiao saw the carriage wheels roll over a fresh pile of cow dung, smearing them greenish-brown, she frowned. "This place is filthy, almost as bad as the Benevolent Nunnery."

"Endure it. It's clear there's no sewage system here," Li Huowang said and lightly shook the reins.

The carriage sped up towards the city. They winded through cattle, sheep, and horses, then finally squeezed into the city. It wasn't much better inside.

There were buildings of all kinds inside—tents, wooden houses, and stone houses. They were haphazardly arranged without any signs of planning.

Countless feet trampled cow and sheep dung, which formed a dense black carpet that covered the roads, just like the stone pavements in the Great Liang city.

The streets were very crowded. Although there weren't many humans, almost everyone herded some livestock, which made it incredibly congested.

Children squatted and defecated by the roadside, which made the smell even more unbearable.

"Let's continue inward! The inner city should be better!"

The carriage slowly moved inward. The initially grim faces of the group gradually improved over time.

It was not because the environment improved—it was because their noses had slowly gotten used to it.

"Dad, what's that?" Li Sui pointed to a luxurious white building against the city wall in the distance.

The building was enormous and could be considered the largest in Bintie City. However, it didn't look like it belonged to royalty.

Li Huowang surmised that the Great Khan of Qing Qiu might not be the highest authority, as there were others who seemed to hold an even higher status.

"That should be a temple, right?" Li Huowang guessed as he saw the high spire and thought of the Antrabhara Temple.

He scanned the surroundings and noticed some Lamas wearing black sheepskins and cockscomb hats.

All the Lamas were elderly, frail, and had dark spots that covered their bodies, much like psoriasis.

Li Huowang noticed their bone ornaments, then gripped the reins and urged the carriage to move faster.

Despite the filth, security was tight. Before they could approach the royal palace, they were surrounded by light cavalry with bows and swords. There were even falcons on their shoulders and dogs following the horses' hooves.

Li Huowang did not want to waste time, especially when it came to potential communication issues. He directly tossed his Surveillance Bureau waist badge over. "Is Xuan Pin here? Tell him

I've arrived!"

Li Huowang was not brought to see Xuan Pin, but he was led through an underground tunnel.

Though Bintie City looked filthy outside, its inner city was surprisingly clean. For some reason, all Surveillance Bureaus were located underground.

The sheep oil lamps on the walls burned slowly and crackled. Li Huowang observed a peculiar woman remaining silent before him.

He couldn't discern her origins. Though he had seen many strange people, this was his first time seeing someone whose face was covered in white powder with red patterns.

This Qing Qiu lady dressed revealingly. Cloth was used to cover the important areas, but everything else was exposed and intricately painted with floral and complex designs.

A row of people wearing large bamboo hats stood behind her. The hats almost entirely covered them, and only their legs were visible.

They stood there silently, which added a layer of mystery in the dim environment.

"Why are you seeking the Surveillance Bureau of Great Liang?" The woman questioned Li Huowang coldly.

Li Huowang replied bluntly, "Send someone qualified to speak. You're not qualified."

The woman's response caught him off-guard. "I am the Chief of Qing Qiu's Surveillance Bureau. Am I qualified enough now?"

Chapter 671 - Trouble

“Are you the Chief of Qing Qiu?”

“I know who you are, Li Huowang. What are you doing in Qing Qiu?”

“Xuan Pin told you?” Li Huowang frowned. It seemed that the intelligence networks of the various Surveillance Bureaus were exchanging information.

The woman replied, “No matter who told me, you must answer my question now. What are you doing in Qing Qiu?”

“What am I doing in Qing Qiu? Of course, I’m here to help deal with the Dharma Sect! Isn’t that obvious?”

The woman sneered, “I heard you’re from the Emperor of Great Liang, who promptly refused the Great Khan’s request for troops and instead sent you here as if offering charity?”

Li Huowang’s frown deepened as he looked at the woman. Her attitude seemed quite off. Is there a complicated history between Qing Qiu and Great Liang that I don’t know about?

“You know me, so you should also know my abilities. Isn’t that enough?”

“Hehe, well, I would like to test whether you, Li Huowang, are as formidable as people say,” she said and stood up. “I am Bian Zhen, trained in unorthodox methods. Please instruct me.”

“Unorthodox methods?” Li Huowang sized up the woman before him and gripped the spine sword slowly with his right hand.

As the atmosphere grew tense, Li Huowang saw the woman’s body gradually melt and transform into the tall appearance of Xuan Pin.

“Xuan Pin, what do you mean by this? Do you really have the time to prank me at a time like this?”

Xuan Pin lightly inserted his slender finger into Li Huowang's forehead and then withdrew it. Li Huowang's forehead remained unscathed.

"I'm not actually here. I just received news of your arrival and hurried over. Bian Zhen, there's no need to test him. I know Li Huowang's capabilities."

Bian Zhen stepped out from the Chief's body, looked Li Huowang up and down, then turned on her heel to leave.

Since no one else was around, Li Huowang quickly said, "Alright, since we know each other, let's skip the formalities. What's the overall situation? How far has the Dharma Sect's influence spread?"

Li Huowang needed to quickly understand everything happening here to determine the best way to increase his side's chances of victory.

Xuan Pin did not answer Li Huowang's question and posed his own instead. "Did you bring the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect with you? Why?"

"Does that need to be asked? The Dharma Sect has spread so rapidly because the gullible masses believe their god Yu'er can save everyone. We need to counter that by promoting the belief in the Heavenly Mater. At least for now, the Heavenly Mater is on our side."

Xuan Pin nodded. "Correct, but you need to think several steps ahead. You must enlist multiple factions to undermine the Dharma Sect's foundation, and avoid replacing one problem with another."

"In fact, we have already spoken with other sects. Many disciples have descended from their mountains and have begun to move within Hou Shu."

"I don't care about that. I need the current situation in Hou Shu."

"The situation is dire. Although Hou Shu's troops are steadfast, they are on the brink of collapse. The Dragon Vein of Hou Shu was severed yesterday right before noon,” Xuan Pin said, and the atmosphere in the room grew heavy.

Li Huowang knew the dire consequences of a severed Dragon Vein. It wouldn't be long before Hou Shu became a living hell.

“Weren't Hou Shu and the Dharma Sect locked in a fierce battle? How did the Dragon Vein get severed so quickly? What happened?”

“I don't know. We communicated with Hou Shu's Chief just the day before yesterday. The Dragon Vein was intact and protected by layers of traps. The Dharma Sect hadn't even approached Hou Shu's royal city at that time.”

“How did such a drastic change occur in just one day? I can't figure it out. There must be some significant underlying cause.”

Li Huowang frowned and paced the room, pondering how he could help now.

He recalled Gao Zhijian's experience and said, “Even a severed Dragon Vein can be reconnected. Can we find a way to reconnect Hou Shu's Dragon Vein?”

“Theoretically, yes, but where will we find a suitable hidden descendant? Moreover, the Dragon Vein is now in the hands of the Dharma Sect. How do we retrieve it?”

The Chief paused briefly and corrected himself. “Just now, news came from Zheng Boqiao in Hou Shu that the Dharma Sect is already using Hou Shu's Dragon Vein.”

Li Huowang frowned deeply and bit his lip as he considered the situation. He knew the power of the Dragon Vein. This situation would only worsen Hou Shu's predicament.

After a moment of contemplation, Li Huowang looked up at Xuan Pin. “I'll go to Hou Shu now and handle the Dragon Vein issue. Can you find a suitable descendant? For now, let's focus on reconnecting Hou Shu's Dragon Vein!”

Xuan Pin replied, “It’s difficult to find. Each royal bloodline is accounted for and one emperor can’t serve two lands, unless you can find another royal family from the Great Qi.”

“Does that mean we give up just because it’s difficult? Should we switch roles? You handle the Dragon Vein?”

Li Huowang pulled out a map from his pocket and spread it on the table. “Look closely. If we lose Hou Shu and add it to Si Qi and Nanping, the Dharma Sect’s domain will be larger than the Great Liang’s!”

Xuan Pin looked at the map on the table, thought for a moment, and then nodded lightly. “Alright, you retrieve Hou Shu’s Dragon Vein. I’ll find a descendant, even if it’s not a royal. This will prevent the Dharma Sect from using the Dragon Vein.”

“Good. First, tell me the Dragon Vein’s location, and I’ll set off immediately!”

Shangguan Yuting emerged from Xuan Pin’s large red robe and bowed to Li Huowang shyly.

“She will inform you of the Dragon Vein’s approximate location. I will also command those remaining in Hou Shu to give you as much assistance as possible.”

“Alright.” Li Huowang turned to leave the dimly lit inner city.

Xuan Pin’s words made him pause. “Be careful. The Dharma Sect will surely guard the Dragon Vein heavily, and many people will be around it. Moreover...”

“Moreover, what? Spit it out. Why do you always speak in incomplete sentences?” Li Huowang replied impatiently.

“Moreover, I always felt there was something suspicious about the loss of control over the Hou Shu’s Dragon Vein. Although negligence previously occurred due to the distraction of Shai Zi from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, the Surveillance Bureaus of other countries are not to be trifled with. The strength of the followers of the Dharma Sect seems to have increased too rapidly.”

“What do you mean by that?” Li Huowang’s frown deepened.

“I suspect we’re not just dealing with god Yu’er. Perhaps one or even two more hidden figures are aiding the Dharma Sect.”

Chapter 672 - Boat People

“Not just god Yu’er?” Li Huowang felt a chill run down his spine. He had been in Great Liang all this time and hadn’t paid much attention to what was happening here.

Now, thinking back, Xuan Pin was right. When the Dharma Sect first appeared, the various Chiefs of the Surveillance Bureaus pursued and blocked them, and even the military was employed to deal with them.

Yet, despite such circumstances, they managed to destroy Si Qi and Nanping and then advance into Hou Shu.

Even if these countries were not in good condition, plagued by constant war and corrupt governments, the expansion of the Dharma Sect was unusually rapid.

“Does this mean there’s another Siming opposing us along with god Yu’er?” Li Huowang asked Xuan Pin, his expression extremely grave.

Regardless of which power was responsible, the root problem seemed to lie with the Dharma Sect.

Xuan Pin shook his head slightly, “Opposing us? Why do you think all Simings would be on our side? Can you guess what a Siming thinks? Do you truly believe them even if they say they will help you?”

These words left Li Huowang feeling unsettled. A terrifying thought crossed his mind, “Are you suggesting that all the Simings in the Baiyu Capital are actually allied with god Yu’er?”

“The Surveillance Bureaus are meant to observe the heavens. No matter what, don’t rely on others, and don’t place your lifeline in someone else’s hands,” Xuan Pin said, then his enormous red robe gradually began to turn transparent.

“No matter what is helping the Dharma Sect behind the scenes, be careful when you reach Hou Shu. There are still many things in this world that can kill you.”

“Though I can’t trust you, we are allies in dealing with god Yu’er. I’ve informed the Chief, and they will assist you with anything you need.”

Xuan Pin’s body completely disappeared and left Li Huowang alone.

In the dim underground room, Li Huowang stood in deep contemplation for a long time. Finally, he turned and strode out of the dark chamber.

Li Sui and Bai Lingmiao had been waiting for him, and they immediately approached him. “Senior Li, how did it go? Did they give you a hard time?”

Li Huowang shook his head slightly and replied, “No, it’s fine. Have your people resupply quickly. We’re leaving this city.”

“We’re leaving already? Where are we heading?”

“Hou Shu.”

“Hou Shu? Really? That place is currently at war. In recent times, people have only been fleeing from there, not going in,” the boatman with a missing incisor said.

He was barefoot and squatted on the deck as he eyed the two young people before him. One was a teenager, and the other a young woman in her twenties or thirties. Their age gap didn’t seem like they were mother and child. They looked like they could be siblings, but their interactions suggested otherwise.

“It’s fine. We’re not going deep into Hou Shu. We just need a boat to the edge of Zhenhai Cape. Boatman, please accommodate us.”

As the boatman hesitated, Yang Xiaohai handed him a letter written by Sun Baolu’s clan members. “I don’t want to travel aimlessly in these chaotic times, but I’m part of the boat people. My parents are still there, and I need to save them. I have no choice.”

“Boat people? You don’t look like one,” the boatman said, quickly glancing through the letter.

After reading it, the boatman lowered his guard slightly. “It’s good to be filial, but using such a big boat just to fetch you is...”

The boatman saw that Yang Xiaohai was about to hand him some silver. He accepted it and stuffed the letter and silver into his pocket.

“Alright, since I’m a filial son myself, we’ll take this trip for your parents’ sake.”

Yang Xiaohai expressed his gratitude repeatedly. He was finally going to see his family!

The sails unfurled while Yang Xiaohai’s group boarded the sizable, old, flat-bottomed boat with their carriage.

As the boat moved away from the harbor, Yang Xiaohai was excited, but he remained cautious of the boatman. He had prepared enough fresh water and provisions to avoid being drugged.

He had not forgotten how he and Senior Li were previously forced by river bandits to choose between sliced noodles and dumpling soup.

The boatman noticed Yang Xiaohai’s wariness but was equally cautious of him. In these chaotic times, a young man and a woman traveling alone must have some means to protect themselves.

As the days passed and they neared their destination, the initial wariness between them had lessened.

When Yang Xiaohai learned they were close to their destination, he approached the boatman, who was fishing, and asked, “Boatman, how many years have you been sailing?”

“Heh, twenty or thirty years. It’s been even longer if you count my dad and grandpa. This is our old trade. Some things and some people are hard to transport by land, so we go by sea.”

“That long? Have you dealt with boat people before?”

“Of course. Anyone that makes a living at sea has interacted with them.” The boatman suddenly sat up straight and reeled in his line.

“How are they? Are they easy to get along with?” Yang Xiaohai asked nervously.

He knew his family were boat people and lived at sea, but he knew nothing else about them.

The boatman was occasionally reeling and releasing the line. Then, he glanced at Yang Xiaohai. “Aren’t you of the boat people? Don’t you know what your own family is like?”

“I... I was taken ashore right after I was born, so I don’t know what it’s like.”

The boatman didn’t prod him on his poor excuse, and he said, “Boat people? They’re just like those living on land. The men fish while the women dive for pearls. If they have a good harvest, things are fine. If not, times are tough.”

Yang Xiaohai’s expression dimmed slightly. He had been sold during hard times.

“The poorer they are, the more rules they have. I generally avoid dealing with them,” the boatman said as he continued to reel in his line.

Chapter 673 - Boat

“What rules?” Yang Xiaohai couldn’t help but become curious. Farmers on land didn’t have so many rules.

“What rules? Sea rules, of course. We boatmen have a few, like certain surnames can’t board the boat or certain words can’t be said on the boat. The boat people have even more rules than we do, even down to where they can relieve themselves.”

“I don’t know all the details. When you get home, make sure to ask your family so you don’t accidentally break any taboos.”

“Alright.” Yang Xiaohai tried to piece together an image of the boat people in his mind with the boatman’s description.

“But there’s one good thing about the boat people. Whenever there’s anything floating on the water, be it alive or dead, they have to fish it out for a look. If they don’t, their ancestors will be angry.”

With that, the boatman strongly tugged on his fishing rod and pulled up a blue-green fish glistening with seawater. The boatman nodded with satisfaction at his catch, then pulled out a knife from his waist and gutted the fish. He sliced it into thin and translucent pieces. As he poured some soy sauce over the fish, the flesh seemed to tremble as if it were still responsive.

The boatman picked up a few pieces with his fingers and put them into his mouth, chewing on them contentedly. “Want to try? The freshest fish is always the best. Anything that has been out of the water for more than fifteen minutes is sold to those clueless people on land.”

“No, thank you. I don’t eat raw fish,” Yang Xiaohai said, shaking his head lightly.

“Then you’re missing out. This fish is at its fattest now.” the boatman popped another piece into his mouth.

He continued, "Aren't you looking for the boat people? We're here. See those boats clustered together? That's the place you're looking for."

Yang Xiaohai widened his eyes and looked in the direction the boatman was pointing.

He saw houses standing on stilts near the water's edge. They were surrounded by a mix of old and new wooden boats.

"Is that my home? The place where I was born?" Yang Xiaohai felt a surge of emotion. He had endured countless hardships and traveled from Great Liang back to Hou Shu just for this day!

As the flat-bottomed boat approached the wooden island, he began to understand why the boatman had doubted he was from the boat people.

Years of exposure to the elements had given the boat people dark and weathered skin. They wore loose blue-black clothes, with the men often bare-chested and barefoot.

Their dark, smooth skin was adorned with scale tattoos, which covered some even on their faces. Both the men and women had similar tattoos.

Though the boat people looked at him with hostility, Yang Xiaohai felt an inexplicable sense of kinship.

"Excuse me, do you know someone called Chi Baishui?" Yang Xiaohai cautiously asked an old boatman on a nearby boat about his father's name.

The old man just slammed his window shut with a stern face and shut off Yang Xiaohai's friendly gaze.

With no response, Yang Xiaohai moved on to the next person. However, each one ignored him, and their hostility was evident in their expressions.

When he was starting to feel anxious, someone finally spoke to him, "What do you want with Chi Baishui?"

The speaker was a middle-aged man with a wet beard, which suggested he had just come out of the water.

Yang Xiaohai excitedly gestured, "I'm Chi Baishui's son! I'm his son!"

"Son?" The man scrutinized Yang Xiaohai. "I don't recall Chi Baishui having a son."

"Can you take me to see him? He'll recognize me once he sees me. I really am his son."

The middle-aged man glanced at the flat-bottomed boat then waved his hand. "Come on, I'll take you to him."

Yang Xiaohai nodded, gave some instructions to Zhao Xiumei, then jumped into the water and swam over.

Under the man's guidance, Yang Xiaohai leaped quickly between various boats. Most were old and patched up, but they felt strangely familiar to him. After some time, the middle-aged man brought Yang Xiaohai to an old, worn boat.

An elderly woman with graying hair and blue-scaled facial tattoos was sitting at the bow. Her tattoos mingled with her wrinkles, which gave her a bizarre appearance.

She looked confusedly at the middle-aged man. "What's going on, Jiang Erlang? Who is this boy?"

"Is Uncle Baishui here? This boy says he's your son," Jiang Erlang signed to the elderly woman.

When she understood what he was trying to convey, her eyes widened and she looked at Yang Xiaohai. "You... you...you're...Fifth Child?"

Yang Xiaohai was in a daze as he stepped forward, his body trembling slightly. He recalled hearing that his mother had become deaf, and this woman fit the description.

"Mom?" Yang Xiaohai asked hesitantly.

The elderly woman seemed to understand what he said, and she stumbled forward to embrace him.

She rolled up his left sleeve to reveal a faint birthmark on his elbow.

Tears welled up in her eyes as she exclaimed, "Fifth Child, it really is you! I never thought I'd see you again!"

Yang Xiaohai realized this woman was indeed his mother, then threw himself into her arms and hugged her tightly.

When he felt the sense of familiarity and warmth he had only dreamed of before, Yang Xiaohai felt that all the hardships he had endured were worth it. He finally had a mother.

He could proudly defend himself if anyone dared to insult him again!

"Fifth Child, I'm so sorry! I'm so sorry!" The elderly woman cried as she hugged Yang Xiaohai tightly.

The lost son that the Chi Family had sold off had now returned. Once his identity was confirmed, the other boat people softened their attitudes towards him.

When Yang Xiaohai was worried about how to get his cart from the flat-bottomed boat to his home, many boat people brought their boats to help.

After a flurry of action, Yang Xiaohai brought Zhao Xiumei, the three monkey children, and their carriage onto the Chi Family's boat.

"Mom! This is my wife, Zhao Xiumei." Yang Xiaohai gestured to make his deaf mother understand.

"Good! You're so capable, being married at such a young age!"

"Mom, this is mutton from Qing Qiu. Try it. It's very tasty!"

As Yang Xiaohai spoke with his mother emotionally, the other boat people gathered around and watched the warm reunion with smiles and occasional whispers.

Jiang Erlang saw that Yang Xiaohai was genuinely looking for his family, and his expression grew much gentler.

He whispered to a small boy beside him, "Where did Uncle Baishui go? This is so important, and he's not here."

“Uncle Baishui took his son to the Dragon King Temple.”

“Go inform him that the fifth child he sold in the past has found his way back.”

Chapter 674 - Water Banquet

“Mom, this is delicious too. Try this; I brought it especially for you from the Great Liang.

“Oh, and here are some honey dates. I happened to see them on the way and thought they tasted good, so I bought you two pounds.

“Mom, do you like sour things? I brought you a jar of something sour too.”

Yang Xiaohai finally didn't have to pretend anymore in front of his biological mother. He reverted to how a child his age should've been.

“Oh, and this too!” Yang Xiaohai handed a large bag of silver to his mother.

His mom replied, “Oh my, this is too much! No more, it's enough!”

Yang Xiaohai became even more enthusiastic, as though he wanted to empty the entire carriage. After his mother stopped him, Yang Xiaohai finally ceased unloading things.

He started telling his mother about the hardships and longing he had experienced over the years. However, she was deaf and had a confused look, and she was clearly unable to hear much. This left Yang Xiaohai with a lot to say but no way to express it.

“Come, you just got home. You don't know the family yet. Let me introduce them to you.” His mother stood up and pulled Yang Xiaohai towards the other boat people who had gathered around.

“This is your Second Brother.”

“Hello, Second Brother!” Yang Xiaohai greeted the man shorter than him.

Second Brother seemed more reserved and mumbled awkwardly, "Uh... Hey, you're back? Have you eaten?"

"This is your Third Brother."

Yang Xiaohai greeted him, "Hello, Third Brother."

He seemed more mature compared to Second Brother. He patted Yang Xiaohai on the shoulder. "You've grown so big. Good to see you. You were as small as a chick when you were little."

"This is your little sister. Her marriage has been arranged for after the new year, so you must come and celebrate as her brother."

"Definitely."

Aside from his immediate family, his mother introduced him to the surrounding boat people one by one. These were his numerous aunts and uncles.

Through her introductions, Yang Xiaohai realized that all the boat people he had encountered along the way were actually his relatives. The family hierarchy was also very confusing. He even had to call a girl younger than him as Grand Aunt.

Yang Xiaohai didn't mind at all. On the contrary, he was delighted to know he wasn't alone and had so many family members in the world.

After introducing the elders, his mother pulled him towards the back of the boat to introduce the younger generation.

"These two are your Second Brother's kids, so they are your nephews," she said and pointed to two children wearing only dudous.

The two nephews seemed fine apart from being a bit thin. However, the ropes that tied them up made Yang Xiaohai uncomfortable. It looked as if they were raising dogs rather than children.

Yang Xiaohai couldn't help but glance at the three monkey kids near the carriage. They were also tied up similarly when he first met them.

“Mom, why are my nephews tied up?” Yang Xiaohai couldn’t help but ask.

However, his mother was deaf and couldn’t hear him. She continued to pull him along.

At this moment, Jiang Erlang came over to explain, “You’ve been on land too long to understand. We have to raise kids this way on the water. If they’re not tied up, they might fall into the water. That’s how your Second Uncle died.”

“Is that so? But surely they won’t be tied up forever, right?”

“Of course not. Once they are past the childhood age, they can go to the Dragon King Temple and burn incense. They will then be registered as dragon household members, and can be released.”

“Dragon household? What’s that?”

Jiang Erlang touched his scale tattoo and said, “Those like us are the dragon household, which is like registering in an ancestral hall on land.”

“Oh,” Yang Xiaohai said, nodding in understanding. The rules the boatman mentioned earlier had real reasons behind them.

“Dad! Guess who’s here? Fifth Brother is back!” His Second Brother’s voice sounded from the bow. Yang Xiaohai felt a sudden tension. Dad?

Yang Xiaohai and his mother returned to the bow, where he saw a stern old man. He looked a bit younger than Lu Zhuangyuan, with a thick neck and fish scale tattoos on his hands and body.

“...Dad?” Yang Xiaohai stepped forward nervously.

He saw his father jump over from the other boat, then rolled up his sleeve to check his faint birthmark.

The sleeve was rolled back down, and Yang Xiaohai’s father turned to the surrounding boat people and shouted, “Today, my Fifth Child is back! Great news! No one cooks tonight! The Chi family is hosting a water banquet!”

Amidst the boat people's cheers, Yang Xiaohai felt moved as he looked at the small old man beside him. His nervousness disappeared instantly.

That night, Yang Xiaohai finally saw what a water banquet was like. The boats spread out and carved out a waterway.

Two small wooden boats laden with dishes moved back and forth along the edge of the waterway, allowing everyone to take food.

Perhaps because the boat people rarely went ashore, there weren't many seasonings in their food. The dishes mainly consisted of various raw and blanched items.

There were also some dishes from the shore, which were consumed the fastest. These included the hard guokuis that Yang Xiaohai had used as rations on the road.

That night, Yang Xiaohai ate more fish than he had in his entire life. There were all kinds of fish and seafood he had never seen before.

Yang Xiaohai didn't care what these things were and just stuffed them into his mouth. He felt nothing but joy.

He picked up a long sea snail, sucked from one end, then followed his Third Brother's example and sucked from the other end. The meat from both ends tasted different, which gave a unique flavor.

He glanced at his father, who was drinking with his uncles in the cabin. Yang Xiaohai turned to his brother beside him. "Third Brother, I remember hearing that our family has four children. Where's the other one?"

He remembered clearly that the old man had told him there were four siblings.

His Second Brother was eating a bloody shellfish. He answered, "We have an amazing older sister. Our family's success is all thanks to her."

“Our older sister was married as a child bride to a wealthy family and often sends money home. Otherwise, your Second Brother and I wouldn’t have been able to get wives.”

“Oh, I see.” Yang Xiaohai felt a bit disappointed since he had not met one family member on this trip back.

“Where does our sister live? I want to visit her,” Yang Xiaohai said, thinking he could make a detour if it wasn’t too far.

“No need! Our sister is coming home in a few days!” His little sister said.

The little girl had been slightly reserved, but she had warmed up to Yang Xiaohai when she saw that he was good-tempered.

His little sister continued, “She said she would bring me something too!”

Coming home? To avoid trouble? Yang Xiaohai thought to himself, as he was aware of the current situation in Hou Shu.

Chapter 675 - Dragon Household

Yang Xiaohai felt somewhat relieved when he heard that his elder sister was coming home soon. In these troubled times, being on the sea was relatively safer than being on land.

“Fifth Child! Your father wants you to come over.”

Yang Xiaohai quickly acknowledged his Second Brother. He crouched down to wash his hands in the water, then stood up and headed into the cabin.

The cabin was just big enough for Yang Xiaohai to enter without bending down.

“Come on, Fifth Child, have a drink!” His father, Chi Baishui, pulled him over and thrust a cup of wine into his hand.

Although Yang Xiaohai didn’t drink, he glanced at the elders looking at him, then downed the wine in one gulp.

The wine had a strange fishy taste, which made him want to vomit. Everyone else burst into laughter at his reaction.

“How is it, Fifth Child? Not used to it, huh? This is white fish wine. It’s good stuff, it can be both drunk and used as medicine! You’ll get used to it after a while.” Chi Baishui patted Yang Xiaohai hard on the back and laughed along with the others.

“Fish... fish wine? Can you really make wine from fish?” Yang Xiaohai had never encountered such a thing before, even as a cook.

“Of course, you can make wine from fish! Come on, have a seat!” Chi Baishui pulled him to the table.

After several rounds of drinks and dishes, they began to discuss serious matters. Chi Baishui was a little tipsy, as he took a sip of wine and said, “Fifth Child, now that you’re back, go to the Dragon

King Temple tomorrow morning to register into the dragon household. I'll buy you a boat, and you can fish and live with your wife from now on."

Yang Xiaohai was momentarily stunned. Buying a boat? Fishing? Settling down? These things hadn't been part of his plans.

Chi Baishui's face darkened when he noticed Yang Xiaohai's reaction, "Why? Are you planning to leave again? Why did you come back then?"

Yang Xiaohai felt a little panicked at his long-lost father's anger. "Dad, no, that's not it, really."

"Alright, that's settled then. You can go."

Zhao Xiumei saw her husband walk out of the cabin looking puzzled. She stopped shelling the crabs, then quickly stood up and ran over.

"Xiaohai, what's wrong? Weren't you feasting in the banquet?"

Yang Xiaohai was a little dazed. "Xiumei, my father wants me to stay and live here. What do you think?"

Zhao Xiumei turned to look at the swaying oil lamps on the distant boats and the families on them. "I'm fine with whatever you decide. I'll follow you since we're married."

Yang Xiaohai said nothing more and returned to sit with his siblings as they continued to eat at the feast.

After the water banquet, Yang Xiaohai lay in the hammock, but he couldn't sleep. On one hand, he had just met his family. On the other hand, he thought about the fellow disciples who had gone through life and death with him.

He wished he could have both, but it was impossible. He could only choose one side.

Yang Xiaohai finally fell asleep amidst his drowsiness. When he woke again, he saw his mother gently watching him. Her expression showed a fear that he might run away again.

Yang Xiaohai felt a warmth in his heart. He had never experienced such concern from his family before.

“Fifth Child, you’re awake? I’ll take you to the Dragon King Temple. Your father is waiting for you.”

Yang Xiaohai nodded, then got up and helped his mother up the steps of the cabin.

Whether he stayed or left, he needed to be recorded in the ancestral hall, since he was part of this family.

Yang Xiaohai and his mother made their way through the wooden boats on the sea. The uneven paths were tricky, and he occasionally bumped into others’ belongings.

The residents were very welcoming and gave Yang Xiaohai friendly looks.

During the walk, Yang Xiaohai wanted to ask his mother if they should move the family to Cowheart Village, where life was better than fishing out at sea. When he didn’t get a response despite talking for a while, he was quickly reminded that his mother was deaf.

Forget it. I’ll talk to Dad about it after registering in the ancestral records.

After a while, they arrived at a temple with wide eaves. The eaves blocked all the light, making Yang Xiaohai feel a bit oppressed.

“Come on, don’t keep your father waiting. He’s got a bad temper,” his mother said and pulled him inside.

Once inside, Yang Xiaohai was awe-struck by a giant painting in the distance. The dark-toned painting was shrouded in incense smoke and looked especially mysterious.

“Mom, what’s that?” Yang Xiaohai was about to point, but his mother quickly pulled his hand down.

“Don’t point. It’s disrespectful to the Dragon King.”

“Dragon King? But isn’t that a black snake?” The painting depicted a coiled giant black snake without pupils.

“Our Dragon King looks like that. Quickly offer incense. The Dragon King used to be more unreliable, but he’s very effective now!”

Under his mother’s urging, Yang Xiaohai solemnly offered incense, then performed three bows and nine kowtows to the Dragon King’s painting.

While he was kowtowing, a group of people came out, including Chi Baishui and the elders from last night’s dinner.

They were dressed in a brown top and a skirt, with outer ceremonial robes, which made them seem very grand.

Yang Xiaohai looked closely and realized the robes had fish scales, and they seemed to be made of fish skin.

As Yang Xiaohai wondered whether he was now officially part of the dragon household, he saw an elderly man with white hair step forward. This man took out a bamboo scroll and started to chant towards the painting.

Yang Xiaohai couldn’t understand a word. The man’s speech had a heavy accent that made it sound like singing.

However, one name was repeated several times, which Yang Xiaohai barely made out as Ao Wuzhi.

“Kneel~”

Yang Xiaohai heard this and knelt before the giant painting again.

After another round of three bows and nine kowtows, he saw the elders in fish skin robes surround and look at him solemnly.

Before Yang Xiaohai could understand what was happening, Chi Baishui stepped forward and removed Yang Xiaohai’s shirt.

Then, fish spines dipped in ink pricked his skin, causing excruciating pain. He tried to get up instinctively but found he couldn’t move. The fish spines contained more than just ink.

Yang Xiaohai just kept kneeling like that as he glanced sideways at his anxious parents. He endured the pain as the fish spines left scale tattoos on his body, just like the other boat people.

Chapter 676 - Big Sister

“Ouch.” Yang Xiaohai only felt pain and no other sensations as the fish spines stabbed into his skin. The pain was so deep that he could feel it in his bone marrow, but no matter how bad it got, he couldn’t faint at all.

Yang Xiaohai’s consciousness started to fade in and out as time dragged on. As his consciousness wavered, Yang Xiaohai saw the Dragon King slowly move.

It wasn’t until the mural moved that Yang Xiaohai realized the black snake was not the Dragon King—it was his shadow! The real Dragon King was behind the shadow.

As time passed, the shadow moved faster. The Dragon King’s whiskers stretched out like the legs of centipedes from the shadow.

At the very least, Yang Xiaohai thought those were whiskers since they were the only thing that resembles that shape on a dragon. But on closer inspection, he thought it looked more like antennas of numerous insects, or some kind of thread.

The dragon’s whiskers wriggled in the air along with the smoke and incense. As they wriggled, Yang Xiaohai’s eyes widened—he felt an oppressive feeling on his chest that he couldn’t shake, no matter how hard he breathed.

In between the space of the dragon’s whiskers, Yang Xiaohai saw a small section of the Dragon King’s real body covered in scales.

The scales were swimming in water as they slid easily back, revealing a gray eye.

The moment Yang Xiaohai locked eyes with the Dragon King, his consciousness faded immediately and he was drowned in the abyss.

He didn't know how much time had passed when he was woken up by an ancient voice. "Kowtow~"

Yang Xiaohai shivered and quickly looked at the mural to find that the Dragon King was back to normal again. He was no longer suffocating, and nothing had changed.

He quickly looked around and saw his parents were signaling him frantically for him to kowtow.

He looked down on his body and saw the bloody tattoos resembling dragon scales before he realized what was going on. It was part of the procedure to enter the family and not them trying to harm him.

Yang Xiaohai quickly followed their instructions and kowtowed to the mural again.

The ceremony passed without any issues. Ten minutes later, Yang Xiaohai exited from the temple with the scent of incense stuck to his body.

"Mom, why didn't you tell me they were going to do that? It hurts so much," Yang Xiaohai said as he touched the bloody tattoos on his body.

He also wanted to tell his mother about how the Dragon King moved but he didn't know what to say.

"You are so weak. You are already an adult, so why are you so afraid of being in pain?" Chi Baishui scoffed at his own son with disgust before he walked away.

Yang Xiaohai felt humiliated when he saw how his father had reacted.

He wasn't afraid of pain, but he hated how his feelings had been invalidated. Even though it was his own father, he knew that it was not right. He had seen how Lu Zhuangyuan acted as a father.

Yang Xiaohai suddenly felt a cold sensation on his arm. He looked down and saw his mother carefully scattering some incense ash onto his arm.

“Fifth Child, don’t cry. The ashes will stop your bleeding. I will cook two eggs for you to recover later.”

Yang Xiaohai felt a warmth entering his heart. Even though his father was cold, his mother was as kind as he had imagined.

“Mother, I’m not in pain.” Yang Xiaohai shook his head and helped her out.

Even though the process was painful, he felt that it was worth it since he finally joined the family properly.

Back in his boat house, he saw his own father was already in the water. Without waiting for him to react, Chi Baishui pulled Yang Xiaohai into the sea without any warning. Yang Xiaohai struggled to swim up, but Chi Baishui continued to push him down in the water.

Yang Xiaohai struggled until he felt tired, but for some reason, he was not struggling to breathe. He quickly reacted and moved his arm into the water. He then saw his father swimming in the water effortlessly.

Yang Xiaohai finally understood what the teacher in Cowheart Village was trying to explain about the phrase “like a fish in water.”

He felt that he had truly become a fish, swimming without any difficulties. He played in the water until he felt his breath running out. He surfaced and took deep breaths afterward.

Yang Xiaohai was treading on water as he looked at his tattoo with surprise. He knew that the reason why he could swim so fast underwater was due to the tattoo.

“Hmph! Did you really think that your own father would harm you?” Chi Baishui was looking at him with pride before he crawled up onto the boat.

“Father, can everyone swim this fast once they join the family?” Yang Xiaohai swam to the side of the boat and climbed up too.

“Of course. The blessing of the Dragon King is a good thing. We don't let outsiders know about this and will only give it to the family.”

Yang Xiaohai touched his swollen tattoos and didn't know what to say. Still, he thought that his father should have let him know earlier.

“Father! Father!” Both Yang Xiaohai and Chi Baishui turned to see who it was. Yang Xiaohai saw that it was his own sister as she sprinted at them with happiness.

“Father! Guess who just came back?”

She was going to excitedly tell the answer when a woman with short legs pushed her to the side gently. “Father, I am back. Are you doing well?”

The woman looked like Yang Xiaohai's mother. He guessed her age and deduced that she was his elder sister.

But to his horror, he saw the black cloth wrapped on her shoulder!

Dharma Sect! Yang Xiaohai remembered them attacking Cowheart Village! They were even more evil than bandits. To think that his elder sister had joined them!

Yang Xiaohai was caught in a daze when he saw his father staring at her black cloth too.

But instead of being disgusted or angry, he was surprisingly happy. “Oh? You weren't lying? Are you really working for the palace now? To think that they would accept women with bound feet^[1] too!”

“Father, I just gave them some silver. They would accept anyone, regardless of whether they are elderly or children!”

The two of them laughed and entered the tent on the boat.

1. Footbinding was a custom in late imperial China where women would have their feet broken and tightly bound to change their shape and size. It was considered a status symbol and mark of feminine beauty, but it was very painful and resulted in physical impairments. 🤖

Chapter 677 - Father

“Oh, I almost forgot. This is your Fifth Brother. He came back yesterday.” Chi Baishui introduced Yang Xiaohai to his Eldest Sister.

The Eldest Sister looked at Yang Xiaohai’s scale tattoo and nodded satisfactorily. “Fifth Brother, it’s good that you are back. Have you gotten married? Do you need my help finding a wife?”

“Hahahaha, that won’t be necessary. He’s so amazing that he found someone old enough to be his mother as his wife.”

The two of them entered the boat tent. It was only then that Zhao Xiumei rushed towards Yang Xiaohai and held his hands.

“Xiaohai! She’s one of the Dharma Sect! We need to run now!”

Yang Xiaohai hesitated before he reassured her by gently patting her hands. He then walked into the boat tent. “Let me see if I can convince her.”

No matter what, she was his family, and he could not let his family be.

Their lunch that day was more luxurious to celebrate the return of Yang Xiaohai’s Eldest Sister. Even though the dishes were delicious, Yang Xiaohai couldn’t fully enjoy them. He was thinking about how to convince his sister.

“Father, how much silver do we have in our house? Give it to me, and I will try my best to give everyone in our family a position in the palace.”

Yang Xiaohai immediately panicked and stood up. “You cannot do so! The Dharma Sect is an evil sect that kills others! You are pushing everyone in our family into the fire if you do so!”

Yang Xiaohai then explained to them what happened to Cowheart Village, how the Dharma Sect attacked them, and what the old lady from the Dharma Sect had done in the county.

But just as he finished his story, he saw his Eldest Sister and father laughing at him.

His Eldest Sister said, "Fifth Brother, you are still young. Of course, we know they are an evil sect for staging a rebellion, but what if they won?"

She then looked at Yang Xiaohai before taking a sip of the fish liquor. "If their rebellion is a success, then it's not considered a rebellion but a revolution! The Dharma Sect would then become the official religion! Do you know what that would mean for us?"

"I don't know!" Yang Xiaohai shook his head and said adamantly, "An evil sect is an evil sect. They treat human lives as insignificant and have killed a lot of people!"

"What a joke!" Chi Baishui slammed the table in anger. "And do you think the previous officials of Hou Shu valued people's lives? They are all the same! If it wasn't because of us trying to harvest pearls for them, your mother wouldn't have become deaf! It's better if they are eradicated instead."

He continued, "They need manpower now that the new palace and governors are being set up. If you don't become an official now, you will have to rely on harvesting pearls to maintain your livelihood. Do you want that?!"

Looking at Yang Xiaohai clenching his fists on the other side of the table, Chi Baishui waved his hand with frustration. "Nevermind. You haven't even grown all of your hair yet. You won't understand what I'm talking about, so just listen to me and follow my orders."

Chi Baishui looked at his Eldest Daughter. "Then we will do as you said. We didn't spend the money you sent back and your fifth brother brought back a lot of silver, so you can use all of it."

Both father and daughter were temperamental, so they acted immediately after lunch. They took the money and silver from the bottom of the carriage.

Even Yang Xiaohai's carriage was stripped of its valuables as everything he had brought from Cowheart Village was being taken out.

“Don’t worry about the silvers. Give them to your sister and she’ll exchange them for positions in the palace for us. It’s much better than letting the silver rot away in storage.” Chi Baishui was pleased with his plan.

Yang Xiaohai held his wife’s hands and stared blankly at the items being transported out of the carriage. He wasn’t worried about the silver, but he had the revelation that his family wasn’t what he had imagined. He had thought all families were loving and caring, just like the Lu family.

“Father! You can’t do that! The Dharma Sect murders people without a single thought! You will turn all of us into fugitives!” Yang Xiaohai tried to persuade them one last time. He couldn’t let his family die a meaningless death.

“You are still a brat and know nothing! There’s no good or bad person here! Do you think you’re playing house?”

They took out everything and even sold off the carriage and the horse without Yang Xiaohai’s permission.

As if sensing something, the monkey children and Zhao Xiumei stood beside Yang Xiaohai. They were upset too.

“Xiaohai, let’s go back to Cowheart Village. This isn’t how a family should function,” Zhao Xiumei consoled and persuaded Yang Xiaohai.

Yang Xiaohai saw his mother was fetching a bowl of food for him and forced a smile. “Wait, let me think of a plan.”

Yang Xiaohai was busy trying to figure out a way to stop his family. He thought of doing it physically, but he was surrounded by his cousins and relatives. It was a bad idea to resort to physical violence since he couldn’t kill them either.

Yang Xiaohai was still formulating a plan as he lay in the hammock.

The monkey children are very nimble. Should I ask them to steal all the silver from my Eldest Sister? Then they won't be able to join the Dharma Sect anymore.

Yang Xiaohai was still trying to figure out the perfect plan when he heard the chittering of monkeys. Those noises were unique to children trained to be monkeys, and regular people could not emulate them.

“What’s happening?” Yang Xiaohai jumped down from his hammock and carefully tiptoed past his Third Brother. He exited the boat and saw a horrific scene.

His father and Second Brother had tied up the monkey children and were walking further away.

“Father! What are you doing?!” Yang Xiaohai’s voice was trembling when he shouted.

Chi Baishui looked up without a hint of panic. “I don’t know why you picked up these three children. Since they are useless, I might as well sell them for money.” He said it matter-of-factly without a hint of remorse.

Yang Xiaohai felt extreme pain in his heart as he stopped him. “Father, I’ve already given you the silver and the carriage. Why are you also selling them?”

“Since when do you think we have enough money? These three children look like monkeys, so I assume they’ve been trained before. We can sell them for a good price and then give the money to your Eldest Sister to exchange for some positions for us in the palace. We can earn back the money in two to three months anyway.”

Yang Xiaohai had never felt so estranged from his father before. A frightening thought suddenly crossed his mind. Did he really sell me last time just because they didn't have food? Why is he selling people so easily?

Chi Baishui ignored Yang Xiaohai and motioned for his Second Son to continue pulling the monkey children away.

“Wait! Stop!” Yang Xiaohai blocked both of them without hesitation and took out his scepter, “Let them go.”

“Hey, how could you talk to our father like that? Do you want to get a beating?”

“Why? Why did you sell me last time?” Yang Xiaohai shouted at them with tears in his eyes.

“Why? It’s because I’m your father! Kneel!” Chi Baishui rolled up his sleeves.

Their shouting woke the other people. All of them tried to break up the fight.

“Fifth Son from the Chi family, you can’t act like this. He’s your father and you should listen to him. You cannot be so unfilial.”

“Yeah, plus the three children aren’t from our family anyways so we can just sell them.”

“Alright, enough fighting. Just kneel and apologize to your father. We are all family so don’t fight anymore.”

Chapter 678 - Family

“What are you staring at? Hurry up and apologize to your father. Don’t interrupt our sleep.”

“I would’ve tied you and beaten you up if you were my son.”

Yang Xiaohai looked around and couldn’t believe that they were his family and relatives. To them, the three monkey children weren’t humans but rather goods to be sold.

He looked around before staring at his own father as he felt bitterness in his heart.

No, not just the monkey children. He even looked at his own sons as goods to be exchanged for silver.

Chi Baishui saw Yang Xiaohai didn’t kneel even after some time had passed. He felt humiliated by Yang Xiaohai’s disobedience.

He rolled up his sleeves and slapped Yang Xiaohai. “Kneel down!”

Sensing the pain on his cheeks, the bitterness in his heart receded and was replaced by anger. Yang Xiaohai was pissed at his own father!

“I will not! Why should I kneel?! You are not qualified to be my father!” Yang Xiaohai pushed Chi Baishui and shouted at him.

“You fucker!” Chu Baishui was angered too. He looked around and immediately picked up a piece of wood with nails. He swung it at Yang Xiaohai’s head.

Yang Xiaohai’s mother, Second Brother, and Third Brother tried to stop Chi Baishui. The entire place was in chaos when Yang Xiaohai’s Eldest Sister stood up to diffuse the situation.

“It’s fine, father. There’s no need to sell the three children. We are at war and children are worth very little. We have enough silver for now.”

Chi Baishui threw down the wood and scolded Yang Xiaohai.

"I am your father! I will sell the three children, and you must listen to me! If you defy me again, I will sell your wife too!"

Yang Xiaohai's gaze changed when he looked at Chi Baishui. Before this, he didn't understand why Chun Xiaoman would kill her own father. But now he did.

There were evil people in his family too, and they were worse than strangers!

"Alright, father. There's no need to keep scolding him like this." The eldest sister gestured for her Second Brother and Third Brother to pull their father into the boat tent.

"Everything is settled now. Please go back to sleep. I'm sorry for interrupting everyone's sleep due to our quarrel."

After they left, she approached Yang Xiaohai and grumbled, "What's wrong with you? We are all family, so why can't you choose to be softer?"

Yang Xiaohai lowered his head and grumbled, too. His fists trembled as if he had made up his mind.

His eldest sister sighed when she saw how thick-headed Yang Xiaohai was. "We should just let it be for tonight. Our Third Uncle is out in the sea to fish. You can sleep on his old boat and wait till tomorrow to talk about anything else."

She then pointed at the single lonely boat in the distance.

Yang Xiaohai nodded. He held the pale-looking Zhao Xiumei and the scared monkey children towards the boat.

The boat was small and leaking, but Yang Xiaohai just sat disappointedly, like a statue.

"Husband, what should we do?" Zhao Xiumei trembled as she huddled with Yang Xiaohai. It was clear that she was afraid too. The situation here reminded her of the bandit cave.

"This is not my house, and they are not my family! Our home is in Cowheart Village!"

Zhao Xiumei saw that Yang Xiaohai slowly changed from a statue to a living human. His gaze was filled with determination.

“Cowheart Village is our real home, and my Senior Brothers and Sisters are our real family!”

When he was a beggar last time, he had imagined what his family looked like numerous times while cold and hungry. He kept thinking about how well they would treat him.

But now he knew that his family was cold-hearted. If they had been truly good to him, they never would’ve sold him. It was just his wishful thinking, after all!

“How should we leave? They took our carriage and silver,” Zhao Xiumei said with a frown.

“We will just take them back. Those belong to us, so how can they just take them without asking me?”

Yang Xiaohai clenched his fists and said to the monkey children, “The silver is with my eldest sister. You three go and steal the silver while I distract my eldest sister.”

He continued, “Once we have the money, we can buy back our carriage and horse. We will steal the silver while they are sleeping and go back to Qing Qiu!”

Yang Xiaohai didn’t tell the others that without the silver, his family also wouldn’t be able to join the Dharma Sect.

He was discussing the plan with Zhao Xiumei when a sound from outside the boat hull made the both of them shut up.

“Fifth Son, it’s cold, so I brought you and your wife a blanket.” It was his mother’s voice. Yang Xiaohao smiled gently because the only warmth he had felt from his family came from his mother.

He brought her into the boat.

“Haiya, how could someone live here? It’s leaking everywhere, and it’s so humid.”

Yang Xiaohai’s mother was complaining when Yang Xiaohai looked at her. “Mother, I’m leaving now. Do you want to come with me? We can go to Cowheart Village, where you can enjoy a better life."

"What? I'm deaf and I can't hear you. What are you saying?"

Yang Xiaohai pulled his mother out from the boat and pointed at the land far on the horizon. It took some time for her to understand.

"Fifth Son, why are you leaving? We've just met again, and now you're going away again?" Yang Xiaohai's mother cried and begged for him to stay.

Yang Xiaohai shook his head. He didn't want to leave his mother because she was the only one who treated him well.

"Is it because of your father? We are all family, so we should discuss this first."

Yang Xiaohai tried to persuade her to leave, but she wouldn't. The only thing he could do was persuade her not to tell his father.

"Alright, I won't tell him. Fifth Son, remember to write letters for us once you reach land. Come visit us whenever you are nearby."

He saw his mother walking back to the other boat while constantly looking back. There were some lights on the shore as if there were boats, but Yang Xiaohai ignored them. He had more important things to do. In the darkness of the night, he walked towards his sister's boat.

Chapter 679 - Departure

“Sister, can you come out? I need to ask you something,” Yang Xiaohai shouted to the boat as he stood on the platform opposite it.

Yang Xiaohai saw his sister walking out from the boat and led her away from it before he feigned hesitation. “Sister, do they still need workers in the palace?”

“Why? Are you saying you don’t want to see our father anymore and want to come with me? You’re not a kid anymore, so don’t be childish.”

As Yang Xiaohai remained quiet, the monkey children quickly ran into the boat with several stones. They planned to use the stones as a decoy for the silver they were stealing. Their agile and silent nature made it clear that they were used to the work.

The sister looked at Yang Xiaohai before she sighed and said, “You can come if you want, but you have to kowtow and apologize to our father. I know you’re still angry, but no matter how harsh his words are, he’s still your father. I will only take you with me if he forgives you. You’re my brother and you probably can’t be an official for now, but I think I can find some work for you to do. Don’t complain about it, alright? The Dharma Sect is still at war with Hou Shu. Everyone knows that Hou Shu is losing, so once we are victorious, you will also get a piece of the cake.”

Yang Xiaohai saw that the monkey children had stolen all of the silver, nodded, and walked toward his boat.

Back in his boat, he saw the silver in the monkey children’s clutches and sighed, “Alright, let’s pack up and leave now!”

There wasn’t much to pack up since most of it had been sold by Chi Baishui.

Taking advantage of the darkness of the night, they quickly moved toward the shore. It wasn't a smooth journey.

Whenever someone woke up, Yang Xiaohai would swing the scepter so they wouldn't make a sound. By the time they snapped out of it, Yang Xiaohai would be long gone and they would think that they were dreaming.

They finally escaped the wooden huts built on the sea and quickly up the path towards Hou Shu.

Even though he was tired and it was a cold night, Yang Xiaohai felt as if he had revived. He wanted to go back to his true home!

Zhao Xiumei said, "Xiaohai, let's rest a bit. Even the children can't keep up."

Yang Xiaohai turned around and saw the monkey children panting as they carried the silver. The silver was too heavy to be transported by hand without a carriage. Yang Xiaohai looked at the dirt path, took the silver from the children, and placed it in his own stash.

"Alright, let's rest for now, but we cannot sleep. The Dharma Sect is still fighting against Hou Shu, so we need to return to Qing Qiu as soon as possible."

They were resting for a bit when he suddenly saw the path leading to the sea was lit up with torches, as if a fire dragon was slithering up the path.

"Oh no! They are awake!" Yang Xiaohai took the silver and prepared to run when he saw the path in front of him was also lit up. They were surrounded.

Yang Xiaohai soon saw the faces of those holding the torches. They were none other than his family and relatives with his father leading them.

But to his surprise, he saw his mother hiding behind his father. Yang Xiaohai felt as if his head had been hit by a hammer. Being discovered was one thing, but he never would've expected his own mother to betray him!

“You have guts to try and run with the silver!” Chi Baishui was abnormally angry and veins covered his forehead.

Yang Xiaohai’s eldest sister was also upset. She now knew why Yang Xiaohai spoken with her. It was so they could take the silver!

“Shit, beat him up! Don’t hold back and just kill him!” Chi Baishui shouted and Yang Xiaohai saw his own brothers approaching him menacingly.

“Scram!” Yang Xiaohai swung his scepter and the group was caught in a daze.

The other people shuffled backward from fear as they looked at the scepter in Yang Xiaohai’s hands.

“What is that?”

“It’s something used to harvest the souls of others! The Chi family’s Fifth Child knows how to do that!”

While they were discussing that, Yang Xiaohai’s eldest sister suddenly shouted, “It’s an artifact! It can be used to harvest the souls of others! It’s a treasure! The county magistrate told me that if we gave it to him, we could exchange it for an eighth-ranked[1] official position. The better the treasure, the higher the position we can get!”

The moment they heard that, everyone’s eyes lit up with greed. Yang Xiaohai knew they were in deep trouble when his family wasn’t intimidated by his actions.

“Follow me into the forest, then scatter! One of us must escape!” Yang Xiaohai waved the scepter to the group of people to the left, stupifying them temporarily.

“Now!”

Yang Xiaohai and the others quickly ran past the dazed people and rushed forward.

He waved the scepter repeatedly, so many of them were caught in bewilderment. Just as Yang Xiaohai almost escaped their encirclement, something metallic flew past in the air.

A fish harpoon with barbed hooks stabbed Yang Xiaohai's hands. Due to the intense pain, Yang Xiaohai let go of the scepter. He endured the pain so he could pick it up, but another harpoon nailed his left leg.

Chi Baishui picked up the scepter with glee before slapping Yang Xiaohai. "How dare you keep a treasure like this to yourself?!"

"Xiaohai!" Zhao Xiumei shielded Yang Xiaohai and looked at Chi Baishui with despair. "We are all family! There's no reason to do this!"

"Family? You are not one of us!" Chi Baishui slapped her too.

Chi Baishui chuckled when he saw Yang Xiaohai enduring the pain to shield Zhao Xiumei instead. "Fifth Child, your wife is excellent. We should be able to sell her for more money than the monkey children."

"What are you trying to do?!" Yang Xiaohai glared back.

"Aiyo! You are acting as if we are causing an inconvenience to you! Look at what you did! You lied to your mother and father, and you also stole the silver in our family! You even hid this treasure from us! Are you still human?"

"Xiaohai?" A foreign voice interrupted them.

Everyone looked at the direction of the voice to find a Daoist in red robes with three swords on his back.

Li Huowang approached Yang Xiaohai. He saw Yang Xiaohai's wounded hands and feet as well as the scepter in Chi Baishui's hands. He also saw Yang Xiaohai's sister had a black cloth wrapped around her shoulder. He understood what was happening.

"Are you his friend?" Chi Baishui scoffed and pushed Li Huowang away.

"You are already old. Aren't you embarrassed that you are mingling with a child? Scram! This is our business and you have no say in this."

Li Huowang looked at Chi Baishui before he grabbed his purple-tasseled sword. “And who the fuck are you?”

A glimmer of steel flashed in the night before Chi Baishui’s head flew up high in the air.

1. Officials were separated by rank. There are Nine Ranks and Eighteen Tiers to be exact.

Chapter 680 - Kill

Bam! Chi Baishui's head hit the ground and rolled over to Yang Xiaohai's sister.

Her icy expression melted into shock and fear. She started crying. "Father!"

Her scream flipped a hidden switch as everyone exploded into action. Curses and harpoons flew towards Li Huowang.

The harpoons phased through Li Huowang without harming him. Li Huowang rushed forward with the purple-tasseled sword in his hand. He was busy and didn't have time to talk to the people.

He also saw Yang Xiaohai being wounded and the old man taking the scepter. The girl from the Dharma Sect had solidified his suspicions, so there was no reason to hold back. It was faster to kill them all.

Li Huowang was alone while the young boat people used fishing tactics to take down Li Huowang. They moved in sync while encircling Li Huowang.

However, when Li Huowang became serious, he slaughtered them all without difficulty. The stench of blood filled the air.

The fish scale tattoos were useless here. Li Huowang's sword cut through their bodies easily.

Zhao Xiumei and Yang Xiaohai stood on the side and saw the bodies piling up. The corpses were Yang Xiaohai's relatives.

Yang Xiaohai wanted to shout at Li Huowang, but he didn't know what to say.

The battle ended before it even began. The boat people's anger quickly dissipated when they saw how fearsome Li Huowang was.

They immediately ran towards the sea, but this made them easy targets since Li Huowang would then attack them freely.

“Senior Li! Enough!” Yang Xiaohai finally shouted.

Li Huowang did not stop, but he didn’t continue his chase. Instead, he ran towards Yang Xiaohai’s eldest sister. She’s the only Dharma Sect member here.

Li Huowang raised his sword but then Yang Xiaohai stopped him. “Senior Li! No!”

Li Huowang changed his trajectory and cut off her left leg instead.

With blood on his sword, Li Huowang turned around and asked Yang Xiaohai, “Why? Do you know her?”

“I... I...” Yang Xiaohai looked at the decapitated Chi Baishui and the corpses of the boat people before his lips quivered. He hesitated while in pain. “I don’t know her.”

Li Huowang swung the sword, and Yang Xiaohai saw his sister get bisected vertically.

Yang Xiaohai slumped to the ground.

Did Senior Li do the wrong thing? No, he came to save me, but I don’t think this is the right answer...

“Father,” Li Sui said, appearing from the path in front of them. The carriages of the White Lotus Sect were following Li Sui.

Bai Lingmiao walked towards Yang Xiaohai with a complicated look on her face, as if she had heard what was happening. She looked at Yang Xiaohai, Li Huowang, and Chi Baishui’s corpse. The relic in her body sharpened her hearing, so she could hear sounds from farther away than others.

Is the Dharma Sect in Hou Shu this weak? Did they expand too fast? Li Huowang kicked the bloody foot of Yang Xiaohai’s sister as he pondered.

He had fought with the Dharma Sect before. They never ran away when only a few of them had died. Li Huowang wiped the blood from his sword and sheathed it.

He approached Yang Xiaohai and frowned. He said, “What’s wrong with you? You knew that Hou Shu was being besieged by the Dharma Sect, so why are you here? Do you not value your life? You should've returned to Cowheart Village immediately and set out again after everything calmed down!"

Yang Xiaohai sniffled as he held his tears back. "Senior Li, why are you here?"

"I came here to deal with some business. I crossed paths with Sun Baolu and he told me you were coming here. Luckily, I knew where you were and ran as fast as I could. If I had arrived any later, you and your wife would've died."

Li Huowang removed the harpoon from Yang Xiaohai's hand and foot before he took out the Fiery Scripture to heal him. The bloody holes were cauterized, and Yang Xiaohai shouted amidst the sizzling sound. Once he was done, Bai Lingmiao came over and started bandaging Yang Xiaohai.

Li Huowang looked at the dark sky and sea before he frowned and said, "I'm worried about you returning right now, so just follow me. I will ask someone to escort you back once we reach the Surveillance Bureau of Hou Shu."

Yang Xiaohai held his injured hands and nodded. "I understand."

"What are those three?" Li Huowang then noticed the three monkey children.

Even though they were human children, they acted like monkeys. Their demeanor made Li Huowang think that they were evil entities instead.

"We rescued them while on our way here. They are as pitiful as us." Yang Xiaohai then explained their circumstances to Li Huowang. As he did, Yang Xiaohai slowly calmed down.

Even though his father was dead, he still couldn't bring himself to mourn it since his father wanted to sell his wife.

Chi Baishui was not his father, nor were they his family. Senior

Li and the others were his true family.

However, he was a little sad over the death of his sister and relatives. They did hurt him, but it didn't warrant their death.

"Let's go." Li Huowang led the way to bring them away from there.

Since he had hurt his leg, Yang Xiaohai hobbled as he walked. It hurt a lot even though he was given first aid.

Li Huowang turned around and shouted at one of the carriages, "Xiucai! Carry Xiaohai onto the carriage."

"Alright, Master!" Lu Xiucai picked Yang Xiaohai up to put him in the carriage.

Yang Xiaohai saw Lu Xiucai's haggard face and remembered something. He hesitated and asked carefully, "Xiucai, is your brother alright?"

Chapter 681 - Touch

Lu Xiucan's face stiffened as the painful memories surged into his mind. He quickly suppressed them and said casually, "He's dead. He was killed by the Dharma Sect."

"What?! Juren is really dead?" Yang Xiaohai's eyes widened in shock.

Lu Xiucan turned slowly and glared at Yang Xiaohai. "What do you mean by that? What do you mean 'really dead'?"

Li Huowang also turned to look. He knew that when Yang Xiaohai left, Lu Juren was still enjoying his life in Shangjing. How did Yang Xiaohai know that Lu Juren had died?

"No, don't misunderstand. When I was in Qing Qiu, I encountered the Earth Dragon while it was moving. I came across something strange, which I thought was a dream at the time. I saw Brother Juren there, but he looked somewhat odd."

Yang Xiaohai quickly recounted his encounter with Lu Juren, "It wasn't just him. There was also another strange Senior Li in that place called the Feng Capital."

He saw Senior Li frown at him. "What did you say? Another me? Tell me what you experienced again."

Yang Xiaohai repeated his strange experience in Qing Qiu, this time focusing on the peculiar version of Li Huowang.

"Hong Zhong? Li Huowang? Hong Zhong Li Huowang hasn't disappeared?!" Li Huowang's pupils instantly shrank.

In the past, Douluo had bestowed upon him a segment of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's past, which had led to the creation of Hong Zhong Li Huowang.

Li Huowang always thought that with that past disappearing, the period of Hong Zhong Li Huowang should have also disappeared.

But now it seemed that wasn't the case at all. Hong Zhong Li Huowang had left his side but hadn't disappeared. He had only been hidden, just like the Great Qi!

But... why? Why was he trapped in the Feng Capital and not somewhere else? Li Huowang's brows knitted tightly. And this other Siming mentioned by Hong Zhong...

He had never imagined that the Siming in control of death was truly dead and hidden beneath Qing Qiu.

"Xiaohai, you said there was seawater with a strange color flowing into that cave?" Li Huowang clarified.

"Yes! That seawater was very strange. Even from a distance, it felt like my body was being pulled in. If I hadn't eventually run into the upside-down Antrabhara Temple, I wouldn't have made it back."

Yang Xiaohai couldn't help but feel scared as he thought about his previous experience. It seemed that the experience was indeed real judging by Senior Li's attitude, and he had barely managed to return.

"Was the seawater this color?" Li Huowang asked. He pulled out the spine sword and slashed forcefully towards the distance.

The rift leading to the Great Qi opened, and those dark, metallic, multicolored substances gushed out. They fell to the ground and writhed like living creatures. Anything they touched would mutate. Lifeless objects regained life, and living things grew increasingly distorted.

"Yes! That's it! That's what I saw, but there was much more of it! As much as the sea!" Yang Xiaohai said and backed away. He was afraid that those things might approach him again.

"God Yu'er... it's really god Yu'er." Li Huowang's face was very grim. The Dharma Sect, which worshiped god Yu'er, was conquering cities in Hou Shu. Meanwhile, god Yu'er was attacking the Siming in charge of death. “

What does god Yu'er want? Does it want to seize even the Heavenly Dao of Death?

Li Huowang was lost in thought, and his attention was diverted by a soft touch on his right hand. He looked down and saw Bai Lingmiao holding his hand.

“Senior Li, what’s wrong?”

Li Huowang shook his head out of habit. “Nothing, let’s go.”

As he was about to leave, he felt Bai Lingmiao’s hands pull him back with a soft but firm grip.

He turned to look at Bai Lingmiao, whose eyes were covered with a white silk band. “Senior Li, I am now the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect. The White Lotus Sect is spreading widely in Great Liang. I can help you now.”

“If you encounter trouble, there’s no need to endure it alone like you did before. Tell me what’s going on and we can figure it out together.”

He looked at Bai Lingmiao’s delicate face, then reached out and gently stroked her face. He could feel her genuine concern for him.

After a moment of hesitation, he said, “This is a long story. You know the god Yu’er that is worshiped by the Dharma Sect?”

“Yes, I know. The Heavenly Mater mentioned that god Yu’er is a betrayer.”

“The actual events are like this,” Li Huowang started to explain the whole story, but suddenly stopped mid-sentence. He frowned and looked at the dark sea in the distance.

A line of torches formed a long dragon that approached them. “Hmm?”

“Xiaohai, what’s going on? Have those people been bewitched by the Dharma Sect?”

Yang Xiaohai’s face instantly turned pale. He said anxiously, “Senior Li, they are not from the Dharma Sect. They worship the Dragon King. Let's go quickly! Hurry!"

His father and elder sister were already dead. He didn't want to lose more family members, even if they hadn't treated him well.

"Are you hiding something from me?" Li Huowang glanced at him but didn't press further. He turned and led the others to leave.

He hadn't forgotten his purpose for coming to Hou Shu, which was to find the Dragon Vein of Hou Shu. He couldn't be bothered to delve into whatever Yang Xiaohai had in mind.

After only a few steps, he saw the light of fire on the dirt road in the distance. Clearly, these people had already surrounded them during their conversation and had not intended to let them leave.

"Heh, this is interesting. I wasn't looking for trouble, but trouble found me. Li Sui!"

Li Huowang opened his mouth and Li Sui entered his body. The squirming tentacles protruded from his body and danced wildly.

"Master! Let me go this time! I want to seek revenge from the Dharma Sect!" Lu Xiucan said firmly. His eyes were filled with hatred as he stepped forward.

Li Huowang glanced at him. "Alright, you take care of yourself. As I've always said, I don't want a burden."

"I'm not a burden!" Lu Xiucan said. He took off his shirt to reveal his paper dudou, which was covered in curses.

He pulled out two serrated swords, then stomped his right foot and knocked the sword against his forehead while chanting incessantly.

Chapter 682 - Water

After a while, the blood flowing from Lu Xiucan's forehead covered his entire face as he rapidly recited an incantation.

“Disciple sincerely comes to worship. May the deity of this altar descend swiftly. Transform the body into the spirit, and the spirit into the body, and open the path of enlightenment! Guide us, step by step! Support the medium, inch by inch! Awaken the medium with divine light, speak clearly with a golden mouth, command the urgently divine soldiers and fire!”

While Lu Xiucan was invoking the spirit, the torches had already approached Li Huowang and his companions. The figures were now clearly visible.

They were the same people who had fled before. They had dared to return despite losing so many of their own. Li Huowang quickly noticed the source of their confidence—several elders dressed in fish-skin Daoist robes that stood at the front of the crowd.

These elders were unlike the others in both appearance and attire. They solemnly held thick incense sticks and offered sacrifices in all directions while murmuring incantations.

It was in a dialect that Li Huowang could hear but not understand.

The white incense smoke did not disperse. Instead, it gathered, forming densely around them.

The crowd carried a large mural behind them. No, to be precise, they had dismantled an entire wall.

“What kind of evil spirit is this?”

When Li Huowang saw these fishermen with dragon scale tattoos, he couldn't help but be reminded of the water bandits he had encountered on the lake before.

“Forget it, whatever!” Li Huowang didn’t care anymore. He lunged forward and charged at them with his sword, while the blood-covered Lu Xiucai followed closely behind.

As Li Huowang approached, the elder boat people in fish-skin robes raised their giant incense sticks and thrust them into the ground. The smoke above them instantly formed a dragon’s head that lunged towards Li Huowang.

Li Huowang didn’t flinch. He gripped the purple-tassel sword in one hand and the bronze coin sword in the other. As the dragon-shaped smoke contacted him, he crossed the two swords, which could dispel evil, and pushed them forward.

The dragon-head-shaped smoke was instantly split into a cross. Li Huowang did not hesitate as he pounced on the boat people. The mural and the entire wall behind it came crashing down towards him.

Boom! The wall shattered into pieces and buried Li Huowang underneath.

As the dust settled, Li Huowang emerged from behind the towering figure of Peng Longteng, who had acted as a shield at the critical moment.

He held his two swords and glanced at the shattered mural on the ground, then at the boat people kneeling and bowing towards the sea. “Is that all? Just like that?”

He noticed the distant dark sea seemed to grow even darker, as if an oppressive mountain range had risen there.

Mountains? The thought barely appeared in Li Huowang’s mind before cold sweat broke out on his body. No! That’s not a mountain, it’s a tsunami!

The next moment, the tsunami carried the boat people’s boats and their stilt houses, and it surged towards Li Huowang with overwhelming force.

“Watch out!” Li Huowang quickly grabbed the bucket from Yang Na’s hands as she staggered. Fortunately, the dirty water inside was barely prevented from spilling.

“Hey, young lady, can you just stay put? Stop trying to help.” Li Huowang carried the bucket to the toilet and emptied it.

Yang Na pouted and said, “I... I just wanted to help. Why are you being so harsh on me? I didn’t do anything wrong.”

“Look, I’m just casually saying. Why are you so upset?” Li Huowang put down the bucket, then walked over and gently hugged her.

“It’s okay! Everything’s okay! You all need to leave this place. Something’s not right here!” Li Huowang shouted to the others in the pouring rain.

“Senior Li, you should come too!”

Half of his body was in the water as he wiped his face with his hand and shouted again, “Stop talking nonsense! This rain is too strange! I’ll cover the rear! You all leave now!”

Suddenly, Li Huowang felt a sharp pain in his legs. There was something in the water!

He threw several glowing stones into the water. The faint light dispersed and scattered the surrounding shadows. He saw some shadows move towards the carriage, then reached into the water and pulled hard.

The rainwater, which reached up to their waists, rolled up like a blanket and was unable to approach the carriage.

Li Huowang’s ‘Truth’ cultivation had advanced to the third level, and naturally allowed him to learn new techniques.

Although his abilities had improved, they were ineffective if he could not pinpoint the enemy’s location.

What are these things? Li Huowang frowned while he scanned the surroundings, unable to figure out the enemy’s tactics.

The situation seemed too intense for them to be ordinary evil spirits. Could the Dragon King really be the one causing the heavy rain?

From the light of the glowing stones, he saw several shadows that crept along the bottom and headed towards him again.

“Suisui! Ribs!” Li Huowang crossed his arms, and inserted his rib bones into his chest. The shadows stopped advancing and they writhed in place.

A tentacle pulled out the bronze coin sword and flung it at a shadow in the water. The bronze coins pulled further apart, and finally dragged a man out from within the water.

The tattoos on his bare upper body showed he was with the previous group, but he was now wearing a wooden dragon mask.

“Who’s behind this? Where are they?!” Li Huowang choked and questioned him.

The man retorted angrily, “The Dragon King has appeared! You dare offend the Dragon King, so you’re dead meat!”

“Damn you!” Li Huowang roared. His throat released a barbed tentacle that tore out a chunk of the man’s neck.

“You Dharma Sect scum! Come out!” Lu Xiucui stood in the water and shouted angrily.

At that moment, the boat people climbed out of the water, and stood scattered in the rain as they cursed Li Huowang and Lu Xiucui.

The pouring rain mixed with their curses only fueled Li Huowang’s rage. All he could think of was killing these scumbags. He tightened his grip on his sword and prepared to charge forward while the rhythmic sound of drums began.

The rhythmic drumbeat began to overpower the rain and curses. Bai Lingmiao, who was beating on a drum, came to stand back-to-back with him.

“Li Huowang! What the hell is going on?! I told you to leave! Why are you still wasting time?”

Li Huowang’s heart sank at Bai Lingmiao’s scolding. He realized something was wrong.

At some point, everyone's hearts, including his own, were overtaken by rage. It felt as if this emotion controlled them. Something was manipulating their ten emotions and eight sufferings!

Chapter 683 - Ten Emotions

Li Huowang stood in the seawater as he realized his emotions were being manipulated. He closed his eyes firmly and mentally repeated to himself. No! I am not angry. I am not mad!

As he continued chanting, the overwhelming rage in his heart gradually stabilized. However, this feeling did not last long. When he reopened his eyes and the rainwater hit them again, the intense anger surged back uncontrollably.

He could think clearly, but his emotions were beyond his control.

By this time, the boat people had disappeared again by submerging themselves in the dark and ghostly water.

Li Huowang and Lu Xiucan slaughtered them frantically, but with each person Li Huowang killed, the rage in his heart intensified and nearly consumed his remaining sanity.

Li Huowang knew this couldn't continue. If he became a mindless, raging lunatic, it would be over.

He suppressed his anger against this unknown enemy and their elusive presence. This seems related to the water. A wise man should avoid danger. I must get away from the water!

"Go! Everyone, go!" Li Huowang shouted to his companions, who were all soaking wet in the torrential rain.

The boat people tried to block their way, but their strength was no match for Li Huowang.

Li Huowang and his group quickly fled the shore with their carriage. Finally, they got their lower bodies out of the seawater and headed inland towards Hou Shu.

However, their anger did not diminish. Their rage accumulated, making them suspect each other of having the worst intentions.

It should have been dawn by now, but the sky remained gray and gloomy.

Why is the effect still there? Is that thing following us? Where is it? Enraged, Li Huowang looked up at the raining sky and then angrily stabbed a dagger into his thigh.

His fury dulled the pain so much that he almost didn't feel it.

Yet suddenly, the rage vanished. Before he could feel happy about it, the anger was replaced by a profound sadness. Unlike the blazing anger, this sorrow was like the black water in a gutter, subtle but long-lasting.

As they continued to walk, this new emotion drew out their past sorrows. This was unlike anything Li Huowang had experienced before. The enemy was unseen and intangible, tormenting them with the ten emotions and eight sufferings.

Past sorrows filled Li Huowang's mind, which left him mentally exhausted and unable to think clearly.

It was the same for the others. Even the horses that pulled the carriage stopped to shed silent tears.

"Waah... Dad... Mom..."

Li Huowang heard a woman's sorrowful cries and turned to see Yang Na curled up by the washing machine, tears streaming down her face.

"What's wrong? We just emptied the bucket of water. Why are you so sad?" Li Huowang crouched beside her with concern and asked gently.

Yang Na's eyes were red from crying. She shook her head slightly as tears dripped off her face. "I... I don't know... I just feel so..."

Li Huowang paused in confusion, then seemed to realize something.

“Nana! Is your depression acting up? Have you been taking your meds recently?”

“Since being with you, I’ve been so happy, I thought...” Yang Na sobbed.

“You can’t skip your meds!” Li Huowang panicked. It was a serious matter if one did not take their medication for mental illnesses. He stood up, grabbed Yang Na’s bag, and quickly rummaged through it.

After a moment, he found the bottle of pills. He rushed back to her and urgently persuaded, “Nana! Be good, take your meds! You’ll feel better.”

“I don’t want to take them. They make me feel worse... I don’t want to...” Yang Na lay on the ground with overwhelming sadness. She cried helplessly like a child who was incapable of rational thought.

“Nana! Nana!” Li Huowang hugged her close. “Look at me! Don’t be scared. I’ll take them with you!”

With that, he took a few pills from the bottle, then chewed and swallowed them.

“These are for depression. Why are you taking them?” Yang Na’s crying intensified.

Li Huowang took a few more pills, put them in his mouth, then kissed her and gently transferred the pills with his tongue.

When he finally withdrew his tongue, he saw that Bai Lingmiao in his arms had calmed down. Her sorrow had dissipated, and he also felt normal again.

“How do you feel? Are you better?” Li Huowang asked softly.

Bai Lingmiao nodded, then suddenly looked at the sky. “Senior Li, there’s something up there!”

Li Huowang also looked up. The clouds were extremely low, and faint thunder rumbled within them.

But unlike earlier, there was now a fleeting sense of being watched. They had come again!

“Finally found you!” Li Huowang’s expression turned ferocious as a fire ignited within him. This time, it was from his own emotions, not manipulated.

Peng Longteng appeared beside him, grabbed him, and hurled him towards the low-hanging clouds.

Bai Lingmiao flicked her sleeves and wrapped two white ribbons around Li Huowang’s legs and followed him up.

Li Huowang couldn’t see within the dark clouds, but Bai Lingmiao’s mind’s eye was very helpful as she guided him toward the target.

Peng Longteng repeatedly threw him high up, and Li Huowang finally pierced through the thick rain layers. He spotted a transparent, smoke-formed entity swirling in the air.

It wasn’t a dragon, or at least not like any dragon he had seen.

With another powerful throw from Peng Longteng, Li Huowang was hurled towards the entity. The incense figure didn’t dodge and allowed Li Huowang to phase through it.

“Again!” Peng Longteng grabbed Li Huowang’s left foot in mid-air and threw him again. Li Huowang closed his eyes tightly. I can touch it, I can reach that creature!

The next moment, he felt himself crash into something soft like cotton. Without hesitation, he raised his sword and stabbed forcefully.

“Die!”

With a squelch, long tendrils with sticky liquid stuck on them sprayed over Li Huowang’s face.

Chapter 684 - Eight Sufferings

With his eyes shut tightly, Li Huowang sensed that he had wounded his opponent. He decisively drew a flint across his skin, and flames enveloped his entire body.

Whatever this creature was, he needed to go all out given its immense size.

He controlled his two arms and a dozen tentacles, then grasped the wound's edges and tore it open further with a fierce roar.

Li Huowang plunged into the wound, accompanied by a ripping sound. He wielded three swords in his three hands, then charged through the creature's body while engulfed in flames.

He repaid the frustration they had suffered back to this unknown creature by a thousandfold.

He soon heard the sizzle of burning flesh interspersed with anguished roars resembling the agonized cries of a dragon. The intense trembling nearly made him open his eyes.

The more the creature struggled, the deeper he burrowed. When the pressure eased, Li Huowang realized he had pierced right through the creature.

The sizzling sound of burning flesh gave way to the sound of intense flames, and Li Huowang felt himself falling.

Just as he hit the ground, he opened his eyes and saw the storm clouds turning into burning clouds that quickly dissipated. He had won.

Water! Li Huowang landed in the mud with a splash. Moments later, he spat out the mud and crawled out of the soil.

When he stood up again, the rain had stopped. The thin rays of the morning sunlight shone on his charred face.

The air after the rain was fresh, and everything seemed finally over, regardless of whether the creature was dead or just wounded.

The three monkey children had never witnessed such things before. They regarded Li Huowang as a god, and they kowtowed to him with utmost reverence.

Li Huowang didn't care about their reactions. Instead, he gazed at the sky as he contemplated other matters.

That creature was not an ordinary evil spirit. However, it didn't feel strong enough to be a Siming.

If he had to define it, he thought the creature resembled a God of Happiness, or something similar to the beings outside Baiyu Capital.

The world was not simply black and white, nor were there only mortals and Simings. There was a vast spectrum in between.

Has god Yu'er started to recruit those things? This realization darkened Li Huowang's mood, and the extent of the enemy's influence increased again in his mind.

If these creatures were present even in such remote areas, what guarded the Dragon Vein of Hou Shu?

Li Huowang saw everyone look at him and shook his head. "It's all over now. Let's rest. We've been through a lot tonight, and everyone's exhausted."

Everyone felt more reassured and began to tend to their tasks. Some tended to wounds, while others started to cook.

Their fear and anxiety quickly dissipated as the piping-hot food entered their mouths.

Li Huowang gently unwrapped the bandages on Yang Xiaohai's wound, examined it, then rewrapped it. "Have your wife change the bandage. It got wet, and the wound is turning pale."

"Senior Li, my injury is minor, but your wounds..." Yang Xiaohai hesitated, looking at Li Huowang's charred body.

“Take care of yourself. This is also a minor injury,” Li Huowang replied. He moved back to the campfire and began to eat a bowl of noodles with grilled salted fish.

“Senior Li, don’t move. I’ll get the Bai Family to treat your injuries,” Bai Lingmiao said and began to drum.

“I don’t have any lifespan pills left. Don’t summon the Immortal families.”

“Senior Li, they are quite accommodating now; they don’t need lifespan as payment anymore,” she said as she beat her drums.

As Li Huowang ate, he sensed something approaching that was watching him.

Though he was tense, he pretended to be calm, removed the long bones from a piece of braised fish belly, and then placed it into Yang Na’s bowl.

Glancing out of the corner of his eye, he saw Madam Qi and then relaxed a bit. It wasn’t them this time.

Yang Na had now recovered. She noticed Li Huowang’s actions but said nothing, praising Sun Xiaoqin’s cooking instead.

After the meal, Li Huowang walked to his bedroom and sat on the stool with a serious expression.

This couldn’t continue. Yang Na had just taken her medication when those people’s gazes had returned. He had briefly confronted them last time, but he hadn’t managed to take a photo of them with his phone.

He didn’t care about himself, but he was concerned about Yang Na and his mother.

Li Huowang opened his phone and dialed a number. “Hello, it’s me. Have you found the source of those two severed fingers?”

“It’s been so long, and you still haven’t found anything? Is your database comprehensive or not? You can’t even trace two severed fingers.”

“What do you mean there are more important matters than two fingers? Once again, I am not crazy! Someone is actually trying to kidnap me!”

He heard the door open behind him, then hung up and turned to see Yang Na holding a fruit platter. He asked gently, “How are you feeling?”

Yang Na shook her head slightly and placed the fruit platter on the table. She held his hands and asked, “Huowang, what’s wrong? Is it the side effects of the medicine?”

“Of course not, haha, I’m fine. Just thinking about some things.” He hesitated for a while, then said, “Nana, can you do me a favor?”

“Sure, what do you need?” Yang Na nodded.

“I need to visit Kangning Hospital to see an old friend, but I don’t want my mother to come along. Can you go with me?”

The enemy was still around and he needed to see Qian Fu, even if the man was mad and incoherent.

His words had proven true. The surveillance had been tampered with, and someone was indeed after him. Li Huowang couldn’t ignore this.

Yang Na didn’t ask further because Li Huowang needed her help. She hugged him gently and nodded. “Okay.”

Li Huowang and Yang Na set off while Sun Xiaoqin was away.

Before they could leave the complex, Madam Qi and two elderly men blocked them at the gate. “Little Li, where are you going? Where’s your family?”

“I’m going to Kangning Hospital,” Li Huowang replied honestly.

“Why are you going to the psychiatric hospital? Do you have a valid reason?” Madam Qi asked suspiciously.

Li Huowang faced her scrutinizing gaze and retorted, “You know I have a mental illness. Why else would I go to a psychiatric hospital? Of course, it’s for a follow-up. What, is that not allowed?”

Chapter 685 - Kangning

Although Li Huowang was a key target of assistance and visitation by the Neighborhood Office, he was generally not allowed to leave the small district.

However, going to a psychiatric hospital for a follow-up was very reasonable. There was no excuse to refuse, as preventing a follow-up could lead to serious issues if he had another episode.

“You should have said earlier you were going for a follow-up. Here, fill out this form. Young lady, are you his caregiver? What is your relationship with him?”

After Li Huowang filled out some forms under Madam Qi’s supervision, a ride-sharing car was waiting at the community gate.

Before Li Huowang and Yang Na could get in, Madam Qi stuck her head into the front passenger seat and instructed the driver, “Mister Wang! Is the tank full? Remember, only drop them off at Kangning Hospital, and don’t stop midway. Keep your phone on the whole time!”

“I need to go to the fruit stall to buy some things,” Li Huowang interjected.

“Aren’t you going for a follow-up? What do you need fruit for at a psychiatric hospital?” Madam Qi eyed him suspiciously, as if afraid he might use this as an opportunity to escape.

“I have a lot of friends there. Can’t I visit them while I’m at the hospital?”

“Friends from the psychiatric hospital? They must be psychiatric patients too, right?”

After some back-and-forth, it was finally resolved by Yang Na going to the neighborhood supermarket to buy the fruits.

Though the ride-sharing driver looked somewhat like the previous police officer, Li Huowang didn't overthink it. It didn't matter whether he was being monitored or protected—he didn't want any trouble on the way.

Once Li Huowang and Yang Na got into the car, it started heading onto the road. Li Huowang rested his head against the window as the car sped up, his eyes unfocused as he thought about everything that had happened.

What are those people? What do they want from me? What do I have that they are so interested in?

There were no answers to these questions, and even the police couldn't help. In any case, they didn't trust him. His only clue now was Qian Fu at Kangning Hospital.

Since they could alter surveillance footage, it was highly likely they were also the ones who placed needles in his food.

But... why? If they wanted to kill me, they could have poisoned my food. Why put needles in it? The needles merely caused pain and nothing else.

Hold on. Could Qian Fu have been right? Maybe they were trying to drive a wedge between me and him. That way, I would suspect and stay away from him.

This thought solidified Li Huowang's determination to meet Qian Fu again.

Yang Na sensed Li Huowang's anxiety and clasped his hand. They interlocked their fingers in silent comfort.

Li Huowang turned to her and smiled reassuringly. "It's nothing. I'm just going to the hospital to ask some questions. I'll be back soon."

"Alright. No matter what happens, don't bear it alone. I'm here with you."

"Sure." Li Huowang closed his eyes and hugged her gently, just like that night on the rooftop.

The car sped along the road. As they got closer to Kangning

Hospital, Li Huowang grew increasingly anxious.

After what felt like a long time, the car finally stopped. Li Huowang and Yang Na walked towards the hospital with white walls and green windows.

His attending physician, Wu Cheng, greeted him. It was clear that Li Huowang was being treated much better than before.

In Wu Cheng's office, Li Huowang casually chatted with him while holding a disposable cup.

"I heard you were kidnapped?" Wu Cheng asked while holding his tea cup.

"It wasn't an episode. Someone really tried to kidnap me," Li Huowang explained.

"Of course. Don't worry, I didn't say you were having an episode. Since you have two severed fingers as evidence, there must be real people involved. What did the police say?"

"They told me to wait. They even put a tracker on me. It's not easy for me to even leave my neighborhood now," Li Huowang said, lifting his left foot.

"Don't worry. They'll find something with so much surveillance around. So, why are you back this time?"

"Nothing much, just a follow-up to check if there's any change in my condition," Li Huowang naturally didn't mention he was there to see Qian Fu.

"If you're aware of that, it means you're mostly fine. Since you're here, let's do some tests."

When Li Huowang held the tablet with the test questions, he felt a bit nervous. Perhaps he didn't fully trust his own perception, and he wondered if he was actually still insane due to his previous experiences.

Li Huowang sometimes doubted his own senses after having gone through so much.

He focused on the test questions and completed them one by one.

After he discussed the results with the doctor and he saw Wu Cheng's relaxed expression, he sighed in relief. He wasn't crazy. Everything he experienced was real and not hallucinations caused by his illness.

"Don't be too stressed. If there were really an issue, we wouldn't have let you leave the hospital. Relax at home and take your medicine on time."

Li Huowang heard him and knew his follow-up was over. He should be heading home, but he had something else to do.

He stood up and looked towards the inpatient ward, then he hesitantly asked, "Doctor, can I visit some other patients? I made some friends during my stay here."

"Sure, go ahead. You know your way around the hospital. Most of them are still here."

When Li Huowang entered the visitation area, he felt a strange sense of familiarity. He had always exited from the inside door before. This was his first time entering from the outside door.

He couldn't go directly to Qian Fu since that would be too conspicuous. He visited several acquaintances and handed them the fruits he had bought.

Everyone else was fine, but when he saw Zhao Ting, the girl with depression, he immediately felt a resentful gaze.

Li Huowang patted Yang Na lightly. "I have nothing with her. I'll explain when we get back. I just got one more friend to see."

Li Huowang took a deep breath and anxiously waited for Qian Fu, but he never showed up. Instead, he received bad news.

"Qian Fu had an episode and is in the seclusion room. You can visit him next time."

Li Huowang's heart sank, and a bad premonition arose.

What's going on? Did I come too late? Did those people get to him?

Chapter 686 - Qian Fu

Li Huowang was not satisfied with the answer. The more the nurse insisted that Qian Fu's illness had worsened and made them limit visitations, the more suspicious Li Huowang became. He was determined to meet Qian Fu.

Instead of pushing it, he chose to remain silent. He was still in the mental hospital, and if he displayed any aggressiveness, he could get caught.

Thanks to Wu Cheng's help, Li Huowang managed to get a short meeting with Qian Fu.

Li Huowang sighed. At least the people outside haven't infiltrated this place yet. Otherwise, they would've used all kinds of tactics to stop me from meeting Qian Fu.

Because he had to enter the hospital, Li Huowang asked Yang Na to wait outside while he followed a nurse into the building.

Li Huowang soon reached the place where Qian Fu was locked up. He opened the small window on the door and saw that Qian Fu was wrapped in a straitjacket. He was wriggling on the floor like a maggot as he spewed nonsense from his mouth.

"Qian Fu!" Li Huowang wanted to get close, but the nurse stopped him.

"What are you doing? I thought you were only here to look at him. Are you trying to talk to that crazy patient?"

Li Huowang came up with a random lie. "Please let me go. His family asked me to give him a message."

"No! This is the rule! Why didn't you say so just now?"

"All rules can be bent a little, plus this is a private hospital and not a government-funded one." Li Huowang stuffed the money that Sun Xiaoqin had given him into the nurse's hands.

Li Huowang knew that even though the doctors profited greatly, the nurses were not paid well despite handling most of the physical work.

The nurse's reaction confirmed his thoughts. "Be quick, then. He's very crazy right now. Don't blame me if he ignores you."

Li Huowang got close to the door and shouted, "Qian Fu! Qian Fu!"

Hearing his voice, Qian Fu crawled towards the door with his straitjacket on.

Eight minutes had passed by the time he plastered his sweaty face on the small opening of the door.

Qian Fu looked weird as he glared at Li Huowang with bloodshot eyes. His eyes were fearful, excited, and on the verge of collapse. "You finally came to look for me! I knew you would see through their tricks!"

Qian Fu cried happily.

"Quiet! Don't alert the doctors!" Li Huowang looked towards the corridor and whispered harshly.

Qian Fu sniffled and swallowed his snot. "I've waited for you too long! Did you know how they tortured me while you weren't here?"

"Tortured you? Are they here in the hospital?" Li Huowang panicked when he heard that.

Qian Fu whispered as he stared at the nurse standing guard in the corridor, "They are here, but there's not many of them. You need to be careful!"

"Who are they?" Li Huowang needed answers.

Looking wide-eyed at Li Huowang, Qian Fu asked, "What? You still don't know who you are dealing with?"

"You know who they are?" Li Huowang recalled the woman with the umbrella and the people who tried kidnapping him. He really didn't know who they were.

“Of course! Didn’t I tell you? They are the Leotians!”

“Fuck!” Li Huowang would’ve beaten Qian Fu up if it wasn’t because of the door. He thought that Qian Fu was tricking him.

Li Huowang calmed himself down. He had to accept the fact that his ally was a patient. Even though Qian Fu might know something, he’s still a patient in the hospital right now.

Thankfully, Li Huowang had experience in dealing with people with mental illnesses. “Where is the spaceship of the aliens that came from Leo?”

“Their spaceship is still in space. They can’t come down for now, but some aliens could reach Earth first. Some humans coveted their technology and bowed down to the aliens! They became traitors!”

Li Huowang had to reconsider his approach even though he was here to get some information from Qian Fu.

Li Huowang had no choice but to believe only half of the ramblings of a patient.

After some time, Li Huowang frowned and spoke, “Where did you get this information?”

If he couldn’t verify the information from Qian Fu, he had no choice but to find the source of the information itself.

“Where did I get it? Isn’t it obvious? I saw it myself! Don’t tell me you saw nothing even after so many things had happened!” Qian Fu glared at Li Huowang.

Suddenly, Qian Fu’s hands passed through the small opening and grabbed Li Huowang’s shirt collar. “Li Huowang! You need to save me! You’re the only one who can do it!”

“Let go!” Li Huowang tried to escape his grip, but Qian Fu’s hands held on like iron vises.

“Save me! Take me outside! Only then can we defeat the Leotians together! They are too strong! They will dismantle us one by one! They are afraid of us working together, so they chose to separate us first!”

Qian Fu’s words were annoying, but Li Huowang understood something from his ramblings. “Wait, you know how to defeat them? What does a crazy person like you have that could threaten them? If you tell me, I will find a way to save you!”

“I’m crazy? You’re crazy too! We are on the same side!”

The nurse saw something was wrong and immediately ran towards them. “Hey! Let go of him! Let him go!”

Li Huowang escaped Qian Fu’s grip thanks to the nurse’s help.

She asked, “What’s going on? Why is he pulling on your collar? Nothing serious has happened yet, so let’s leave now! I’ll be in trouble if there’s an accident!”

Li Huowang hesitated as he looked at Qian Fu before he left. Numerous thoughts clouded his mind, and he needed time to sort them out.

Qian Fu panicked when he saw Li Huowang leaving. “Wait! Don’t go! Save me!”

Li Huowang was at the end of the corridor when Qian Fu plastered his face on the opening and shouted as loud as he could, “Ji Zai! Save me!”

Li Huowang stopped and looked back. “What did you call me?”

“Ji Zai! You are Ji Zai!”

Chapter 687 - Plan

In Kangning's Hospital men's bathroom, Li Huowang was panting as he let the cold water from the tap flow down his head.

Ji Zai! You are Ji Zai!

Those words rang again in Li Huowang's mind as he closed his eyes in pain.

His head hurt as if his brain was bulging outwards. Only the cold water calmed his head down.

Li Huowang raised his head and saw his wet hair. He looked into the mirror and saw his soaked face, which became unfamiliar as time passed.

Who is Ji Zai? I thought Ji Zai was the fake name Zhuge Yuan gave me in the hallucination. Why did he call me that? Unless that world...

Some of his forgotten memories started to resurface. Li Huowang felt a growing pain in his head and ducked under the running water again.

After some time, he raised his head and saw a bizarre scene. The reflection in the mirror did not get up, and he saw how the water was still running down the back of his head.

Li Huowang started to get afraid. Not only was his reflection not following his own body, but the back of his reflection's head had a face! It was his own face. The reflection had faces on both sides of the head!

"AH!" Li Huowang shouted and retreated. When he looked into the mirror again, he saw that his reflection had returned to normal. There was nothing else other than the scared Li Huowang. It was just an illusion.

What's going on? Is that world real? Then what about here? A strange fear filled his heart as he instinctively wanted to hold something.

He then became angry, and his fear turned into wrath. Fuck! Are they trying to trick me?! They've tried doing this so many times! I won't believe it! I'm not a crazy person or an idiot!

Since Qian Fu had read Yi Donglai's thesis, it was possible for him to know Ji Zai's name.

Also, Yi Donglai's treatment had been successful in preventing Li Huowang's hallucinations until now. It was clear that whatever he saw just now was merely an illusion.

Li Huowang clenched his right fist and smashed the mirror out of rage. He looked at his reflection shattering and felt better.

What bad luck! I really can't enter this place too many times. I didn't manage to solve my problems and I nearly got tricked by Qian Fu!

Li Huowang placed his injured hands under the tap, washing the blood away. He saw the glass and blood flowing out of his wounds and remembered Qian Fu again.

No matter what Qian Fu had called him, Li Huowang still needed his help.

If I save him, he might be the one who could deal with the organization behind my kidnapping.

But should I do it? Li Huowang hesitated. Qian Fu was a patient, and Li Huowang couldn't determine how much of it was the truth.

Still, no matter how crazy Qian Fu was, those threats were real.

The organization would continue to target him. If Li Huowang did not deal with them soon, he would never be able to find peace.

Will Qian Fu really help me if I rescue him? Or was he lying? Did he lie just so he could escape the hospital?

"Holy shit! What happened to you?!" Someone shouted from his back.

Li Huowang turned around. A janitor was staring at the cracked mirror and Li Huowang's bloodied hands.

"And how do I know? The quality of the mirrors here is terrible! I was washing my hands when it suddenly exploded!” Li Huowang scolded the janitor.

The mirror exploded and injured the guest’s hands. It was indeed a clever lie and a terrible day for the hospital’s customer service.

Fortunately, bandaging Li Huowang’s hands was a simple task since he was still technically in a hospital. Once his hands were bandaged, he walked out of the hospital with Yang Na. At this point, Li Huowang already made a decision to rescue Qian Fu.

No matter how crazy Qian Fu was, Li Huowang was certain that Qian Fu was still on his side. It was clear that someone had tried to separate them by placing needles in his food last time.

Since the opposing party was trying to separate them, Li Huowang decided to try and ally himself with Qian Fu. There might be some unexpected gains there.

However, helping a patient to escape the hospital was a monumental task. Qian Fu hadn’t killed anyone before, which was a relief.

“Huowang, look! The weather today is so clear! There’s not a single cloud in the sky.”

Li Huowang looked up and saw the clear blue skies. The warm sunlight gently caressed his face and made him feel good.

Li Huowang then thought about how funny the incident in the toilet was. How could this world be fake?

“Yes, today’s weather is so good. Unfortunately, the weather cannot be this good every day.” Li Huowang walked towards the car at the entrance of the hospital.

Even though he didn’t know which organization was monitoring him and why they were doing so, Li Huowang was determined to fight back. Since someone was targeting him, he would bring the fight to them no matter what!

The car started moving. While in the car, Li Huowang was thinking about his identity and how to rescue Qian Fu.

To his knowledge, it was very hard to move a patient without alerting anyone. By the time he reached his neighborhood, he had a good idea.

It was both simple and hard. Since Kangning Hospital was a private hospital, as long as Li Huowang cut off Qian Fu's source of money to stop his treatment fees, then the hospital would send Qian Fu out.

"Little Li, you're back back? How was your treatment?" Madam Qi sighed when she saw Li Huowang was back.

Staring at the lady in front of him, he thought about it before he said, "Madam Qi, I need to go to the hospital again."

"Again? Why?"

"To get medicine. I don't have a lot left and I might relapse if I don't take my medicine."

Chapter 688 - Guacang City

The differences between Hou Shu, Qing Qiu, and Si Qi were vast. Si Qi had many rivers and lakes, while Qing Qiu had lots of livestock.

Hou Shu, on the other hand, was very impoverished. The land was dry, and various crags and stones were present. There was some vegetation, but not a lot. Most of the plants here were resistant to drought.

Li Huowang was used to seeing this. After killing the thing in the sky, they finally left the seaside.

Li Huowang and the others had changed their appearance to mimic refugees instead. Hou Shu and the Dharma Sect were still at war, so it was not wise to alert the others who they were.

But even so, there were various incidents since soldiers ran amok.

Ding ding! Dang! Two swords clashed in the air as Li Huowang opened his mouth. A large tentacle shot out and tore off the bandit's face.

Lu Xiucan held his serrated blade and charged at the enemy. He didn't even hesitate when he used a bamboo slip to peel off his fingernails before shooting them forward.

Several arrows landed on his dudou inscribed with runes, but there were only sounds of clinking metal as the arrows deflected off his body.

Lu Xiucan wasn't afraid as he faced the bandits. His eyes were filled with hatred.

Li Huowang had seen how much Lu Xiucan had changed. It was clear that the latter wanted to take revenge for his family.

Every time they encountered the Dharma Sect, Lu Xiucan was the first one to charge at them.

Several bandits dipped their arrows into the blood of a black dog. They aimed the arrows at Lu Xiucan, but Li Huowang swung his spine sword. A rift flew forward at extreme speed.

The rift not only split the bandits apart but also glued them together with the strange liquid that poured out from it.

Even though he couldn't use the spine sword to travel to the Qi Kingdom right now, it was still more than enough to kill others.

The bandits used to be in the military. Hou Shu and the Dharma Sect were at war while several smaller factions were fighting for the crumbs.

But all of them were no match for Li Huowang. The battle soon ended, and after clearing up the corpses, Li Huowang's group started their journey again.

This was not the first time something like this had happened, so no one panicked. It was clear Hou Shu had fallen so far that bandits now roamed just outside the cities.

Li Huowang had sent some of the White Lotus Sect followers and their carriages away to recruit more followers into the White Lotus Sect.

"With our speed, we will reach the city in six hours!" Li Huowang's words made everyone else move faster.

The closer they got to the city, the more animal feces and footprints could be seen. However, there were also more corpses the closer they got.

The corpses were thrown onto the side of the road like garbage.

Bai Lingmiao was hesitant, but she knew she couldn't bury all of the dead. This was the reality of war. During times of strife, the most worthless thing was life, whether it belonged to Hou Shu's civilians or the Dharma Sect's followers.

Dong Dong Dong~ Her black fingernails rapped on the drum as she sang a sad song.

“Hold some incense in your hands~ May the smoke rise up to the Nine Heavens~ Hang up paper on the front gate~ And hang white banners on the second door~ May the wind clear the smoke and guide the spirit back to their home~”

As she drummed, the wind blew past and made everyone feel uneasy.

“Amitabha... Amitabha... Amitabha...”

Li Huowang sighed when he heard the old monk repeating it again and again. There were times when Li Huowang hoped that ghosts existed.

If there were ghosts, then kind people could take revenge for the victims after they were killed by evil people. If there were ghosts, they could complain to the King of Hell to seek justice. If there were ghosts, they could be reincarnated again.

Everyone was afraid of ghosts, but they were actually the world's true beauty. It was a beautiful lie.

Bai Lingmiao's singing never stopped because the corpses never stopped appearing.

As she sang, they soon reached a massive stone city. The entire city was built on a mountain, making it easy to defend against attacks.

Li Huowang looked up and saw that they were reaching their destination, Guacang City. It was the capital of Hou Shu, and also the location of Hou Shu's Surveillance Bureau.

Staring at the marking on the city walls and the wooden barricades, it was clear that the city had been assaulted before this.

Even though the city hadn't been breached, the situation was still dire if the Dharma Sect had managed to reach the front of it.

Li Huowang and the others entered the city safely after he flashed his identification.

Dressed in his signature red Daoist robes, Li Huowang chose not to hide. The Surveillance Bureau of Hou Shu immediately knew who was coming.

What surprised Li Huowang was that Hou Shu's officials completely ignored Li Huowang while they welcomed Bai Lingmiao and her White Lotus Sect.

Before long, someone escorted them to the Surveillance Bureau.

The Surveillance Bureau of Hou Shu was also underground, but it was built directly into the mountain.

"Where's Xuan Pin?" Li Huowang asked Shangguan Yuting. He had learned how dangerous the situation was.

"Wait here. Let me find him," she said, then phased into the walls.

Li Huowang sat on the stone stool and waited patiently. He was thinking about what to do if the worst-case scenario happened.

"You've arrived? A bit later than I'd imagined." Xuan Pin appeared and sat on the other side. His red robes parted, and a gaze from the darkness within focused on Li Huowang.

Li Huowang ignored Xuan Pin's remarks and said, "If you want me to be faster, you should call me when you first come here instead."

"You were busy that time. I was worried you wouldn't come even if I called you." Xuan Pin moved to the side and revealed someone else.

The person was wearing a bronze mask with two snarling faces.

The faces were complete with whiskers, fangs, and angry eyes. They were positioned in a vertical line and appeared to be attempting to take each other's position.

At the top of the mask was a hat made from a skull ring.

Chapter 689 - Chief

Li Huowang looked at the oversized mask that covered half of the person's body. Only a pair of green pants could be seen beneath the mask.

"This is the Chief of Hou Shu's Surveillance Bureau. His name is Zhang Tan. Since you are here to help, I think it's beneficial you get to know each other."

Xuan Pin then pointed at Li Huowang and spoke to Zhang Tan. "This is the one I told you about."

Li Huowang looked at Zhang Tan before he greeted the Chief. "The disciple of Zephyr Temple, Li Huowang, greets the senior. May I know which sect you are from?"

Zhang Tan uttered a single word, "Nuo."

"Nuo? As in the Nuo Opera?" Li Huowang was surprised. To his knowledge, Da Nuo was the crazy world itself.

If Da Nuo was crazy, why was someone still worshipping him? It's one thing to worship Da Nuo, but how did someone from their sect become the Chief of Hou Shu's Surveillance Bureau?

Is Da Nuo a Siming? Or is he a Greater Siming in the legends? Or is he an imaginary God like the Immortal Heaven of Qing Qiu?

Li Huowang pondered and asked, "Is Da Nuo still granting you powers?"

Zhang Tan shook his head lightly.

Just then, Xuan Pin's voice came from beside Li Huowang. "It's best if you don't ask that. No matter where you came from, it's very rude to ask such a question, especially when this is also your first time meeting him."

Li Huowang nodded. He was asking out of curiosity, but he was more worried about the situation in Hou Shu. "How is the war going? How strong is the Dharma Sect?”

“We are losing. The Dragon Vein of Hou Shu has been seized. The trail of corpses you saw was the aftermath. To be honest, since the Dragon Vein was taken, the kingdom’s ‘luck’ has been affected too. That’s why we’ve been losing a lot. If you had come any later, Hou Shu would have really fallen.”

Li Huowang frowned. He knew the situation was dire, but he didn’t think it would be this bad.

“Then what are we waiting for? We need to take the Dragon Vein back! Where is it?”

Xuan Pin and Zhang Tan looked at each other and sighed. “We might’ve been able to do so last time, but the situation has worsened to the point where it would be difficult.”

“What do you mean?” Li Huowang realized something else had gone wrong.

“The war is constantly changing. We cannot expect the enemy to wait for us to fight back. Last month, the Dharma Sect of Nanping, Si Qi, and even Hou Shu found an unknown method to merge all three Dragon Veins into one. They then told everyone that they established the Li[1] Kingdom and also had a Dragon Vein. ”

Li Huowang had a terrifying image in his mind. He imagined the three Dragon Veins bundled together like a thread. A single Dragon Vein was already very hard to defeat, much less three.

The Dharma Sect will surely guard the three Dragon Veins as if they were their life!

Li Huowang suddenly felt a pressure on his heart. Ji Zai was so useless that a single thought from Li Huowang would wipe him out of existence.

He pondered a bit before he asked again, “I’ve just arrived here, and you guys have been here for longer. You should have a better understanding of the situation than me, so what countermeasures does the palace of Hou Shu and the Surveillance Bureau have?”

Xuan Pin remained quiet before he said, “We’ve tried a lot of things before you came. Even though we caused some inconveniences for the Dharma Sect, we still didn’t manage to get the Dragon Veins back. The palace of Hou Shu decided to abandon the kingdom and retreat to Qing Qiu.”

“What? That’s it? We give up on Hou Shu?” Li Huowang was stunned at how easily they gave up. How could they be the rulers of Hou Shu like this?

“The Dragon Vein has been lost and our luck has run out. That’s why they came to that conclusion. But don’t worry, not all has been lost. Even though we can’t recover the Dragon Vein, we can retreat to Qing Qiu to regroup our troops. Qing Qiu is also closer to the Liang Kingdom so it’s easier for us and the Emperor to rally the troops there.”

Li Huowang frowned and paced around the room. He didn’t want to give up now. He was here to take back the Dragon Vein, not to retreat back to Qing Qiu.

“Wait, what if we still have a chance?” Li Huowang had an idea. “How much primordial breath do you still have? Give it to me and I can use it!”

He was already here, so it was worth a shot. As long as he had enough primordial breath, Li Huowang could fight against even a Dragon Vein.

Xuan Pin’s answer was brief. “I don’t have any left.”

“What? How come?”

“Because I’ve extracted everything from the Strayed Ones that we’ve caught. It’s not easy to find fresh Strayed Ones with how chaotic the world has become.”

“Wait, you mean that the primordial breath you had was harvested from Strayed Ones?” Li Huowang’s pupils shrank from shock when he heard that.

“Of course. Strayed Ones are the only ones who possess primordial breath. Where else would you find it? Regular people think that a Strayed One’s organs or sense of bewilderment are what make them valuable, but what they don’t know is that the valuable part of a Strayed One is their primordial breath.”

Li Huowang couldn’t accept it. He never would’ve imagined the primordial breath that allowed him to become so strong had been extracted from live Strayed Ones.

Just then, someone floated down from the ceiling and whispered to Xuan Pin.

The person was also one of Xuan Pin’s illusions. When he was done, Xuan Pin said, “It seems that we might actually have a chance.”

“Huh?” Zhang Tan finally spoke after being quiet all this time.

“Qing Qiu’s tribal leader is here. He wishes to fight the Dharma Sect head-on rather than wait for them to invade Qing Qiu.”

Just as Xuan Pin finished speaking, all three of them sensed something was wrong and looked up.

Xuan Pin extended a slender hand from beneath his robes and pointed at the ceiling. The ceiling turned invisible and revealed the cloudy skies. Rain fell as thunder roared in the heavens.

Xuan Pin felt something was wrong and quickly did calculations with his fingers. “Wait, the time doesn’t match. We are missing half a division[2].”

“Wait, what did you say?” Li Huowang was shocked.

“We should have eleven divisions in a day, but we’ve lost half a division.”

“Half a division?” Li Huowang recalled something similar had happened before.

“Xuan Pin, what if the Dharma Sect didn’t want to keep the Dragon Vein? What if they wanted to destroy them?”

Li Huowang had just said that when an earthquake happened.

The Earth Dragon was moving again.

1. The character for Li here means Black.

2. A division = two hours. So half a division means one hour.

Chapter 690 - Earth Dragon Moving

“Remember to follow my chant. If you do it right, I will give you some candy.” A devotee of the White Lotus Sect squatted in front of a group of child beggars and said, “Little god Yu’er pisses itself in front of the Heavenly Mater~”

“Little god Yu’er pisses itself in front of the Heavenly Mater~”

“Good! Come, everyone have a lick and go repeat what I’ve taught you to the masses. Come back after a division and you will each get a candy.”

As the child beggars ran away, they spread propaganda throughout the city to defame the Dharma Sect and praise the White Lotus Sect. Some of the other children even copied them on their own.

The White Lotus Sect used both children and adults to do their bidding.

“Offer tribute to the White Lotus Sect and pray to the Heavenly Mater, for she shall bless your life for a hundred years! She shall bless your afterlife for ten thousand years!”

“Pray to the White Lotus Sect and you are guaranteed to have a son!”

“The Heavenly Mater has descended into the mortal realm! She shall bless everyone! Those who join us will automatically become our sworn brothers. Everyone is welcome to join us. We shall not distinguish between the poor and the rich, the men and the women, or the old and the young.”

As the White Lotus Sect spread their influence, numerous posters of a white lotus were plastered all around the city.

Instead of targeting regular civilians, the White Lotus Sect intended to absorb some of the Dharma Sect members to reduce their strength.

Instead of suppressing the White Lotus Sect's high-profile recruitment campaign, the city officials were actively supporting it.

The city officials' higher-ups had given the order that those who opposed the Dharma Sect were allies.

As the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect, Bai Lingmiao sat in a massive hall and waited for the palace of Hou Shu to come and meet her.

"Senior Bai, where is Senior Li?" Yang Xiaohai was nervous because he didn't see Li Huowang around.

"Senior Li has something to do and will return shortly." Bai Lingmiao knew where he went, but she thought there was no reason to tell Yang Xiaohai about it.

Bai Lingmiao was nervous as she waited for the officials. She didn't know how she should conduct herself in front of them.

An old woman with a lotus engraving on her forehead sensed Bai Lingmiao's worries and bowed. "Saintess, please do not worry. Hou Shu is in danger, so rather than making it difficult for us, they will instead politely ask for your help."

Bai Lingmiao nodded and calmed down a little. She used her mind's eye[1] to sense everything in the hall.

The beautiful decorations in the hall indicated that the palace of Hou Shu intended to treat her as a guest.

She then saw Lu Xiucui was reading the Profound Records intently. She took a cup of tea and walked over to him.

Seeing her approaching him, Lu Xiucui put down the Profound Records, stood up, and bowed. "Mistress!"

Bai Lingmiao took the Profound Records and traced her fingers across the words. Various bloody and self-mutilation techniques appeared in her mind. She knew what it was.

Senior Li used this a lot in the past. It's very evil.

Bai Lingmiao sighed and put the Profound Records down. "Xiucai, I know you are upset. Please pray more to the Heavenly Mater and you will feel better. Also, if you want to take revenge against the Dharma Sect, we have a lot of techniques in the White Lotus Sect. There's no need to use this."

"Thank you, Mistress!" Lu Xiucai was grateful, but he had no intention of giving up the Profound Records. He wanted to cultivate both the techniques of the White Lotus Sect and the Ao Jing Sect.

The White Lotus Sect's techniques required talent, humility, and training, while the Profound Records required none of that. He could use it immediately.

Bai Lingmiao knew what Lu Xiucai was thinking. She wanted to persuade him, but the ground started shaking before she could. Everything in the hall began falling left and right.

"The Earth Dragon is moving! Quick! Get out of the hall!"

As the ground shook, everyone evacuated outside to avoid getting crushed if the building collapsed.

Bai Lingmiao composed herself and saw the chaos outside.

"The Earth Dragon is moving!" Gongs, bells, and people shouting could be heard everywhere. Many houses collapsed, and several people fell into the ravines.

Thankfully the situation ended soon. The ground stopped shaking after five minutes.

They looked down from the city built into the face of the mountain. The barren land below was cracked to the point it almost split apart.

Before Bai Lingmiao could understand what was happening, she saw Li Huowang approaching her quickly.

"Miaomiao! How many fighters do you have in the White Lotus Sect? Mobilize all of them!"

Bai Lingmiao had never seen Li Huowang so agitated before.

“Senior Li, what’s wrong?”

“The Dharma Sect are not capturing the Dragon Veins to use them for themselves—they’re destroying them!” Li Huowang’s words made everyone else panic too.

God Yu’er was waiting. If the Dragon Veins were to be destroyed, the Liang Kingdom would end up like the Qi Kingdom.

Aside from the members who excelled at spreading the dogma, the stronger members of the White Lotus Sect, marked by white donkeys tattooed behind their backs, were mobilized. They accompanied Bai Lingmiao as she ran towards Hou Shu’s Surveillance Bureau.

Due to the quaking, everyone in Hou Shu’s Surveillance Bureau ran out. Li Huowang only recognized the three people at the front.

Hou Shu’s Surveillance Bureau Chief, Zhang Tan, Liang Kingdom’s Surveillance Bureau Chief, Xuan Pin, and Si Qi’s Surveillance Bureau Chief, Zheng Boqiao. It was clear that the threat was so dire that all of them had to mobilize together.

Li Huowang felt a lot of gazes trained on him. Some of them were even staring at him in broad daylight. Li Huowang felt that the Surveillance Bureau wasn’t that friendly to him.

Li Huowang approached them when Zhang Tan took out a horn tied with a red rope. He placed it on the mouth of his mask and blew it.

Bwooooooooooooooh~

The sound of the horn echoed far and wide, covering everyone like a cloud of mist.

After the sound of the horn dissipated, the hundreds of people scattered. They all ran in different directions as they rushed to carry out their assigned missions.

Li Huowang turned to Xuan Pin and asked, “Where are they going? The Dragon Veins are at risk of getting destroyed and we need to get them back.”

“Don’t worry. We are not asking them to take on futile missions. We have some time since the Dharma Sect will find it difficult to destroy the Dragon Veins. We need to retrieve them before they are destroyed completely.”

“How do you know that the Dragon Veins haven’t been destroyed yet?”

“Time,” Xuan Pin said, raising a single skeletal finger. “A Dragon Vein represents a single division. We have currently lost half of a division.”

“A Dragon Vein represents a single division? There are twelve divisions in a day, so does that mean we had twelve Dragon Veins?”

“Wrong. There are sixteen divisions in a day, so we had sixteen Dragon Veins. The reason why there’s so little time in a day now was because some of the Dragon Veins were destroyed in the past.”[\[2\]](#)

Chapter 691 - Cloud Swamp

“Sixteen divisions? So a day in this world originally had thirty-two hours?”

Li Huowang felt his mind spinning. What he assumed was basic common knowledge here turned out to be wrong.

“Yes, Dragon Veins vary in size. But, according to the records, there were indeed sixteen divisions in a day.”

“Why didn’t you tell me this earlier?”

“What? Haven’t you read the almanacs sold for a couple of silver coins on the street? Aren’t you a Daoist? Have you not even read the Four Books and Five Classics[1]?”

Li Huowang didn’t know how to respond. After thinking it over, it seemed pretty logical. If this entire world was mad, what did a few extra divisions in a day matter?

At this moment, an idea popped into Li Huowang’s mind.

If all the remaining Dragon Veins disappeared, what would happen? Would a world without divisions exist? What kind of world would that be?

Li Huowang vigorously shook his head and tried to shake off these thoughts. “Let’s forget about how many divisions there are in a day for now. Where are those three Dragon Veins? That’s the most critical thing now!”

“Cloud Swamp.”

Li Huowang quickly found a map of Hou Shu and examined it closely.

The terrain of Hou Shu was barren, but it wasn’t devoid of water. Cloud Swamp was a swamp filled with miasma, and various legends spoke of it.

Li Huowang looked at the map and gritted his teeth. “Things have come to this. There’s no time to waste. Let’s go and retrieve the Dragon Veins! Eleven divisions in a day is already too few.”

The situation was critical, so Li Huowang and his group set out.

They weren’t the only ones. All the military forces within Hou Shu and the reinforcements from Qing Qiu were also moving to counterattack the areas occupied by the Dharma Sect. No matter their motives, they were allies in dealing with the Dharma Sect.

The Dharma Sect wouldn’t sit idly by with such significant movements. In an instant, the entire Hou Shu was thrown into chaos.

Everyone rode horses across the barren desert, rushing towards Cloud Swamp. As they charged into a low-lying area, the ground suddenly cracked open and revealed a bottomless black chasm.

A strange scene unfolded before anything from below could react. The riders seemed to lose their footing and were suspended in mid-air.

A pale hand with a jade ring on its thumb pierced into Li Huowang’s head and slid out from the back of his skull as he moved. “Shen, this is the work of Xuan Pin. They aren’t here.”

Meanwhile, the real Li Huowang and his companions had already arrived on the outskirts of Cloud Swamp.

The Dharma Sect obviously wouldn’t let them approach easily. The area around Cloud Swamp had become a battlefield, with the Dharma Sect defending against the attacks from Hou Shu and Qing Qiu.

It was like a massive millstone that swallowed people whole and spat out death and dismembered limbs. Even the heavens seemed to weep at the sight as a fine drizzle began to fall.

As the rain intensified, the number of deaths also increased.

The rain mingled with blood, shrouding the battlefield in a layer of red mist.

“DIE!” Li Huowang roared. Covered in tentacles, he charged through the crowd and left a trail of corpses in his wake.

No matter how many Dharma Sect followers Li Huowang killed, they kept on coming with no end in sight. They swarmed him like insects, ready to sacrifice their lives.

Li Huowang and his group persevered through and finally reached the edge of Cloud Swamp. He saw the other Chiefs enter Cloud Swamp and didn’t linger outside as he led his group into the swamp.

“This way! Follow me!” Xuan Pin’s Shangguan Yuting called out and guided Li Huowang through the muddy swamp.

When they moved away from the battlefield, the noise faded. It was replaced by an eerie silence, but this didn’t mean safety. In fact, the danger only increased.

Two hidden arrows shot out from a nearby pond and pierced Li Huowang’s back, emerging through his chest.

Li Huowang held his purple-tassel sword, turned around, and coldly glared at the pond. Peng Longteng’s large figure crashed into it and caused a large splash. The water soon turned blood-red.

A small bump rose on the back of Li Huowang’s head and split open. Li Sui’s eyes emerged to help him watch his blind spot and avoid further ambushes.

Li Huowang gripped the invisible arrows in his chest and yanked them out. He walked to the pond’s edge and looked at his reflection with a hesitant expression.

“Ji Zai, what are you doing? With three Dragon Veins gone, are you just going to watch? What happened to the preparations you mentioned you were making earlier?”

There was still no response from Ji Zai. Disappointment flickered across Li Huowang’s face. He really wanted to know what Ji Zai was up to. Could there be anything more important than dealing with the Dharma Sect right now?

Xuan Pin's figure appeared beside Li Huowang and said, "Be careful, Zheng Boqiao's group has encountered some tough opponents."

Li Huowang looked around at the reactions of others, then understood that this was merely Xuan Pin's illusion. His real self was somewhere else.

"Even if we tie up the Dharma Sect's cannon fodder with soldiers, the Dharma Sect has many skilled fighters."

"You're saying this a bit too late. Gather everyone to avoid being picked off by the Dharma Sect one by one."

"You underestimate the Chiefs. They're fine. If they're surrounded, I'll send others to reinforce them. I'm telling you this to keep you alert. Here," Xuan Pin said as he extended a hand, offering an old wooden box to Li Huowang.

"What's this?" Li Huowang took the box. While Xuan Pin's body was ethereal, the box was actually real.

"Some primordial breath found in Hou Shu. Use it when you see the Dragon Veins. There's not much this time, as there's very little Strayed Ones left. Many people have wasted it."

Li Huowang looked at the red box with a complex expression. He took it and tucked it into his robe.

Suddenly, Li Huowang tilted his head and dodged a flying stone shot from behind. He turned around and saw a motionless stone statue nearby.

Li Huowang frowned and drew his bronze coin sword, then swung it forcefully and shattered the statue. Dark green worms flew out and scattered everywhere.

It looked like stone, but it was more like a human-shaped cocoon.

Bai Lingmiao suddenly said, "Senior Li, there are many more of those things ahead.”

Li Huowang turned to Xuan Pin and said, “Tell everyone to be careful. It seems the Dharma Sect has prepared a banquet for our arrival.”

Chapter 692 - Soldiers

In the extremely muddy Cloud Swamp, the rain continued to fall relentlessly as Li Huowang led his group and struggled through barely passable paths.

The deeper they went, the more perilous it became. There was a constant stream of Dharma Sect followers emerging from unexpected places.

Besides these people, Li Huowang also saw crooked human statues, each one filled with wriggling green worms.

More peculiarly, these statues were not solitary. They were connected by root-like tendrils that intertwined beneath the soil.

As the number of these statues increased, Li Huowang felt as though he was trapped in the Dharma Sect's web. Although the statues didn't move, he had the nagging feeling they could spring to life at any moment.

Li Huowang came to an abrupt halt as his legs sank into the mud. It was clear this was a trap, and he would walk right into it if he continued onward.

"Are you sure the Dragon Veins are in the Cloud Swamp? Could this be a trick by the Dharma Sect?" Li Huowang asked Xuan Pin.

"Not even the Sitting Oblivion Dao could deceive me. I don't think they can either. Three Dragon Veins can indeed alter the feng shui of a place. This is a known fact."

Xuan Pin's words did little to improve Li Huowang's mood. It was not good to knowingly walk right into a trap.

Li Huowang pressed his temples, and materialized Peng Longteng, the monk, Qiu Chibao, and Jin Shanzhao.

Under his orders, they took the lead and forged a path forward. The rain intensified, shrouding the swamp in mist and reducing visibility.

Dong dong dong~ The drum at Bai Lingmiao's waist was beat steadily, and the sound extended outwards through the rain.

Everything around Li Huowang gradually became clear in Bai Lingmiao's mind, allowing her to thwart several ambush attempts by the Dharma Sect.

Li Huowang had assumed that the enemies would become stronger, but the Dharma Sect's attacks suddenly ceased.

"Senior Li, there's an attack happening a mile to our left!"

"Let's go! Help them!" Li Huowang led his group swiftly towards the source of the commotion. He couldn't allow the Dharma Sect to defeat them one by one.

When he arrived, Li Huowang saw the Chief of Hou Shu's Surveillance Bureau, Zhang Tan, under attack. The statues seemed to come to life in the pouring rain, appearing and vanishing in the mist.

Sharp fangs extended from beneath Zhang Tan's mask, which clashed and vibrated rapidly as they made a clicking sound. The same sound echoed from the mist and responded in kind.

The ground suddenly cracked open. Five statues emerged like fingers from the earth and, grasping Zhang Tan like a hand.

Li Huowang gave some instructions, then immediately charged into the mist without hesitation, wielding his bronze coin sword to assist him.

Li Huowang initially thought he was merely helping an ally. However, as he stepped over a fallen statue, it suddenly exploded. A gleaming long sword was revealed from within, slashing towards his face.

Clang! The collision sent sparks flying. He saw that his purple-tassel sword left no mark on the opponent's weapon, making him realize he was facing a tough adversary.

A figure slowly emerged from the mist, dressed in a matador outfit and wearing tall shoes. His head was bowed and his drenched black hair covered his face. Seven or eight long swords were protruding from his chest.

“What is this?” Li Huowang frowned.

“Be careful. This is a Si Qi Immortal Soldier,” Xuan Pin’s illusion answered.

“Immortal? What is an Immortal Soldier?” Li Huowang wanted to ask this question, but the Immortal Soldier twirled its sword and lunged at him before he could.

As Li Huowang prepared to defend, his body instinctively moved an inch to the left to narrowly avoid a scimitar from behind.

Peng Longteng’s massive body shielded Li Huowang from the Immortal Soldier in front. Li Huowang turned to see another Immortal Soldier emerge behind him, wielding a strange curved blade.

It had been a close call, and he would probably have been killed if not for Li Sui’s eyes on the back of his head spotting the ambush.

Two of them? As the thought crossed his mind, a spear burst from the ground and impaled Li Huowang’s left foot. They were also underground.

Another Immortal Soldier descended from above, ready to strike. At this moment, he understood that these people had targeted and encircled him!

He took a direct hit from the curved blade with his body while swinging the spine sword upward with his right hand. The crack forced the Immortal Soldier above to retreat.

Li Huowang used his six tentacles and pushed firmly to propel himself into the air. The Immortal Soldier who had retreated temporarily was not too far away. Li Huowang’s body flashed as he shifted his body above the Immortal Soldier and swung his bronze coin sword to decapitate that Immortal Soldier.

Flashes of cold light surrounded Li Huowang from all directions.

Swoosh! The rain halted in mid-air as all the Immortal Soldiers lunged at him with phantom images behind. “Break!”

The weapons of the four Immortal Soldiers collided with Li Huowang’s body, producing a grating metallic sound. The rain resumed its heavy downpour.

Li Huowang was suspended in mid-air by the various weapons. He endured the searing pain, took a deep breath, and roared, “You hurt my daughter!”

He scooped out his eyeball and squeezed it tightly. A strange color enveloped everyone.

Boom! Flames erupted from Li Huowang’s body and spread to the Immortal Soldiers, scorching them and turning them into charred figures resembling Li Huowang.

The fire burned Li Huowang’s skin and caused the falling rain to evaporate into steam.

The Immortal Soldiers attempted to retreat, but they moved extremely slowly due to Li Huowang’s eyeball sacrifice.

Since they were unable to withdraw, the Immortal Soldiers launched a desperate counterattack, which was exactly what Li Huowang wanted.

Despite being called Immortal Soldiers, Li Huowang believed they weren’t true immortals. Genuine immortals wouldn’t fear fire.

Soon, the four Immortal Soldiers fell onto the ground. Only their charred weapons were left behind as the flames devoured them.

Chapter 693 - Open

These Immortal Soldiers didn't seem to belong to the Dharma Sect—they appeared to be military creations.

This suggested that with the Dragon Veins' ownership changing, the military factions of Nanping and Si Qi had also switched allegiances.

Li Huowang didn't bother anymore with these people. While still engulfed in flames, he prepared to join the battle and help rescue the others.

He assumed the situation would resolve quickly, but the statues continued to emerge from the mist. Although they were no match for those like Li Huowang, they still kept everyone else busy.

Li Huowang realized what the enemy's strategy was. They're stalling for time!

Right then, the ground shook violently. The Earth Dragon was moving again.

The earthquake caused water in the swamp to flood out. As it shook, the expanded swamp quickly swallowed up anyone who couldn't find solid footing.

Despite the chaos, more Dharma Sect followers emerged from the mist, determined to drag someone down with them regardless of the risk of being consumed by the swamp.

Li Huowang had experienced the tremors caused by the Earth Dragon moving many times, and he knew what they signified.

"How many divisions have we lost?" Li Huowang shouted to Xuan Pin.

Xuan Pin showed him one finger in response.

Li Huowang muttered, "One division... That means one of the three Dragon Veins has been destroyed!"

This bad news stressed him out even more.

In such dire circumstances, there was no point in discussing any further. He gritted his teeth and led the others against the Dharma Sect's onslaught, advancing toward the center of Cloud Swamp.

As they neared the center, the number of worm-infested statues decreased. They were replaced by living and formidable Dharma Sect members.

The opponents didn't just consist of Dharma Sect members from Great Liang and Great Qi. There were also various sects that had pledged allegiance to the Dharma Sect, identifiable by the black cloths on their shoulders.

Li Huowang was still engulfed in flames and did not want to waste this opportunity. He charged at the front and used the fire burning him to dry the ground, kill the Dharma Sect followers, and pave the way for his allies.

They made swift progress with his lead. After two hours, they reached their destination—the deepest part of Cloud Swamp, which was unexpectedly a parched area.

A formidable stone fortress had been erected, and only Dharma Sect followers were visible behind the spiked defenses. The continuous rain and ominous dark sky added to the tense atmosphere.

Peng Longteng threw Li Huowang high into the air so that he could catch a glimpse of what lay behind the fortress.

There was a Dragon Vein formed from stacked emperors. It was pinned in a triangular quagmire by some massive stone pillars. As the Dragon Vein struggled, the mud shook violently, and a noxious mist filled the air.

Dharma Sect witches in wide robes circled and danced around the quagmire. They formed a writhing chain and used their human bodies to draw a living curse aimed at destroying the Dragon Vein.

Li Huowang wanted to observe more details, but he felt his body start to stiffen and turn to stone. The Dharma Sect had noticed him.

When Li Huowang landed back on the ground, he found everyone had gathered around him. Since both sides had revealed their cards, it was time to strategize.

“I’ll leave everything else to you. The Dragon Vein is mine,” Li Huowang said.

The Dragon Vein could resist most supernatural attacks, and he was the most experienced in dealing with it.

“That was my plan,” Xuan Pin replied. His form dissipated like smoke, and he quickly reappeared before Li Huowang. “Remember, our utmost goal is to reclaim the Dragon Vein.”

“But there’ll definitely be some high-ranking Dharma Sect members in a place like this. Don’t get entangled with them too much. I will assist you. We win if we take back the Dragon Vein.”

“Understood.”

Li Huowang glanced around at the unfamiliar faces and asked, “Who are they? What’s your plan?”

Though he didn’t recognize them, it was clear they weren’t from the Surveillance Bureau.

“Li Huowang, this is not the time for such trivialities. Focus on the bigger picture,” Xuan Pin said.

Li Huowang could sense the underlying tension in Xuan Pin’s words.

Despite being forced allies against the Dharma Sect, Xuan Pin still didn’t fully trust Li Huowang. Xuan Pin hid many things from Li Huowang just because he was Ji Zai’s Twisted One.

But Li Huowang didn’t fully trust them either.

He turned to Bai Lingmiao and instructed, “Stay back and be ready to retreat if things go wrong!”

The heads of Bai Lingmiao’s two upper bodies, clad in red veils, gently moved up and down in unison.

Hou Shu's Chief sounded the horn, and everyone began to advance.

Armored cavalry charged forward, their murderous aura enveloping them like a giant sword that was aimed at the fortress.

"Kill!"

The fight erupted with a battle cry. Both sides unleashed their abilities against each other.

Li Huowang ignored the chaos around him and burrowed into the ground instead. He moved his tentacles like an octopus as he moved towards the fortress.

He knew the Dharma Sect had experts, so he did not advance by himself. Li Huowang was accompanied by his allies as they waited for the right moment. He knew that they shouldn't be impatient, especially at a time like this.

Two hours later, the fortress was breached. The entire heart of the Cloud Swamp was thrust into chaos as incantations and battle cries filled the air.

Li Huowang spotted Zheng Boqiao of the Fangxian Sect chanting a spell that turned a Dharma Sect witch into a ball of flesh and swallowed him whole. He knew his opportunity had arrived.

He took out a box he carried and stuffed it into his mouth. Li Sui watched a bulge in her dad's throat slide downwards.

Suddenly, the surrounding mud turned to transparent water, and Li Huowang's charred skin began to heal rapidly.

"Li Sui! Let's go!" Li Huowang said, leaping upward as a spring gushed from the ground.

The mysterious appearance of the spring drew the attention of the people on the battlefield, and Li Huowang, hidden from view, swiftly approached the Dragon Vein. As he moved closer, the agonized roars from the Dragon Vein assaulted his mind.

Li Huowang clenched his fists when he was near the edge of the quagmire. He watched the churning mud solidify while the stone pillars that pinned the Dragon Vein's body liquefied.

Just as he started to make his move, an unexpected change occurred. The colors of the stone pillars and mud all faded to black and white. Only the golden dragon robes on the Dragon Vein retained their hue, providing a stark contrast.

Who's there? What sect's technique is this? This thought had barely formed when Li Huowang noticed the colors on his body fading.

It was like he was transforming into a figure from a grayscale landscape painting.

Chapter 694 - Scholar

Li Huowang had lost all hue.

He looked down at his now grayscale self, then he drew a dagger and slashed his palm. Black blood flowed out instead of red.

This wasn't just an illusion but rather some strange supernatural power from a sect.

An elderly voice rang in Li Huowang's ears. "Yu Qing captures the essence, Da Fan divides the spirit, Yuan Gang flows and evolves, Xing Zhu stabilizes the realm, Chang Yang dispels Yin, Zhong Yuan conceals shadows!"

Then even the black and gray shades on Li Huowang gradually faded, turning an eerie white. His facial features blurred and distorted as the colors drained away.

Li Huowang turned towards the voice and saw an old scholar with a black beard. He wore a silk hat and a purple robe embroidered with green patterns.

One of his hands rested near a sword at his waist, another hand held a feather fan, and a third painted quickly on a scroll suspended in mid-air.

Li Huowang didn't know which sect or faction this three-handed scholar belonged to, but the black cloth on his shoulder made it clear whose side he was on. There was no need for conversation.

The Dragon Vein was evidently guarded, which was as expected.

Swoosh!

Li Huowang raised his spine sword and swung it forcefully, sending a rift flying towards the scholar.

The rift was spraying a strange liquid from the Great Qi.

Clang!

Nevertheless, a massive guandao[1] with a black tassel swiftly sliced the rift apart.

It was the act of an eight-foot-tall general. He stood imposingly as he pointed menacingly at Li Huowang with two fingers.

“Ha! You rogue, you dare to provoke me?! Shameless scoundrel, do you think a crow can occupy a phoenix’s nest? Who do you think you are, pushing forward with all your schemes?”

Li Huowang thought this was an Immortal Soldier at first, but when the general moved, Li Huowang noticed he was as thin as paper. It was as if the general had just stepped out of a painting. Furthermore, his body only had black and white colors.

Li Huowang studied the scholar’s brush and understood the general’s origin.

“Sink!” Li Huowang roared.

The ground beneath the scholar and general turned to quicksand and dragged them down.

The three-handed scholar was unfazed by Li Huowang’s attack. He lifted his feather fan and waved it at Li Huowang. A gust blew over and lifted the burly general off the ground. He floated towards Li Huowang like a kite.

When the general was close, he unfurled like a massive flag and raised his guandao to strike at Li Huowang’s head.

“Fire!” Li Huowang yelled.

With a click, Li Jiancheng’s thumb turned the gear of the plastic lighter. It sparked, and an orange-blue flame ignited, reflecting in Li Huowang’s eyes.

Boom!

The paper general burst into flames in midair.

Li Huowang crashed through the general’s disintegrating body, with the red flames giving Li Huowang a new color. He looked like a fiery comet as he lunged at the scholar.

The old scholar realized he had met a formidable opponent. He pulled out his trump card and drew rapidly on his feather fan.

He exclaimed, "Supreme of the supreme, the sky within the sky! Mysterious primal energy, chaos before all! Three realms of enlightenment transforming all heavens, Grand Luo Yu Qing, void and natural!"

Li Huowang's fire quickly faded, turning into a grayish color.

Very quickly after, even the gray was erased. It seemed he was going to lose all color.

Li Huowang didn't know which Siming's power the scholar was borrowing, but it was clear to him that he would disappear forever once all of his colors were erased.

Right before he turned utterly transparent, Li Huowang chanted inwardly, I have color! My body has color! My hair is black! My blood is red!

Li Huowang started to regain color. However, the scholar countered, and Li Huowang's colors quickly faded again. They reached a deadlock.

Then Li Sui's voice echoed in Li Huowang's mind, My father has color! His body has color! His hair is black! His blood is red!

Surprisingly, this helped Li Huowang slowly regain his colors. Li Sui was able to help him under such circumstances.

This was a new experience for Li Huowang. No, it was actually the second time. The first was when Dan Yangzi borrowed his Strayed One's power within his stomach.

Li Huowang focused on dealing with the opponent first. The old scholar saw his hidden abilities were useful and knew he was about to lose.

In despair, the old scholar watched Li Huowang raise his spine sword. Then Xuan Pin suddenly appeared beside the scholar and swiftly waved his sleeve across, taking off the scholar's head.

The scholar's body crumpled to the ground. This left Li Huowang feeling frustrated, like he was punching air.

"Go deal with the Dragon Vein. Leave the rest to us," Xuan Pin said.

Li Huowang barked, "Where were you!? I had almost finished him off by the time you showed up!"

He was reminded of his classmate stealing a win from him back in a game.

"Don't think I wasn't busy. The fact you could duel leisurely with this scholar of Minglun Hall meant we blocked the other troubles for you."

Li Huowang looked at the chaos around him and had no time to argue. He turned back towards the distant quagmire.

With the old scholar dead, the colors near the pit returned to normal. Li Huowang made haste. He drew his bronze coin sword and hurled it at the stone pillars pinning the Dragon Vein.

The sword extended like a whip and coiled around a pillar.

"Rise!" Li Huowang bellowed and yanked the massive pillar free.

Accompanied by the dragon's roar, the Dragon Vein struggled even more violently.

Li Huowang saw hope, and he continued to pull out the remaining pillars.

One by one, the pillars were uprooted, and the first Dragon Vein began to rise from the mud.

He noticed the panicked expression of the emperor atop the Dragon Vein. Li Huowang was rather stumped. Did the Dharma Sect not control the Dragon Vein like Shai Zi had previously? Was it because they couldn't control it?

Nevertheless, it was a piece of good news. They had rescued the Dragon Vein, and the Dharma Sect hadn't found a way to control it yet.

It made Li Huowang happy to witness this, as he did not need to battle the Dragon Vein.

Li Huowang was about to speak to the chubby emperor. However, the frightened emperor was dragged along the Dragon Vein and then sent flying into the sky in terror.

Chapter 695 - Natural Disaster

Amidst the chaotic battlefield, just as Li Huowang was trying to understand what the freed Dragon Vein intended to do, he saw the emperor shouting excitedly to the surrounding warriors.

“Run! Run quickly! This is a trap! The Dharma Sect is using the Dragon Vein as bait to catch you all!”

An earth-shaking rumble erupted suddenly and caused the ground to tremble violently.

The clearing at the center of Cloud Swamp shook intensely, as if the entire fortress, or rather, the entire ground, had come to life.

It turned out that destroying the Dragon Vein was just a ruse. The Dharma Sect’s plan wasn’t merely to destroy the Dragon Vein. They wanted to use the pretext of destroying it as a trap to capture all the Surveillance Bureau Chiefs in one fell swoop!

At that moment, the sky suddenly darkened. It was a Natural Disaster.

Li Huowang felt the gaze in the sky fixed on him, and a cold sweat trickled down his face. He realized he was in serious trouble.

He had initially thought that no matter how many experts the Dharma Sect deployed, they couldn’t possibly defeat the three Chiefs and the top experts from the Surveillance Bureau.

Even if there was an ambush, he was confident he could escape with Miaomiao. But no one expected that god Yu’er would intervene directly!

This wasn’t the Dharma Sect’s conspiracy—it was God Yu’er’s scheme! He was pulling out all the stops to eliminate the mortal obstacles.

Li Huowang knew that although god Yu'er couldn't descend yet, it didn't mean he couldn't act in other ways. Since he had set this trap personally, more trouble was surely on the way.

"Run! Miaomiao, retreat quickly!"

Peng Longteng suddenly appeared beside Li Huowang, grabbed him with one hand, and threw him towards the distant swamp.

From a great distance, a crane's cry echoed, causing their hair to stand up. The ground of Cloud Swamp shook even more violently.

Suddenly, stone fangs resembling pillars rose from the surrounding marsh and blocked Li Huowang's path in mid-air. Before he could turn, giant spikes rose around the entire fortress.

These spikes interlocked and shook violently, then formed a gigantic mouth that swallowed the entire fortress at the center of the Cloud Swamp.

Everything went silent as they were plunged into darkness.

Xuan Pin raised a light to illuminate the surroundings, causing the crowd to erupt in chaos. Both sides ignored everything else and scattered in all directions.

The panic on their faces was genuine. Clearly, the Dharma Sect hadn't informed its members that this was a trap.

Li Huowang forced himself to stay calm. He approached Xuan Pin and asked, "What method did god Yu'er use? What kind of stomach are we in now?"

Xuan Pin answered him concisely, "Earth Dragon."

"What? Earth Dragons are real?" Li Huowang's pupils contracted. He had always thought the so-called Earth Dragon turning was just a metaphor for earthquakes, but it was real!

The dark surroundings trembled slightly, suggesting that the Earth Dragon was burrowing deeper into the ground. They would be trapped forever if they didn't find a way out soon.

Li Huowang walked towards the side. He had to escape from this place, even if he had to bust a hole in this so-called Earth Dragon.

Soon, he reached the boundary and began melting the iron-hard walls to create a large gap, despite their hardness.

However, as he continued, an unexpected itching sensation struck him. He reached into his abdominal wound and pulled out several wriggling worms.

Li Huowang was reminded of the human statues in Cloud Swamp.

“Dad, there are a lot of worms in your stomach, and they’re growing in number. I’ll throw them all out.”

Li Sui’s tentacles kept removing the worms from Li Huowang’s stomach, but Li Huowang noticed that the smooth skin of Li Sui’s tentacles was also crawling with worms. His heart sank.

The Earth Dragon was digesting both humans and Li Sui too.

His expression became even grimmer as he realized that the digestion was happening internally and externally.

“Ahhh!” Lu Xiucui’s scream pierced the air. When Li Huowang turned, he saw all sorts of evil spirits wrapped in black smoke emerging from his shadow.

Inside this Earth Dragon’s belly, everyone’s shadow had become a door that could not be closed, and evil spirits were summoned endlessly.

Though these spirits were only about as strong as the Wandering Gods, their numbers were endless, continually emerging no matter how many were killed.

“Xuan Pin! Do something!” Li Huowang shouted.

“Sorry, I can’t. I had already escaped when the Earth Dragon opened its mouth. It’s just an illusion beside you,” Xuan Pin said as his body began to melt.

“What did you say?” Li Huowang looked at him in disbelief.

“I covered all my bases. Since I came to Hou Shu to rescue the Dragon Vein, I naturally had a backup plan. Don't tell me you didn't have one too?"

Li Huowang reached into his stomach and pulled out a palm-sized piece of human skin as he gritted his teeth. Of course, he had prepared a backup plan. He had secretly peeled two layers of his skin while traveling and made two life-saving artifacts, one for himself and one for Miaomiao. But in this situation, his backup plan was useless!

Li Huowang looked around quickly and saw that Xuan Pin wasn't the only one who got away—Hou Shu's Chief Zhang Tan and many others had escaped too.

The only consolation was that Si Qi's Chief Zheng Boqiao hadn't escaped either. He looked around with a stern face, seemingly calculating his next move. It seemed his prepared backup plan didn't work either.

"No matter, just wait a bit. The version of myself outside is definitely working on a way to get you all out. Rest assured, I won't abandon you. After all, the two Dragon Veins are here too."

"Wait!?! Do you think we can afford to wait?" Li Huowang shouted as he sliced through an approaching evil spirit with his sword and pointed at the chaos around them.

In a short time, the various evil spirits had crowded the surroundings. Those with weaker cultivation bases had already fallen to the worms and spirits, and the situation was becoming increasingly dire.

"Don't panic. My other self will find a way. Besides, you won't die so easily," Xuan Pin said, and then his body completely melted away.

At that moment, Li Sui's voice emerged in Li Huowang's mind, filled with fear and terror for the first time. "Dad, there are a lot of worms in my stomach too. They're eating my flesh. Am I going to die?"

Chapter 696 - Stomach

Li Huowang stopped his daughter from thinking such negative thoughts. “Don’t think about it! You won’t die!”

He continued, “Come! Follow me and repeat after me! I don’t have any worms in my body! I don’t have any worms in my body!”

As Li Huowang used his primordial breath, the worms in his body slowly transformed into his flesh.

Even though the problem had been dealt with temporarily, they were still in danger. Li Huowang was not afraid of evil entities, but rather of the endless number of them.

As they shouted and growled, the evil entities all pounced towards Li Huowang.

Shua! The bronze coin sword whipped at the evil entities, and they were all sliced in half. The dead evil entities were reduced to a cloud of black smoke.

Right after the smoke had just dispersed, a new wave of evil entities lunged at Li Huowang.

“Miaomiao!” Li Huowang raised the glowing stone in his hand to find Bai Lingmiao.

“Senior Li, I’m here!”

Li Huowang followed the voice and soon found the members of the White Lotus Sect sitting cross-legged in a lotus pattern.

Their bodies were naked from the top and had a tattoo of a white donkey. They chanted in unison, “Formless yet complete, born before the creation of Heaven and Earth. Silent and boundless, yet standing alone without change. It goes without peril, for it could be the Mother of the world.”

Li Huowang was surprised that none of the sitting figures, including Bai Lingmiao in the middle, had worms on their bodies.

The evil entities also refused to step close to them.

Bai Lingmiao's upper body was divided in half. She sat with her legs crossed and chanted with both mouths, while the conjoined lotus engraving on her forehead glowed softly.

Li Huowang slammed his tentacles down and jumped forward. He appeared in front of Bai Lingmiao. "So? Is there a way for the White Lotus Sect to break out of here?"

Both of Bai Lingmiao's heads shook simultaneously. "No. This is a strange space."

Li Huowang understood that if they didn't get out soon, they would all be in mortal danger.

How should I escape?

When Li Huowang saw the others fighting off the evil entities, he had an idea. There might be a chance.

"Everyone, come here!" Li Huowang shouted. "We cannot fight alone. Let's all work together to escape! The worms and evil entities won't get near the White Lotus Sect!"

Those who survived up until now were competent and strong. They saw the White Lotus Sect was doing well and understood what might be happening.

Under Li Huowang's lead, the survivors started to move towards the White Lotus Sect.

Li Huowang never forgot the two Dragon Veins. He rescued one of them during the chaos. The Dragon Veins had been bait all along, but Li Huowang had no choice but to bite into them if he wanted to save the world.

As they grouped where the White Lotus Sect was, the members of the White Lotus Sect started to face difficulties in their chant. Worms began growing out of their bodies.

Their burden increased as the amount of people they had to protect increased.

"Can you ask your people to move towards the wall?" Li

Huowang was agitated by how serious the situation was.

Bai Lingmiao nodded with difficulty. “Yes.”

Everyone followed the White Lotus Sect members as they slowly moved towards the south. Li Huowang extended several tentacles to carry Bai Lingmiao above his head as he quickly followed them.

The White Lotus Sect members moved slowly because it was difficult to chant while walking, but thankfully they arrived at the wall without any issues.

Li Huowang got to the point. “Everyone, we need to dig here if we want to survive! We need to dig out a hole from inside the Earth Dragon’s stomach!”

Li Huowang then used his purple-tassel sword to draw a large circle on the stomach lining of the Earth Dragon. “Do not think that it’s impossible! I just tried digging, and the walls were soft! Everyone, start digging so we can get out of here alive!”

Without the worms and evil entities attacking them, they all heeded Li Huowang’s words and started using their individual techniques to dig out a path.

Zheng Boqiao did not stand idly either. He spat out numerous pills and gave them to everyone.

Under their relentless attacks, the circle that Li Huowang had drawn on the stomach lining disappeared as a large hole formed.

It’s working! Li Huowang saw that they had hope of escaping the place.

“Go! Get inside!” Li Huowang shouted, and they started digging deeper. The hole got larger and larger.

“Senior Li! Faster! Everyone is at their limits!” The members of the White Lotus Sect were already pale from overexertion as they almost toppled over.

Bai Lingmiao’s red veil was already drenched in sweat. Li Huowang glared at the hole and willed it to widen faster.

The hole grew wider as if it had become as soft as rubber, allowing them to dig through it more quickly.

Sensing Li Huowang's strange powers, Zheng Boqiao brought out the ace in his sleeve. He rolled up his sleeve and revealed his arms covered in large warts. He cut open one of the warts with his fingernail and took out something from the inside.

"Here!" he threw a writhing ball of flesh to Li Huowang. "Eat it! It's the pill that I've been preserving for years! It will temporarily grant you the strength of a half-Immortal!"

Li Huowang quickly swallowed it.

The moment he did, he felt his stomach turning and churning.

He barely held his stomach with his hands when a strong force shot upwards and split his head apart. At the base of where his head was split in half was another fist-sized head.

The small head started growing until it reached the average size of a head. The two halves of his original head grew out too. Soon, Li Huowang had three heads on his shoulders.

Splat. Two pairs of bloody arms sprouted from Li Huowang's back. Zheng Boqiao's pill had turned Li Huowang into a monstrosity with three heads and six arms!

Li Huowang felt a profound sensation: the amount of his primordial breath had tripled, just like his head.

Li Huowang raised his right hand, and the Earth Dragon's stomach hole grew wider.

"Go!" All three of Li Huowang's mouths shouted in unison as they ran into the hole.

With Li Huowang's guidance, everyone started moving quickly, but the tunnel was endless, as if the Earth Dragon's stomach was incredibly thick.

"Faster! Faster!" Li Huowang ran as fast as he could. The pressure in his three heads started to make his brain pulse in pain.

Just then, Li Huowang heard something chasing them from behind. The head on his left turned around and saw a wall heading towards them—an entire wall of evil entities!

“Ack!” One of the members from the White Lotus Sect spat out blood and fell to the ground. The air started to quiver as Li Huowang felt worms emerging from the depths of his stomach once more.

But they had no choice but to continue to run forward. He led everyone as they ran like an arrow shot out of the bow.

As the first devotee fell, the second and third soon followed—more and more devotees of the White Lotus Sect fell. Everyone felt the worms growing in their body while the wall of evil entities closed in on them.

“Faster! We need to be faster!” Just as the evil entities almost devoured all of them, Li Huowang suddenly felt no resistance in front of him. They escaped!

Chapter 697 - New

As Li Huowang opened up the hole, everyone ran forward and saw that they were in a very open space. They were overjoyed upon realizing they had escaped.

Contrary to their expectations, the Earth Dragon wasn't underground. They escaped from its stomach and were now on the surface. The skies were dark, as though the Natural Disaster was still ongoing.

Li Huowang dared not look up at god Yu'er. He wasn't sure where he was, but he was sure he was no longer at Cloud Swamp.

A piercing scream rang out, followed by the sight of the evil entities dragging those too close to the hole back into the darkness.

"Quick! We need to run away now! The Earth Dragon is still influencing us because the worms in our stomachs aren't gone yet!"

Li Huowang quickly dragged Bai Lingmiao and the others away from the hole.

As they walked away, they saw that the evil entities had left them alone, and everyone sighed in relief.

Suddenly, Li Huowang stopped and looked at a shimmering illusion in the darkness. The illusion wore a blue Daoist robe and a Daoist crown, with leprosy evident on his balding head. He flashed a toothy grin, exposing his yellow teeth.

"Hohoho~ My dear disciple, you did a great job!"

"Scram!" Li Huowang ignored Dan Yangzi and swung his spine sword at him. The rift flew quickly, destroying Dan Yangzi without leaving a trace.

"Senior Li? What's wrong?" Bai Lingmiao looked at him with worry.

"Huh? Did you not see Dan Yangzi just now?"

“Where? There wasn’t anyone there. What happened to you? I thought you said your illness had been cured?” Bai Lingmiao held his hand with worry.

She can’t see it? Is it just me? Did my illness—

He suddenly looked at the illusion of the old monk and urgently asked, “Monk! Did you see that just now? Did you see that balding Daoist?”

Someone from the crowd suddenly interrupted him as the monk was going to answer.

“Li Huowang, what’s wrong with you?” Zheng Boqiao approached and looked at all of Li Huowang’s three heads. “Move faster! The Earth Dragon is too powerful. The worms in our bodies are still alive!”

“Father... There’s more and more worms in my stomach,” Li Sui said, her voice tinged with worry and sadness.

Li Huowang continued moving forward as he looked at the spot where Dan Yangzi had disappeared. He didn’t have the luxury to dwell on it right now.

Everyone moved faster to distance themselves from the Earth Dragon in hopes that the worms would die off.

After fifteen minutes, Li Huowang saw another unexpected person.

It was Shai Zi, dressed in the emperor's dragon robes. “Hohoho, Hong Zhong? Long time no see. Don’t you think it’s time to wake up after getting imprisoned in my illusion for so long?”

“What the fuck is wrong with me?” This time, he ignored the illusion and continued moving forward.

But this time, he was not the only one who saw an illusion.

“Father? Mother?” Tears streamed down from Bai Lingmiao’s red veil as she stood there silently. She stared into the darkness as if she saw her parents. Her face was a mixture of sadness and longing.

Li Huowang followed her gaze but saw nothing.

“Miaomiao! What did you see?” As Li Huowang asked, he realized that the others were staring into the darkness, too.

“I didn’t kill them! Scram! Go find someone else!”

“Master! Your disciple has been unfilial to you!”

“Chun Xiang? Why are you here? Xuan Pin, where are you? Come out!”

Li Huowang realized that he was not going crazy. The space around them was actually making them see things!

“Wait, don’t panic! It’s an illusion! Everything is fake!” Li Huowang warned them.

When they heard Li Huowang shouting, most of them tried to break free from the illusions, but they all failed. Some even attacked the illusions, which was also fruitless.

“We need to get out of the range of the Earth Dragon’s corpse!” No matter how many illusions there were, they posed no threat. The actual danger lay in the worms in their stomachs.

The others quickly followed Li Huowang, seeing him as their undisputed leader and savior.

Everyone ignored the illusions and walked forward, but just a few minutes later, they all encountered something unexpected. Another wall of stomach lining appeared in front of them. They were still trapped inside of the Earth Dragon.

“Impossible!” Li Huowang gouged out one of his six eyes and threw it into the air along with two glowing rocks.

Only then did he see what was happening. They had not escaped the Earth Dragon’s corpse—they had walked into another one of its stomachs!

“Hahahaha! You must be stupefied, right?” Shai Zi appeared again to taunt Li Huowang.

Is this the ability of the Earth Dragon’s stomach? What exactly is an Earth Dragon?! Li Huowang tried to figure out another way to escape.

“Father... It hurts... There are way too many worms. I can’t hold on any longer.” The pale green worms started to burrow out of Li Huowang as they shaved off his flesh.

Just then, a tsunami of evil entities surged towards them. All of them despaired, knowing it was a death sentence.

“I don’t want to die like this! I refuse!” An old man holding a Soul Calling Banner[1] fell backward and exploded into a clump of green worms.

Li Huowang tried to rally everyone to break through the stomach lining again. However, he failed to do so as the worms, evil entities, and illusions made it impossible for everyone to cooperate.

As they were infested with even more worms, they saw more illusions and evil entities.

Li Huowang refused to give up. He used all of his techniques to save Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui. He couldn’t let them die here.

As the situation became more chaotic, more and more people died. Despite this, Bai Lingmiao stood still, listening to the cursing of her family’s illusion.

“You bitch! He’s the one who killed your father! Why haven’t you taken revenge for me? Are you still human?”

“I really didn’t think you were someone like this. How could you be like this? Why did you become so heartless?”

“Sister, are you a bitch?”

Bai Lingmiao cried. She saw Li Huowang struggling and noticed that he was on the verge of collapsing—more than half of his body had turned into worms.

“Senior Li, you can use the Cang-Qiang Ascension to escape.” Bai Lingmiao pointed at the Profound Records being held by Lu Xiucui.

“I want to, but I can’t!” Li Huowang howled in anger. He knew that the Cang-Qiang Ascension could rescue all of them, but where could he find the most intense mental pain right now?

Bai Lingmiao pursed her lips and shook her head, then smiled softly. “Don’t worry, Senior Li. Let me help you.”

Bai Lingmiao turned around. She gave a Flesh Book[2] to one of her followers before she leaped into the crowd of evil entities.

Chapter 698 - Ascension

When the illusion of the Bai family appeared, the Second Deity immediately sensed how unstable her other self's emotions had become.

They are fake! They are illusions! We are still in the stomach of the Earth Dragon. This place can conjure up hallucinations! The Second Deity knew what Bai Lingmiao was thinking and tried to persuade her.

Do not doubt the Heavenly Mater! Have you forgotten that she guided everyone to the Void Home? Your family is waiting for you there! These are merely illusions!

But Bai Lingmiao's sorrowful voice came from beside the Second Deity. "I know. I know they are fake, but..."

The Second Deity then sensed the intense sadness flooding over from her other half.

I can't believe you're still so useless despite becoming the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect! The Second Deity looked through her red veil at the chaos around them.

She pressed her red fingernails on her belly and felt the wriggling worms inside.

The Second Deity then looked at Li Huowang. She understood how dire the situation was when even Li Huowang didn't have a plan to deal with it.

There was no time to think things through. If they didn't come up with a plan now, everyone would die right there and then.

The Second Deity had one last hope. She quickly made a lotus seal with both hands and positioned it in front of her stomach. Her mouth was filled with rows of sharp teeth as she chanted quickly.

"In the beginning, when there was nothing but chaos, a divine light burst forth. From the formless void came the Heavens. The void gave birth to the One, and the One gave birth to Two. The Two formed Yin and Yang, forming the Four Symbols, and from there the Five Elements and Eight Trigrams were created.”

As she chanted, the conjoined lotus engraved on their foreheads flashed. The Second Deity was trying to invite the Heavenly Mater to possess their body, but there was a thin barrier interfering and preventing the Heavenly Mater from manifesting.

As time passed, the Second Deity felt her link to the Heavenly Mater weakening.

Bai Lingmiao felt the same. Her voice trembled as she said, “I have a plan.”

The Second Deity huffed indignantly and said, “Then why didn’t you say so?!”

“Because we might need to die.”

“Then what’s the point?! Might as well not say it!”

“But then at least Senior Li and Suisui can live. I don’t want them to die.”

“Fine!”

Pain. Unbearable pain. It hurt so much that the Second Deity even winced at her own thoughts.

She felt the evil entities gnawing off her hair and fingernails. They gouged out her eyeballs and bit into her body. Did she regret it? The Second Deity didn’t think so. She didn’t regret her actions, regardless of their cost.

“Miaomiao!” She heard Li Huowang faintly, his voice coming from outside the wave of evil entities.

“What are you shouting for? Hurry up and use the Cang-Qiang Ascension to escape! You deserve to die if you waste my life and don’t use the Cang-Qiang Ascension!”

The Second Deity opened her mouth and bit into one of the evil entities. Her sharp teeth ripped apart the evil entity’s head.

But her other half, Bai Lingmiao, had already lost both of her eyes as she cried tears of blood. She felt her body dissipating slowly, and for some reason, the pain in her heart made her feel better.

Li Huowang had run into a group of evil entities. He ignored their attacks as he tried to find Bai Lingmiao.

After searching around, he only found her two eyeballs and tattered clothes. He howled as intense pain came from the deepest recesses of his heart.

Memories of Bai Lingmiao accompanying him when they escaped the Zephyr Temple surfaced in his mind. He vividly recalled everything they had endured together.

Li Huowang felt as if his heart had been put through a blender. Bai Lingmiao was dead. Bai Lingmiao, the girl he had sworn to bring back and marry, was dead.

Even at the very end, she still thought that Li Huowang's life was more important than her own.

Li Huowang placed the Profound Records onto the ground as his arms trembled. His emotions collapsed as he chattered his teeth uncontrollably.

He stabbed two stakes into his abdomen and tore his body open.

A giant clump of worms fell forward from the sudden opening in his body.

“AAAH!”

Li Huowang raised the stakes covered in his flesh and stabbed into the Profound Records, which were glowing in red light.

Swoosh! Black flames sprayed forth everywhere.

Several tentacles wielding different torture tools stabbed into Li Huowang's body again and again.

Blood, flesh, and worms flew into the air.

When the most intense mental and physical pain merged in Li

Huowang's body, he felt a familiar gaze coming from below him.

Li Huowang's organs rearranged and converged onto themselves. Suddenly, his skin burst open like fish scales as his flaps of skin vibrated intensely like the wings of an insect.

Facing the unexpected change in his body, Li Huowang once again felt Ba-Hui's gaze coming from the depths of the ground and noticed a bewitching scent.

Under Ba-Hui's influence, Li Huowang's physical and mental pain changed into something else.

The pain he had inflicted on himself started to affect everything around him. Worms, evil entities, and even the other survivors fell onto the ground as they shouted in despair.

The stomach lining of the Earth Dragon came to life. It cracked, with contorted faces crying out in pain appearing on the walls.

The entire ground shook, and a low groan could be heard. The Earth Dragon was also affected by the intense pain.

"AAAAAH!" Li Huowang stood up and stabbed both hands into the ground, right where he felt the gaze of Ba-Hui coming from.

Pop! One of Li Huowang's heads blew apart, followed by the second one shortly after.

When the third head in the middle was on the verge of popping, the ground suddenly split open, making everyone fall through it.

They fell very quickly and soon heard the wind howling around them. Li Huowang looked down and saw the night sky.

He didn't know what happened. Somehow, they had been inverted in the Earth Dragon's stomach.

Li Huowang and the others didn't slow down as they fell towards the dark sky. Just then, he smelled Ba-Hui's voice and also a strange voice. It was the bizarre call of a crane.

Chapter 699 - Above The Heavens

No, it's not the cry of a crane! Li Huowang used his melded senses to feel the sound of the crane. He realized what the crane's cry really was.

It wasn't a voice—it was one of god Yu'er's hands, or rather, something that resembled a tree branch from god Yu'er. God Yu'er was formless and shapeless. When someone heard these cries, it meant that god Yu'er had touched them.

The sound of the crying crane resonated once again, and Li Huowang felt that god Yu'er had taken over his vocal cords and hijacked his voice!

Despite the intense pain, Li Huowang gripped his neck with his bloody hands to prevent himself from making any noise.

They fell further and further into the dark sky. Li Huowang felt that if he kept falling, he would eventually reach the Baiyu Capital again!

However, he was not planning to run away. As the cries of the crane grew louder, Li Huowang snarled and stuffed his hands into his throat.

Li Huowang tore out his vocal cords and threw them into the heavens below him with all his might. He saw his vocal cords spreading apart like butterflies as they released the crane's call.

As if on cue, everything around his vocal chord grew a mouth, and gradually, the crane's voice grew louder.

The crane's cry reached a crescendo as a female voice filled with sympathy interjected. The voice was filled with sadness and boundless kindness.

“I cried as my son left the village—his whereabouts are now unknown to us. I cry as I don’t know where he is, for there are no letters from him. I cry when I cannot see him—when will he come back and see us again? I cried when I realized it would be difficult for him to come back, for how would his sins be tolerated? I cried when I approached the end of my life, as I knew he wouldn’t be able to see his mother again.

The crane’s voice grew quieter as the screaming voices of the people and evil entities around Li Huowang were audible again.

As the darkness transformed into a lotus, Li Huowang used his melded five senses to look into it.

He pulled open the curtains and revealed the darkness outside. His neighborhood was dark due to a power outage. “Huowang, look! The electricity is coming back!”

The next instant, the heavens and earth inverted as Li Huowang and everyone else fell downwards. They once again saw the night sky painted with stars. Li Huowang knew that the Natural Disaster had ended.

The wind blew past them as they fell from the skies. A tentacle sprouted out of Li Huowang’s throat and grabbed his vocal cords in the air before quickly retracting back into his throat.

Bam! Li Huowang fell into an inn. He lay on the ground and stared into the skies as blood and corpses rained down around him, painting the inn red in the process.

Li Huowang’s vibrating flesh scales had turned back to normal wounds.

He felt his body was on the verge of collapsing. He used the last of his strength to stand up, and then shouted to his reflection in his pool of blood, “Ji Zai! Get the fuck over here! I don’t care what you are doing right now!”

“What’s wrong? What’s happening?” His reflection moved. “Sorry, I was busy saving someone, I think?”

Li Huowang clenched his fist and punched his reflection as he cried out, "Miaomiao is dead! Bai Lingmiao is dead! Why did I become your Twisted One? Why do you think I entrusted my fate to someone like you? That's because I wanted to protect Miaomiao and the others! But where were you? Is this how you repay me?! Why?! Why are the other Simings so strong while you are so useless?! You have three and a half Heavenly Daos, but you can't even protect a single girl! I had to borrow Ba-Hui's strength through the Cang-Qiang Ascension to escape the Earth Dragon's stomach. You are useless!"

"You have to rely on yourself. Only then can we win together."

"Stop giving me such bullshit!" With the support of the tentacles, Li Huowang staggered back upwards and pointed at his reflection.

"Miaomiao is dead! Revive her! Find a way to give her back her life! Or I will let someone else become your Twisted One instead!"

"Hm..." His reflection in the pool of blood thought about it. "She's not dead, though."

"She's not dead?" A glimmer of hope lit up in Li Huowang's heart. He looked around and checked the corpses around him.

"Wait, let me think about it... Oh, right. Extend both of your arms."

"Extend my arms?" Li Huowang extended his arms and a body promptly fell from the sky, breaking them.

He looked down and saw that it was none other than Bai Lingmiao, or rather, half of her. Her body had been bitten to pieces, and her usual clean look was nowhere to be seen. She was covered in blood and gore, with pieces of flesh hanging from her body.

There is supposed to be another half of her upper body, but she's already so tattered. Wait, what if...? Just then, the second half of her upper body fell from the sky.

This time, he was prepared. He quickly caught the second half using his numerous tentacles.

Li Huowang used his teeth to remove the red veil, revealing the bestial face underneath it. With barely any life left in her gaze, Bai Lingmiao looked at Li Huowang.

She opened her mouth, revealing her sharp fangs. Her forked tongue drooped out when she saw Li Huowang's shocked face. "I wanted you to use the Cang-Qiang Ascension to escape, but that didn't mean I had to die. I haven't lived a full life yet!"

Li Huowang was crying tears of joy as he hugged her.

He quickly checked the other Bai Lingmiao and saw she was still alive despite being badly injured.

"Miaomiao, stay still! You need to endure this!" Li Huowang brought out the Fiery Scripture and placed Bai Lingmiao's body together.

He started chanting while the Second Deity used the drum to call for the White Immortal Family.

Chapter 700 - Savior

“Even though we lost a lot of men this time, we technically won. The Dharma Sect tried to ambush us but lost two Dragon Veins instead.”

Xuan Pin was talking to Li Huowang in a rather simple room.

The Liang Kingdom’s Surveillance Bureau Chief, Xuan Pin, was satisfied and praised Li Huowang. “Entering the Earth Dragon’s stomach and emerging unscathed is a miraculous feat. I knew you were very strong when I first saw you. If you help us continuously like this, the Dharma Sect will be destroyed easily.”

Li Huowang ignored Xuan Pin as he shaved off his flesh to feed Li Sui. She had suffered grave injuries this time.

“But you have to be careful next time. Now that you’ve foiled the plans of the Dharma Sect, they won’t let you off so easily.”

Li Huowang twined Li Sui’s tentacles around his fingers before stuffing the tentacles back into his stomach. “Where were you and the others when we were trapped in the Earth Dragon’s stomach? Why didn’t you come and rescue us?”

“We managed to escape the Earth Dragon but didn’t have time to come rescue you. We were entrapped by the Dharma Sect when we made our escape.”

Li Huowang said nothing. He didn’t want to know whether Xuan Pin was lying or not.

He resolved not to rely on anyone.

Xuan Pin continued, “I’ve heard that... the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect was injured?”

Li Huowang frowned when Xuan Pin said that. Miaomiao was still alive, but her condition was bad.

Since most of her flesh had been bitten off, they had to use some flesh from the Immortal Family to replace hers, even after the White Immortal Family's efforts to heal her. She now looked more like a beast than a human.

Even so, she was very weak right now and required a lot of rest.

"You say he's saving some? Who is he saving?" Li Huowang suddenly said something random.

"Hm? What are you talking about?" Xuan Pin was confused.

"I'm asking who he's saving."

"Help! Save me! You need to get me out of here! What's the point of asking me so many questions and recording our conversation?"

"Qian Fu, if you want to get out, you must follow my orders," Li Huowang said firmly as he stood outside the room.

Li Huowang was using his phone to record his conversation with Qian Fu, but he was interrupted when a nurse came by and shooed him away.

Li Huowang checked his phone while walking out of the hospital. He stared at the recordings and decided that it was time to visit Qian Fu's family.

Li Huowang knew that the organization was waiting to ambush him. They were biding for time, and he was confident they would not let him go when the opportunity arose. Li Huowang refused to be passive in this situation.

He couldn't sit still without doing anything. He needed to rescue Qian Fu from the hospital now.

However, Li Huowang knew it would be a monumental task when he saw a police officer disguised as his driver. Due to his identity, it wouldn't be easy to rescue Qian Fu on his own, so he needed a helper.

"Nana, I need your help," Li Huowang whispered to Yang Na, who was beside him.

“Do you want to rescue the crazy guy from the hospital?” After spending so much time with him, Yang Na naturally knew what Li Huowang was thinking.

“Huowang, I can help you, but can I ask you a question first? Why do you want to get him out of the hospital?” Yang Na spoke softly as she looked at Li Huowang.

He hesitated. He was confident that Yang Na would faint from shock if he told her about Qian Fu and the aliens.

“He has insider information about the people assaulting me. I need to rescue him because I refuse to get ambushed by them!”

Yang Na wanted to say something, but she held back.

“I know he’s a patient, but he also knows about the organization! Yang Na, you have to trust me! I’m telling you the truth!” Li Huowang held her hands and stared at her beautiful face.

She hesitated. She looked at the car at the entrance of the hospital and clutched Li Huowang’s hands. “Then what should I do?”

Li Huowang sighed and said, “It’s simple. You don’t need to take risks. Just go to a certain place and find a certain someone. Once you meet her, just call me and let me talk to her.”

Li Huowang had learned from Qian Fu that his daughter was paying the monthly hospital fee. If he wanted to get Qian Fu out, he needed to stop the money.

“Alright.” Yang Na nodded. “Then let’s split up here. You head back first, and I’ll go find the person you’ve mentioned.”

Yang Na walked towards the bus stop. She waved her hands when she was on the bus and Li Huowang quickly messaged her. Turn on your GPS and voice recorder. Do not turn them off.

Even though finding someone in the city wasn't dangerous, Li Huowang decided to play it safe.

Yang Na replied to him shortly. Ok. Are you worried for my safety? (‘▽“)

Li Huowang checked his phone occasionally to check her location through the GPS. Yang Na also messaged him from time to time to update him on her whereabouts.

Huowang, I'm on the train now. ☆:.o(≡▽≡)o.:☆

?(?∇?)? Ah, there's no place to sit, so I have to stand. You owe me an ice cream when we get back.

?(?∇?)? Huh? I just got off the train. I'm taking another bus now.

By the time Li Huowang reached his home, Yang Na finally video-called him

Li Huowang accepted the call and saw Yang Na's confused face. "Huowang, are you sure this is the place? I feel like I came to the wrong place."

"Show me the place using your camera."

Yang Na raised her phone, and Li Huowang saw where she was. She was in the middle of a poorly maintained street. The buildings were close to each other, and the balconies were full of wet clothes that the residents had hung. The walls were yellow and the houses were uneven. It appeared that the place was a village in the middle of a city.

Li Huowang had stayed in Kangning Hospital before, so he knew that the fees were quite high. Qian Fu's daughter shouldn't be able to afford the costs if she lives there.

Chapter 701 - Freedom

“Yang Na, go to the address Qian Fu gave us and see if you can find anything.”

“Okay, but the houses here are built in a very disorganized way,” Yang Na said.

The camera shook as she moved. After searching for a while, Yang Na quickly found the address Qian Fu had given them in a small alley.

At the end of the alley, there was a two-story cement house. The cement was roughly applied, and there was colorful graffiti drawn by children.

The door on the second floor was locked, which was the address indicated.

Smack! The sound of a bowl breaking came from inside the house, followed by the crisp sound of a slap.

Yang Na stepped back in fright, but then cautiously moved forward.

“Money, money, money! All you care about is money! How much do I earn in a month?!” A man’s rough shouting came from inside.

A woman could be heard sobbing, “You promised when you married me! You said you’d take care of Dad’s medical expenses!”

“And you still dare mention your father! No wonder he loves money so much! How much has he swallowed over the years?! Why isn’t he dead yet?! How long is he going to keep tormenting our family?!”

The sound of bowls breaking and furniture falling echoed from inside, mixed with a girl’s suppressed cries.

Li Huowang heard their argument and realized they had found the right place. He quickly thought it over and had an idea. "Excuse me, is Qian Peiling here?"

"Who is it?" A scruffy man with a beard wearing a yellow scooter helmet came out, looking displeased.

His face showed a trace of impatience when he saw the face of a young student on the phone screen.

If it weren't for the fact that the person holding the phone was a beautiful woman, he would have started cursing immediately. "What do you want?"

"Hello, Mister Qian has asked me to tell you he doesn't want to stay at Kangning Hospital anymore. He wants to leave. Nana, I sent you a video. Play it for them."

Soon, Qian Fu's thin face appeared on the screen as he complained miserably. After his daughter and son-in-law watched the video, their argument became even more heated.

As the argument grew louder, their neighbors started peeking out to watch. The couple felt embarrassed, and they shut the door to resume their argument inside.

Yang Na did not leave. She quietly waited as instructed by Li Huowang.

After lunch, when he saw the man leave on his scooter, Li Huowang quickly told her to follow him.

"Did you know that there's a hospital better than Kangning Hospital? It's cheaper and treats patients well, so it would burden you less."

"But, there's one downside. There are fewer surveillance cameras."

Li Huowang quickly engaged in conversation, but the man remained indifferent.

"Huowang, it's useless," Yang Na said. From her expression, it was unclear if she was disappointed or relieved.

"No, it's useful. If it weren't, he wouldn't have listened to my nonsense just now.”

“But he didn’t agree to anything in the end.”

Li Huowang smiled slightly and said, “It’s our first meeting, and he doesn’t know us well. How could he share his true thoughts with us? Look at him just now. Does he really want Qian Fu to keep wasting money at Kangning Hospital?”

He continued, “He doesn’t want to be the bad guy or be seen as an unfilial son. He needs us to give him a push.”

“How do we give him a push?” Yang Na asked.

Li Huowang opened his mouth to speak but then shook his head. “Never mind. You should come back. We’ll revisit Kangning Hospital tomorrow.”

Three days later, Qian Fu had to undergo gastric lavage after he swallowed a foreign object. His daughter and son-in-law also conveniently found out about it.

The issue was quickly resolved, and Qian Fu was transferred to the hospital Li Huowang had mentioned.

Li Huowang chose this place, and not just because it was cheaper. He was familiar with it since he had stayed there before, plus it was close to his neighborhood.

After the transfer, Qian Fu’s condition seemed to improve. He no longer had to stay in a locked ward.

Time passed and the surveillance around Li Huowang eased up. One night, Li Huowang climbed over the neighborhood wall with his prepared supplies.

He rode the scooter Yang Na had arranged and went to the psychiatric hospital where Qian Fu was staying.

Li Huowang skillfully climbed the wall, avoided the cameras, and quietly sneaked Qian Fu out of the hospital.

Qian Fu changed from the striped hospital gowns into the clothes Li Huowang had prepared.

Qian Fu was finally free. Tears welled up in his eyes as he looked around and breathed in the fresh air of freedom. Suddenly, he rushed to a garbage heap, picked up some leftover food, and ate ravenously.

“Stop eating that!” Li Huowang pulled him away forcibly and led him into a secluded alley.

After nervously checking that no one was around, Li Huowang asked urgently, “I’ve set you free, so it’s time for you to help me. How can we deal with those people?”

“Don’t worry. You were alone before, which was inconvenient. Now we’re on the same side, so I can help you fight them!”

“Stop with the nonsense! I asked how to deal with them. Don’t tell me that you have no way. If you say that, I’ll throw you back in the psychiatric hospital right now!”

“No, there is a way.” Qian Fu quickly waved his hands, seemingly frightened. “They are watching you, but not me or my friends.”

“I’ll go find our friends now. You saved me, so my friends are your friends. You can be the bait once we have enough people, and we’ll catch them all. Don’t worry—they’re not as powerful as you think!”

Li Huowang was somewhat skeptical but decided to meet Qian Fu’s friends out of curiosity. He wondered if Qian Fu’s friends could also see those people.

“Alright, here’s my old phone and an unregistered SIM card,” Li Huowang said, handing him the phone. “Contact me through this phone from now on.”

Li Huowang was about to let him go when Qian Fu grabbed him tightly with a terrified expression on his face. “No! They’re targeting me now! They’re trying to turn me into one of them! Help me, please!”

“What?” Li Huowang was baffled. He saw Qian Fu suddenly change and look at him in surprise.

“Li Huowang? Where is this? What’s going on? Why am I not in the hospital?”

“Damn it!” Li Huowang almost spat out blood in frustration at this sudden change. He had forgotten that Qian Fu had a split personality!

“No! I need to go back! I need to go back to the psychiatric hospital! I need to receive treatment!”

Qian Fu struggled to leave but was tackled by Li Huowang. A sharp knife was pressed against his throat. “Don’t move!”

Qian Fu was clearly terrified by Li Huowang’s actions. “Li... Li Huowang, calm down. You need to calm down. Did you not take your medication today? Be good. Take your medicine first.”

Qian Fu continued, “We may be psychiatric patients, but we can’t give up on ourselves! If we persist with treatment, we’ll get better.”

“Shut up! Get up!”

With a fierce expression, Li Huowang dragged Qian Fu deeper into the alley by the neck.

Qian Fu was visibly scared of Li Huowang, and his face had turned ashen.

Chapter 702 - Believe You

Qian Fu felt his hands and feet tied securely to the chair, and his face turned pale with fear. His eyes widened and his lips lost all color.

If I had been kidnapped by an ordinary person, there would at least be a reason—money or something else. But this guy's just a lunatic!

He had heard Li Huowang's story and knew this guy had taken several lives. Now that Qian Fu had been tied up by him, he didn't even dare to imagine what he wanted.

Qian Fu glanced around fearfully to look for some hope.

This place seemed to be an abandoned house, possibly an unfinished building. Regardless, it seemed impossible to seek help from others. He could only find a way out through this lunatic.

“Li—” Qian Fu had barely uttered a word when he felt Li Huowang's five fingers clamped tightly around his neck. “Quiet!”

Li Huowang continued with his work when he saw Qian Fu sensibly fall silent.

After making sure Qian Fu was completely tied up, with no chance of escaping his restraints, Li Huowang finally breathed a sigh of relief. He stood up and looked at the man in front of him again.

Qian Fu pleaded, “Li Huowang, calm down. You need to calm down. Don't do something you'll regret for the rest of your life.”

“Shut up!” Li Huowang grabbed a piece of cloth and stuffed it into Qian Fu's mouth, finally bringing some silence to the room.

Li Huowang felt a headache coming on. Of all times, he had to switch to his second personality now.

Fortunately, he had brought some equipment just in case. Otherwise, it would have been tricky to handle.

Li Huowang stared at Qian Fu and was at a loss about what to do next.

Having an ally with a mental illness was already troublesome enough, but this one even had episodes from time to time. It was genuinely tormenting.

After some thought, Li Huowang reached out and pulled the cloth from Qian Fu's mouth. "Let me ask you, how often does your personality switch? Are there any triggers for the switch?"

Qian Fu was stunned by the question and suddenly understood what was going on. "Did he ask you to save him? Did he instruct you to do all this?"

Then, Qian Fu leaned forward excitedly. "Li Huowang, he's a lunatic! How can you believe the nonsense of a madman? Everything he said is a lie that he made up!"

Qian Fu pressed on, "You still have a long life to live, so don't let that lunatic deceive you! If this continues, your condition will only get worse! Think about your worried family, your classmates, and your teachers!"

Swish! Li Huowang pressed his knife against Qian Fu's neck. The blade cut into his skin, and a drop of blood slowly oozed out. He stared fiercely at the bearded man. "I don't need your lectures! I'm not sick! I've recovered!"

"Also, don't avoid my questions! Answer me! How often does your personality switch?! What triggers the switch?!"

Qian Fu felt the sting on his neck and dared not provoke Li Huowang further. He quickly replied, "I don't know. After a personality switch, I just lose large chunks of memory and find myself in different places for no reason. If there was a pattern, I wouldn't have been in the psychiatric hospital for so long."

"No pattern? No triggers?" Li Huowang looked at him skeptically, finding it hard to believe. After all, they were enemies—Qian Fu could be lying to him.

Should I torture him? The thought made Li Huowang shake his head violently. He wondered why he would have such thoughts.

There's no good solution for now. Forget it. I better find a safe place to tie him up and wait for his personality to change back. Li Huowang grabbed the cloth to gag him again.

He needed to hurry back to his neighborhood. If his mom found out he had sneaked out, there would be big trouble.

Just as the cloth was about to cover Qian Fu's mouth, Qian Fu suddenly became frantic and shouted to someone behind Li Huowang, "Miss, don't come over! Run! This guy is a lunatic! Call the police quickly!"

Li Huowang felt a chill down his spine. Damn! Someone saw me tying up Qian Fu!

He turned with his knife raised, only to freeze in place as he locked eyes with the newcomer.

"I know what you're thinking. I've been watching all your moves recently. I'm not that naive." Yang Na used her phone as a flashlight and slowly entered the room. A complex expression crossed her face when she saw Qian Fu bound to the chair.

After opening and closing his mouth several times, Li Huowang finally sighed deeply. "Yang Na, you have to believe me. I'm not crazy!"

"Call the police! Quickly! This guy is a lunatic! He's killed people! More than one!" Qian Fu continued to shout frantically.

Angered by his outburst, Li Huowang punched Qian Fu in the face, silencing him.

Yang Na set down her phone and walked over to Li Huowang. She gently leaned her head against his chest.

Her voice was soft and a little aggrieved. "Huowang, I believe you, but can you tell me what's going on? No matter what it is, I don't want you to hide it from me."

"Also, why are you carrying a knife? Don't do such things."

Yang Na gently placed her hands around Li Huowang's hand as he tightly held onto the knife.

Li Huowang sensed her warm touch. He struggled internally for a while before explaining everything to Yang Na.

“He has multiple personalities. The other personality is my ally, but this one isn’t. That’s why he’s struggling and trying to escape, so I had to tie him up. As for the knife, I need it for self-defense. I don’t know when those people will come after me. I can’t be careless.”

After he finished his explanation, he felt a bit anxious. He was unsure how Yang Na would react.

Then, Yang Na moved. She took the piece of cloth from Li Huowang’s hand. To Qian Fu’s shock, she stuffed it back into his mouth.

She saw Li Huowang’s astonished expression, and she smiled. She wrapped her arms around him and pecked him on the lips.

She smiled even more as she looked into his eyes. “I told you. I believe you, Li Huowang. No matter what you say, I believe you!”

Chapter 703 - Two Sides

Li Huowang's heart trembled when he heard Yang Na's words. He looked into her pure eyes, at a loss for how to express his emotions.

Finally, he cupped her face and kissed her passionately.

Yang Na felt awkward since they were in front of Qian Fu. "Let's go home. Auntie wakes up early. She'll notice if we don't return soon."

She saw Li Huowang glance at Qian Fu again and said, "You don't need to worry during the day. I'll keep an eye on him, and we can stay in touch by phone."

"Alright," Li Huowang nodded. Things would be much easier with Yang Na's help, and he wouldn't have to worry about Qian Fu escaping.

Li Huowang got home and lay down in his bed. When he thought about what had just happened, he found himself restless and unable to sleep.

He had desperately longed for Yang Na to believe him, but a persistent thought kept surfacing in his mind.

It was understandable if Yang Na didn't want to trust him. He would find such a ridiculous explanation hard to believe if he were in her position.

But... Li Huowang hesitated. He was caught in a dilemma.

The bedroom door gently opened while he pondered this.

As he was about to get out of bed to see who it was, he felt a warm, soft body slip into his arms.

"Miaomiao, what's wrong?" Li Huowang recognized the familiar scent of her hair. He stroked the hairpin and felt smooth scales under her white fur slide across his body.

When her actions became increasingly inappropriate, he quickly restrained her hands. “No, Miaomiao, you’re still injured.”

Bai Lingmiao’s body went limp, and her bloody tears soaked through the silk covering her eyes. “Li Huowang, do you dislike me now? Do you think I’m ugly?”

Li Huowang sensed the sadness in her tone, and he gently embraced her, then kissed the scales beneath her fur.

“No. When I left Zephyr Temple in a manic state, you never disliked me. How could I ever dislike you?”

“Besides—” Li Huowang fell silent as Bai Lingmiao kissed him again. Her forked tongue flicked out between her sharp teeth, wrapping around his tongue like a nimble rope.

Li Huowang was about to struggle when he felt another body lean lightly against his back. It was also Bai Lingmiao.

The oil lamp was knocked to the floor, and the room was plunged into darkness.

Li Huowang could still see clearly. “Besides, Miaomiao, you are simply beautiful now.”

“.....”

“.....”

As the dark night slowly faded into the soft light of dawn, a slender, pale arm emerged from under the quilt to lift a corner of the starry curtain. Sunlight flooded in, causing both of them to squint against it.

“I’ll get up first to watch that crazy uncle. You sleep a bit more,” Yang Na said as she covered her chest and reached for the white sweater on the floor.

Li Huowang’s exposed back rested against the headboard as he silently watched the fantastic scene before him.

His gaze made Yang Na blush. “Get some sleep. You didn’t sleep at all last night.”

Fearing he might have improper thoughts, Yang Na quickly clarified, "I mean, you ran out to save that lunatic from the psychiatric hospital."

"Why?" Li Huowang asked.

"Because we are childhood sweethearts, and I truly believe what you say. I'm not just trying to keep you calm and call the police secretly."

Li Huowang took Yang Na's hand. He was ashamed for doubting her. Why had he suspected her?

Yang Na kissed him lightly and turned to leave. It was obvious she was a little uncomfortable, as she clutched her stomach and moved slowly.

Li Huowang was left alone in the room. He sighed deeply and felt a rare sense of contentment.

Unlike before, he was no longer alone in facing anything. Yang Na would always be by his side, and this companionship felt terrific.

Knock, knock, knock. Someone was at the door. Yang Na had just left, so it couldn't be her.

"Son, I heard Nana has been accompanying you to the hospital lately?"

"I'm not saying anything, but it's good for young people to play together. You both should go together. I promise not to interfere."

After that, there was silence. When Li Huowang thought his mother had left, she continued softly, "You two should be careful. Don't cause any accidents."

Li Huowang buried his head under the covers. He did not want to discuss this topic with his mother.

Time passed slowly. During the day, Li Huowang had to be cautious of Madam Qi and others watching him, so he stayed in the neighborhood.

He only dared to venture out at night to check on Qian Fu.

After about ten days, Qian Fu's personality finally switched back.

“Not bad, tying me up was a good idea, Ji Zai. Thank you,” Qian Fu said.

He continued, “Without your help, the Leotians would have used their advanced technology to control my body from afar and trap me again!”

After ten days of waiting, Li Huowang’s patience was wearing thin.

“Weren’t you supposed to find allies to deal with them together? Now that you’re clear-headed, can we go find them?”

“Yes, yes!” Qian Fu nodded and massaged the marks on his wrists. “Don’t worry. We can’t just sit and wait for them to attack us. We need to take the initiative! I’ll go find our allies now!”

Li Huowang stopped him as he was about to leave. “Wait, tell me who your friends are and where they are now.”

“Uh...” Qian Fu hesitated. “I know the place, but I don’t know how to explain it.”

“How can you not know? There’s a location app here. Point out the exact location,” Li Huowang said as he handed his phone to Qian Fu.

After some clumsy gesturing, a location appeared on Li Huowang’s screen—Sixth People’s Hospital.

“Are you sure your allies are here?” Li Huowang’s brows furrowed. From what he knew, the Sixth People’s Hospital was also a public psychiatric hospital.

“Your friends aren’t also mentally ill, are they?” Li Huowang wasn’t surprised by this possibility.

“Yes, my friends live there. No need to worry since it’s their territory.”

After thinking it over, Li Huowang said, “Alright, go wait at the entrance of the Sixth People’s Hospital. We’ll go together during the day.”

“Huowang, you can’t go. You’re being watched by many people.”

Li Huowang shook his head confidently. “It’s fine. I can’t freely go to other places, but I can definitely go to a psychiatric hospital.”

Chapter 704 - Chen Hongyu

Li Huowang looked up at the massive main building of the hospital before him. Large red words denoted its name—Sixth People's Hospital.

This was the address Qian Fu had mentioned, where his supposed friend who could help resided.

It was ten o'clock in the morning, the agreed-upon time for their meeting.

Li Huowang glanced around and saw Qian Fu looking around and standing nervously in the sunlight. He had clearly arrived early, carrying a few things in a black bag.

Li Huowang led Yang Na over without speaking. He only stopped briefly in front of Qian Fu before heading straight into the hospital.

Qian Fu understood Li Huowang's intent and quickly followed.

Once they were in the hospital lobby, Li Huowang said, "Go visit your helper."

Qian Fu nodded calmly, "Don't worry, I know this place better than you. Lend me your identification card. I didn't bring mine."

After following the visitation procedure, Li Huowang learned the name of Qian Fu's so-called helper. It was Chen Hongyu.

"Sounds like a girl's name. Huowang, do you think it's his girlfriend?" Yang Na asked curiously.

"If there's any relationship, it could only be a wife. At his age, it wouldn't be a girlfriend."

Li Huowang felt a bit worried. It was not because the helper might be mentally ill, but because he was uncertain if Chen Hongyu would provide any real assistance.

Considering how erratic Qian Fu was, it was already optimistic to trust half of what he said.

While they were talking, the door opened. A tall, overweight woman walked out.

This woman was very large and looked to be in her forties or fifties. She had dull eyes and looked listless. Her forehead and cheeks were covered in red pimples, and her sleeves and collar were dirty. Her scalp was visible through her thin hair.

Her overall appearance was undeniably shabby.

“Hongyu! Hongyu! It’s been years, hasn’t it?” Qian Fu rushed over excitedly. “Look what I brought you!”

He proudly opened the black plastic bag and revealed its contents: half a yellowed apple, a roasted eggplant wrapped in foil, and two half-empty soda bottles.

“Did you dig these out of the trash?” Chen Hongyu asked disdainfully. “Do you think I’m meant to eat garbage?”

“Don’t be ungrateful. When we were homeless, finding these would have been a feast.”

Li Huowang glanced at the surveillance cameras, then quickly grabbed Qian Fu’s bag and threw it into a nearby trash can.

He leaned close to Qian Fu’s ear and said sternly, “Do you want to get caught? Behave normally!”

Qian Fu saw Li Huowang’s serious look and stopped trying to retrieve the garbage.

Li Huowang pushed Qian Fu aside and sat in the visitation area. He looked at the woman before him. “Hello, I’m Li Huowang. Your parents asked me to check on you. How have you been lately? How’s your condition?”

She smiled sarcastically, her eyes drooping. “Just say what you need to. There’s no need for an act. They can’t hear us.”

Li Huowang relaxed, decided to be straightforward, and quickly recounted everything that had happened to him. This old woman seemed much more reliable than Qian Fu.

However, after he finished, the woman mocked him and chuckled. She said, “Qian Fu is a lunatic, and yet you believe him?”

“Uh, Hongyu.” Qian Fu looked up, his face filled with desire. “Stop kidding. You must have sensed it too, right? They’re coming, and they’re not just after Li Huowang. Once he’s gone, they’ll come for us. The Leotians are greedy.”

Chen Hongyu ignored Qian Fu and turned back to Li Huowang. She said lazily, “He’s crazy. Those people you encountered aren’t aliens. They’re just ordinary people with some schemes. It’s a highly organized group hiding in the shadows.”

“Oh?” Li Huowang felt a glimmer of hope. He finally met someone who seemed sane and informed. “Tell me more. How much do you know about them?”

Chen Hongyu hesitated, but Qian Fu interjected and said, “It’s fine. You can tell him. He’s on our side. He got me out.”

Chen Hongyu finally said, “They aren’t just targeting you. They’re also going after others. I was once captured by them but managed to escape.”

“Why? Why are they doing this? Who exactly are they?”

“They’re doing this because they want to steal my special powers! Those who possess valuable things should act responsibly. They are an underground group trying to seize supernatural abilities!”

“...” Li Huowang was at a loss for words. He turned to look at Qian Fu, feeling foolish for ever trusting him.

Li Huowang looked at Chen Hongyu with a complex expression on his face. “Schizophrenia?”

“What? You don’t believe me? Don’t you have any supernatural abilities? Don’t tell me you don’t know. If you hadn’t shown any abilities, why would they target you?”

“Supernatural abilities? I don’t—” Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and shook his head vigorously. “No, that’s not it. Absolutely not.”

At this moment, Qian Fu chimed in again. “Hongyu, you see, I’m out now. You should come out too. Let’s take care of those troubles together.”

“No way, it’s too exhausting. I’m fine here. You can fight outside while I stay here. They can’t do anything to me while I’m in here,” Chen Hongyu said before turning to leave.

Qian Fu panicked. He quickly grabbed Bai Lingmiao’s bag and rummaged through it. “I’ll give you money! Look, it’s all red bills! Help us, and this money is yours! Also, how can you be sure they can’t get in? Are you really safe?”

Chen Hongyu saw the cash in Qian Fu’s hand and stopped. As she turned around, her chubby face showed a hint of greed.

She extended her dirty, black-nailed fingers toward Li Huowang and the others. “Fifty thousand! If you want me to help, give me fifty thousand each, then I’ll deal with them.”

Chapter 705 - Take Action

“Deal!” Qian Fu immediately agreed to Chen Hongyu’s demand.

“Where are you going to get fifty thousand?” Li Huowang looked at him.

Qian Fu quickly leaned in and whispered, “Shhh, just pretend I have it! Right now, we just need to figure out how to get through this mess. We’ll worry about everything else later! Better to owe money than lose our lives!”

Li Huowang fell silent and watched Qian Fu hand the money to Chen Hongyu.

Yang Na looked conflicted, not by the money but by the weight of their recent conversation. She said, “Huowang, are you sure what this woman says is true? About supernatural abilities... is it really...?”

“I...” Li Huowang hesitated, glancing between Qian Fu and Chen Hongyu. “I don’t know... But since we’re here, let’s give it a try. Don’t just listen to what they say—watch what they do.”

Despite saying this, Li Huowang wouldn’t have chosen this option if he had another way. Yang Na still looked conflicted, but she finally nodded without saying anything.

“How do we get you out?” Li Huowang asked Chen Hongyu.

“No need! She doesn’t need us to rescue her. She’s very capable, and she can get out by herself,” Qian Fu said confidently.

“I’m different from Qian Fu. I wasn’t brought here against my will—I paid to get in. For me, leaving is as simple as saying a word. I have a lot of stuff, so come on and help me pack,” Chen Hongyu said and turned to leave the visitation room.

“Come on, Li Huowang, let’s help with the luggage! See, we already have a helper!” Qian Fu said as they headed toward the inpatient area.

Li Huowang thought for a moment and then said to Yang Na, “Let’s go. Let’s get her out first.”

Yang Na nodded and followed Li Huowang toward the inpatient area.

Since they were helping a voluntarily admitted patient pack her belongings, the three easily got inside the Sixth People’s Hospital.

This place was no different from the other psychiatric hospitals, with some people behaving oddly and speaking nonsense. Li Huowang was used to it.

As they walked, various absurd remarks reached Li Huowang’s ears.

“I don’t eat eggplant. Not because I’m picky, but because the eggplants given to me all look shifty-eyed. If you give me a different bowl of eggplants, I’ll definitely eat it.”

“I’ll tell you a secret, the world we live in might just be a holographic projection left by another higher world in space. The things around us seem real but are actually images. We can move because that higher world is moving, and we think because the entities in that higher world are thinking! This is a physics model I proposed in 1997, but it has never been academically recognized. I’m telling you, what I’m saying is true! The whole world is fake!”

“What higher world? Let me check your pulse. Oh my, you’re very ill. Did you take the medicine I prescribed earlier?”

Li Huowang sensed Yang Na’s tension and softly reassured her, “Don’t worry. The patients who can move freely are not violent. They’re mild cases that pose no danger.”

They soon reached Chen Hongyu’s room. Li Huowang saw the pile of luggage under her bed. There were plastic tubs and basins among other things, which Li Huowang couldn’t identify.

Everything, from the luggage to the snakeskin bags, was dirty.

Yang Na valued cleanliness, so she frowned when she saw this.

“Just take that bag of snacks. I’ll get the rest later,” Li Huowang said. He grabbed a snakeskin bag full of clothes and headed out.

Carrying all this stuff was tiring. Fortunately, Li Huowang and Qian Fu were not weak. After two trips, they finally finished moving everything.

Li Huowang carried a suitcase and led Chen Hongyu, who had changed into new clothes, outside.

“You encountered them? Fought with them?” Chen Hongyu suddenly asked.

Li Huowang nodded. “Yes, I even killed one of them and bit off some fingers. Unfortunately, the police couldn’t find the culprits even after the incident was reported.”

“Hmph, how naive. You actually thought reporting to the police would help? They have people on their side, and one of them is very powerful. They’ll wipe out all the evidence cleanly and leave nothing behind.”

Li Huowang looked at her and her three chins seriously. “Is what you’re saying really true?”

“What? You’ve been targeted, and you still don’t believe it?”

Li Huowang replied, “Believe it or not, I just want to solve this problem. I want to live a normal life. I don’t care about anything else.”

“Don’t hope for that. You can’t avoid some things even if you don’t want to deal with them. If you want to solve this problem, you have to face it.”

With that, Chen Hongyu lifted her luggage and quickened her pace.

Suddenly, a figure dashed behind Li Huowang. He grabbed a clothes hanger and wrapped it tightly around his neck.

The plastic-covered wire squeezed his windpipe, which made it hard for Li Huowang to breathe. His head started to fill with blood uncontrollably. He grabbed the hanger and struggled to look behind.

He soon saw a familiar face inverted above him. It was Wang Wei, his former doctor!

Wang Wei's foot stepped heavily onto Li Huowang's back, preventing him from escaping. His expression was ferocious as he glared at Li Huowang.

"How long are you going to deceive yourself?! Remember! That world is not fake! Everything that happened there is real! Wake up!"

"Cough, cough..." The suffocation intensified. Li Huowang's eyes rolled back, and he soon saw strange circles and various changing snowflake patterns.

Thump! Chen Hongyu punched Wang Wei on the head and knocked him out. He fell to the ground, motionless.

Li Huowang quickly removed the hanger, coughing violently while he clutched his neck.

"Are you okay?" Chen Hongyu patted Li Huowang's back. She looked at the unconscious Wang Wei with a serious expression. "I never thought their people could infiltrate here. What did you do to make them watch you so closely?"

Once he could breathe again, Li Huowang felt lingering fear as he replayed what just happened in his mind. Wang Wei's strength was astonishing. Without Chen Hongyu's help, Wang Wei's ambush might have succeeded.

He looked at Chen Hongyu gratefully. "Thank you."

Regardless of whether she was mentally ill, she had proven her goodwill towards him. Even if she was indeed mentally ill, at least she was the good kind.

Chapter 706 - New Helper

Following this major incident, the nurses quickly arrived and hurriedly took the unconscious Wang Wei away. Several managers immediately came forward to apologize.

The fact that a patient attempted to murder someone and nearly succeeded was a serious matter. If this were to get out, it would severely damage the reputation of the psychiatric hospital.

The staff became increasingly nervous upon learning Li Huowang's identity.

Although he had almost been killed, Li Huowang did not demand compensation. He only had one request—to meet with Wang Wei. This guy was crucial.

The individuals trying to harm Li Huowang had been lying low for a long time, and now they had finally sent someone to strike again. Since they had encountered him, it wouldn't make sense not to extract any useful information from Wang Wei.

The people at the Sixth People's Hospital naturally agreed to this small request. It was a trivial matter compared with the potential negative impact of this incident becoming public.

Shortly after, Li Huowang met Wang Wei again. This time, Wang Wei was in a straitjacket with a muzzle to prevent him from biting.

"It's fine, you can leave. I want to talk to him alone," Li Huowang said to the hospital staff nearby.

The staff were caught in a dilemma, considering that this man had just attempted murder.

However, they quickly thought of a compromise. Wang Wei was placed in a restraint room, allowing Li Huowang to talk to him through the iron bars. There would be no chance of another incident under such circumstances.

Li Huowang looked at Wang Wei again after everyone left. Wang Wei now seemed even more deranged. His eyes were wide open and bloodshot, reflecting the madness within him. He drooled from the corners of his mouth, which twitched slightly.

“Are you one of them?” Li Huowang asked.

Wang Wei stared back at Li Huowang but said nothing.

“What do they want? I want to talk to them,” Li Huowang said.

This was a probe. Li Huowang first needed to know their identity, regardless of their intentions.

He found it rather hard to believe they were the Leotians that Qian Fu mentioned, or the group plundering supernatural abilities Chen Hongyu spoke of. He wanted to meet them personally and see them with his own eyes.

Of course, Li Huowang was recording their conversation. If he could gather crucial evidence, the best outcome would be reporting it to the police and eradicating them with the help of others.

Wang Wei merely stared at him without saying anything.

“It’s useless. He’s just a pawn. You won’t get anything out of him,” Qian Fu said from the side. He didn’t seem like his usual crazy self.

“Leotians are masters at bewitching people. Some of us have been bewitched by them, turned into their puppets, and manipulated at will. You’re mistaken if you think you can get any clues from him.”

Despite this, Li Huowang refused to give up. “Wang Wei, do you remember me? You used to be my doctor. What happened to you after we parted? If you tell me, maybe I can help you.

“I didn’t quite hear what you said. Can you repeat it?

“You tried to kill me, but I don’t hate you. I just want to know why.”

Li Huowang asked several questions and even shared some of his past in an attempt to get Wang Wei to respond. And yet, no matter what Li Huowang said, Wang Wei remained silent. He was just like a puppet, as Qian Fu described.

Their roles had reversed compared to a few years ago. It was very ironic.

After he asked many questions and elicited no reaction, Li Huowang finally decided to leave.

As Li Huowang was leaving, Wang Wei finally spoke, “Li Huowang, you are running away.”

Li Huowang stopped and slowly turned back to Wang Wei. “What did you say?”

“I said you are running away. You know it, and you always knew it. You can link to that world. Your potential is limitless!”

Li Huowang’s pupils dilated slightly. Is that their goal? They think I can take things from hallucinations, so they want to abduct me?

He quickly remembered something and said, “So the experiences on the ship weren’t just my hallucinations? There really are people like that?”

Chen Hongyu interjected, “See? I told you. They are after our supernatural abilities. You must have one too, or they wouldn’t come for you.”

“Sister Chen, let me ask more questions first,” Li Huowang turned back to Wang Wei. “Answer me. Is everything I just said true?”

Wang Wei did not respond directly but instead said, “You answer my question first. When did you stop believing in these possibilities? Are those your true thoughts? Or is it because someone made you think that way?”

He raised his voice. “Li Huowang, don’t trust Yi Donglai! He’s actually harming you!”

“Think about it! What has Yi Donglai done? If he truly cared about you, why wasn’t he by your side when you were in trouble?”

“That world exists! Yi Donglai is harming you! He has sealed your abilities! You need to remember to become whole!

“You are not sick! You have extraordinary talents! You don’t need treatment or medication!”

“Not good!” Qian Fu quickly covered Li Huowang’s ears. “Don’t listen to him! The Leotians are bewitching you. Don’t stop, don’t look, don’t think!”

Qian Fu forcefully dragged Li Huowang out. Actually, Li Huowang was about to leave on his own. There was no valuable information they could gain from Wang Wei.

“Alright, stop covering my ears. My mind isn’t so fragile that I’ll be shaken by a few words,” Li Huowang said in the hospital lobby as he shook off Qian Fu’s hands.

He glanced at Chen Hongyu beside him and asked, “What are you planning to do now?”

“Why are you asking me? Aren’t you the ones who invited me to come out of retirement?” Chen Hongyu said and picked her nose.

“We need others besides her, right?” Li Huowang asked Qian Fu.

In any case, Chen Hongyu had just saved his life—making more friends like her was worth it. She might be mentally ill, but she was still helpful.

Qian Fu replied, “Yes, we need to find Qing Wanglai next.”

“Qing Wanglai?” Li Huowang frowned. “Sounds like a man’s name. Is he also mentally ill?”

“No, he’s not mentally ill. He’s a scholar.”

“A scholar? A student?” Li Huowang almost thought he had misheard. There was actually a normal person among Qian Fu’s helpers.

“No. Qing Wanglai is a graduate student,” Chen Hongyu added.

Chapter 707 - Qing Wanglai

Finally, someone who wasn't mentally ill would join them. Li Huowang was eager to meet a normal person who could help him learn more about the people targeting him.

However, Qing Wanglai was a graduate student and Li Huowang was strictly prohibited from approaching schools due to his ankle monitor. He had to delegate the task to Yang Na, who would go with Chen Hongyu and Qian Fu.

Li Huowang did consider Yang Na's safety, but he wasn't too worried since it was broad daylight with many people around, and the destination was a well-known university.

Huowang, I'm on the subway. Have you had dinner? 吃了吗？

It's so crowded during the evening rush. Thankfully, Madam Chen is strong. (谢谢)

为什么你不回复我的消息？这个坏习惯需要改变。我怎么知道你在想什么如果你什么都不说？

Li Huowang felt nervous when he saw Yang Na send over another text. He quickly typed back. Nana! They're here! They're watching me again!

After sending the message, he anxiously peered out the window and spotted several shadowy figures under the trees at dusk.

Although he could not see them clearly, Li Huowang felt confident they were looking in his direction.

A notification chimed, and he glanced at his screen to see Yang Na's reply. Could it be Madam Qi?

Impossible! Madam Qi is off work at this time. I've been behaving well lately, so the Neighborhood Office isn't monitoring me closely.

What should we do? Should we call the police?

It's fine. They seem to be hesitant now. Besides, I'm not a pushover!

Li Huowang opened a drawer and revealed a gleaming knife.

In fact, Li Huowang found the appearance of these people somewhat reassuring. It meant Yang Na and the others were temporarily safe.

"Huowang, come out for dinner!"

"Coming!" LI Huowang drew the starry curtains and blocked the view from outside, making him feel more at ease.

Meals had always been just him and his mother. His father was a taxi driver, and the evening rush was the most lucrative time for him.

Today's meal featured braised chicken with mushrooms, scrambled eggs with tomatoes, and stir-fried snail meat with leeks, accompanied by seaweed and shrimp soup. The aroma alone was mouth-watering.

Sun Xiaoqin was a good cook, but Li Huowang wasn't enjoying it much. He kept checking his phone and glancing toward the balcony.

"Son, where's Nana?" Sun Xiaoqin noticed someone was missing.

"She... she had something come up," Li Huowang made up an excuse.

Sun Xiaoqin struggled to understand young people's matters, so she only offered her perspective. "Son, you need to be responsible to Nana. I'm not rushing you, but good girls like her are hard to find nowadays."

"Take Brother Li next door, for example. His son Li Changnan, who you used to play with, went on a blind date with a girl born in 1993. I've met her, and she's not as good as Nana. Do you know how much they spent on the betrothal gifts alone?"

Li Huowang would usually respond to such remarks. However, he received a video call, then quickly shoveled the remaining food into his mouth and rushed to his room. “Mom, I have something to do. We’ll talk later.”

Back in his room, Li Huowang took a deep breath, composed himself, and tapped the green button. Yang Na’s face appeared on the screen. “Huowang! Look, we’ve arrived!”

The screen shifted to show the main road of the university. As it was evening, it was bustling with people.

Li Huowang brought his phone closer to the screen and said softly, “Qian Fu, find that person.”

“We’re already here now. What’s the hurry?” Qian Fu’s voice sounded as the screen began to shake. They were on the move.

With the changing sounds in the video, Li Huowang knew they had entered a building, got into an elevator, and were going to ask someone for directions.

When the screen steadied, they were in a lively cafeteria. A thin man with rectangular rimless glasses appeared before Li Huowang.

He seemed to be in his twenties, with short hair and an open-collared white shirt.

He was eating quietly, contrasting with others who were chatting or on their phones. He seemed very quiet and ate unhurriedly from his bowl using chopsticks.

If Li Huowang guessed correctly, this was Qing Wanglai.

“Wow, Huowang! Look, he’s so handsome!” Yang Na exclaimed.

Li Huowang frowned, and his impression of Qing Wanglai instantly dropped.

At that moment, Qing Wanglai looked their way, put down his bowl, stood up, and walked towards them. “Long time no see. How have you been?”

“Little Qing! I got locked up again. I tried to send you a message for help, but I couldn’t get through! You wouldn’t believe how they tortured me there!” Qian Fu started to complain, leaving no room for Chen Hongyu to speak.

“Shut up!” Chen Hongyu snapped and covered Qian Fu’s mouth. She directly addressed Qing Wanglai, “Give me your meal card. I’m hungry!”

Qing Wanglai curiously glanced at Yang Na before handing over a meal card from his left pocket with two fingers. “Our cafeteria’s spicy frog pot and sweet and sour pork are quite good. You should try them.”

Chen Hongyu soon returned with two large trays of food, and the four of them sat down together.

Both Chen Hongyu and Qian Fu were clearly more focused on eating than talking, devouring their meals with gusto.

When Li Huowang saw that they were not talking, he said, “Hello, Qing Wanglai. Let me introduce myself. I’m Li Huowang.”

Qing Wanglai put down his bowl, took Yang Na’s phone, and scrutinized Li Huowang through the screen.

His reaction puzzled Li Huowang, so he introduced himself again.

Qing Wanglai replied, “There’s no need to repeat yourself. I know you’re Li Huowang. Have you eaten?”

Chapter 708 - Projection

Li Huowang was speechless when this guy asked if he had eaten at a time like this. “Mr. Qing, I’ve finished my meal. Can we discuss the matter at hand now?”

“Please wait a moment. I haven’t finished eating yet.” Qing Wanglai picked up his bowl.

Li Huowang frowned at this response. What is this guy’s deal ?

“Can’t you talk while eating?”

“The ancients said not to talk while eating or sleeping. Besides, talking while eating leads to improper chewing, which can cause indigestion and an increased risk of biting your tongue or choking,” Qing Wanglai said and handed the phone back to Yang Na.

Since Qing Wanglai had refused, Li Huowang had no choice but to wait. He was the one who needed Qing Wanglai’s help.

Li Huowang saw his girlfriend Yang Na looking hesitant and said, “Don’t just stand there. Eat while they’re eating. Don’t let yourself go hungry.”

“Alright then, Huowang, I’ll hang up the video call for now. We’ll talk after eating,” Yang Na said and ended the call.

Li Huowang sighed at the static screen. Why were all the people Qian Fu found so weird? Even though Qing Wanglai wasn’t mentally ill, he didn’t seem very reliable either.

Li Huowang stood up and walked to the window, lifting a corner of the starry curtain to peek outside. The sky was already dark, but he could still feel those eyes on him. They were still there!

Whoosh! The starry curtain was pulled open again, and Li Huowang was exposed to their gaze.

If you have the guts, come in! I’ll make sure you won’t leave here in one piece! Li Huowang gripped his knife tightly, his teeth clenched and his eyes filled with hostility.

However, it was clear that due to Wang Wei's previous actions, these people didn't plan to act immediately again.

They were just watching for now, and they didn't do anything even when the video call alert sounded again.

Li Huowang quickly closed the curtain and answered the phone. On the screen, a new environment appeared. It seemed like a small, single-person dorm room.

Unlike typical male dorms, this one was remarkably clean and tidy. Most items were white, and the walls were bare except for a single calligraphy painting. It gave off an immaculate impression.

Qing Wanglai took a sip from a cup of green tea and said, "Hello, Li Huowang. Let me reintroduce myself. I'm Qing Wanglai. I've been informed about your situation."

He continued, "Here's what I think: First of all, you're under severe restrictions and can't accomplish anything while being surveilled like this. We need to find a way to temporarily restore some of your freedom."

"Wait, hold on," Li Huowang interrupted.

"What? You don't want to regain your freedom? Would you prefer being confined to your neighborhood?"

"No, before we proceed with anything, I need to confirm something first. What's your opinion about those who are trying to kidnap me?"

"Do you think they are Leotians, or an underground group spying on people with supernatural abilities?"

Qing Wanglai chuckled and said, "Why would you think I would believe that? Do I look like a lunatic?"

"Then what do you think? What's the truth behind this? Who are they?" Li Huowang could feel his palms sweating. He was finally getting a rational person's explanation.

Qing Wanglai slowly drank some tea and said, "Physicist Julian Madacena proposed a hypothesis that our universe might be a holographic image. Everything you see and perceive is a projection. I agree with this hypothesis.”

“Huh?!” Li Huowang was momentarily stunned. What did this guy mean? Had he heard this somewhere before?

“What do you think is real? What do you think is fake?” Qing Wanglai asked.

“Is it possible that our world is a vast phantom or a reflection of some existence? Like our shadows. We are their shadows.”

Li Huowang wordlessly stared at the screen. This guy might also be mentally ill, just undiagnosed.

“I don’t agree with your view,” Yang Na said.

She seemed like a different person, far from the gentle girl when she was with Li Huowang. She came off as being quite assertive.

Her gaze sharpened as she clutched her cup tightly. “Science is about bold hypotheses and careful verification. All hypotheses are merely hypotheses until they are proven right. Do you have any critical evidence to support your words?”

Qing Wanglai smiled smugly. “Of course I do.”

“Then prove it. I don’t believe you can,” Yang Na replied skeptically. “If you had decisive evidence, you could win a Nobel Prize. Why would you be here?”

“I can’t show you. My shadow can’t express what our world is like. They don’t even have thoughts. They move because we move. How could I explain?”

“Nonsense! How are you different from pseudo-scientists spouting nonsense online? I can’t believe you are a graduate student!” Yang Na stood up angrily. Her initially favorable impression of Qing Wanglai had vanished completely.

“Imagine our shadows compared to us. They’re so simple. If we as living beings are shadows of some existence, can you imagine what they might be like?”

Qing Wanlai saw Yang Na’s confusion and continued, “What if their projection isn’t just a single person, but rather our entire world? If our entire world is merely their projection, what kind of existence would that be?”

Yang Na opened her mouth and then closed it, unable to refute.

“You can’t conceive it because you don’t even have the organs to imagine it.”

Qing Wanglai’s expression became dreamy. “But I’ve seen it once. Even though I quickly forgot, I still remember how insignificant I felt at that moment.”

“Our thoughts are just the reflection of their breathing. We exist only because they exist. Even our...” Qing Wanglai trailed off and then clutched his head in pain.

He turned to open a drawer, took out some capsules, and swallowed them with his now-cooled tea.

The room fell silent as no one spoke.

After a while, Qian Fu said, “What a load of nonsense. You’re making this up. I think it’s just Leotians.”

Chapter 709 - Help

The conversation continued. Surprisingly, despite their differing viewpoints, they didn't get into an argument.

Qing Wanglai turned back to Li Huowang. "This is our first meeting, but since Qian Fu said he would help you, I assume we are allies. He has a talent in this area."

Li Huowang scratched his head. He was even more confused by the conversation. "I'm curious, how did you end up discussing things with him? Your worldview is completely different from theirs!"

"Because we are not real. Although we have flesh and blood, we are projections and are truly false. Absolute reality and absolute truth do exist, but the truth in question exceeds our understanding and perception."

"If everything is fake, why care about what others think?"

"Hehe, I don't believe things are as they say, but everyone's ideas are unique. There's no need to impose my thoughts on others. I respect their views," Qing Wanglai said and raised his tea cup toward Qian Fu and Chen Hongyu.

Li Huowang looked at Qing Wanglai's profile through the screen. He was pondering Qing Wanglai's words, and was highly skeptical of them.

Even though it was just for a moment, he noticed that Qing Wanglai had taken some kind of psychiatric medication.

This guy might seem knowledgeable, but mental illness had nothing to do with intelligence.

In fact, from his years of observation, Li Huowang had noticed that intelligent people were more likely to suffer from mental illness than ordinary people. The less intelligent someone was, the less likely they were to have mental issues.

“This is our first meeting, and I understand your concerns. Don’t worry, I am indeed trying to help you. Moreover, you’re the one in trouble, not us, isn’t that right? Regardless of who those people are projecting.”

Li Huowang was temporarily convinced. It was true. Since Qing Wanglai was offering his help, it would be imprudent to display open suspicion, regardless of his intentions. He decided to remain cautious internally without revealing it outwardly.

“I apologize. This situation is too strange, so I have to ask more questions. What method do you have to get me out of this predicament?”

Qing Wanglai replied, “In today’s world, you need connections to get things done. I know many people who can help. Your situation isn’t too serious.”

He continued, “You just need to wait at home. We will find someone to help you, and you’ll have an answer soon. Once you’re out, we can discuss our next steps.”

Find someone? Is he looking for another mental patient? Li Huowang thought and frowned silently.

He wanted to ask for more details, but Qing Wanglai seemed unwilling to reveal too much.

“That’s all for today. I have some things to do later. Right, add me on WeChat so we can keep in touch,” Qing Wanglai said and stood up.

After exchanging contact information with Qing Wanglai, Li Huowang felt that they had at least made some progress. Their efforts hadn’t been in vain.

Qing Wanglai escorted them to the university gate before he turned back. As Li Huowang was about to end the video call, he saw Qian Fu rush to a trash can, stick his arm in, and lick his lips as he rummaged through it. This attracted strange looks from a few passersby.

“Qian Fu! What are you doing? Act normal!”

Qian Fu held a half-full cup of milk tea as he turned around and retorted, “How am I crazy? This stuff is still edible. Why waste it? I’m just picking it up to eat. What’s crazy about that? Many people in the world still can’t get enough to eat. I think those who waste food are the real lunatics!”

Li Huowang was at a loss for words. This guy's way of thinking was really different from that of normal people.

After Chen Hongyu forcibly dragged Qian Fu away, Li Huowang ended the video call.

Li Huowang sat alone in his bedroom, reflecting on everything he had just heard and wondering if he had missed anything.

Ding! His phone buzzed. Li Huowang swiped to unlock it and saw a message from Yang Na.

Huowang, didn't Auntie Chen say she has special abilities? I was curious and asked her what they were. Guess what she said? (๖㉚๖)

What did she say?

He quickly received a video from Yang Na.

Chen Hongyu stood lazily by the roadside, her expression solemn as she looked into the camera.

“Huowang, watch closely.”

Li Huowang was puzzled. Watch what?

The camera zoomed in on Chen Hongyu’s forehead.

However, Li Huowang saw nothing apart from some pimples on her face.

“Mmm...” Chen Hongyu’s expression became serious. She made a low sound as if she was channeling inner energy.

As Li Huowang wondered what she was up to, Chen Hongyu let out a low shout, and two pimples on her forehead burst open.

Yellow pus mixed with tiny bits of flesh oozed out onto her greasy face, making Li Huowang feel nauseous.

The video ended abruptly, and Yang Na quickly sent another message. What a disgusting superpower...

Li Huowang threw his phone onto the bed and sighed. What kind of people had he gotten involved with?

“We need to take the initiative. Those worthless people from the Dharma Sect think they can ambush and kill us whenever they want! Do they think we’re easy targets?” A burly man in a black coat roared angrily inside a military tent.

No one inside the tent argued with him. This was the Great Khan, the tribal leader and Dragon Vein of Qing Qiu. As the emperor of Great Liang was absent, he was now the most esteemed person present.

“Khan, you are right. We must counterattack. I have a skill that could be useful, but may I borrow your country’s tiger tally first?

[1]” Xuan Pin said.

The Great Khan clutched his sleeve warily. “Are you joking? The tiger tally that commands the Qing Qiu army can’t be given to an outsider! Do you know how short on troops we are right now? Go ask your stingy emperor of Great Liang if you have the guts!”

He continued, “He sure has a good plan. We’re fighting for our lives here while he reaps all the benefits!”

“Khan, the emperor has already dispatched troops,” an old eunuch reported and bowed respectfully.

“What good is that now? The Great Liang is so far from Hou Shu! It will be too late by the time they arrive!”

The Chief of Qing Qiu sensed the tense atmosphere and stood up to mediate. “Xuan Pin, just state your plan clearly. If it makes sense, our Khan will naturally send troops to assist you.”

1. The tiger tally is a special token that military commanders carry as a sign of authority. 🐾

Chapter 710 - Danger

It was night in Hou Shu.

While the others discussed important military matters, Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao stood silently in the corner as though they were transparent. Bai Lingmiao was wearing her red veil.

They listened to the disputes between the various forces, the compromises made during the crisis, and their subsequent plans.

The acquisition of the Dragon Vein from Hou Shu and Si Qi had evidently boosted the spirits of everyone there, including the Chief and the royal family. The atmosphere in the military tent had noticeably improved.

By the time they finalized the procedures, it was already late at night. Xuan Pin waved his hand gently, causing the entire tent and some of the people inside to dissipate like smoke.

“Now that we have the Dragon Vein of Hou Shu, the soldiers of Hou Shu will surely defect once their emperor surrenders. The forces of the Dharma Sect will likely retreat to Si Qi, but we can’t pursue them there.”

“Oh,” Li Huowang responded simply.

“Li Huowang, this isn’t like you.” Xuan Pin sensed that Li Huowang was behaving unusually.

Li Huowang ignored him and asked, “You’ve been plotting a lot within the mortal realm, but you are more familiar with the origins of the Dharma Sect than I am. Don’t you have any plans regarding that?”

Xuan Pin understood what Li Huowang was implying. “We are, after all, mere mortals. We have no knowledge of what the Simings in the Baiyu Capital are doing, let alone any means to interfere.”

“That’s not right. Isn’t the job of the Surveillance Bureau to monitor the heavens? Don't say you have no means. Didn't you once try to use the palace to set up an array and seize the Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye to prevent a Natural Disaster? This time, the trouble is even greater, and you're telling me you have no plans?"

Li Huowang tilted his head slightly and looked at the darkness within Xuan Pin's red robes.

"You must be doing something, but you don't intend to tell me."

Xuan Pin showed no reaction, but Li Huowang felt that he was right.

"There are some matters you cannot help with. Telling you would only make you overthink, which is not beneficial. Each person has their role. I am the Chief and have my duties, just as you have yours."

Li Huowang curled his lips into a self-mocking smile, then turned and left with Bai Lingmiao.

After a few steps, Xuan Pin appeared before him again. "What are your plans next? And what about the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect?"

"Why should I tell you when you won't tell me anything? Besides, our previous cooperation hasn't improved our results. Since that's the case, we should act separately."

Li Huowang walked right through Xuan Pin's body and headed toward his quarters.

"Are you holding a grudge? I truly was entangled during the incident with the Earth Dragon. It wasn't that I didn't want to save you."

Li Huowang didn't stop. He didn't want to be anyone's pawn, even if their goals aligned for the moment.

After spending so much time together, Li Huowang understood that Xuan Pin was crafty. Despite his seemingly kind demeanor, he was always using the people around him.

“How is the expansion of the White Lotus Sect in Hou Shu going?” Li Huowang asked Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang never expected that the only force he could truly control would be the White Lotus Sect, whose village he had once slaughtered. Life was indeed unpredictable.

“The expansion has been rapid, especially after we retrieved the Dragon Vein.”

Li Huowang wasn’t surprised. The Dharma Sect had many followers, but a lot of them were fair-weathered followers who quickly switched to the stronger side.

Bai Lingmiao continued, “The White Lotus followers from the Great Liang and Qing Qiu are gradually coming to establish the White Lotus society.”

Li Huowang asked, “How many can we recruit to fight? What’s their strength like?”

Since the Dharma Sect could recruit people, the White Lotus Sect should also be able to.

“Senior Li, it’s not feasible yet. It’s too soon. We can rally people, but these commoners would only be sent to their deaths. We need time to select those who are genuinely devout believers of the Heavenly Mater, and perceptive enough to incorporate into the White Lotus Sect.

“However, if you need people to fight the Dharma Sect, I can summon the seventy-two Protectors.”

“Seventy-two people aren’t enough,” Li Huowang said. He had witnessed the strength of the White Lotus followers. They had improved, but they were still not very effective.

Bai Lingmiao hesitated before she said, “Senior Li, as the Saintess of the White Lotus, I can sense that the Heavenly Mater has grown much stronger.”

Stronger again? Has she seized another Siming’s Heavenly Dao? Li Huowang looked up at the sky. He was really curious about what was happening in the Baiyu Capital.

“Let them come then. Ideally, bring all the skilled fighters of the White Lotus Sect. If the Dharma Sect wins, nobody benefits.”

“Alright. Senior Li, what are your plans next?”

“What else can I do? We finally have an advantage, so we need to expand it. I’ll follow if they make a move.”

“I’ll handle it if they encounter tough resistance.”

Though he no longer trusted Xuan Pin, they weren’t enemies yet.

As Li Huowang was about to say something else, he suddenly clutched his arm in pain. Blood quickly soaked through his red Daoist robe.

“Senior Li, what’s happening to you? Don’t move!” Bai Lingmiao shouted. Her long, sharp nails tapped rapidly on a drum, and she began to chant familiar incantations from the Divine Summons.

“Chaos split into black and yellow, opening heaven and establishing Yin and Yang. The earth is Yin and the sky is Yang. The moon is Yin and the sun is Yang. The north is Yin and the south is Yang. Yin is black and Yang is yellow...”

As Bai Lingmiao chanted and drummed, various faces of beasts bulged from the red veil on her head. These faces pushed up the veil and leaped away from Bai Lingmiao's face.

Each of them tore off the red veil as they leaped away, yet it seemed there was an endless supply of veils.

The Immortal families all wore the red veils. They stepped away from Bai Lingmiao and cautiously approached the now agonizing Li Huowang. Then, they circled Li Huowang warily amidst the drumming and chanting. They were clearly frightened.

As the drumbeats intensified and the chanting grew harsher, one of the Immortals was finally compelled to approach Li Huowang. Its nose, covered by the red veil, lightly touched his red Daoist robe. The next moment, it let out a sharp and beastly scream while the veil was instantly torn to shreds.

This destruction spread as if it was contagious, ripping apart the veils of all the surrounding creatures. Soon, the area was littered with nothing but small bits of red cloth.

“It’s... it’s okay!” Li Huowang finally straightened up, but then the skin on his face opened and closed lightly like fish scales.

Each time a scale opened, it brought him excruciating pain. It almost caused him to faint despite his endurance through many battles.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and said, “It’s fine! It’s just... this occasionally happens ever since the last ascension. I’ll get used to it.”

Chapter 711 - Devotees

Li Huowang was panting, his chest exposed to the air.

He looked at his body splitting apart and healing itself uncontrollably. His sweat flowed into his wounds, making the pain even worse.

Li Huowang had felt more intense pain than this, but it had only lasted a moment. This time, it was long-lasting pain that only got worse as time passed.

Bai Lingmiao tried to help by calling for the Immortal families, but it was useless. Li Huowang knew it wouldn't work since the pain came from Ba-Hui, and the Immortal families were too weak to go against Ba-Hui.

The more times he used the Cang-Qiang Ascension, the more sensitive his senses became, and the stronger his regeneration grew.

Ba-Hui clearly couldn't wait for Li Huowang to mutilate himself anymore, deciding to inflict pain directly on Li Huowang instead.

He was close to becoming Ba-Hui's Twisted One since he used the Cang-Qiang Ascension several times. Based on the current situation, if he really became Ba-Hui's Twisted One, the pain in his body would never stop, ever.

Ba-Hui, you want to try and make me your Twisted One? You want to compete with Ji Zai? Li Huowang asked about the pain in his body.

The pain didn't have a life of its own, so nobody answered. Li Huowang continued his questions, but his consciousness was fading from being tormented by the pain. Thankfully, the pain stopped after ten minutes as his wounds began to heal rapidly.

"Let me... Let me rest first." Li Huowang lay down and fell asleep after getting tormented by the pain. He was too tired.

Bai Lingmiao inspected him and felt sorry for him. She took a basin of warm water and dipped a towel in it, then wrung out the excess water and carefully wiped Li Huowang's body.

Li Huowang's wounds soon scabbed over. The scabs fell off as she wiped his body, and Li Sui extended her tentacles to pick up the scabs carefully. Bai Lingmiao soon heard crunching noises behind her.

After washing Li Huowang's feet, Bai Lingmiao carefully covered him with a blanket and walked out.

"Suisui, your father is very tired. You can sleep with him tonight. Take care of him and make sure no one disturbs him."

"Alright." Li Sui opened her mouth, and her tentacles slithered out. She then quickly slid under Li Huowang's blanket.

Li Sui didn't forget to fold up her human skin, placing it on the top of the bed. Bai Lingmiao made sure everything was fine before she left the room.

Li Huowang is in trouble now. If he doesn't get rid of Ba-Hui's influence, the pain will accompany him for life.

Bai Lingmiao heard the Second Deity's voice in her mind but remained silent as she walked.

She soon entered a fairly narrow alley. The doors inside the alley were all carved with a lotus motif, while various banners depicting the white lotus hung on the eaves. This was the territory of the White Lotus Sect.

The White Lotus Sect was fair to everyone. There were no rich or poor people here, only earnest ones.

Bai Lingmiao looked through the cracks of a door and saw a group of devotees kneeling on the ground as they prayed.

Everyone stood and greeted Bai Lingmiao as she passed them. She soon reached a hall lit with candles. In the middle of the hall was a glowing conjoined lotus that illuminated the space as brightly as daylight.

Bai Lingmiao knelt on a cushion and prayed silently. Oh merciful and kind Heavenly Mater, your devotee prays for Senior Li to escape his torture soon.

The white glow from the conjoined lotus shifted slightly, as if something had happened. But in reality, nothing happened.

She prayed silently for a long time before she opened her eyes and said softly, “Your devotee will abandon everything to serve you for eternity. I pray that you will accept me. I will recite the scriptures a million times as a sign of devotion, but you must remember what you promised me. If you go back on your word, I will make you pay for it.”

After saying this, she prayed once more to the conjoined lotus.

The white glow suddenly expanded, and a ray of light shot towards her forehead. A merciful feeling enveloped her and purged all of her other emotions.

Bai Lingmiao saw an abstract version of Li Huowang in the white light.

There was a pool of red to his left, while another Li Huowang was on his right. The second Li Huowang appeared to be connected to the first Li Huowang’s palm. However, the second Li Huowang was bizarre—he didn’t have a back. Both his front and back were identical.

The bizarre Li Huowang and the pool of blood were both pulling on Li Huowang. They pulled so hard that Li Huowang’s body was split in half.

Bai Lingmiao woke up from her dream. She understood what the Heavenly Mater was trying to tell her.

It was a prophecy of sorts. Li Huowang couldn’t use the Cang-Qiang Ascension anymore—if he did, he would be torn in half!

“I thank the Heavenly Mater for the guidance.” Bai Lingmiao thanked earnestly as she prayed and kowtowed before heading back to where Li Huowang was.

She had just exited the hall when she saw the haggard-looking Lu Xiucan.

He lowered his head. "Mistress."

She saw the two missing fingers on his left hand and warned him not to use the Profound Records anymore.

After Lu Xiucan saw her leave, he entered one of the houses in the alley. He lit up three incense sticks earnestly before bowing and kneeling in front of the white lotus motif on the wall.

"This devotee, Lu Xiucan, has made his decision. I will not marry or sire children in this life. I will not eat any meat nor will I touch any money. I wish to devote my body to face the threats faced by the Heavenly Mother."

He had just said that when a woman appeared from the corner of the room. It was Lian Zhibei.

She removed Lu Xiucan's shirt and revealed his scarred back, then started tattooing his back in front of the white lotus motif.

The needles stabbing into his back made his face pale, but he stayed still and bit his lips, enduring the pain.

Chapter 712 - Division

Lu Xiucan endured the pain. He knew the white donkeys that protected Bai Lingmiao were now dead, and he also knew the Heavenly Mother required six white donkeys to revive herself.

Once the tattoo on his back was completed, he would become the Heavenly Mother's mount. He would no longer be a regular person who everyone could bully.

This was a chance that he needed to seize, even if he needed to endure excruciating pain. He refused to give up on any opportunity to become stronger.

Soon after, the tattoo of the white donkey was completed.

Lu Xiucan felt something in his body. It was a strange sensation that he had only experienced once before when he was possessed, but this time it was more long-lasting.

"You are now one step closer to the Heavenly Mother than the other devotees. Be proud of yourself and don't break your bows," Lian Zhibei said.

Sensing the changes in his body, Lu Xiucan nodded and was itching for a fight with the Dharma Sect to test his new powers.

Just then, a commotion occurred outside of the room. Lu Xiucan walked out and squinted his eyes.

The sun was already rising. The other devotees were busy clearing up their belongings to load them into the carriages.

There were fewer divisions in a day now, so the sun rose much earlier than before.

"Everyone, time to move! We need to continue spreading the kindness of the Heavenly Mother to everyone in Hou Shu. We won't be eating breakfast, so just have some rations to hold off your hunger first."

Lu Xiucan realized they were departing earlier than expected and immediately started moving.

He ran out to sort his belongings. He was always the first one rushing to fight if it meant he could kill members of the Dharma Sect.

Lu Xiucan was surprised when he saw that the White Lotus Sect was following his Master, Li Huowang, rather than the palace guards or Surveillance Bureau. He was confused about why they weren't working with the Surveillance Bureau, but he decided to keep his mouth shut when he saw Li Huowang's frowning face.

As Lu Xiucan was thinking they would have to march for a long time, Li Huowang sensed something. "I smell the scent of blood. Everyone, go south!"

The carriages started moving with Li Huowang leading them.

No one protested—they realized the stench of blood was growing stronger.

The smell of blood and rot hung in the air like a dense mist. It was clear that a massacre involving a lot of people had happened.

They climbed past a small hill and found the source of the stench. It was an entire wall made from the decapitated heads of people—a wall of death and rot.

The city wall was built using numerous skulls and heads. The air was filled with the stench of rot and blood. Everyone froze in silence at the sight of this monstrous construction. It was too much for them to take in.

Tens of thousands of people had died just to make a wall.

Li Huowang was the first person to start moving. As he got closer, he noticed more and more details from the wall.

He realized that every head belonged to a male, and most of them wore helmets. These heads are from Hou Shu's soldiers!

The closer he got, the stronger the stench became. He frowned as the smell assaulted his nostrils.

The Dharma Sect's intention was clear. After their surrender, the Dharma Sect most likely had no use for Hou Shu's military, so they killed all of the soldiers and turned them into this wall.

Li Huowang looked at the pale faces. All of them looked calm at the time of their death.

They were most likely killed in a gentle way rather than a brutal one. Did the Dharma Sect kill them to remove any potential threat? Or to warn us? Maybe both.

All Li Huowang could say for sure was that Hou Shu had been crippled. Their military forces had collapsed, and their civilians had joined the Dharma Sect. There was no one else in Hou Shu.

Li Huowang found himself entertaining a strange thought: with so many people dead, Qing Qiu's Siming of Death would most likely have indigestion.

Just then, the weather changed. A great tremor occurred, and the entire wall started to collapse. The innumerable heads began to fall on Li Huowang.

At first, Li Huowang thought something was hiding in the wall, but he soon realized the tremor came from deep below. The Earth Dragon was moving again.

"Xuan Pin, I know you are observing me! What's going on?" Li Huowang shouted at his surroundings.

As he expected, Xuan Pin's illusion floated out from the ground. "Another division is gone. The Dharma Sect has destroyed another Dragon Vein."

Li Huowang frowned at the news. "I thought we got all of them back? How did they destroy another one?"

"I told you that we had sixteen Dragon Veins that were given to sixteen kingdoms for safekeeping. The Dharma Sect must've destroyed the Dragon Vein in another kingdom."

Just as Xuan Pin finished speaking, several rotten heads started chanting in unison, "Death came from the west. An Xi."

Li Huowang unsheathed his sword and was ready to put the heads to rest again.

Xuan Pin blocked Li Huowang. “Wait, calm down. This is the elder of the Antrabhara Temple. He’s with us.

Xuan Pin continued, “What he meant is that the Dragon Vein that was destroyed came from the west. To the east of Nan Ping is Si Qi, while An Xi lies to the west. There’s also a Dragon Vein there. The Dharma Sect must’ve realized that we were too hard to destroy, so they attacked the west first.”

The tremor intensified, and the weather shifted again. Everyone saw the sun moving across the sky rapidly.

Xuan Pin was shocked. “Another division is gone.”

“Sorry, I have urgent business to attend to. Grand elder, please come visit us if you have the time.”

Xuan Pin’s illusion disappeared afterward.

There was no reason for Li Huowang to find out which Dragon Vein was destroyed this time. No matter where it was, the reality was undeniable—in just a single day, the Dharma Sect destroyed two Dragon Veins.

“We don’t have any time to lose! Let’s go to Si Qi now!”

Li Huowang and Li Sui both took out a talisman, slapping them onto the horses’ backs.

The horses ran with explosive speed as the carriage crushed the human heads.

Right after they departed, two people appeared from underneath the mound of heads.

“Was that Li Huowang?”

“Yes, that was Li Huowang.”

Chapter 713 - Courtesy

“Kill them!” Li Huowang pasted yellow talismans on his knee as he charged into the group of people. The bloodbath made his robes even redder than usual.

Even though Li Huowang was surrounded by enemies, he still held the upper hand. With his keen sense of hearing, Li Huowang noticed the ground shaking slightly.

He looked back and saw a war chariot pulled by four horses charging towards him. Li Huowang turned his wrist and a rift shot out, cutting the chariot in half.

Suddenly, a dark figure shot out from Li Huowang’s shadow. Using a dagger crafted from black stone, the figure attempted to stab Li Huowang’s waist.

Li Huowang had seen this trick one too many times and had prepared countermeasures to prevent it. He asked Li Sui to grow an eyeball behind his head.

Li Huowang twisted himself to dodge the attack before using his sword to cut the Witch down.

Suddenly, Li Huowang was thrust into complete darkness. Something affected the Dharma Sect surrounding him. An invisible call unified them, and they all jumped towards Li Huowang.

They covered the sky and blotted out the sun above Li Huowang as they raised their weapons high to stab him.

The Witch that was cut in half by Li Huowang refused to die and restrained Li Huowang’s arms using her legs.

Two hooks burst from beneath the ground and stabbed into Li Huowang’s feet to prevent him from running.

They realized Li Huowang was not someone they could fight with their strength, so they laid out traps with their own lives just to kill Li Huowang.

The weapons stabbed Li Huowang without mercy. Li Huowang clenched his fist and howled angrily, his skin and flesh opening up like fish scales. Numerous tentacles holding torture tools burst forth from his body and started decimating the people around him.

Li Huowang twisted his body so hard that he snapped his own spine. His tentacles started spinning, too.

With the torture tools and his three swords, Li Huowang turned into a deadly spinning top as he spun and mowed down everyone.

The sun shone brightly above him by the time the sound of tearing flesh and agonized cries had vanished.

He stomped on one of the corpses with his right foot, barely catching his breath before noticing Lu Xiucui was in danger. Li Huowang ran forward to rescue him.

Minor skirmishes like these were easy for him to handle—the battle ended in ten minutes. Afterward, Li Huowang washed his swords and hands in a nearby creek.

He remembered being here before, back when they escaped from Zephyr Temple. At the time, he had set up a fireplace and stove to cook their meals. Li Huowang sighed when he thought about what he had become.

Suddenly, something flew past his head and landed in the water. Several tentacles danced happily in the water.

“Suisui, stop playing now. It’s time to go,” Li Huowang said, walking towards the shore.

Li Sui’s, or rather, Princess Anping’s alluring skin, walked up the shore with her wet clothes stuck to her body. She also had a carp in her mouth.

On the road, Li Huowang frowned as he stared at the corpses strewn everywhere. Many of the corpses were dressed in the uniform of officials.

Si Qi differed from Hou Shu. Hou Shu was still fighting against the Dharma Sect, but Si Qi had completely fallen.

In Hou Shu, they only had to worry about getting stuck in the crossfire between the Dharma Sect and the army. But in Si Qi, Li Huowang felt that he was wading through thick mud—there were only enemies here.

They experienced too many minor skirmishes after entering Si Qi.

“I’m struggling even though there are not that many Dharma Sect members here. I imagine things are tougher on your side,” Li Huowang said to Xuan Pin.

“Correct.”

“How’s the frontline? Is it alright?”

Xuan Pin shook his head and remained silent. Li Huowang was unsure whether Xuan Pin didn’t want to tell him or didn’t know.

“What are you scheming? I doubt you think of me as a friend. Why can’t you tell me anything?”

“Li Huowang, successful people ignore the minor details. Don’t be too anxious.”

Li Huowang glared at Xuan Pin and saw the illusion start to waver. “Bullshit. I don’t want to be successful. I just want to live peacefully.”

As long as Li Huowang willed it and focused his thoughts, he could make Xuan Pin’s illusion actually disappear.

“Wait. I have a gift for you.”

All six of Xuan Pin’s arms gestured at his own stomach before producing a mirror and giving it to Li Huowang.

The monk’s illusion was confused, picking it up to inspect it under the sun.

“Wait, don’t touch it!” Li Huowang pushed the monk away and checked the mirror in the air and its contents.

He wasn’t sure what it was at first. There were lines, flags, banners, and several blinking red dots.

But Li Huowang soon realized what it was. It was a map of Si Qi.

“This is... A map of Si Qi? Are the red dots the battles occurring right now?” Li Huowang asked, pointing at the red dots in the mirror.

“That’s not all. This artifact I refined has other uses. Try reaching your arm into it.”

Li Huowang hesitantly touched the mirror with one finger.

When he touched one of the red dots, he felt as if he had been transported into the war zone. Screaming and crying could be heard everywhere, with a murderous area permeating the surroundings.

The deep sound of a horn came from afar, making Li Huowang’s skin tingle. Then, the ground began to tremble, and the vibrations grew stronger and stronger.

The cavalry from Qing Qiu charged towards the Dharma Sect, who was carrying a massive statue.

Li Huowang felt his blood boiling. He took a deep breath and retracted his finger before realizing he was back in his original location.

He looked at Xuan Pin and placed his finger on one of the flags. This time, he saw several generals from Qing Qiu discussing in a war tent.

Hearing their discussions, Li Huowang realized they were giving out orders and strategizing. Li Huowang understood how powerful the artifact was.

“How is it?” Xuan Pin asked. “With this, you can understand the situation on the battlefield and locate our forces.”

Xuan Pin’s arm extended from his red robes and patted Li Huowang lightly. “We are allies, so... How about you forgive me for the incident with the Earth Dragon?”

Chapter 714 - Breakthrough

Li Huowang now understood why Xuan Pin had given him this gift, but he didn't buy Xuan Pin's explanation.

"Allies? Then why did you wait until now to give it to me?"

"You think this is a lifespan pill that we can find everywhere? This is an artifact that I had to refine using numerous other rare treasures."

"Bullshit. This is just an illusion. What kind of treasure would you have to use?"

Li Huowang walked towards the carriage while the mirror floated by his side.

"Everything has a form in this profound world, including illusions. In fact, one could even refine them. Honestly, you are not as good at using illusions as I am," Xuan Pin said.

In the end, Li Huowang never said anything about letting the incident regarding the Earth Dragon go, but Xuan Pin didn't need him to say it out loud. Xuan Pin knew his goal had been achieved based on Li Huowang's tone.

He refused to say it out loud, but Li Huowang had to admit that the mirror Xuan Pin gave him was very useful.

With the artifact, he could see the battlefield easily and even save some strength. At the very least, he could follow the path the soldiers had walked past.

Even though the path was covered in corpses, wild dogs, and vultures, they no longer had to worry about any ambushes since the soldiers had killed everything in their path. The White Lotus Sect members following Li Huowang sighed in relief.

Thanks to the artifact, they were able to walk through a path without enemies and reach the frontline faster than expected.

Sensing that they were close to the front lines, their dinner for the night was more extravagant than usual.

It was soon nighttime, but Li Huowang was woken up by Bai Lingmiao.

“There’s fish?” Li Huowang stared at the wild vegetable fish soup in his bowl. The milky white soup looked delicious.

“There’s a lot more rivers in Si Qi. Suisui was the one who hunted the fish. She’s really skillful underwater and chose the larger ones.”

Li Huowang nodded and ate his meal quickly. He also occasionally glanced at the battlefield covered in corpses.

Bai Lingmiao saw the scab that resembled fish scales on Li Huowang's face and frowned. “Senior Li, what do you intend to do once we are at the frontlines?”

“Oh, we are not going to the frontlines. That’s a place for the soldiers, not us,” Li Huowang said as he chewed on the fish.

“Huh? But aren’t we heading...”

“We won’t achieve anything by going to the front lines to kill the Dharma Sect with the soldiers. They already have enough people doing that. To help in large-scale battles like that, we can kill the leaders instead.”

No matter how small each army of the Dharma Sect was, it was bound to have a leader. Li Huowang intended to kill the leaders to destroy the Dharma Sect from the inside.

The Surveillance Bureau’s informants and spies should have infiltrated their ranks by now. I should be able to get some information soon.

Li Huowang didn’t know where the Dharma Sect's base was. He needed to get the information quickly to kill the Dharma Sect’s leaders and destroy their army.

“But won’t the Dharma Sect have a lot of strong individuals in their base?”

“That’s true. That’s why I need to hasten my cultivation of the ‘Truth’ to increase our chances of winning.”

Li Huowang emptied his bowl, wiped his mouth, and entered the dark forest.

Bai Lingmiao did not follow him. By now, she was used to his schedule—resting during the day and cultivating at night.

Li Huowang sat on a smooth boulder in the forest and started his cultivation. He focused and shut off his senses.

Everything around Li Huowang disappeared as he carefully used his inner sight to envelop his primordial breath and push it closer to his Heart Chakra. It was a slow process that made him feel as if he was pushing a boulder up a mountain.

Li Huowang soon lost himself in his cultivation and forgot everything. He directed all of his attention and thoughts towards pushing the primordial breath.

It was a profound feeling. He felt that he was close to completion, yet just a single step away.

He didn’t know how much time had passed by the time he opened his eyes again. He sensed no changes in his body and sighed. This was something only he knew how to do. He couldn’t look for someone else to teach him.

“Dad, it’s daytime!” Li Huowang heard Li Sui’s voice, then hopped off the boulder and approached Li Sui.

“Dad, look at what I’ve caught! There’s so much delicious food here!” Li Sui held several vultures and showed them off to Li Huowang.

“The flesh of these birds is foul. Throw them away,” Li Huowang said and discreetly looked at Bai Lingmiao.

“Suisui, we will leave secretly. Don’t tell your Mom or Second Mom.”

“Why? Mom and Second Mom are very strong.” Li Sui was confused.

“Because the battle later will be very intense. I don’t want to get them involved.”

Li Huowang didn’t know how many experts were in the Dharma Sect or how many Simings were working together. He only knew that the Dharma Sect was very dangerous.

Bai Lingmiao survived last time, but she had to pay a terrible price, causing her to look like an amalgamation of beast and human. He knew that it would be dangerous later, so he didn’t want her to risk her life anymore.

Even though Bai Lingmiao would hate him for this, it would be better than losing her life.

Li Sui nodded. “Alright.”

“We need to be quiet now. Your Mom might not be able to see with her eyes, but her ears are very sharp.” Li Huowang held onto Li Sui’s hand and walked away.

He had just entered the forest when he heard someone above him.

“Dad? Who were you talking to?”

Li Huowang paused and looked up. He suddenly realized that the sky was not the same anymore. It was a reflection of the surface he was walking on!

Li Sui was jumping on top of a tree in an attempt to reach Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked at the inverted Li Sui and then looked at the Li Sui whose hand he was holding.

He looked around and saw that everything had been reflected. The Li Sui beside Li Huowang held his hands tighter as she looked at Li Huowang with confusion and fear. “Dad?”

Then, her body disappeared.

Li Huowang looked at the Li Sui above him and then at his now-empty right hand, realization dawning on him.

Everything around him started to become fake, and Li Huowang started falling “upwards.”

He quickly landed on the ground. When he landed, he looked up and saw the reflection of the land above him gradually disappearing.

He checked his body and realized that his cultivation had progressed. His primordial breath was now sitting in his Heart Chakra!

Chapter 715 - City Wall

A woman's corpse cut in half was laid over a well with putrid water. Her body was twitching and her eyeball was dangling out of her eye socket.

The twitching stopped abruptly. The rats that were nibbling on her corpse sensed something and stopped, then burrowed out of her body and scattered.

Li Huowang soon walked past the corpse as they continued forward.

He frowned and looked around the destroyed village. Everything lay in ruins, devoid of any survivors. The ground had been razed, and death permeated the entire village.

Li Huowang remembered this place. He had stayed here for the night when he first escaped Zephyr Temple. It had once been a lively place, but now there wasn't a single person alive.

Everyone had been butchered.

The place was already close to the front lines. To the people of Si Qi, the army and the Dharma Sect were one and the same.

By assessing the freshness of the corpses, Li Huowang determined that the village had been destroyed recently.

"Suisui, rest a bit for now. We'll be arriving soon," Li Huowang suggested, settling down on the bench and munching on his rations.

With sadness in her eyes, Li Sui looked at the lifeless bodies. "Dad, so many people died."

She now understood the meaning of death.

"Right. As the saying goes, it's better to be a dog in times of peace than a human in times of chaos."

Li Huowang felt nothing in his heart when he looked at the old monk's illusion trying to appease the souls of the dead. The monk had tried this with every corpse along the way, so Li Huowang had grown used to it.

Li Huowang was actually focused on himself right now. He couldn't stop thinking about what had happened.

What's going on? How did I conjure up another Suisui?

While he was happy his cultivation had advanced, he was now feeling uneasy.

The more he cultivated the 'Truth,' the stronger it became. Initially, he experienced intense headaches and nosebleeds whenever he attempted to materialize something. But now that he was at the Heart Chakra, or the fourth stage, he could easily materialize anything.

Still, are there really no side effects to Doulao's cultivation method?

Li Huowang was worried.

He suddenly remembered something. Wait, I've asked Ji Zai before! He didn't answer, so I've continued my cultivation, but what if...

Ji Zai was his own Siming, but he was constantly stuck in a state of bewilderment. Does Ji Zai mean no harm despite not helping?

Li Huowang couldn't use the techniques of the Ao Jing Sect for now. Without his ability to utilize the power of 'Truth,' he would only have his swords and physical abilities at his disposal.

Li Huowang had his own plans. No, I cannot trust Ji Zai completely. I should still use Profound Records. I cannot let him think that I have full trust in him.

His lack of knowledge about the Simings made him refuse to believe their words wholeheartedly, even if the Siming in question was his future self.

Li Huowang needed to ensure that Ji Zai was wary of him to prevent himself from being reduced to a mere pawn.

Li Huowang lifted the water-filled gourd to his lips and took a sip, washing down his dry rations. As he did, he saw the red glow of sunlight towards his left. There were smoke signals there.

“I recall where that place is...” Li Huowang touched the mirror that Xuan Pin had given him.

Through the mirror, he saw what was happening. The unified soldiers were besieging a city occupied by the Dharma Sect.

It was an important city, and both sides were unwilling to back down. Disregarding it would have dire consequences for either side—losing the city meant losing essential supply lines.

Li Huowang removed his finger and took Li Sui with him. They sprinted towards the city.

After passing through the forest, Li Huowang reached the gruesome front line. He saw boiling oil pouring down from the top of the city wall. Some of the stronger soldiers endured the boiling oil and reached the top even as their skin was burned off.

Many of the soldiers managed to make their way into the city, where countless battles were waged inside and out.

Li Huowang circled to the other side instead. Realizing that the security on the eastern side was slightly weaker, he quickly projected his body downwards and turned invisible before moving.

When he reached the city wall, he placed his palm on it rather than climbing it. He closed his eyes and pushed forward, letting his body sink into the wall.

When he reached the other side, he placed his palm on the wall again and felt its solid surface. His cultivation had finally paid off!

“Time to go!” A tentacle sprouted out of Li Huowang and hooked itself onto the roof. Li Sui pulled Li Huowang onto the top of the roof.

Li Huowang steadied himself before realizing the City God Temple had been replaced with a massive stone statue depicting some unknown deity.

The black statue was making a Vajra Seal with its left hand and holding onto a vase with its right hand. Even though the statue’s face depicted it as merciful, Li Huowang felt that the statue was perversely twisted.

No matter what it was, he was certain that the statue was not god Yu'er. God Yu'er dwelled in the darkness and couldn't be portrayed with just clay and stones.

Did god Yu'er gain a new body to trick even more people? It seemed plausible to Li Huowang. He doubted anyone would join if they saw the true form of god Yu'er.

Li Huowang ran on the roof, quickly pinpointing the area where the leaders of the Dharma Sect in the area were most likely hiding in. Only the county's magistrate's office could have stone lions placed in front of the door.

Suddenly, a spear pierced through the roof tile that Li Huowang was standing on and stabbed into his feet. An ambush? I've been spotted!

Li Huowang tried to escape, but the spear was faster. The roof collapsed from the attack, and Li Huowang fell down into a dark house.

Before long, he saw the person who attacked him. It was a man standing on stilts while holding onto two spears.

The man chuckled at Li Huowang and said, "You think you can launch a surprise attack at our base camp with your lousy footing? My spears are coated in—"

Li Huowang stabbed his purple-tassel sword into the man's throat without waiting for the man to finish his sentence.

"Who cares what you've coated your spears in? I just need to kill you."

Li Huowang understood his powers well. He wouldn't be in danger if he didn't hear what the spears were coated in. He twisted his sword and cut off the man's head, then jumped out of the house before the man's lifeless body even hit the ground.

Chapter 716 - Door Gods

The Dharma Sect had expected the possibility of someone targeting their leaders instead.

Li Huowang had just exited the house when three more figures pounced towards him.

Bam! They crashed into Peng Longteng's sturdy armor.

Peng Longteng lowered her body. Li Huowang used his imagination and grew another head for her. Her halberd also reappeared in her hands.

At last, Peng Longteng felt free. Revealing a bloodthirsty smile, she charged towards the Dharma Sect's witches and finally broke her silence. "Kill them all!"

As soon as she had her weapon back, she transformed into a merciless killing machine. None of the people from the Dharma Sect could approach her.

"Give me a horse!"

A warhorse appeared, and Peng Longteng quickly mounted it. She crashed into the door of the county magistrate's office with a deafening boom, crushing the hinges, part of the wall, and even the people standing behind it.

Peng Longteng continued her charge. As if trying to vent her frustration, she charged without dodging. She relied on her massive, sturdy frame to crush everything beneath her horse. The old buildings collapsed without any resistance.

As Peng Longteng was attracting the attention of the Dharma Sect, Li Huowang circled around from the courtyard. To avoid detection, Li Huowang kept his body hidden, swimming underground through the earth instead.

The guards attempted to stab him by plunging their swords into the ground, but were unsuccessful. Li Huowang had to admit that the more he used his primordial breath, the better he got at controlling it.

He easily disposed of the hidden guards and entered one of the houses.

Li Huowang found the people he needed. Several officials wearing black cloths on their shoulders and white cloths wrapped around their heads were huddled around a big sand table. They were constantly directing the troops on how to attack.

Are they the leaders?

Li Huowang didn't attack directly. Instead, he pressed his fingers to his temples and focused.

The ground suddenly turned into liquid, causing everything in the house to sink and bury them alive.

The room became deadly silent.

Wait, that's it? Li Huowang never thought it would be over so soon.

How could the leaders get killed so easily?

Li Huowang thought that there was a trap nearby. He heard the commotion outside caused by Peng Longteng, but nothing happened. He realized that he was no longer the Li Huowang he once was.

He submerged himself into the ground and was about to swim away when he felt someone stomping the ground above him and chuckling.

"You already killed them. Are you planning to leave without telling us?"

The ground split apart as Li Huowang thrust all three swords above, but he frowned when he realized none of his swords were covered in blood. He resurfaced and looked around, only to hear a voice say, "No need to look around. We are here."

Li Huowang looked in the direction of the voice and saw that it came from the door gods[1] in the wall. They were just like the ones he saw pasted on doors during the Chinese New Year.

They were tall and sturdy, with sideburns, bushy beards, and horns protruding from their heads. Clad in armor, each had a sword on their hip and gripped a cherry-wood sword in their hands.

The only thing different about the door gods here was the black cloth on their shoulders. Even the door gods in Si Qi belonged to god Yu'er.

"You can call me Shenshu.[2] I had been wanting to recruit you." One of the door gods stared at Li Huowang.

"Recruit me? The Dharma Sect wants to recruit me?" Li Huowang thought he had misheard.

"That's right. Even though you've foiled a lot of our plans, our Imperial Preceptor still thinks that you are someone who could understand the bigger picture."

Li Huowang almost laughed. "You've killed so many people and committed so many crimes, yet you're thinking of recruiting me?"

"Did any of your family members die during the war? If you join us, the Imperial Preceptor can revive them."

Li Huowang stabbed the door without thinking twice. "You think I would believe you? Even the Simings can't do that, so what makes you think you can do it?"

"The Simings of this realm cannot do so, but the Simings from the other realms can. We are humbly requesting you to surrender to us."

Li Huowang frowned and removed his sword. "What did you say?"

He wasn't trying to stab them anymore. He wanted to see if he could fish out more information from the door gods.

"The Simings control the Heavenly Daos. They are gods in a sense, but there are only fifty Heavenly Daos. They cannot do everything, and reviving the dead is one of those things.”

“So god Yu’er can do what the Simings can’t? Isn’t he also controlling a Heavenly Dao?” Li Huowang scoffed and tried to trick Shenshu into telling him more.

“God Yu’er can do so because he controls a special Heavenly Dao. The Heavenly Daos of Da Nuo cannot achieve that, but Heavenly Daos beyond this realm can.”

“Beyond... Beyond this realm?” Li Huowang was confused. If Da Nuo was this world, what was the realm beyond this?

“Looks like you really don’t know anything. Even Xuan Pin didn’t tell you about it. It seems that he’s wary of you,” The door god remarked. “You think you know a lot because you’ve learned about the Baiyu Capital and the Simings, but there’s still much to learn. The Heavenly Daos of Da Nuo have clearly separated Life and Death. One cannot go beyond the other. But this is not the case in the other realms where they can return to life. In their world, life and the afterlife are not as clearly separated. Da Nuo is where you live and all you know, just like a frog beneath a well. You do not know how special the Heavenly Daos of the other realms are.”

Li Huowang stared at the door gods. Given how much they had explained, it appeared that they really wanted to recruit him.

“Think carefully. I am telling the truth. Do you not want to revive Zhuge Yuan and Bai Lingmiao’s family?”

Li Huowang was perturbed for the first time throughout their conversation. They know about them too?!

“Didn’t you say that you want to save the world? Once god Yu’er descends, everyone who died will be brought back to life. Isn’t this the salvation you seek?”

“Bullshit!” Li Huowang shouted. “Do you think I’m blind? The Qi Kingdom has been occupied by god Yu’er! Look at what happened over there!”

Li Huowang could still remember the strange liquid flowing out from the Qi Kingdom. The Qi Kingdom had long since submerged in the strange liquid that turned humans into monsters.

“Foolish. Have you been to the Qi Kingdom today? You’ve only listened to rumors. God Yu’er revived everyone in the Qi Kingdom and eliminated famine! Now, people can enjoy a peaceful era where everyone looks out for each other! Everyone is now equal to each other!”

1. Divine guardians of doors from Chinese folklore who ward off evil influences. 🙌

2. A deity that suppresses and hunts down evil entities. One of the door gods, with the other being called Yulu. 🙌

Chapter 717 - Ambush

The Qi Kingdom is saved? Everyone is equal? Li Huowang never thought he would hear something like that from the Dharma Sect.

He swung his spine sword towards the door. A rift flew out and red liquid spilled out from it, tainting and mutating everything it touched.

Li Huowang pointed at the liquid and snarled, “Is this what you meant by saving the people? The Qi Kingdom is still covered in that crappy stuff! How dare you claim that the people of the Qi Kingdom have been revived and are living in peace!”

“Li Huowang, it seems that I overestimated how much you know about the world. I thought you would easily understand it as a Twisted One, but I was mistaken. It looks like Xuan Pin hid a lot of things from you.”

Before Li Huowang could even answer, a lump of flesh plopped out from the closing rift. It was white, sticky, and looked like a deformed body.

Due to the rift closing, only half of the organism’s body managed to reach the Liang Kingdom. Even so, it tried to crawl on the ground as it expanded and contracted without any signs of dying.

Several short pink tentacles sprouted from the organism's forehead, and it let out a baby’s cry. Its body lacked a fixed shape and continuously changed.

Shenshu looked at the organism and said, “Both kindness and evil are illusions. Our bodies are like bubbles, yet our hearts are like the wind. Everything is an illusion.”

“What the fuck are you talking about? Explain clearly!” Li Huowang said as he stared at the weird organism. He felt unsettled because the organism still had the vague shape of a human.

“All kind acts are illusions, just as all evil acts are. Our bodies are like bubbles that gather together, having form but no essence. Our hearts are like the wind, shapeless and traceless but capable of being felt. In a sense, everything we feel is an illusion.”

Shenshu pointed at the organism that was trying to escape into the courtyard. “But now, things are different. God Yu’er allows us to break free from such illusions and become real. We are no longer like bubbles or the wind!

“As long as you submit to god Yu’er, we will no longer be false! Think about this, Li Huowang. This is what an Immortal looks like. Aren’t you a Daoist too? If you worship god Yu’er, you too can become an Immortal!”

“Immortal?” Li Huowang stared at the organism before realizing what it was and why the people of the Qi Kingdom no longer died.

The people in the Qi Kingdom had indeed revived, but it was a fate worse than death.

Shenshu refused to give up on persuading Li Huowang. “How about it?”

“No.”

“No?” Shenshu stared at Li Huowang in disbelief. “Do you not want to revive the people close to you? Do you not want to become an Immortal?”

“Of course I want to,” Li Huowang said, tightening his grip on his swords, “but I don’t like begging people for it. Since you’ve said that god Yu’er has the Heavenly Dao to revive people, I do not need to negotiate with him. I can just kill him and take it for myself. Isn’t that better?”

To the Dharma Sect, this was nothing short of heresy.

“You dare besmirch the name of god Yu’er?!”

Bam! The doors slammed shut. The red armor of both door gods gradually turned green.

Li Huowang wasn't surprised that there was an ambush. He shot another rift towards the door gods and dashed towards it.

The door gods had to open the door to let the rift fly out. By the time they closed the doors again, Li Huowang was nowhere to be seen.

The two door gods looked at each other before nodding. They clapped their palms together and chanted, "The Dharma itself is without Dharma, but it is still the Dharma. When facing the lack of Dharma, how can the Dharma not be the Dharma?"

Their consciousness expanded and covered the entire place. Nothing escaped their senses. "Be careful. He knows how to burrow into the ground."

Without warning, Li Huowang burst out from the ground and cut one of the door gods in half, splitting the wooden door into two.

He was about to attack the second door god when Li Sui shouted in his ears.

"Dad! He's on your body!"

"What?" Li Huowang looked down and saw the door god in his red robes.

The door god swung his sword and cut Li Huowang's arm in half, but countless black tentacles sprouted and grafted it back to Li Huowang.

"Scram!" Li Sui gave Li Huowang his ribs, and he stabbed them into his torso. The pain from his chest was transmitted to the door god.

The door god suffered intense pain and tried to escape. It slid onto the ground, but Li Huowang didn't let it go.

Li Huowang stomped the door god with his right foot and swung his sword downwards.

Suddenly, everything around Li Huowang turned dark. He looked up and saw that the other door god was trying to crush his body with the door itself!

Just as the door god had almost crushed Li Huowang, Peng Longteng crashed into it with the warhorse and destroyed the door into pieces. She then laughed ecstatically as she battered the left wall with her bloody body.

Li Huowang looked at the door god on the ground and grabbed it with both arms. He pulled the door god's body in two opposing directions and stretched its body long.

In the end, the door god cried in pain as Li Huowang tore it in half. At the same time, the walls and roof collapsed.

By the time the dust settled, Li Huowang had walked out from the rubble. He looked at the army breaching the city wall and mumbled, "Is that it? It looks like the Dharma Sect is fighting a losing battle."

He didn't know if it was because his abilities were growing rapidly, but he felt that it had been too easy.

A strange female voice chuckled from behind Li Huowang. "Is that so? Well, I don't think so."

He slowly turned around and saw a woman wearing a large porcelain doll's head. She was sitting on a roof and holding two dolls of door god in her hands.

One was torn in half, while the other was torn into several pieces—just like the door gods that had just perished.

Chapter 718 - Bring It On

She threw the dolls away. “Are you Li Huowang? Let me ask you again. Will you really not join us?”

Li Huowang didn’t bother answering her. Several tentacles slammed the ground and propelled him forward as he raised his sword.

Li Huowang was about to cut down the woman when the animal ornaments on the roof ridge came to life and tried to bite Li Huowang.

Li Sui’s tentacles burst forth from his abdomen and bound all of the ornaments. Li Huowang didn’t even need to use his energy to take care of the things below him.

His sword was now less than three inches away from the lady’s head.

Pa! The doll’s head suddenly flew upwards as if it had grown wings, revealing the middle-aged woman beneath it.

The woman stared at Li Huowang blankly when he was about to kill her. They locked gazes, and Li Huowang suddenly felt a chill in his spine.

He didn’t know who she was, but he was certain she was dangerous.

Li Huowang then realized what was happening. She’s a Muddled One!

It was a trap!

“Close your eyes!” Li Huowang shouted, and the woman complied.

Li Huowang stared at the woman and used his cultivation. Her eyelids rapidly merged with her face, giving her no chance to open eyes once more.

“Hahaha!” The doll’s head rolling on the ground laughed. “Li Huowang, do you think that it’s over? We’ve prepared so many traps for you today! You will die here!”

Bam! A horse hoof slammed downwards and crushed the doll’s head.

“Bring it on then! Show me everything!” Peng Longteng swung her halberd and hollered.

While Peng Longteng taunted them, Li Huowang realized he was in danger and didn’t dare risk it. He immediately ran towards the place where the city wall had fallen.

There was no reason not to run now that they had declared they had a trap for him.

Li Huowang jumped from roof to roof as he escaped.

But then he saw something unexpected. A Lama in black clothes was sitting on one of the roofs with his back facing towards Li Huowang. The Lama also had a black cloth on his shoulder.

A Lama? Just as Li Huowang realized this, the Lama took out a prayer wheel and started spinning it, chanting in a strange language.

As the wheel spun faster, Li Huowang felt it was pulling him towards it. He lost control of his eyes as they gradually looked towards the spinning wheel.

It’s the Lama from the Antrabhara Temple! What’s the Siming of Death doing? Is it working for both sides?! Li Huowang swung his spine sword and sent a rift towards the Lama.

The tiles split apart as the rift shot forward. A strong wind suddenly surged downwards as numerous white shadows flew down. Every time they brushed past Li Huowang’s body, they left laceration wounds so deep that they revealed Li Huowang’s bones.

When one of the white shadows swooped down again, Li Huowang whipped his bronze coin sword around, cutting the white shadows in the process.

But Li Huowang was caught off-guard when the bronze coin sword easily cut through the white shadows. They were surprisingly fragile.

As he whipped the bronze coin sword ferociously, numerous white shadows were cut into pieces of paper.

Li Huowang finally realized who was ambushing him upon seeing two scholars blocking him from the front and back. The scholars had three arms instead of two.

But it was clear they were not the only ones. Li Huowang quickly glanced around and saw people from different sects that had joined the Dharma Sect.

He was completely surrounded.

Someone stepped forward, and Li Huowang immediately recognized who it was. The familiar face with a white towel on his forehead belonged to Taishan Shi, a devotee of the Dharma Sect in the Qi Kingdom.

Li Huowang tried to delay them as he looked around for an opportunity. "I was curious as to why there were no news about you. It seems that you had escaped to this place."

He was completely surrounded and had no choice but to break through the encirclement with brute force.

"Do you really think you can stop me with so few people?" Li Huowang said slowly.

"Stop lying. The only reason you managed to escape the Earth Dragon's stomach was the Cang-Qiang Ascension. You are alone today, and you will die."

Taishan Shi raised his chin and everyone launched themselves toward Li Huowang.

Bam! Peng Longteng fell from the sky with her war horse and crushed two people beneath her. She then charged forward into the crowd.

"Fire!" Li Huowang sacrificed his skin and was quickly engulfed by flames.

But the pain was not enough. Ba-Hui needed more.

Li Huowang's flesh burst open like fish scales, and the fire slithered inside.

Sensing that something was wrong, Li Huowang immediately spat Li Sui out.

His blood was being burned by the fire as it boiled. Li Huowang had never felt pain this severe before. He burned, both inside and out.

And thanks to the price he paid, the fire on his body intensified many times over.

"Ba-Hui, you fucking bitch!" Li Huowang cursed at the sky before he charged toward Taishan Shi with his burning body.

Li Huowang was both the fuel and the flames. Everything around him burned up regardless of whether they were flammable or not. The very air distorted from the intense heat.

"Charge!" Peng Longteng charged into the fire.

Her armor, halberd, and even her war horse were covered in the very same flames from Li Huowang's body.

This was the most excited she had ever been since becoming Li Huowang's illusion.

"Bring it on!"

Peng Longteng stabbed her halberd backward and hooked Li Huowang's body. She swung it forcefully and launched the burning Li Huowang like a catapult towards the crowd!

Chapter 719 - Array

Li Huowang crashed into the group after being thrown by Peng Longteng.

The fire on Li Huowang's body radiated outward, turning him into a human torch. The flames burned everything, including inflammable objects.

At the same time, the burning Peng Longteng reached the crowd too as she swung her halberd at the Dharma Sect.

Her armor was already a dull red from the flames. She was like a god of massacre as she cut down everyone in her path.

The Dharma Sect landed numerous attacks on Peng Longteng, including several fatal ones, but she refused to fall down. Li Huowang had removed the one weakness that those from the military had: their mortality.

“Die! Everyone must die!”

Peng Longteng felt alive again. She felt as if she had returned to the days when she led crusades and raids across the sandy plains. She loved this feeling, and she loved killing people. She relished the feeling of stomping humans beneath her horse.

The Dharma Sect was clearly at a disadvantage with Peng Longteng and Li Huowang attacking them. Many of them burned up without being able to do anything.

Even so, the Dharma Sect had plans to fight against the unyielding Li Huowang.

“To the east of Qianjing Yao's Jade Pool is the Qingtong, commanded by the Sacred One! Fire is thrown from ten thousand miles away as it shakes the palace but the rain riders bring the overwhelming mist swiftly! Mulang and Taiyi are the strongest in the three mountains, while thunder breaks through the source of springs! A single shout changed the darkness into light across the four seas, and wherever the rainstorm reaches, the rivers overflow!”

Three cherrywood swords with purple talismans pointed at the sky. Dark clouds gathered, and rain showered down on Li Huowang.

Even though the rain couldn't extinguish the fire given by Ba-Hui, it still suppressed it.

As it rained heavily, a witch jumped out of Li Huowang's shadow to stab his calves.

A tentacle shot out and restrained the witch's hand. “Don't you dare touch my father!”

The witch saw several more black tentacles shooting towards her.

The tentacles became smooth as they were exposed in the rain. Li Sui slid her tentacles past the witch's veil and into her orifices.

After Li Sui got used to the new body, she turned around and started stabbing the black dagger at the other Dharma Sect members.

Many Dharma Sect members fell under Li Huowang and Peng Longteng's assault, but Taishan Shi showed no hints of panic. Instead, he was counting something using his fingers.

As he quickly calculated, the Dharma Sect surrounding Li Huowang moved rhythmically.

Taishan Shi is still their leader! I didn't think he would be able to adapt so well after several months! I need to kill him instead, or there will be no end to this! Li Huowang then gave Peng Longteng a knowing look.

The experienced Peng Longteng knew what he wanted. She spun her halberd before hurling it at Taishan Shi.

The heavy weapon flew towards Taishan Shi, but an old man beside him tried to block it. The old man waved his sleeve, and several dark shadows shot out towards the halberd.

Just as the shadows almost crashed into the halberd, Li Huowang focused his gaze on the halberd. It turned back into an illusion and phased through the shadows.

The halberd never stopped as it continued to fly towards Taishan Shi.

But now that it had changed back into an illusion, only Li Huowang could see it.

Before the halberd crashed into Taishan Shi, Li Huowang focused, and the halberd materialized back into reality.

Even Taishan Shi couldn't dodge when the halberd was so close to him. The halberd landed squarely on his body.

But Taishan Shi was unharmed. As the halberd struck his body, the sound of metal clashing into stone reverberated throughout the area.

Taishan Shi then grabbed the halberd and snapped it in half, much to the shock of Li Huowang and Peng Longteng.

Taishan Shi threw the halberd onto the ground before he looked at Li Huowang. "Formation!"

The Dharma Sect around Li Huowang removed their clothes and revealed their tattoos.

The tattoos were written in a strange language resembling circles.

Amidst the heavy rain, the witches started rapidly shaking and twisting their bodies.

The tattoos on their bodies linked with one another as they formed a large-scale living array. Li Huowang was in the middle of the array. This time, the array was even more complex than the one the Dharma Sect had laid in the swamp!

A strange voice escaped from the witches' mouth. It resembled the chanting of a scripture, but some of their words were almost impossible to be spoken with a human's vocal chord.

"Yan na li luo mi duo ma shu, the Heavenly Door opens, yan ma li duo dou luo sha shu, may the Doors of the Damned remain open, yan tuo su li luo ma ji sha shu, may we surpass life and death...”

As they chanted in unison, Li Huowang heard the faintest trace of a crane’s cry.

Li Huowang didn’t know what they were trying to do, but he knew that if he didn’t stop them now, he would die!

He shot out several rifts using the spine sword towards the witches. To his surprise, none of them made any attempts to dodge it.

After they perished, the tattoos on their body detached and floated in the air as the array continued to activate.

The faint voice of a crane’s cry could be heard, and Li Huowang felt something staring at him from above.

The familiar feeling made Li Huowang realize what was going on. “Are they trying to summon god Yu’er just to deal with me!?”

Li Huowang still remembered how strong Yinyang Doulao was, even though it had just been part of it. Even Zhuge Yuan hadn’t been able to fight against Doulao.

If god Yu’er descended, Li Huowang was certain he would die. He was Ji Zai’s Twisted One, but he would still die.

Even Peng Longteng and Suisui knew this. They quickly killed the people in the array, but the crane’s cry continued to grow stronger.

Li Huowang swung his sword at the tattoos floating in the middle of the air. Even though he managed to cut them, the tattoos glued back together in the next instant.

“Li Huowang, today is the day you die!” Taishan Shi glared at him. “You should be proud! Not everyone gets to meet Sir Arrogant Stone!”

“You want me to die? Dream on!” Li Huowang threw his sword upwards. He then stomped on Peng Longteng’s hands as she flung him upwards.

High up in the air, Li Huowang looked down. His eyes were already white from being burned, but he still saw what the array looked like.

The twisting array formed the massive character “滇.”[\[1\]](#)

The crane’s cry became louder by the second. Li Huowang snarled and imagined himself grabbing the entire array. He grabbed the top and bottom parts with his hands.

1. 滇 is the old name for Yunnan Province. I can’t find any other meaning for it.

Chapter 720 - Taishan Shi

Veins popped in Li Huowang's charred forehead. His blood literally boiled from the intense heat but was cooled down by the rain.

Come on! Didn't I turn an entire land into reality? I need to show them the strength of my cultivation! Tear it apart!

Li Huowang forcefully tore apart the array on the ground along with the land itself.

Veins burst open in his head as he fell weakly from the air. He stared at the being retreating into the clouds and laughed.

“HAHAHA! This is so fun! Ba-Hui, did you see that?! Look at what others have given me compared to what you've given me! You are a disgrace!”

Li Huowang was just inches away from the ground when he swiftly twisted his body and landed on the soft earth.

Everyone had stopped moving as they stared at Li Huowang with shock. They saw Li Huowang forcefully tearing apart the entire array.

The Dharma Sect members wavered, including even the most zealous devotees of god Yu'er. All of them hesitated when it came to defeating Li Huowang. They began asking themselves whether they could actually defeat Li Huowang.

Even Taishan Shi was not in a good mood. He had never expected something like this to happen. He knew Li Huowang was the Twisted One of Ji Zai, but he never expected him to be that strong.

Taishan Shi knew he needed to call the Imperial Preceptor if he wanted to kill Li Huowang, as the latter had improved dramatically in a short time. He had to eliminate Li Huowang quickly, or Li Huowang might actually destroy the Dharma Sect's plan.

Even though Li Huowang used up almost all of his strength to tear the array apart, he refused to fall despite being surrounded by the Dharma Sect. At this point, his head was still buzzing from overexertion.

Still, that did not stop Li Huowang from attacking them. Li Huowang raised his hand and made a crushing gesture towards one of the Dharma Sect's witches. The witch's head exploded just like that.

"I didn't really understand what you told me just now, but I do think that you all are right in certain aspects. The human body can really be like bubbles. For example, your bodies are just like bubbles in my hands."

Li Huowang raised his arm and crushed another Dharma Sect member's head. He then pointed his arm at Taishan Shi.

Taishan Shi looked at Li Huowang and then at the soldiers swarming into the city. Without any hesitation, he made a seal with his hands and immediately tunneled into the ground.

Taishan Shi had failed. He had underestimated how strong Li Huowang was. Thankfully, he didn't reveal the spy they planted in the Surveillance Bureau, or else they would've suffered some major losses.

Taishan Shi's voice came from below. "Go! Kill him! He's on his last legs!"

Upon hearing this, the remaining Dharma Sect members charged at Li Huowang with madness in their eyes, all while the rain continued to pour down.

They weren't a match for Li Huowang before, and they naturally couldn't win now either.

Li Huowang realized that Taishan Shi and the others were trying to escape. I can't let him get away! He's definitely in the upper ranks of the Dharma Sect!

It was difficult to track Taishan Shi since he had been tunneling underground. Li Huowang hadn't learned any tracking methods, so he didn't know where Taishan Shi was.

Li Huowang also knew his divination was too weak to be effective on Taishan Shi. He would just embarrass himself if he tried.

The other Dharma Sect members were throwing themselves at Li Huowang, disregarding their lives as they tried to secure time for Taishan Shi to escape.

The Dharma Sect had many members. Even if they didn't move, Li Huowang would still need quite some time to kill them all. Thankfully, the soldiers from outside managed to breach the wall and enter the city.

Li Huowang ignored the soldiers and crouched as he tried to find the traces of Taishan Shi tunneling underground.

He refused to give up on Taishan Shi just like that. Li Huowang fully intended to pay back the personal grudge he had towards Taishan Shi. He refused to give up until there were no traces left.

"There's still some traces here. Li Sui, let's go!" Li Huowang jumped onto Peng Longteng's horse and ran out of the eastern city gates. He was hoping that he could catch up to Taishan Shi.

Time passed, and the traces on the ground gradually turned faint. Li Huowang was getting anxious.

He finally stopped in front of a swamp. Li Huowang looked at the mangrove forest by the river. The running water had already washed away most of the traces.

"Ah..." Li Huowang sighed and plunged into the river to extinguish the flames on his body.

His body sizzled in the water as the flames slowly died out. His body was already charred black by then.

Instead of the usual charred skin he had before, Li Huowang now had charred, fleshy scales since the fire seared him from the inside out.

It was a relief that his regenerative ability had increased a lot. The flesh scales gradually healed and merged back into his body.

The intense pain slowly changed into itchiness as his body healed. LI Huowang gritted his teeth, finding the sensation far from comfortable. The itchiness was so overwhelming that Li Huowang would have preferred pain instead.

Standing in the river, he endured the itch and pondered his situation.

It's clear that the Dharma Sect is paying attention to me now—their trap wasn't a coincidence. I have to be careful or they will ambush me again.

Li Huowang had used his strongest abilities in front of them today. It would be difficult if he was ambushed again.

It would've been good if I managed to capture Taishan Shi. I could've gotten a lot of information out of him.

Li Huowang was still thinking when he noticed a presence. He looked at the mangrove forest and unsheathed his sword. “Who’s there?!”

A figure slowly appeared from the shadows of the trees. Li Huowang was shocked to see that it was Taishan Shi, the very person he was chasing.

Taishan Shi was injured—both of his arms were twisted off, his right leg was broken, and his scalp was nowhere to be seen. Blood was flowing down his body.

Someone pushed Taishan Shi from behind, causing him to stumble across the river towards Li Huowang.

Li Huowang saw who it was. It was Bai Lingmiao! Her upper body was split in half, and red veils covered both of her heads. “Senior Li, look. I’m useful, so please don’t abandon me next time, okay?”

Li Huowang ignored Taishan Shi as he walked towards Bai

Lingmiao with gratitude. He suddenly remembered something and stopped in front of Bai Lingmiao. He had a bad feeling. "Wait, don't move."

"Senior Li?" Bai Lingmiao was confused.

"I need to ask a question first. Are you the real Bai Lingmiao or a fake one I've conjured?"

Chapter 721 - Method

‘Truth’ cultivation significantly enhanced Li Huowang’s strength, but the side effects were equally severe.

“Is it real? Or fake?” Li Huowang breathed heavily and looked doubtfully at Bai Lingmiao.

“Senior Li, what’s happening to you—” Bai Lingmiao began, but Li Huowang quickly interrupted, “Don’t come closer!”

“Let me ask you! Back at Zephyr Temple... No, that’s not the right question. If she’s truly part of my ‘Truth’ cultivation, then she would definitely know!”

Li Huowang paced anxiously in the river. Despite his advanced cultivation, he couldn’t distinguish reality from illusion. Everything could be real if he willed it.

“Hehehe...” Taishan Shi chuckled mockingly at this sight. “As expected of Ji Zai’s Twisted One.”

Smack! Li Huowang’s palm landed on Taishan Shi’s cheek, causing it to swell instantly. “Shut up! Your turn to cry will come soon!”

After some thought, Li Huowang said, “Miaomiao, don’t worry. We will... we’ll do this.”

“We’ll go back now, the same way we came.” This was a stupid method, but also an effective one.

If there wasn’t another Bai Lingmiao on the way back, this one was real. If there was, then she was the fake one.

Bai Lingmiao neither agreed nor disagreed. Instead, she questioned him directly, “Senior Li, can you tell me what’s happening? Are you having another episode?”

Li Huowang’s erratic behavior worried her greatly.

“I’m not—” Li Huowang didn’t want to explain too much to this Bai Lingmiao. “Fine, maybe.”

He also didn’t want to invest too much emotion. What if she turned out to be fake? What would he do in that case? Would he make her disappear, or would he live with two Bai Lingmiao’s?

Li Huowang turned around and took out his tools to interrogate Taishan Shi. Suddenly, he noticed something strange about Bai Lingmiao’s reflection in the water.

Initially, he thought it was a mistake. Upon closer inspection, the reflection remained still. The water’s surface had turned into a mirror.

Li Huowang turned around slowly. He was shocked to see Bai Lingmiao’s body swaying like a shadow submerged in water!

“So you really are fake?” Li Huowang said, and Bai Lingmiao’s body began to flicker and gradually fade into nothingness.

“Senior Li! Li Huowang! What are you doing? Help me!” Bai Lingmiao was panicking. She began to drum and chant the White Lotus Sect’s incantations.

As her body was about to vanish, the lotus mark on her forehead glowed softly and blocked Li Huowang’s sight.

The light obscured his vision, and at that moment, he felt something familiar—the presence of the Heavenly Mater.

The feeling came and went quickly. However, Li Huowang realized something critical from it. He rushed forward and fearfully embraced Bai Lingmiao.

Despite facing numerous trials in the past, he had never been afraid. But just now, he felt utterly afraid. If not for the Heavenly Mater’s brief reminder, he might have erased Bai Lingmiao entirely!

With his current abilities, he could restore her. However, would she truly be the same Bai Lingmiao?

Bai Lingmiao tried to push him away, but his embrace was incredibly tight. “Li Huowang, what’s going on? Explain yourself! Are you having another episode? Just tell me if you are!”

A group of White Lotus followers ignored the Saintess's orders and rushed forward. "How dare you be disrespectful to the Saintess!"

After calming down, Li Huowang released Bai Lingmiao and lifted her red veil. He gently stroked her hair, scales, spikes, and numerous eyes.

Through this experience, Li Huowang understood the gravity of his situation. He knew he couldn't ignore the side effects of his 'Truth' cultivation any longer.

If left unchecked, the people he created would affect his sanity, and he could also unknowingly erase people around him. It was a serious threat.

Bai Lingmiao had the Heavenly Mater's protection, but what about the others? What if it had been Suisui?

His heart tightened when he recalled a false Suisui that appeared briefly during his training in the forest.

"What happened? What have you been through while I was gone? Explain!" Bai Lingmiao demanded.

Li Huowang had discerned the truth for now, and he began to explain everything to her.

An hour later, they were by a campfire. Li Huowang donned the red Daoist robe she handed him. "That's the story. I'm not sick. I've achieved advanced 'Truth' cultivation. I knew there would be a price, but I didn't expect it to be this steep."

This issue would likely worsen as his cultivation progressed. It was dangerous now, and he dared not imagine what the future would hold.

Bai Lingmiao nodded as she finally understood his previous strange behavior. "Senior Li, do you have a plan to solve this problem?"

Li Huowang sighed. "I wish I knew, but the solution can't come from just idle thinking."

He decided to ask Ji Zai first.

Bai Lingmiao frowned and tried to think of a solution alongside him. The surroundings fell silent.

Li Sui also wanted to help her father, but she didn't fully grasp what he said about the truth and lies.

Li Huowang returned from the river after calling for Ji Zai to no avail. Bai Lingmiao asked, "Senior Li, do you remember that person? The one who sold breakfast?"

"Sold breakfast? Who?"

"The chubby one who made fried dough sticks wrapped in glutinous rice."

"Shai Zi?" Li Huowang immediately remembered. Shai Zi had targeted him to achieve his own goals.

"When you left the city, he shouted something to you."

"You will go mad by cultivating 'Truth' but not 'Lies.'"

"I will go mad by cultivating 'Truth' but now 'Lies.'"

The two of them said simultaneously.

"Right, Senior Li, he was referring to this. Given your current state, it seems like you've gone mad, right?"

Li Huowang's face darkened. The logic made sense, but the source was questionable. Shai Zi was the leader of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Was there another hidden motive behind his words? Even in death, could the Sitting Oblivion Dao deceive them?

Chapter 722 - Remove

A drop of brown sauce slowly slid down the plump chicken drumstick, landing on the heap of steaming white rice.

Qian Fu didn't care about that. He held a drumstick in each hand and took a big bite of the braised chicken. He savored the delicious taste as the rich flavor filled his mouth, leaving him very satisfied.

This wasn't enough for him. While eating, he kept eyeing the plate, worried that Chen Hongyu might snatch it away.

Li Huowang sat across from them and watched in exasperation as they ate. He regretted inviting them to his home.

"Come, eat more. There's plenty left." Sun Xiaoqin smiled and brought another plate of drumsticks from the kitchen. Her hair was freshly curled.

"Mom, we already have enough."

Sun Xiaoqin didn't respond. Yang Na reached under the table and pinched Li Huowang hard.

"Why are you pinching me?" Li Huowang asked. Yang Na looked at him with some dissatisfaction.

Qian Fu loudly burped, interrupting them.

"You're already full. Don't overeat. It's not just about money. Don't upset your stomach."

Qian Fu took two more drumsticks from the plate, shoved them into the rice, and then glared at Li Huowang.

"You don't understand! It's a hunger burp!" he said, then picked up his chopsticks and devoured the food.

Chen Hongyu was not to be outdone. She grabbed a braised drumstick and tore it apart with her teeth. When she pulled it out, only a clean bone remained.

This seemed almost like a special ability compared to her disgusting pus-filled boils.

Sun Xiaoqin leaned close to Li Huowang and whispered, “How can you talk like that? They’re guests who came to help you. Besides, a big bag of frozen drumsticks from the supermarket isn’t that expensive. It’s even cheaper than some vegetables.”

Li Huowang sighed and stopped talking as he watched them continue to wolf down the food.

“Do you want some?”

“No, thanks. Watching them eat has filled me up.”

Li Huowang watched as their bellies swelled after three plates. He was amazed at the sight, which he had only seen in cartoons as a child.

After lunch, the two reclined in their chairs and rubbed their bellies contentedly.

Li Huowang glanced at the kitchen, then leaned forward and asked quietly, “Have you two not eaten lately? How are you so hungry?”

“You can’t carry yesterday’s meal over to today. We have to eat every day. What a funny guy,” Qian Fu said just as a knock came from the door.

“Coming,” Yang Na said as she put on her slippers and walked over. “Qing Wanglai? Come in. Those two behind you are...”

Li Huowang turned to see Qing Wanglai, dressed in white and blue, entering with two other people.

The two didn’t speak to Li Huowang. They simply lifted his foot and removed the device around his ankle.

After they left, Li Huowang turned to Qing Wanglai. “What’s this about?”

“The Neighborhood Office surveillance is gone, but they’ll still check in periodically. Also, you can’t leave the province or the city.”

“You’re free to move around now, but there’s still one device on your leg. It’s best to avoid crowded places to avoid provoking them.”

Li Huowang was stunned. He rushed to the window to look outside, where he saw Madam Qi and some others gesturing towards him before leaving the neighborhood.

Li Huowang was astonished. “Are they really gone? How did you do it?”

Though they hadn’t known each other long, Qing Wanglai seemed far more reliable than the other two mentally unstable individuals.

“Simple. I got a lawyer to check. The extended surveillance and house arrest were infringing on your personal freedom.

“You should have regained your freedom last month since you passed the doctor’s check, but you know how it is. Higher-ups say one thing, and those below exaggerate to avoid trouble. I also pulled some strings.”

“I see.”

Qing Wanglai chuckled and said, “I don’t think you fully understand.”

Li Huowang frowned. This guy had a strange way of speaking.

“Anyway, thanks for your help. Now that I’m free, let’s go somewhere to talk.” Li Huowang headed eagerly for the door.

Qing Wanglai stopped Li Huowang. “Don’t be in such a rush. If you start wandering around right after the restrictions are lifted, it’ll raise suspicions.”

Qing Wanglai saw Sun Xiaoqin bring fruit to the table and patted Li Huowang’s shoulder. “I’ll pick you up at nine tonight. I’ve found a safe place where you can meet some new friends.”

“New friends?” Li Huowang felt curious. Were there more allies out there?

Soon, Qing Wanglai left with Qian Fu and Chen Hongyu, who took some fruit with them. Sun Xiaoqin looked happier than Li Huowang at the news of his regained freedom.

“Are you actually free now? Can you go out now?” Sun Xiaoqin was overjoyed.

“Yes.” Li Huowang nodded. He was deep in thought about what to do next.

“Stay here. I’ll go buy groceries and call your dad to skip his night shift. We’ll celebrate tonight!”

Only Yang Na and Li Huowang remained after she left.

“Huowang, do you believe Qing Wanglai? I’m still suspicious of him.”

“I don’t fully trust him, but if I want to shake these people off, I need their help. Their surveillance is tightening,” Li Huowang said, turning and looking at the building outside.

“They’re watching now?” Yang Na pulled the curtain and peeked out. “Where? Which one?”

“They’re not in the neighborhood. They’re using binoculars from a distance!” Li Huowang stared at the distant high-rise buildings.

“Really?” Yang Na squinted, then studied Li Huowang’s face. “Can you really feel their gazes?”

“Yes, it’s a distinct feeling. Their hostile gazes are getting stronger!”

Li Huowang continued, “I guess it won’t be long before they make a move. I need to act first.”

Time flew by and evening quickly arrived. Despite the celebratory dinner for his freedom, Li Huowang had little appetite. He was preoccupied with thoughts of the new friends Qing Wanglai had mentioned and how to collaborate against their common enemy.

By nightfall, Li Huowang said goodbye to Sun Xiaoqin and prepared to leave with Yang Na.

His mother didn't ask much, and his father even slipped him some money. Li Huowang judged that they might have misunderstood the situation.

As he stepped out of the neighborhood without surveillance for the first time, a four-seater white sports car pulled up before him.

"Get in," Qing Wanglai said with one hand on the steering wheel.

Chapter 723 - Car

“Is this car very expensive?” Li Huowang asked. He ran his hand along the red leather interior and glanced at Qing Wanglai in the driver’s seat.

The car sped along, where the engine’s hum rose and fell as they drove. Li Huowang didn’t know much about cars, but the sound of the engine and the sleek design made it clear that it was beyond his own family’s means.

At that moment, Yang Na gasped in surprise—she had checked the price on her phone. She whispered the price to Li Huowang, making him slowly withdraw his hand from the leather.

Judging from Qing Wanglai’s poor appearance in the cafeteria, Li Huowang never would have thought that Qing Wanglai could afford such an expensive car.

”So what if it’s expensive or cheap? It’s just a projection anyway. I’m more curious about what exactly this car is a projection of,” Qing Wanglai said, adopting his usual philosophical viewpoint.

Li Huowang changed the topic. “Where are we going? What’s the exact location?”

“Orange Isle,” Qing Wanglai replied. He tapped a few times on the screen in front of him, causing soft piano music to fill the car.

“Orange Isle? Why are we going there?” Yang Na was more familiar with the local spots than Li Huowang, who had been hospitalized for a long time.

She continued, “I heard the houses with river views were abandoned because of unpaid debts. There’s no one there at night.”

“That’s the point. No people, no gossip. Also, turn off your phones to avoid being tracked. I’m not sure what our electronic devices are projections of.”

Li Huowang pulled out his phone and sent a quick message to Sun Xiaoqin to let her know he was safe. After sending the message, he turned off his phone.

As the shutdown jingle played, he looked at Qing Wanglai’s profile, illuminated intermittently by neon lights. “Can you tell us now who we’re meeting tonight? If they’re on our side, do they also believe in your projection hypothesis of the world?”

Qing Wanglai shook his head. “No, it’s not the same. Let me start from the beginning. Our world is a projection of some existence. It’s not just me who knows this. Others know this, including you.”

Li Huowang became more attentive. This was good news. The more allies he had, the better his chances against their enemies.

“I’ve searched for such people, but they’re rare, and most have mental issues. Due to superstition or lack of education, they don’t understand the true nature of the world. They’re often stubborn and create their own worldviews to explain unexplainable events.”

“I’ve found them, tried to unify them, and conducted various tests and experiments.”

“Experiments?”

“Yes. Once I gather enough solid evidence, I plan to publish it and prove the universal projection hypothesis.”

“If you already have evidence, you must publish it! This could make you famous. Could I take a look?” Yang Na said excitedly.

Qing Wanglai glanced at Yang Na through the rearview mirror. “It’s not that simple. Do you know about the observer effect? I observed this phenomenon in my 31st experiment and 52nd control experiment.

“It’s like Pandora’s box if we don’t fully understand it. If this gets out, what will be the result of the observer effect from seven billion people? No one knows.

“If something goes wrong, we might not even exist as projections anymore.”

Li Huowang interrupted their conversation, “Ahem, Qing Wanglai, you’re off-topic. I asked who we’re meeting tonight.”

Qing Wanglai thought momentarily and replied, “They’re friends on our side. If you can sense them, then you’re with us. Since they pose a threat to you and Qian Fu, I thought we could work together to solve this problem.”

“How many friends are we talking about?”

“I’ve found thirteen people for now. Five refused or couldn’t communicate, so there are eight, including you.”

“What do you know about the people who tried to kidnap me?”

“Not much more than you. I asked around, and some of them also felt something was wrong, but it hasn’t affected them much yet. Is there anything else I need to clarify?”

“No.” Li Huowang began to calculate in his head. In addition to himself, Qian Fu, Chen Hongyu, and Qing Wanglai, four others would be coming tonight.

He didn’t know how much help these strangers could provide. It was hard to say how things would unfold without knowing the motives of those who wanted to kidnap him. He could only take things one step at a time.

The car fell silent as each of them got lost in their own thoughts.

The lights gradually dimmed as Qing Wanglai’s car entered Orange Isle. The area was desolate, with half-completed infrastructure.

The intersections had no working traffic lights, and the only car on the road was Qing Wanglai’s.

The rows of unfinished townhouses in the distance looked like tombstones.

This place seemed abandoned and overgrown with weeds compared to the bustling landscape they had left. Yang Na looked worried and hugged herself as goosebumps rose on her arms.

Li Huowang pulled her close and said to Qing Wanglai, “Turn up the air conditioner. It’s a bit cold.”

“Alright.”

Li Huowang suddenly sensed something and looked sharply at the dark intersection to the left. “Enemy attack!”

A truck with no lights and covered license plates barreled toward them from that direction.

Li Huowang instinctively shielded Yang Na with his body. The screeching sound of brakes filled the air as the car started to roll violently.

Amid the chaos, Li Huowang felt pain everywhere, but he couldn’t afford to lose focus. The intense danger heightened his awareness.

As his surroundings stabilized slightly, Li Huowang tried to open the door, but he found it was stuck. He was pinned by the seat, so he gritted his teeth and slammed his head against the window.

Bang!

Bang! Bang! Bang!

Several blows later, blood trickled down the cracked glass.

Through the bloodstained window, Li Huowang saw two men brandishing long weapons get out of the truck.

Chapter 724 - Sister Wu

Li Huowang was trapped inside the overturned sports car, struggling to move.

He watched in panic as the figures approached. He knew he had to escape immediately, or else he'd be at their mercy.

He pounded on the glass several times, striking it multiple times until his bloodied head finally broke through. His enraged eyes locked onto the two men armed with various tools.

The sight of Li Huowang's grotesque appearance frightened them, prompting them to quickly retreat.

"Oh my god, it's a sports car! Run! We'll never be able to pay for this!"

"I told you not to take this road! Look at the mess we're in just to save a bit on toll fees!"

"Stop talking and get in the truck! There's no surveillance here. They won't find us!"

As they scrambled away, Li Huowang managed to crawl out of the car. He gritted his teeth and charged at the truck that had just hit him.

He wouldn't let them get away scot-free after what they did.

By the time the truck started, he had already brandished a knife and dashed to the front.

He climbed up the ladder, grabbed onto the mirror, and then slashed at the window, leaving a mark. "Get out!"

When they saw his bloody face rise up from the window, the two men screamed and floored the accelerator.

The sudden acceleration caused Li Huowang to lose his grip on the mirror and tumble towards the wheels.

He quickly rolled away to narrowly avoid being crushed. He used all his strength and stabbed at the tire, but the blade snapped under the pressure. His hand was also injured, but he had carved a long gash in the tire.

Li Huowang panted heavily and got up.

Previously, it was just kidnapping and surveillance, with Wang Wei using ropes at most. But now, they're even using trucks to ram us.

Li Huowang's expression grew grimmer as he watched the truck's tail lights fade into the distance.

If not for his sharp senses, they would have been dead. Their actions were getting more outrageous. They had to fight back soon.

"It's okay, I recorded everything. They committed a hit-and-run, and they're fully responsible for the crash," Qing Wanglai said and stopped the video he was recording on his phone.

"How did you get out?" Li Huowang asked.

Qing Wanglai held up a safety hammer.

"Turning off our phones didn't work. They still have other methods to track us, which is how they ambushed us."

"Let's not dwell on that now. Your head injury is more urgent," Qing Wanglai said. He removed his shirt and used it to apply pressure to Li Huowang's wound. The white fabric quickly turned red with blood.

"It's just a scratch. Let's get going and regroup. I'm worried about the others."

"Are you kidding? Stay put. I'll get help." Qing Wanglai swiftly dialed a number.

"Are you okay, Nana?" Li Huowang asked Yang Na. She was teary-eyed, watching him with deep concern.

Qing Wanglai's friend arrived faster than expected. A shabby RV pulled up.

A cheerful woman with a blue headscarf, dreadlocks, and eyebrow piercings leaned out the window. "Junior! What happened? A car accident?"

“I told you before. This car is fast but not as sturdy as my third-hand RV,” she said.

“Sister Wu, stop joking around. Can’t you see there are injured people?”

Qing Wanglai and Yang Na helped the bleeding Li Huowang into the RV. The inside was messy but cozy.

Sister Wu quickly pulled out a first aid kit, and she expertly cleaned and stitched Li Huowang’s wounds. She stabilized his broken hand with a splint and even gave him a couple of injections.

“Young people heal fast. Looks like you won’t need a blood transfusion. Think of it as a donation in advance,” she patted his shoulder, her hand adorned with colorful nails.

“Thanks, Sister Wu,” Li Huowang said. He stood up to leave the RV.

“Where are you going?” Qing Wanglai asked.

“Now that I’m patched up, we should regroup with the others,” Li Huowang replied.

“She’s one of the eight people we’re meeting. We’ll take her RV.” Qing Wanglai pointed at Sister Wu, who was drinking water.

“So you’re Li Huowang? I’m Wu Qi. Nice to meet you,” she said. She shook his hand and then headed for the driver’s seat.

“She’s one of them?” Li Huowang looked at her broad shoulders in surprise. This woman, who seemed to be in her twenties, didn’t look crazy at all.

“Thank you, Sister Wu, for helping Huowang stop his bleeding quickly. You’re amazing,” Yang Na said, expressing her gratitude.

“It was nothing. I’ve dealt with far worse in the emergency room and brought people back from the brink of death countless times,” Wu Qi replied.

Yang Na glanced at Li Huowang, then continued, “You used to work in a hospital?”

Wu Qi became excited. “Yeah. They said that heaven would strike those who persuade others to do medicine with lightning. It was absolutely right.”

“I learned that the hard way. We’re always busy, have low pay, and there’s no time off. Why did I even choose this career? Sometimes several people die in front of me in a single day.”

Li Huowang looked around the RV. He noticed travel photos held by magnets on the fridge, including one of Wu Qi at Leshan Giant Buddha. There was also a long string of prayer beads hanging on the wall.

The conversation continued while Li Huowang studied this arrangement.

“The negativity was overwhelming. One day, I realized I was so stressed that I almost missed my period. I asked myself, what’s the point of life? We only live for a few decades. Are we really going to work ourselves to death just for some money?

“I finally understood. I decided to live for myself and be happy. Houses, cars, money. They are all meaningless.

“From then on, I knew what it meant to be free. I’m much happier now, without those constraints.

“You should try it too. That’s what it means to really live.”

Chapter 725 - Unfinished Building

Wu Qi's RV headed deeper into Orange Isle. Li Huowang bent over and looked out the window at the dark, unfinished buildings surrounding them.

Puddles and randomly placed construction materials on the road slowed the RV, and its headlights cast a white glow on the road ahead.

Li Huowang thought he saw a figure flash past one of the unfinished buildings, but he didn't sense anyone watching him.

After about five minutes, the rolling tires gradually came to a stop.

"Look at the place you found. It's a nightmare to drive through. My car's paint is all scratched up," Wu Qi complained as she opened the driver's door.

"Sister Wu, how many times has this RV changed hands? Does it even have any paint left to scratch?" Qing Wanglai joked, sidestepping Wu Qi's kick when he got out.

Li Huowang also got out of the RV with the support of Yang Na.

He looked up at the unfinished building in front of them and asked Qing Wanglai, "Which floor?"

Before he could respond, a flashlight flashed towards them from the sixth floor. Li Huowang walked towards the unfinished building and started walking up the stairs, which were missing their railings.

When he reached the sixth floor, he saw complete darkness with no sign of any light.

What's going on? There was just light here. Did I get the wrong floor?

He moved towards the window to count the floors. Suddenly, a pale man's face appeared before him, and he shouted, "Wake up! It's all fake!"

"..."

Li Huowang saw a young man with dyed yellow hair. He used a flashlight to illuminate his own face in a mock ghost impression. Li Huowang had never seen any ghost wearing a tongue stud before

"Is it just you? Shouldn't Qian Fu and Chen Hongyu be here too?" he asked.

"I told you this wouldn't scare him. Eh, Li Huowang, what happened to your head?" Chen Hongyu's voice came from the darkness.

Chen Hongyu and Qian Fu emerged. Under the flashlight, they were sharing a bag of spicy strips, and their mouths were smeared with red oil.

The young man laughed nervously and set the flashlight on the ground as a makeshift light source.

As Qing Wanglai and Wu Qi arrived, the abandoned building began to feel more lively.

"What happened to your head?" Qian Fu asked Li Huowang.

"It's a long story. Something happened on the way here. I'll explain later," Li Huowang said while he looked at the young man who had tried to scare him.

The man wore heavy black eye makeup and strange leather clothing. His exceptionally pale face suggested a lack of sunlight.

Perhaps because of Sun Xiaoqin's teachings, Li Huowang felt an inexplicable aversion to his appearance.

Qing Wanglai cleared his throat and introduced the young man. "This is Zhao Lei. Zhao Lei, this is Li Huowang, the one I told you about."

“You can call me Steven,” Zhao Lei said, extending his hand with a black ring on it.

Li Huowang shook his hand. “Hello, Zhao Lei. I’m Li Huowang.”

Zhao Lei rocked back and forth. “Hehe, I said my English name, but you still followed the standard process.”

What’s with him? He’s so odd.

Li Huowang frowned. He had almost thought there wouldn’t be any more eccentrics in this group.

He had assumed that others would step out of the darkness. To his surprise, he realized that no one else was coming.

“Weren’t there supposed to be eight people? Why are there only six?” Li Huowang asked Qing Wanglai.

“Maybe something came up and they couldn’t make it,” Qing Wanglai replied.

“Do you have their numbers? Call them and check.” Li Huowang felt somewhat uneasy. They had an accident, and it was too coincidental for two people not to show up.

If their luck hadn’t been good earlier, wouldn’t four people be missing from this meeting now?

Qing Wanglai said seriously, “They don’t use phones. They’re afraid of being monitored.”

He clapped to get everyone’s attention. “Have any of you contacted Brother Bone or Aunt Yan recently? Or met them?”

Qing Wanglai knew something was wrong when he saw their confused reactions. “I brought you all here to announce something. We might have a problem with the projection side. Brother Bone and Aunt Yan are late and possibly in trouble. Do you guys see Li Huowang’s injury? Our previous encounter is proof of this.”

“We can’t handle this alone. We need to work together to stay safe and deal with any threats, no matter what their projections are.”

Everyone stood silently and absorbed his words instead of questioning them. It was unclear if they already suspected something or simply didn't care.

Li Huowang coughed and broke the silence. "What's your plan in this situation?"

Qing Wanglai replied, "From the truck incident, it seems that you are very sensitive to their presence?"

"No, it's not sensitivity. I can feel them watching me. When they watch me, I can feel it!" Li Huowang said firmly.

"Can you sense them now?"

Li Huowang closed his eyes and breathed deeply. After five minutes, he shook his head. "No, this place is safe. They can't find us here."

Before Qing Wanglai could respond, Qian Fu stood up. "Listen to me! Everyone, listen to me!"

He continued excitedly, "The two are not just missing, but they're dead! If not, they're imprisoned like I was! It's all a conspiracy by the Leotians! We must thwart their plans!"

He grabbed Li Huowang's arm. "I have a plan! The Leotians are interested in his genes. We can use him as bait to capture their UFO!"

The others turned to Qian Fu as they listened to his outlandish claims.

Chapter 726 - Act

“What?! You actually acknowledged Qian Fu’s plan? Don’t you know that he’s crazy?” Li Huowang stared wide-eyed at Qing Wanglai.

“I don’t mean for you to become bait, but rather the trap that catches the rat.”

“Isn’t that the same thing?!”

“Of course it’s not the same thing. We won’t cast you aside as bait. Since you can sense them, you will be our eyes. We would never cast away our eyes, would we?”

Li Huowang knew Qing Wanglai was right. Their enemy was no longer just after him—they were targeting everyone around him.

Li Huowang was certain that they wouldn’t betray him with the external threats they were facing.

But Li Huowang also knew he couldn’t become their pawn. Everyone here had previously met and worked together before, except for Li Huowang himself.

After consoling Li Huowang, Qing Wanglai continued his explanation. “Since we are all projections, we first need to confirm what they’ve become after they projected themselves here. As projections, they must also conform to the rules of this world. As long as we can identify them, we can use the rules of this world to help us. More importantly, it might allow us to communicate and negotiate with them to solve this crisis. If you think about it, we could solve many things through communication.”

“Fine!” Li Huowang nodded. I don’t care if he’s speaking gibberish right now. I want to bring the fight to them since they used a truck to ram me.

It would be best if he could get definitive proof to show that someone had the intention to harm them, or other people would think Li Huowang and the others were crazy.

Only then would anyone believe him if he reported it to the police.

“Hehe... It’s useless... Everything is fake. Everything is fake...” Zhao Lei’s voice resounded in the room. “There’s no projection. There’s no danger. You guys are terrible at making up stories.”

Li Huowang frowned at the weird man, Zhao Lei. What’s his deal? Why does he keep saying that everything is fake?”

As if sensing Li Huowang’s confusion, Wu Qi said, “Ignore him. He’s very nihilistic. You can just ignore him.”

Li Huowang ignored Zhao Lei and asked Qing Wanglai, “Then how about we move at night? They are becoming more and more daring. If we continue to drag things on, they might attack us when we least expect it.”

Li Huowang was anxious. They had already tried ramming him with a lorry, and they might do something more drastic in the future.

“I don’t have any objections. What about the others?” Qing Wanglai said.

After asking everyone, Qing Wanglai looked at his watch. “It will be dawn in a few more hours. We have to act now if we want to do anything.”

After coming to a consensus, they went down the stairs.

Everyone entered Wu Qi’s RV except for Zhao Lei, who rode his own motorcycle.

“Wu Qi, please stop in front of the university gates. I need to go to my hostel to grab something.”

“You’re rich, aren’t you? I’m driving now, so shouldn’t you show some appreciation towards me? Maybe by paying for the fuel if I pass by a gas station?”

“I never thought someone was still driving their RV around using stolen gas.”

“Fine. I will pay for your refueling later.”

“Hehe! Thank you very much!” Wu Qi stepped on the pedal and drove as fast as she could.

Wu Qi’s RV was cumbersome, but she somehow managed to drive faster than Qing Wanglai’s sports car, reaching the university gates in record time.

“Hehe... Everything is fake... The hostel’s gates should’ve been closed at this hour... What else can you take? All of you are lying to me.” Zhao Lei stopped beside the RV and looked at Qing Wanglai entering the university.

Li Huowang was nervous. He clenched his fists and pondered what might happen next.

I might run into them later. I need a weapon!

Li Huowang looked around and found a drawer underneath the induction cooker. He opened it and grabbed a cleaver. He felt much calmer afterward.

I don’t believe that the police would dismiss me if I cut off their heads!

Twenty minutes later, Qing Wanglai returned to the RV. They drove for a short moment before they stopped.

“Wait, they are here!” Li Huowang tensed up and glared at the silent city. “I can feel them looking at me!”

“No need to go back to my neighborhood! We will settle this outside!” Li Huowang decided not to invite trouble back to his house.

It wasn’t a good idea to involve his parents in this.

“How many?” Qing Wanglai asked.

“Three... No, four!”

Soon, Li Huowang walked down the RV with his head still covered in bandages. Yang Na carefully assisted him down.

Yang Na lowered her head, nervous. Only she knew that the person next to her was actually Wu Qi.

The real Li Huowang was driving the RV to circle around and catch the people.

“Is he your boyfriend?” Wu Qi whispered.

“Mmm...”

“You’re suffering a lot right now just to be with him. With your background, you are technically marrying someone of a lower status.”

As Wu Qi had just said this, they heard someone shouting to the alley on their left. Wu Qi told Yang Na to wait as she ran towards the alley.

Wu Qi rounded the corner and saw Li Huowang raising a cleaver up high as he chased after three people. “Stop! Don’t move!”

Li Huowang was panicking! He had finally found them and had no intention of letting them escape.

A motorcycle revved up, and Zhao Lei blocked the three people with his motorbike.

The three people scattered, two to the right and one to the left.

Zhao Lei chased after the single person on the left while Li Huowang ducked into the alley on the right to chase after the two people.

Li Huowang refused to give up even though his left arm was in a splint. However, his injuries slowed him down as the two people ran further and further away.

Li Huowang thought they had failed, but then the two people in front of him froze.

Li Huowang panted and approached them carefully with his cleaver when he saw Qing Wanglai pointing a gun at the two people.

Li Huowang saw the faces of the two people and realized who they were.

One of them used to work in Kangning Hospital! They had been monitoring Li Huowang since the beginning!

Chapter 727 - Captive

Li Huowang held his cleaver tightly and glared at the tall man with glasses.

Even though Li Huowang had only seen him once, he still recognized the man. The man was in the same group as Li Huowang at Kangning Hospital. He recalled the man's name—Yuan Heping.

“It's you?! You were one of them?” Li Huowang's breathing quickened as he gripped his cleaver.

Yuan Heping swallowed his saliva nervously when he saw Li Huowang's cleaver and Qing Wanglai's gun. “Wait, don't be rash. Murder is a crime, and we didn't do anything!”

Qing Wanglai walked towards Li Huowang and pushed the cleaver down. “We've surrounded them. There's no need to use your cleaver for now.”

Qian Fu and Chen Hongyu then appeared with a rope. They tied the two people's hands together.

Li Huowang finally put down his knife when the two were tied up. He only focused on the gun after they had been subdued.

“Where did you get a gun? Those are harder to come by than knives.”

Li Huowang started to doubt Qing Wanglai and his background.

Qing Wanglai laughed and pointed the gun at Wu Qi's head before pulling the trigger. Everyone froze up due to his unexpected actions.

A small fire lit up from the muzzle of the gun.

Wu Qi took out a cigarette and lit it up.

“It's fake?”

“Of course this is a fake gun. This is a world with laws and regulations, so how could I get a real gun? I bought it online during a sale.” Qing Wanglai released the trigger and placed the gun-shaped lighter into his pocket.

“AAAAH!” Someone screamed from the other alley. The familiar voice made Li Huowang’s heart jump.

“Oh no! It’s Yang Na!”

Li Huowang ran down the alley and quickly counted the gazes he had sensed just now. There were four, but we only found three! One of them must’ve been hiding to ambush us!

Li Huowang thought the situation was dire, but he was stunned when he reached Yang Na.

Yang Na was indeed screaming, but she was using a taser to shock an old man as she did.

The old man’s mouth was already foaming, but Yang Na continued to press her taser into the old man.

“Nana, wait, that’s enough. Let go of the trigger. If you keep going, he’ll die from electrocution.”

Yang Na only let go after Li Huowang reassured her repeatedly. She released the taser and hugged him as she cried. “Huowang, I’m scared.”

Li Huowang calmed her down and looked at the taser on the ground. “Nana, where did you get it?”

Li Huowang was both shocked and surprised.

Yang Na sobbed and said, “I... I bought it online with my friends. We were worried about our safety when we walked at night, so I... I... also bought some other personal safety devices.”

Li Huowang opened her bag and saw she had indeed prepared many other tools. There were pepper sprays, spare tasers, a recording device in the shape of a pen, and a phone with a big red button on the back.

Li Huowang took out the phone, and Yang Na explained as she sobbed, “My grandmother bought this phone before. If you press the red button, it will automatically call the police. You can press the button even from outside the bag.”

“Have you been carrying all this stuff ever since I met Qing Wanglai?” Li Huowang was touched. He knew Yang Na might not believe him, but she was still willing to risk her life to accompany him.

Everyone else finally caught up to Li Huowang. They quickly exchanged words, but soon noticed that Yang Na's shout had drawn in some of the residents.

“Quick! We need to move now! We won't be able to explain ourselves if they capture a video of us and upload it online!” Zhao Lei grabbed the unconscious old man and placed him on the back of his motorcycle.

Li Huowang nodded as he sensed more and more people staring at them. He quickly pulled the startled Yang Na into the RV.

The RV snaked around the roads as they tried to shake off any pursuers. It wasn't until they reached the main road that they sighed in relief.

Qing Wanglai was driving the RV while Wu Qi was looking after the old man who had been electrocuted by Yang Na. She was worried that the old man would die.

“Don't worry, he's still doing fine. The electrocution won't kill him.” Wu Qi looked at Wang Gang lying on the bed as she reported.

Li Huowang finally had the time to look at the three people they had captured. One of them was Yuan Heping, while the old man Yang Na had electrocuted was also familiar. Li Huowang had also met this man at Kangning Hospital—his name was Wang Gang.

It was clear that they had been the ones who placed the needles in his food.

Li Huowang pointed the cleaver at them. “Who wants to talk first?”

“There’s no need for that. Let’s find another place to interrogate them. My RV is already a third-hand car. I don’t want you to destroy it.”

The RV wasn’t large to begin with, and it felt cramped after so many people entered it. Qian Fu had to sit on the induction stove while Chen Hongyu was forced to sit in the toilet.

“Let’s go to my place. There’s no one there.” Zhao Lei’s voice came from outside.

“Is it remote and safe?” Li Huowang asked.

No matter who the three people were, Li Huowang was technically kidnapping them. It would be hard to explain to other people if they saw what they were doing.

“Don’t worry, he lives somewhere very remote.” Chen Hongyu stretched out from the toilet as she opened the fridge.

The RV bounced along the road until they stopped near the city’s outskirts. It was already starting to get bright outside when they entered an old home. Li Huowang finally understood what they meant by Zhao Lei staying somewhere remote. Zhao Lei was actually staying in an underground basement on the outskirts of the city.

Li Huowang pushed Yuan Heping underground before he caught the scent of mold. The basement was huge but covered in many objects. There were bottles and cans of various sizes, as well as organs preserved in formalin. Li Huowang saw a kneecap and a single eye in the jars. He wasn’t sure if they were real.

A strange moldy smell came from the takeout boxes and trash near his feet.

There was a shelf on the wall lined up with various toy models. Some of them were incomplete, with only their heads.

Zhao Lei’s fashion was weird, and his place was weird too.

“Is this place soundproof?” Li Huowang walked to the table and tapped the bottles on the table. There were wooden boat models inside the bottles. It seems that Zhao Lei sells these for money. It's so real. He even carved out the sailors inside the boat.

“Yes, it's soundproof.”

“Good.” Li Huowang approached Yuan Heping and pinned him to the wall before bringing the cleaver down on Yuan Heping's right hand.

“AH! MMGH!” Yuan Heping tried to scream, but Li Huowang covered his mouth.

“Stop! Your arm is still intact! You can scream later!”

Yuan Heping almost fainted from shock when he saw Li Huowang's cleaver planted on the ground right beside his hands.

Just as he managed to catch his breath, he saw Li Huowang swinging the cleaver sideways onto four of his fingers.

Chapter 728 - Model

Yuan Heping tried to pull his hand back, but Li Huowang stomped on his wrist. He couldn't move his hands at all!

“Wait! Stop, stop!”

The sharp knife cut open his skin. Li Huowang looked at Yuan Heping. “Talk. Who are you people? What's your objective?”

“I... I don't know!” Yuan Heping innocently said. “We escaped together from the hospital and wanted to find something nice to eat when there was no one around at night.”

“Bullshit! Do you really think I would believe that? Why did you run from us then?”

“You... You chased after us with a cleaver like a madman. Who wouldn't run away?”

Qian Fu suddenly glared at Yuan Heping. “Stop lying! We already saw through your tricks! You are Leotians! You came to conquer Earth! We already know who you are!”

Yuan Heping was stunned. He looked at Qian Fu and then at Li Huowang before quickly nodding.

“Yes! That's right! We are the Leotians! We came here to conquer Earth!”

Li Huowang's face twitched. He pushed the cleaver down until Yuan Heping's fingertips were bleeding. “Are you going to talk or not?”

“What do you want me to say?!” Yuan Heping was already on the brink of tears.

“Why did you follow me? Why did you put needles in my food? Don't tell me you weren't the one who did it!”

“Fine! You are right! I placed the needles and followed you!”

“Why? What's your goal? Why are you following and monitoring me?!”

“Because... Because...” Yuan Heping tried to come up with a reason.

As Yuan Heping stayed silent and unsure of how to respond, Qing Wanglai helped him to his feet.

“Don’t arbitrarily decide that he’s the culprit. It’s possible that he was being used.”

Yuan Heping hid behind Qing Wanglai and trembled.

“Come, drink some water. Don’t be nervous.”

Li Huowang wanted to rebuke Qing Wanglai before he realized they were playing good cop, bad cop. His role was over.

Qing Wanglai might be able to coax out the truth.

To increase their chances of success, Li Huowang copied a drama he had seen before, raising his cleaver and licking the blood on it.

Li Huowang’s act worked. Yuan Heping shivered and tried to distance himself from Qing Wanglai.

“I’m just putting up an act to scare him,” Li Huowang whispered to Yang Na.

Yang Na worriedly looked at Qing Wanglai as he was talking to Yuan Heping. “Maybe he really doesn’t know anything?”

“Impossible. It might’ve been a coincidence the first time, but it cannot be a coincidence the second time. The world is vast, and yet he still managed to find me? He’s just stubborn! He must have some kind of connection with the organization. Let’s see what kind of method Qing Wanglai has. I will have to use force if Qing Wanglai can’t get any information from Yuan Heping.”

Li Huowang then started looking for tools around Zhao Lei’s messy house.

Maybe it was because Zhao Lei’s job involved creating models, but there were several knives in the place. Li Huowang thought that despite the limited variety, these knives would suffice.

As Li Huowang was grinding some of the knives using the edge of the sink, Qing Wanglai finished his interrogation.

Qing Wanglai took out a large wad of cash and gave it to Yuan Heping, significantly reducing the latter's fear.

"He's just a pawn that follows orders blindly. He doesn't even know the people that were projected here."

Li Huowang was tired of the excuses. "Then did he give us a name? Who's the one giving out orders?"

Qing Wanglai didn't answer but instead looked at Wang Gang lying motionlessly on the ground.

Wang Gang was the main culprit here.

Li Huowang grabbed the knives and approached Wang Gang before he saw the latter smiling at him bitterly.

In contrast with Yuan Heping, Wang Gang had no intention of lying.

"I never thought I would lose to a little lady. I thought she would be easy to deal with, but I never imagined she would be super tough."

Li Huowang became excited when he heard this. Is he finally telling the truth?

The conversation visibly intrigued the others, who promptly circled them.

"I know what you want to ask, but can you let me go afterward?"

"Fine. Talk."

Wang Gang shook his head. "Not you. I'm talking to him." Wang Gang pointed at Qing Wanglai.

Qing Wanglai nodded. "I accept your request. If you tell us the truth, I will send you out of this country."

Wang Gang nodded and finally said, "You are right. We are here to monitor Li Huowang. This is our job."

"Who sent you?" Li Huowang's heart was thumping.

“My higher-ups. I never saw their faces before, and they always gave us the orders through paper memos.”

“What’s their goal? Why are they targeting me?”

“I don’t know. They just said something along the lines of you being hard to deal with.”

Li Huowang clenched his teeth when he heard that. “I knew it!”

Bam! Just then, the sound of cloth smacking onto the table could be heard. Li Huowang turned around and saw Zhao Lei frantically looking for something.

“What’s going on with you?” Wu Qi was confused.

“My things! They are gone! It was here just now! Everything is visibly fake, so why did you take it?!”

Li Huowang ignored him and continued to interrogate Wang Gang.

“What else do you know?”

Wang Gang looked at Zhao Lei before he stammered, “I a-also know... One of you has been bought off by them.”

“What? Who is it?!”

Li Huowang was looking at Wang Gang when he saw the reflection in Wang Gang’s eyes.

Li Huowang swiftly turned around. Zhao Lei was swinging one of the large glass bottles towards his head!

“Why are you stealing my things?! They’re mine!”

Before the glass bottle hit Li Huowang’s head, the wooden boat model in the bottle swayed vigorously with the water. One of the wooden figurines in the glass bottle had a sword that pierced the glass bottle.

Crack. The glass bottle shattered as the water splashed onto Li Huowang’s face.

Li Huowang let go of his cleaver and grabbed the wooden boat instead. “You dare attack me?!”

Li Huowang gripped the wooden boat model and smashed it into Zhao Lei's face. The entire wooden boat model cracked into pieces.

The wooden figurines with swords were also stabbed into Zhao Lei's eyes.

Chapter 729 - Zhao Lei

“AAAAAAH!” Zhao Lei shouted and held his injured eyes as he squatted down.

In the chaotic basement, Li Huowang glared at Zhao Lei mercilessly, holding a cleaver as he blocked the entrance.

Just as Li Huowang had asked Wang Gang who was the traitor, Zhao Lei attacked him from behind.

He didn't need the answer from Wang Gang anymore—he knew Zhao Lei was the traitor.

Zhao Lei also knew that they were supposed to meet up at Orange Isle last time.

That was how Li Huowang was almost hit by the truck when they were halfway to Orange Isle. Zhao Lei had informed them!

The other two people that promised to come didn't show up either. Maybe they had met some dangers along their way. Li Huowang hated traitors more than enemies.

“Zhao Lei, I never thought it would be you. What did they give you? Do you really think you can live happily after becoming their dog? Didn't they take your special powers too?” Chen Hongyu approached him with a pained expression on her face. She blocked Zhao Lei's escape path using her massive frame.

The others surrounded Zhao Lei too. Zhao Lei looked at them with dilated eyes. “You can't blame me! Why are you guys only blaming me?! All of you let me down first! I had to protect myself!”

“Let you down?” Li Huowang laughed. “I've just met you today. Tell me, how did I let you down?”

“Fake! Everything's fake!” Zhao Lei saw the blood in his palms and continued to press on his injured eyes.

I can see through you and know whether you are actually crazy or not!" Li Huowang shouted and pointed his cleaver at Zhao Lei.

"You don't understand! We've met before! You took my stuff first! Don't blame me for it!"

"Let's talk it out! No need to fight against each other. We've known each other for so long." Wu Qi tried to stop them from quarreling.

"Stop trying to fool me!" Zhao Lei shouted. "If it wasn't because of the common threat coming from outside, you all would've never worked together! I still remember what each and every one of you did to me last time! Do you really think that we are a loving family? What's wrong? Cat got your tongue? If you don't want to admit it, I will say it out loud!"

"Qian Fu, do you have the guts to say who caused you to become crazy?"

"Wu Qi, why do you not return home but instead choose to stay outside and wander around?"

"And you, Qing Wanglai, stop trying to be a good person! You always disparage others while praising your own virtue and intelligence! You think everyone else is stupid enough not to see through you?"

Zhao Lei's outburst made everyone shut up. Li Huowang looked at their expressions and had a vague realization.

Zhao Lei's words might've been real. Even though everyone looked amicable on the outside, they might've had a grudge against each other in the past.

"All of you ignored me every time I was in danger, and now you blame me for selling you out? Hmph! If any of you had been approached and enticed with rewards too, you would've done the same!"

Li Huowang had heard enough. He stepped up. "I don't know what you are talking about, but you should understand that their goal is us. Do you really think they'll let you live after surrendering to them?"

Zhao Lei's hands were trembling when he lowered them. He glared at Li Huowang with his blinded eyes. "I can only take a gamble. I can't trust them, but I can't trust you either. At the very least, they have a better chance at succeeding."

Li Huowang lowered his cleaver and picked up a roll of yellow tape from the table. He bound Zhao Lei's arms and feet tightly.

"I don't have time to listen to your ramblings. Let's just talk about who we are facing. Since they bought you off, that means that you also know who they are. Tell me their names and identities."

Zhao Lei chuckled and said, "Fake. Everything's fake. Do you really not know who they are?"

"Shut up and listen!" Li Huowang grabbed Zhao Lei's collar and pulled him up. "You better tell us what we want to know! I don't want to resort to force, but I will if I have to pry the information out of you!"

Zhao Lei chuckled. "You want to know who they are? There's no need to interrogate me. You will know soon enough."

As everyone was still trying to figure out what he meant, they heard someone knock on the door.

Zhao Lei chuckled again. "Do you really think I'm useless? I faked it! Why do you think I brought everyone to this remote basement?"

Bam! The door was kicked open as three metal orbs were thrown into the basement. The orbs were releasing white fumes.

As the fumes filled up the room, everyone in the room began coughing and struggling to see.

"Nana!" Li Huowang quickly moved towards Yang Na. He felt her soft body and pulled her down as they moved towards the corner of the basement.

Li Huowang coughed and said, “Quick, give me your taser! Squat down near the corner of the wall and don’t raise your head!”

“Mmm!”

Li Huowang remained composed, holding the cleaver and taser. He freed one hand to pinch his nose.

When the smoke thinned out a little, Li Huowang gritted his teeth and charged towards the people descending into the basement.

Zap! Li Huowang tased one of the people entering the basement.

He saw the person falling down and twitching on the ground before he charged at the other people. He wasn’t sure how many enemies there were. He focused on the one in front of him, bringing down one after another.

The fumes were dissipating. Li Huowang’s taser ran out of battery as he placed it on the neck of the next intruder. By then, he had already knocked many of them unconscious.

Crack! The intruder aimed the crossbow at Li Huowang’s thigh.

Li Huowang had no intention of dodging. He wanted to trade his injuries for the life of the intruder as he swung his cleaver towards the man’s neck.

“Huowang! Be careful!” Yang Na shouted.

He turned around and saw another man aiming a crossbow at the back of his head just two meters away!

The man had almost pressed the trigger, but then, there was the sound of a gunshot.

The man cried as his wrists were hit by the bullet. The crossbow in his hands also broke apart.

Li Huowang tried to find the source of the gunshot. He saw Qing Wanglai pinching his nose as he shot at the intruders with his gun. Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam!

Chapter 730 - Rest

Qing Wanglai unleashed a continuous barrage of gunshots, the sound echoing without pause.

The bullets hit some of the men and scared the rest, making them retreat.

After several rounds, Qing Wanglai ejected the magazine and reloaded the gun with a new one. Chen Hongyu and Qian Fu pushed one of the shelves towards the men to buy him time.

Behind Chen Hongyu was Li Huowang. He punched forward like a leopard, raising his cleaver and stabbing an intruder's neck. Yang Na was also fighting. She shouted incessantly as she sprayed pepper spray towards the intruders.

The chaotic battle didn't last long. By the time Qing Wanglai shot his gun again, the situation was under their control.

The other intruders retreated since the struggle put up by Li Huowang and the others was too strong.

They never thought Li Huowang and the others would fight back so hard. They came in ill-prepared.

By the time the white smoke completely dissipated, the chaotic room was back to its usual calmness.

Li Huowang panted as he touched the blood on his neck. He checked the corpses and saw four of them belonged to the intruder, while the fifth one was Wang Gang.

The two other people they had caught escaped during the chaos.

Li Huowang ignored them. He was still figuring out what had happened to them. He knew they would fight one day, but he never thought it would be so soon.

He approached Yang Na and checked if she was injured.

Thankfully, she was unharmed, although she was crying. He quickly calmed her down before he approached Qing Wanglai, who was inspecting the corpses.

“You actually had a real gun?” Li Huowang was surprised. He never expected Qing Wanglai to hide his true strength so deeply. Even Li Huowang was fooled by Qing Wanglai.

“Do I?” Qing Wanglai asked.

“Do you take me for a blind man?”

Li Huowang thought Qing Wanglai was joking when Qing Wanglai asked Wu Qi, “Wu Qi, do I have a real gun?”

“No, of course not. How could you have a real gun? It’s illegal.”

Li Huowang realized what they meant and nodded. “Fine, you don’t have a real gun. So... Who are they?”

Qing Wanglai checked the corpses and said, “They don’t look like amateurs to me.”

“What?”

“This means that their real body is very complicated. We need to prepare for the worst.”

“No! No more!” Yang Na stood up as she cried. “We need to report this to the police! Don’t you see how many people have died?! Five! Five people died!”

She looked around and found her bag. She wanted to call the police using her phone.

She reached for her bag, but Wu Qi snatched it away.

“Wu Qi?” Yang Na looked at Wu Qi in disbelief as the latter shook her head.

“We can’t call the police.”

“Why not?”

Wu Qi shook her head. She didn’t want to explain and instead gestured towards Qing Wanglai.

“Because now is not the time. Do you remember what I’ve said? This is the observer effect.” Qing Wanglai strapped his gun behind his back.

“When everyone realizes it, the outcome will change too. We cannot determine what the others will think of us if we reveal this to the public.”

“Are you crazy?! Don’t you see the dead people on the ground?!” Yang Na took a step back in disbelief.

Qing Wanglai stared at Yang Na seriously and pondered.

“I agree about reporting to the police.” Li Huowang raised his arm in agreement.

He stepped on a corpse’s head as he said, “They didn’t believe me when I showed them the two fingers last time. I refuse to believe that they would dismiss me now. They will have to believe that someone is trying to kidnap me. I don’t think they would regard me as someone crazy after we killed five people.”

Wu Qi looked at the black security anklet on Li Huowang’s foot. “Do you really want to do that? Don’t forget you killed three of them. Even if you convince them that they came for you, they will still lock you up for good in the mental hospital. You won’t be jailed since it’s not a crime for a mentally ill person to kill someone, but that doesn’t mean you’ll be free from any repercussions.”

Yang Na lowered her head and sobbed. She stopped talking about reporting to the police.

“Hehehe... Fake! Everything is fake! Reporting to the police won’t work!” Zhao Lei wriggled on the ground with his limbs tied up.

“Everyone, listen to me,” Qing Wanglai said. “I’m not trying to scare everyone, but this is a serious matter. If you don’t believe me, I will show you the data from my experiments after we deal with the issue.”

Li Huowang knew that things wouldn’t be as simple as they seemed. “I doubt it will be that simple. How are you going to deal with five corpses if you don’t report to the police?”

The sportscar and the gun had already made Li Huowang suspicious of Qing Wanglai. If Qing Wanglai could really deal with five corpses discreetly, Li Huowang would have to reconsider their cooperation. What kind of background does he have?

“I don’t have any background, and I don’t need to deal with the corpses. They will come and clean it up themselves. I’m sure they don’t want the public to learn what they were up to. For now, we need to ask how many people they’ve sent after us and what kind of plans they have for us.”

“Everyone is dead. Who are you going to ask?”

“Who said everyone is dead?” Qing Wanglai pointed at Zhao Lei.

Qing Wanglai picked up Zhao Lei and patted the dust off Zhao Lei’s shirt. “You should know that I’m very trustworthy. We are all friends here. If you tell us what you know, I will forgive you.”

Qing Wanglai chose a different method to deal with Zhao Lei since the latter wouldn’t succumb to force or coaxing.

Li Huowang frowned. He wanted to say something but decided to remain silent.

Zhao Lei stared at the corpses on the ground and remained silent.

After a while, he made his request. “Give me back my stuff or I won’t cooperate.”

Li Huowang was angered and approached Zhao Lei. “What did I steal?! Wake up!”

Zhao Lei glared at him. “Stop trying to weasel your way out of this! Are you just faking it?!”

“Go take some medicine if you are crazy! Stop trying to act crazy here!”

Chapter 731 - Them

“Enough! Now is not the time to fight.”

Qing Wanglai stopped the two of them. He gave Li Huowang a knowing look before turning to Zhao Lei.

“Zhao Lei, what did Li Huowang take from you? We can give it back as long as we have it.”

“Two... Two magnets and my eyes!”

Li Huowang was furious. Zhao Lei was the one at fault for attacking him in the first place!

And now, Zhao Lei wanted Li Huowang to give him back an eye. It was clear that Zhao Lei didn't want to cooperate.

Zhao Lei suddenly straightened his neck and glared at Li Huowang. “You think you don't have to return them to me after you forgot about them? Think carefully! Think carefully about what is real and what is not! Don't you think everything around you is too random? Don't you think it's too fake?”

Li Huowang frowned as his frustration grew. He then gripped Zhao Lei's neck with his hands.

“You want to kill me? Fine! You are a murderer to begin with! What else wouldn't you do? All of you are the same! No need to pretend to be kind! How dare you all call me a traitor!”

Li Huowang moved his hands to Zhao Lei's shirt collar and held him up. “What the fuck do you mean? Just tell me the truth and stop talking in circles!”

“I've already said it clearly! It's just that you don't understand me. You call me sick? The one who's sick is you!”

“I'm not sick! I've been cured!”

Li Huowang took out a sharp pike and stabbed Zhao Lei's abdomen. Everyone else failed to react to Li Huowang's sudden actions.

Zhao Lei did not relent even though his abdomen hurt. He continued to shout at Li Huowang, “Fake! Everything is fake! Can’t you differentiate it?! Everything is fake! Even your illness being cured is fake!”

Li Huowang glared at Zhao Lei’s single remaining good eye, and a strange memory surfaced in his mind—something about a boat.

“Why... Why did I go onto the boat last time?” Li Huowang tried to recall but couldn’t remember anything.

Zhao Lei saw the bewilderment in Li Huowang’s eyes and immediately smiled. “You remembered? You remembered, right? Think carefully! You were the one who attacked first! Give everything back or I won’t help you!”

“I attacked first?” Li Huowang chuckled as he paced in front of Zhao Lei rapidly.

He suddenly stopped and pointed at Zhao Lei’s head. “Stop bullshitting us! I was the one who attacked first? It was you! You were...”

Li Huowang suddenly forgot what he was trying to say and paced in front of Zhao Lei again.

His breathing quickened as he tried to remember. Everything around him shimmered.

He suddenly stopped and pointed at Zhao Lei again. “You! You were the one...”

The words lingered in his throat, but he couldn’t say anything. Li Huowang was very frustrated by how close he was to remembering everything.

He snarled and stabbed the pike into his abdomen instead.

“AAAAAAAAAH!”

“Huowang!” Yang Na and the others rushed forward to stop Li Huowang.

“Wait! Don’t interfere! Let him remember what happened!”
Zhao Lei stood at the side as he looked at Li Huowang.

“Just rest for now. Don’t let your old illness relapse. I will handle this.” Qing Wanglai patted Li Huowang’s shoulder before he walked towards Zhao Lei.

Li Huowang breathed rapidly in Yang Na’s embrace. His eyes darted around, taking in his surroundings. He was searching for something—he sensed something had changed in the air, and yet there were no visible changes around him.

Yang Na took out several pills from Li Huowang’s pocket. Chen Hongyu gave her a cup of water so that Li Huowang could take his medicine.

After taking the pills, Li Huowang’s visibly calmed down a lot. Only then did the rest give them space.

Before returning it to Li Huowang, Wu Qi examined the ingredients listed on the medicine’s label.

“Wait.” Li Huowang shook his head and stood up. “Let me talk to Zhao Lei!”

“That’s enough. Rest for now. No need to overexert yourself.” Wu Qi supported him and slowly sat him down. “You’re mentally unwell, so don’t overdo it. Let Qing Wanglai do it instead.”

“I’m not mentally unwell!”

“Sure you are not,” Chen Hongyu chirped.

Just then, someone shouted from the entrance, “Hey! Now is not the time to be chatting. Someone is coming. The gunshot just now was too loud!”

Qian Fu ran down the stairs and alerted everyone.

Qing Wanglai didn’t waste any time. He grabbed Zhao Lei and walked towards the entrance.

The others followed him and locked the door. They all entered Wu Qi’s RV before leaving the place.

Wu Qi whispered something to Qing Wanglai before the latter explained, “The scuffle just now was too loud. To prevent the police from suspecting us, we will send you back first. I will message you once we have more information.”

Li Huowang nodded as he looked at Zhao Lei.

Qing Wanglai patted Li Huowang’s shoulder. “Don’t worry. Since they are trying to do something secretly, they won’t dare do anything to you in broad daylight.”

Li Huowang lost interest in melee weapons after seeing the gun. He looked at Qing Wanglai. “Give me a gun.”

“Here.” Qing Wanglai gave him one.

Li Huowang took it and threw it to the side. “I don’t want the lighter[1].”

Qing Wanglai chuckled and kept the lighter. “You’ve never used the gun before. It’s easy to injure yourself if you are untrained. I will teach you when we have time.”

Instead of dropping them off directly at the residential area, Wu Qi let them off just one street away. Li Huowang and Yang Na walked back while holding hands.

Yang Na was worried. “Huowang, are you alright?”

“Don’t worry. I’m fine.” Li Huowang increased his pace.

“Even though we are allies, we cannot trust them completely. We have to leave some room for doubt.”

“Why?”

“Zhao Lei was right. Qing Wanglai is a smart man. I fear he has his own agenda. Also, I don’t know anything about their previous conflicts. All I know is that even patients in mental hospitals can have their own agendas.”

1. This is referring to the gun-shaped lighter that Qing Wanglai showed to Li Huowang in chapter 727. Basically, he just gave him a fake gun 🗑️

Chapter 732 - Illusion

Si Qi, Xuantai Mountain, Luminous Temple, Grand Courage Hall

Li Huowang looked at the black-skinned monk cut in half as his sword cut into the monk's flesh. The black water flowing out of the monk splashed towards his face.

Sensing the oddness of the water, Li Huowang used the four tentacles on his back to pull himself backward, narrowly avoiding the black water.

"Hoh..." Li Huowang exhaled as he felt the murderous aura in the hall.

He had already lost an arm, but still held onto his three swords with his tentacles. A vast expanse of corpses lay behind him, all of them monks.

Li Huowang snarled at the golden Buddha statue to the back.

The golden Buddha had a black cloth on its shoulders. The Buddha's face was neither sad nor happy, but the most terrifying aspect was the human flesh and blood offerings in front of it.

It was one thing for the entire temple to defect to the Dharma Sect, but it was another matter for them to make a statue of god Yu'er! The warrior monks here had even learned military techniques. It was a dangerous place that Li Huowang had to eliminate immediately.

He took a deep breath and ran towards the Buddha statue. He jumped in the air when he had almost reached the altar.

Using his cultivation, he jumped continuously in the air as if there were invisible stairs.

He reached the top of the Buddha's head and swung down his purple-tassel sword.

Just then, the golden coating of the Buddha statue burst open, revealing black cracks in its body. Li Huowang saw living beings through the cracks.

The Buddha statue glared at Li Huowang, grabbed him with both hands, and bit him with its black mouth. Its black teeth sunk into Li Huowang's body, but for some reason, it couldn't crush his bones.

Li Huowang stepped on the lower jaw of the Buddha statue while using his upper body to force its mouth open. This way, he wouldn't get swallowed.

"You want to eat me? Let me give you a taste then!" Li Huowang opened his mouth and vomited Li Sui out.

The tentacles quickly shrunk into his body as Li Sui fell into the Buddha's gullet. "Li Sui, eat that bastard!"

Li Huowang forced the Buddha to keep its mouth open by wedging the purple-tassel sword inside. He leaped outside with his spine sword, only to find the Buddha's hands waiting for him.

Just then, a halberd spun in the air and chopped off all of the Buddha's fingers.

"Are you trying to kill a Buddha? Good! I've always hated that bald bastard!" Peng caught her halberd midair while riding her horse, then charged towards the Buddha's statue.

Even though the Buddha's statue was humongous, it continued to retreat against Li Huowang's and Peng Longteng's attacks.

The situation was under control for now, but Li Huowang was worried about Suisui. She had been inside the Buddha for a long time and still hadn't emerged.

I should've jumped down with her. I need to deal with this as soon as possible.

Li Huowang was about to end it when he saw half of a dog's face forcing itself out from the Buddha's belly.

Li Huowang heard a soft voice coming out from the belly button. “Dad! Help! They... ate... my... head...”

Li Huowang panicked when he heard that. He rushed forward without any care as he endured the attacks from the Buddha statue. He used his sword to cut open the Buddha’s stomach.

Li Huowang saw the mangled limbs and broken tentacles pouring out of the Buddha’s statue. He felt his heart go cold. Suddenly, a skinned dog’s skull appeared out of the hole with some of the Buddha’s intestines. “Dad, whose limbs are those?”

Li Sui was fine. The voice from before wasn’t hers.

Immediately after, the tentacles and limbs disappeared. It was just Li Huowang’s cultivation of the ‘Truth.’ The tentacles and the voice from before were not the original Li Sui.

“What?”

As Li Huowang was stunned, the Buddha’s palm slammed down. The sound of bones cracking could be heard as he was crushed into the ground.

Ten minutes later, Li Huowang grunted as he dragged the massive Buddha’s head out of the temple. His body was covered in blood.

He looked down from the top of the hall and saw the warrior monks still desperately fighting against the soldiers. Li Huowang kicked the Buddha’s head down the steps.

The warrior monks lost their will to fight when they saw their Buddha’s head rolling down. The soldiers made short work of them and ended the fight.

Li Huowang panted and sat on a cushion. He continued to monitor the other fights through the mirror that Xuan Pin had given him.

The soldiers saw what he was doing and thought he was weird, but Li Huowang had long disregarded how others perceived him. He only needed to know he wasn’t crazy—that was all that mattered.

Li Sui was dirty and tired. She leaned on Li Huowang's back and nudged her skull towards him. "Dad, you are so strong. You killed so many bad people."

Li Huowang sighed and kept the mirror. He knew how strong he was now. In fact, he was even stronger than the half-immortal Dan Yangzi.

As his cultivation improved, it became easier for him to unwittingly change his surroundings according to his thoughts.

It didn't have to be a thought that he was focusing on. It could be a random intrusive thought, but his cultivation would still turn it into reality.

He remembered Li Sui's shout for help and the version of her that he had accidentally turned into reality. Just thinking about it for a moment had been enough for it to become real.

It wasn't a good sign and was impacting his daily life. Thankfully, the enemies he faced today hadn't been too strong, or he would've actually died.

Nothing was real when nothing was fake in front of him.

It wasn't the first time this had happened. This was the fourth since the time he accidentally materialized Bai Lingmiao from his thoughts.

Instead of fighting against the Dharma Sect, he was now fighting against himself.

Chapter 733 - Real

Li Huowang wanted to deal with these complications as soon as he could. Thankfully, despite how difficult the situation seemed, there were still ways to remedy it.

He remembered what Shai Zi had told him last time. Cultivating ‘Truth’ without cultivating ‘Lies’ would cause him to become a demon.

It was a reasonable suggestion too. As long as he cultivated ‘Lies,’ they would balance out his cultivation of ‘Truth.’

But the problem was that he didn’t believe in the words of Shai Zi. Who would believe the Sitting Oblivion Dao?

Shai Zi once said he never lied to anyone to trick them, but he also once mocked Li Huowang for believing the words of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. It was contradictory.

Li Huowang judged the situation before deciding to give it a try.

It wasn’t that bad to cultivate ‘Lies.’ Rather than being tricked by the Sitting Oblivion Dao, Li Huowang had to turn himself into a Sitting Oblivion Dao member to trick others.

The Heavenly Dao of Lies was also in Ji Zai’s hands. Li Huowang was certain that it was safer than it was in Doulao’s hands.

Since Ji Zai held both the Heavenly Dao of Lies and the Heavenly Dao of Truth, it was natural for him to be able to use both powers.

“The situation here has stabilized for now. I have to leave this place for a moment.”

He murmured alone while Xuan Pin’s illusion floated out from a wooden fish.

“We are now at an important juncture of the war. People are constantly dying on the frontline. Without you, I’m afraid most of the soldiers will have to sacrifice themselves in a battle of attrition.”

“Stop trying to threaten me like that. If you really thought their lives were that precious, you would’ve given me some secret artifacts to fight back.”

Li Huowang had always aimed to destroy the Dharma Sect and save the world, but he knew he needed to address his problem as soon as possible. Otherwise, he would be too worried to fight.

Li Huowang wasted no time, patting Li Sui’s head before standing up and walking out of the hall.

“This is a tricky matter. What do you intend to do?” Xuan Pin asked, somehow knowing Li Huowang’s problems.

“Do you have a solution?”

“Maybe for a regular person, but it won’t work on you. You are both a Strayed One and a Twisted One.”

“I knew you wouldn’t have the solution. If you had it, you wouldn’t have kept it a secret until now.”

Li Huowang walked down the blood-stained stairs and reached the bottom of the mountain.

He saw that the stable had been crushed by the Buddha’s head, killing both of his horses. He had no choice but to take off the reins.

“Senior Li?” Li Huowang didn’t even turn around when he heard the familiar voice. “Stop! Don’t come close to me! Let’s talk after I deal with my problem!”

He could no longer differentiate the real Bai Lingmiao from the one he materialized, so he chose to ignore all of them.

He heard the sound of footsteps stopping at a distance before he sighed. “How’s Taishan Shi? Is he still refusing to speak?”

He had hoped to extract information from Taishan Shi after Bai Lingmiao caught him, but even after using all of his techniques, Taishan Shi still refused to leak any information.

Taishan Shi's body was as tough as stone, and his mouth was even tougher. Li Huowang had no choice but to send Taishan Shi to the barracks in hopes that the Surveillance Bureau had a method to interrogate him.

Bai Lingmiao replied, "No. We tried all sorts of methods, but he refused to say anything. Do you think he actually doesn't know anything?"

"Impossible. He must have key information about the Dharma Sect. Did the Chiefs come and visit him?"

"No. We tried to contact them, but all of them were busy dealing with the Dharma Sect, so they couldn't make time."

"Bullshit. I don't even see them in the mirror. Xuan Pin, what are you up to now? Can't you even spare some time to interrogate him?"

"I've sent some men, but it'll take some time for them to get there since they can't fly."

"Hurry up. Taishan Shi is a key figure in the Dharma Sect, so he must have some vital information, especially since he came from the Qi Kingdom."

Li Huowang sat on a horse he materialized and prepared to leave.

"Senior Li, I won't follow you, but at least tell me where you are heading."

Li Huowang pondered and answered Bai Lingmiao's question, "Qing Qiu."

"Qing Qiu? Why?"

"I know how to cultivate 'Truth,' but only the Sitting Oblivion Dao knows how to cultivate 'Lies.' Unfortunately, everyone in the Sitting Oblivion Dao has been killed. I can only find them in the Feng Capital of Qing Qiu's underground."

Xuan Pin exclaimed in surprise before Bai Lingmiao even said anything, "What a genius idea! To cultivate both 'Truth' and 'Lies'!"

to balance each other out.”

“Hm?” Li Huowang stared at Xuan Pin’s illusion.

“Shai Zi is correct. This method would work.” Xuan Pin was certain of it.

“Really? How can you be so sure?” Li Huowang was suspicious of how supportive Xuan Pin was. Does he have ulterior motives?

“Don’t worry, this is definitely going to work. Yin counters Yang, and truth counters lies. Cultivating ‘Lies’ will balance out your cultivation of ‘Truth’”.

After hearing Xuan Pin reassuring him, Li Huowang said nothing else. He urged the horse to run towards Qing Qiu as fast as possible.

Li Sui drew two talismans and pasted them onto the horse’s back.

Bai Lingmiao thought about their conversation. She was both surprised and curious when she asked Xuan Pin, “Master Xuan Pin, are you telling the truth? Will it really work?”

Xuan Pin’s voice came from the black hole beneath the red robes. “It doesn’t matter if I think it will work or not. The most important thing is for him to believe that it will.”

Bai Lingmiao now understood what Xuan Pin was trying to do.

It was the right choice. Even if it was Shai Zi’s trap, as long as Li Huowang thought it would work, it would work.

Bai Lingmiao bowed to Xuan Pin, knowing that he was trying to help Li Huowang. “Thank you, Master Xuan Pin. Senior Li is rash, but he’s kind. He will understand your kindness.”

“I don’t need him to understand. I just don’t want to die.”

Xuan Pin then looked at Bai Lingmiao and stared at her red veil.

“I’m sure that your body made from the evil entity is uncomfortable. If you want, I can refer you to the abbot of the Righteous Monastery. He can make another body for you.”

“Really?” Bai Lingmiao was excited. She didn’t really care for her appearance since Li Huowang didn’t mind, but she was still excited at the prospect of getting her original look back.

“Of course. We are allies now, so I can do this much. It’s also just a small favor. The more important thing is for us to help each other.”

Chapter 734 - Mahakala

A soft wind blew past the shriveled grass plains.

The skies were dark and the clouds were like lead, hanging low in the sky. Li Huowang was feeling down too.

After rushing for several days, he finally reached Qing Qiu. However, it was no longer the same one he knew.

The emerald green grass plains were gone, replaced by yellowish dried grass that was barely clinging to life. It was even worse than he had expected.

He was worried for Sun Baolu, but he had no time to address Qing Qiu's situation because his own issues had yet to be resolved.

Li Huowang urged his horse with the talisman towards the city.

He recalled someone telling him the city's name once, but he had forgotten about it. The only thing he remembered was the solidified poop of the livestock there.

Qing Qiu's tribal leader had gone to battle, but someone was still managing its disgusting city.

Li Huowang had just entered the city when several guards with tall red hats blocked him.

The guard's mouth didn't move, but a low voice came from their abdomen. "Where are you from? Where are you going?"

Li Huowang revealed his identity plate and pointed at the temple. "To the Antrabhara Temple. I have business with the masters there."

The guards checked his identity plate while the other Qing Qiu residents groveled on the ground.

Soon after, two rows of Lamas wearing black overalls approached Li Huowang as they clapped their hands together.

The Lamas were also people from Qing Qiu. Their skin was tanned and their bodies were skinny. All of them were old, with faces covered in wrinkles or age spots.

Li Huowang had seen them once. It seems that the Antrabhara Temple knows that I'm coming.

They said nothing. They simply bowed to Li Huowang and walked towards the temple.

Li Huowang jumped down from his horse and followed them on foot. The guards dared not stop him.

A black tentacle slid out from his red robes and took back the identity plate from the guards.

Li Huowang followed the Lamas from behind and walked past the groveling people. He walked up the stairs and entered the temple.

The Antrabhara Temple was grand and solemn on the outside but empty on the inside. There weren't many Buddha statues here. Instead, the space was decorated by art drawn on leather and several pagodas that resembled pikes.

The leather art was strange, as there was a lot of it. Each depicted a different scene connected to the Immortal Heaven.

But Li Huowang had not forgotten what he was here for. He asked the Lama before him, "I'm here to seek help from the masters of this place. There is something that only you can do."

The Lamas said nothing, as if they had expected it. They continued to guide Li Huowang into the temple. He walked past a lively hall where discussions were taking place until he reached the innermost room of the temple.

The Lamas talked, and a reply came from inside the room, but Li Huowang didn't understand them since they were talking in the language of Qing Qiu.

Suddenly, the voice inside the room said, "Daoist... Li... I've heard... of you."

The door slowly opened and revealed a completely dark room. The faint voice came from inside.

Li Huowang had just entered when he saw several dried corpses with feathered crowns hanging on the rafters. They were hanging by their necks.

Even though their faces were like skeletons grafted with a piece of skin, their elaborate overalls and the various intricate bone ornaments revealed that they were in the upper ranks of the Antrabhara Temple.

The room wasn't as smelly as Li Huowang had expected. It was filled with various scents instead.

Li Huowang looked up and paid no attention to whether the Lamas were dead or alive. Instead, he proceeded to explain the purpose of his visit.

"I will keep it short since you've heard of me. I have a problem that requires a certain guiding drug ingredient located in the Feng Capital. One of my disciples said you are familiar with that area, so I was hoping you would guide me there."

The Feng Capital was the land governed by the Siming of Death, Kui Lei. Li Huowang had no intention of risking his life. He almost died after facing the Lion Dance Palace last time.

Since the Antrabhara Temple worshiped death and was also fighting against the Dharma Sect, Li Huowang figured that there was no reason for them not to help him.

Right after he explained, he saw a dried corpse to his left sway slightly.

Li Huowang asked, "What do you mean you can't?"

"It's not that we can't. Daoist Li, do you not know that the Feng Capital is not a living person's Kali?" Li Huowang didn't understand what the Lama was talking about.

"Of course I know. If I needed to find someone who was alive, I wouldn't have looked for you."

“No, my friend entered it once. You can just use those spinning wheels to fetch me out later.”

Li Huowang remembered how Yang Xiaohai entered and exited the place safely. He refused to believe that he would fail, even though Yang Xiaohai had escaped with the help of Hong Zhong.

“Daoist Li, the times have changed. We are saying this for your own sake. Go back.”

Li Huowang frowned. “Did something happen there?”

Another Lama replied, “The Mahakala^[1] has moved. It should’ve been dead and motionless under Qing Qiu.”

“What?” Li Huowang had a bad feeling. The Mahakala they spoke of probably refers to Kui Lei, the Siming of Death.

“We have conducted regular sacrifices to appease the Mahakala and allow it to rest in peace, but I fear time is up since the Mahakala has moved. It’s no longer in the original location.”

“And what does that have to do with the Feng Capital?”

Li Huowang refused to leave empty-handed after coming here from so far away.

“Daoist Li, you do not understand. Every time Mahakala moves, an entire village must die. With every step it takes, an entire town must die. Every time it moves, an entire city must die.”

1. Another name for Kui Lei.

Chapter 735 - Enter

Li Huowang finally had a good understanding of what would happen if the Siming of Death moved.

“That is why the grass in Qing Qiu is all dead. After that, the livestock will die. And once they’re gone, humans will be next.

“If things continue to die like this, Qing Qiu will become the land of the dead.

“Death should’ve been the final stop, but now that Mahakala has started moving, more and more people will die early deaths.”

Li Huowang was confused. The reason so many people were dying was supposed to be the aftermath of god Yu’er’s invasion and the war initiated by the Dharma Sect.

Why are they saying that the deaths are due to Mahakala?

Li Huowang didn’t believe them completely.

“Master, I’m very saddened by the death of the grass, but how does it relate to the Feng Capital? I just need to go there and find someone. I can’t help you with the grass. You need to find Xuan Pin for help.”

No matter what they said, Li Huowang hadn’t forgotten why he was there. His issue was more pressing.

Suddenly, one of the ropes snapped, and a corpse fell down in front of Li Huowang.

The corpse had a snarling expression on his wrinkled face. He was angry.

“The Mahakala is moving! Where do you think it is? It’s at the Feng Capital now! Mahakala has regained his senses! You don’t even need to touch it! You only need to take a single look, and it’s over! You would wish you were dead!”

Li Huowang frowned and recalled everything he had seen about the Simings in the Baiyu Capital.

Li Huowang had forgotten most of it, but some of the fragmented memories in his mind still made him tremble.

He had felt insignificant every time he had met a Siming, except for Ji Zai.

The Simings, like Doulao or Ba-Hui, never had to descend into the mortal realm to make him shudder in fear. They had either appeared as projections or looked at him from afar.

The Siming of Death. Can I really take what I need from it?

But if I don't, I will eventually kill someone with my powers.

There were no other methods that he could think of now. The Dharma Sect was constantly getting closer, and Li Huowang had no time to figure out another way.

Li Huowang thought carefully before looking at the dried corpse before him. "Since you know a lot about Mahakala, that means you know how to avoid it, right?"

The dried corpse's eyes moved slightly.

Li Huowang continued, "Xuan Pin has told you before. You should know about me and the situation outside regarding the Dharma Sect. How long can the Antrabhara Temple last when the Dharma Sect invades? I don't want to fight Mahakala. All I need is the guiding drug ingredient in the Feng Capital. We have a common enemy. Helping me is equivalent to helping yourself."

The room of dried corpses said nothing, as if they were pondering.

Just then, the temple started shaking. Li Huowang looked outside and said in a panic, "What are you hesitating for? Another division is gone. Do you really want to wait for all eleven divisions to be completely destroyed before you take action?"

The Lamas nodded when they sensed the quaking. "Fine, we shall let you try once. But you need to know that the Feng Capital is exceedingly dangerous even with our help. Do not let your guard down.”

“Fine, we’re already short on time, so let’s start now!” Li Huowang released the primordial breath in his body and removed the fake scenario he had made just now.

The division did not actually disappear. It was a fake created by Li Huowang to convince the Lamas to help him.

If the cultivation of ‘Truth’ had no side effects, it would’ve been an extremely strong ability.

Li Huowang was soon brought into a prayer room with many candles.

When the dried corpses gestured for him to sit, he thought the place was the entrance to the Feng Capital.

Li Huowang sat in the middle while the Lamas sat around him.

“Once you enter the Feng Capital, you will only have three divisions of time, regardless of whether you find the guiding drug ingredient or not. You must come back once you hear the sound of the prayer wheels! Do not delay your departure.”

“Alright!” Li Huowang placed both hands on his knees and closed his eyes.

The Lamas slowly chanted. Li Huowang noticed that their mantras were extremely complicated.

“Po Luo Po Bing Da Ni Yin Na Li Ye~”

The Lamas took out a transparent knife from their robes and sliced the air above Li Huowang’s head.

Li Huowang opened his eyes and shouted angrily, “What are you doing?!”

However, the Lamas didn’t move.

Li Huowang extended his arms, but his hands phased through their bodies.

Chapter 736 - Soul

Li Huowang saw his arm pass effortlessly through the Lama's hand. He instantly understood and looked up, then felt his whole body plummet. He landed directly on the ceiling below.

Li Huowang looked up at the Lamas and his own body surrounded by them. The Feng Capital was clearly not a place the physical body could reach.

He could still hear the Lamas chanting, but the sound was faint and distant, as though muffled by a veil.

The sensation was peculiar—it was as if he was weightless and floating on air. Is this the soul leaving the body? So there really are souls in this world? Why aren't there any ghosts, then?

Li Huowang recalled the Lama's words and didn't tarry. He clenched his fists and walked towards the door.

When he exited the inverted Antrabhara Temple, the outside world had transformed into a vast and desolate desert.

He was not surprised since Yang Xiaohai had warned him. After contemplating momentarily, he headed in the direction Yang Xiaohai had mentioned, where he had bumped into Hong Zhong.

Li Huowang only had three divisions and had to find the Sitting Oblivion Dao's Hong Zhong quickly. If he didn't find him here, he'd have to search in circles around the Antrabhara Temple.

Li Huowang walked through the bleak landscape and constantly looked around his surroundings.

Yang Xiaohai said there's no more of that bizarre seawater from god Yu'er here. What does that mean? Does that mean the Siming responsible for death managed to fend off god Yu'er?

God Yu'er likely hadn't taken over the Siming of Death. A change in the Heavenly Dao should've caused a Natural Disaster.

This might be a good thing for them. Any setback for god Yu'er was good news.

Li Huowang was puzzled after walking for some time. He hadn't found Hong Zhong or any of the souls of the dead, which Yang Xiaohai had claimed were everywhere.

There were no souls, no strange, giant ghosts, and no bottomless pits. None of the things described by Yang Xiaohai were here.

As he started to doubt if he was on the correct path, he suddenly sensed something emerging from the distant black fog.

"What is that...?" Li Huowang leaned forward and looked at the shadow forming in the mist.

As the shadow became larger, it eventually exceeded his field of vision. He realized what it was—it was Mahakala, the Siming of Death. I must not look!

Li Huowang lowered his head. He focused on the uneven ground and then moved aside.

The next moment, a terrifyingly low growl echoed, paralyzing him with fear. He couldn't even lift his feet.

All he could do was close his eyes, cover his ears, and curl up into a ball. He chanted to himself, "You can't see me... you can't see me!"

Another low growl sounded, and the immense pressure made Li Huowang feel as if he was on the brink of death.

It felt like a mountain was crushing him.

After an unknown amount of time, the feeling finally dissipated. Li Huowang gasped for breath and got up, then saw that his body had partially melted like a candle.

This had happened just from passing by, without even touching him.

He stared at the distant black fog. So this is Mahakala? This is Kui Lei.

Ba-Hui governed pain, and Doulao governed truth and falsehood. Compared to them, meeting Kui Lei, who governed death, was an entirely different experience. It was like facing eternal silence itself.

He understood why this place was so empty after this recent experience.

Li Huowang was more concerned about whether Hong Zhong's memory was still alive than about whether Shai Zi had lied to him.

If this happened a few more times, Li Huowang wouldn't make it even with the Lamas' protection, let alone Hong Zhong from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Could he really have been reincarnated? Does reincarnation exist in this world? Li Huowang began to consider the worst possibilities.

As he thought about this, he looked up and saw something dart into the black fog from the southeast corner of the ceiling.

"Wait!" Li Huowang sprinted towards the ceiling.

When his feet made contact with the uneven ceiling, he chased after the commotion.

It was the first moving thing he had seen in this desolate world of death. He needed to catch it and find out what was going on.

He ran as fast as he could and soon caught a glimpse of its back. It was a child glowing with white light.

"Wait! Don't run!"

The figure only ran faster after he shouted. As he followed the child's steps, his surroundings changed. Gigantic pillars began to appear, dividing the sky and earth. The child vanished behind one of these pillars.

Li Huowang sighed in frustration when a mocking voice came from above. "Why are you chasing it?"

He looked up to see another Li Huowang hanging upside down from the ceiling.

It was Hong Zhong from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Li Huowang could tell with one look since his own face would never have such an expression.

“Great, you’re not dead!” Li Huowang exclaimed, relieved at his luck in finding him so quickly.

“What, you wanted me dead? That makes sense. To you, I’m just a memory created by Doulao.” The upside-down Li Huowang wiped his face, which turned into a Hong Zhong mahjong tile.

He continued, “Let me guess, you came all the way to the Feng Capital to find me because you’re in trouble? What kind of trouble brings the famous Li Huowang to seek help from a mere memory?”

“You know I’m just a memory, right?” The flesh-and-blood Hong Zhong jumped down and laughed maniacally. “Do you know what that means? It means I reset every hour and start over, which repeats endlessly! Do you understand how that feels? Do you?!”

As he shouted, Hong Zhong began to disintegrate and eventually turn into a pool of writhing blood.

Chapter 737 - Hong Zhong

Li Huowang stood by a giant slanted column and listened to Hong Zhong explain his thoughts.

Once Hong Zhong finished, Li Huowang paused expressionlessly. “You’re pretending, aren’t you? Why do that at this point?”

Hong Zhong was stunned momentarily. He wiped his face, which reverted to its mahjong tile appearance. His previous agitation was completely gone.

“Impressive, Li Huowang. You saw through it. You’re not that dumb, after all.”

Everything Hong Zhong had said was an act, meant to toy with him just like before.

Despite all he had been through, Li Huowang hadn’t forgotten that this guy was from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Even though he was also Li Huowang, he was still from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and anything he said could be a lie.

“I figured it out by putting myself in your shoes. If I were you, I wouldn’t break down over something so trivial. Besides, if you reset every hour, why fear breaking down?”

Hong Zhong chuckled. “True enough. So, tell me, what’s happening outside? I’m dying of boredom here.”

Li Huowang’s brows furrowed. This Hong Zhong, though still Li Huowang, was a different entity created by Doulao.

Since his experiences had been stripped away and made incomplete, his personality had become more extreme.

Seeing that Li Huowang did not respond, Hong Zhong carried on with a proud expression on his face. “Aren’t you surprised I still exist, even though Doulao’s Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies were seized? Do you want to know how I achieved that?”

“I was supposed to disappear, but I refused to accept that. Do you know why?” Hong Zhong leaned closer.

Li Huowang stepped back. “I don’t care how you exist, and I don’t want to know. Time is short, so I’ll be brief. I’m here because of a troublesome matter, and I need—”

“Wait, wait, wait. Can you let me finish first? Do you think I’m some irrelevant NPC you can skip over? Is this how you ask others for help?”

Li Huowang remained silent, and Hong Zhong nodded with satisfaction. “Good. Now, let me show you my story.”

He turned and led Li Huowang to the other side of the column. There was a dense array of carved words on the colossal column.

Li Huowang approached and recognized his own handwriting. Clearly, Hong Zhong had written here to record events beyond the hour.

Li Huowang read the carvings carefully. When he finished, he turned to Hong Zhong. “You survived by relying on Kui Lei’s Heavenly Dao of Death?”

Hong Zhong smugly answered, “Yes. The Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies are gone, but a part of the Heavenly Dao of Death remains in me. I use this fragment to survive.”

“Though I’m stuck in an hour-long loop, it’s better than nothing. And as long as I exist, there’s hope,” Hong Zhong said. “Now, I’ve waited long enough for my chance, haven’t I? What do you need from me? And what do you offer?”

“I can take you out,” Li Huowang said and observed Hong Zhong closely. However, this massive enticement didn’t elicit any reaction, as though Hong Zhong was simply hearing about someone else’s business.

“Take me out? Is this for you or for me?”

“For both of us. A win-win.”

As long as he obtained Hong Zhong's memories, he could fully grasp Sitting Oblivion Dao's technique to cultivate 'Lies.'

"Why should I leave? I'm fine here. I don't see it as a win-win," Hong Zhong said indifferently.

Both of them were Li Huowang, so Hong Zhong had considered the very same things. "Without a physical body, I'd just be a memory even if I leave. What's the difference from being here?"

"So you're just going to keep waiting like that? Forever?"

Hong Zhong looked at Li Huowang with a mocking gaze. "No problem. I can wait. In any case, I only have an hour of memories, so I won't go mad from waiting."

He continued, "I can wait, but can you? Your situation seems more urgent. You need to offer more."

"Stop joking around! There's a huge problem outside! Think of Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui! Do you want to endanger them?"

Hong Zhong's smile faded. "What's happening outside?"

Li Huowang quickly recounted the recent events, noticing that Hong Zhong had finally become serious.

"Now, I'm cultivating 'Truth' but not 'Lies.' It's like having a ticking time bomb around me, and I could harm those around me anytime. I need to solve this quickly."

Hong Zhong fell silent in contemplation.

"What's there to hesitate about? Why are you hesitating?"

"Hmph, why are you in such a rush? I'm not hesitating about leaving. Cultivating 'Truth' but not 'Lies' leads to madness. That's what Shai Zi said. We need to think this through." Hong Zhong was evidently suspicious.

"I've thought it over. Even in the worst case, cultivating 'Lies' is better than my current state." Li Huowang had indeed hated and despised the deceitful members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao before. But compared to the Dharma Sect, which seemed bent on destroying the world, the Sitting Oblivion Dao's deceit was less detestable.

Hong Zhong shook his head. "You don't understand the Sitting Oblivion Dao or Shai Zi. I'm Hong Zhong, so I know them well. If this was planned by Shai Zi, it won't be just a minor scheme. Don't drop your guard just because he's dead.

"A Sitting Oblivion Dao member isn't truly dead if any of their schemes remain."

Li Huowang frowned. "So you suspect..."

"I suspect this is a bait. Do you know what that is? In the Liar's Scripture, it's the start of a big scam. The bait isn't usually a scam and might even benefit the target. It's like the initial sweet treat for a new player at a gambling table."

Chapter 738 - Siming

Hong Zhong looked at Li Huowang. "I think combining the cultivation of 'Truth' and 'Lies' might actually cure your madness. However, that might be Shai Zi's bait to lure you in.

"The scary part is that Shai Zi probably foresaw this situation long ago, setting traps and waiting for you to merge the cultivation of 'Truth' and 'Lies,' then triggering the traps."

Li Huowang couldn't help but seriously consider it.

"Why would he set traps if he's already dead? Does he want to deceive me to revive him?" Li Huowang asked.

Currently, the Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies were in Ji Zai's hands. There was no way he would borrow divine powers from his future self. No matter how useless he might be, he would not do something like that to aid the enemy.

He managed the Heavenly Dao of Bewilderment, not the Heavenly Dao of Stupidity.

Without divine powers, even if Shai Zi came back to life, he'd just be a clever old scammer.

The fate of the White Lotus Sect had been very miserable since they worshiped the Heavenly Mater, who had lost all Heavenly Daos. Li Huowang had seen it firsthand.

"Don't always assume their motives are so selfish. The Sitting Oblivion Dao's schemes don't always have a reason. Sometimes, they just do it for fun to trick you."

Hong Zhong rested his chin on his hand. His expression mirrored Li Huowang's, with both of them frowning deeply.

They stood there pondering for a long time, unable to figure out what Shai Zi's real plan was.

After a while, Li Huowang said, "No matter what Shai Zi is planning, I have to cultivate ‘Lies.’ If I don’t, I might explode before Shai Zi’s traps do.”

He continued, “Now that we know there might be traps, it’s not too bad. We can try to take the sugar coating and throw the bomb back.”

Hong Zhong felt frustrated. “Would Shai Zi’s sugar coating be that easy to swallow? Why did you even cultivate ‘Truth’ in the first place? Didn’t Zhuge Yuan warn you not to cultivate it?”

Li Huowang replied, “Don’t mention him! Without cultivating ‘Truth,’ how could I deal with the Dharma Sect when they get stronger every day? With the Profound Records? Do you think Ba-Hui is more reliable?”

At this moment, Li Huowang noticed the chanting in his ears growing fainter. He knew his time was running out.

“I can’t stay in this damned place much longer. Let’s get out first!”

Hong Zhong thought for a moment before finally nodding. “Once we’re out, find a way to use your ‘Truth’ cultivation to turn me into an existence like the monk. That way, I can stay by your side.”

He continued, “I’ll keep an eye out for you. If any of Boss Shai Zi’s traps emerge, I can warn you in advance.”

Li Huowang looked at Hong Zhong as a thought flashed through his mind.

Does this guy have any schemes of his own? Maybe Shai Zi’s traps aren’t the real problem—maybe it’s Hong Zhong.

Hong Zhong seemed impatient. “What are you thinking about? Didn’t you say there’s no time? Hurry up!”

“Let’s go.” Li Huowang ran towards the source of the chanting, with Hong Zhong following closely behind.

“How has everyone been while I’ve been away?” Hong Zhong suddenly inquired.

“They’re fine. After Gao Zhijian became the emperor, everyone’s life improved. The Lu Family Troupe is gone, though.”

“I know. I saw Lu Xiucan.”

They hurried along. As time passed, the chanting in Li Huowang’s ears grew softer.

As the chanting disappeared, Li Huowang felt his body becoming heavier, making it even more difficult to move.

“Hurry!” Hong Zhong reached out to him.

“Now you’re in a hurry? Why were you wasting time chatting earlier?” Li Huowang grabbed his arm.

They picked up speed together. Just as Li Huowang thought nothing could go wrong, a black mist began swirling on the left.

This movement was familiar to Li Huowang. “Kui Lei is coming!”

He was about to close his eyes, but this time, Kui Lei’s body suddenly emerged from the black mist.

It looked like an amorphous mass, with pale, dark, abyss-like holes lining the edges.

Kui Lei was shrouded in a strange pale glow. Li Huowang found it extremely difficult to describe the feeling he got when he looked at Kui Lei. It was beyond terrifying and abnormal, and he felt profoundly shocked.

At that moment, the buzzing sound of a wheel brought Li Huowang back to his senses.

In that brief moment, he found his body had almost entirely melted, with some parts of his body even dislodging and drifting towards Kui Lei.

Li Huowang immediately closed his eyes, crouched down, and dragged Hong Zhong towards the Antrabhara Temple.

It quickly became apparent that he couldn’t move faster than Kui Lei. A familiar sense of oppression descended from above once again.

Li Huowang froze. He pressed himself to the ground with Hong Zhong and waited for Kui Lei to pass.

Time dragged on at a snail's pace. It felt like a long time, but the oppressive feeling still didn't dissipate.

"What's going on?" Li Huowang struggled to open his left eye by a tiny crack and glanced at the ground.

The next moment, he froze. It was incredibly dark around him. It was a shadow—Kui Lei's shadow.

Whether it was part of Kui Lei or Kui Lei itself, it was now right above Li Huowang, and it remained unmoving.

Has it discovered me? Li Huowang froze in fear, feeling as though he had been plunged into an ice cave.

Even if Kui Lei did nothing, its mere presence was extremely deadly for Li Huowang.

Time passed slowly, and Li Huowang felt his body continuously melting. Some of his insides felt instinctively drawn towards Kui Lei.

Li Huowang clenched his teeth and made up his mind. I can't keep this up! Even if it's a gamble, I have to do something!

He started to move and dragged Hong Zhong towards the Antrabhara Temple. You can't see me! You can't see me!

"Hong Zhong! Don't just freeze! Use your skills from the Sitting Oblivion Dao! Use them even if they're useless!" Li Huowang said with great difficulty.

There was no response. Instead, Hong Zhong pulled his hand away.

Li Huowang looked down and saw him moving in the opposite direction. "Hong Zhong! What are you doing?"

Hong Zhong turned to reveal his mahjong tile face.

Even under this Siming, Hong Zhong's mahjong tile face seemed to mock him. "Oh, look who it is. Li Huowang, such a rare guest."

“Damn it! The hour’s up!”

Chapter 739 - Hong Zhong

“Hong Zhong! Trust me! Don’t run! I didn’t plan to harm you! We agreed on this before!”

Li Huowang was nearly crawling on the ground, mustering all his strength to explain to Hong Zhong.

The current Hong Zhong was different from the one who had vanished earlier. His thoughts were already completely different.

Hong Zhong looked at Li Huowang with a slight smile forming on his lips. “Hehehe, you think you can fool me? Your skills are still too shallow. I~ don’t~ believe~ you.”

He began to move away from Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was on the verge of coughing up blood. It had been so hard to get him to agree to follow him. And now, as soon as the time was up, he forgot everything that had just happened!

Li Huowang ignored the deadly presence looming overhead. He gritted his teeth and hastened to catch up to Hong Zhong.

“Can’t you feel that something’s different above us? Do you really want to stay in this cursed place forever? Trust me! I’ll get you out!

“The fact that you deceive others doesn’t mean that others are always deceiving you! Consider our situation carefully! Staying here won’t help anyone. Coming with me is our best bet!”

Despite Li Huowang’s heartfelt pleas, Hong Zhong remained unmoved. He tried his best to distance himself from both Kui Lei’s shadow and Li Huowang.

Li Huowang realized that this Hong Zhong wouldn’t believe him. The previous Hong Zhong had seen the writings on the giant pillar, but this current one had no idea what he’d been through.

Under these circumstances, Hong Zhong would only grow more suspicious no matter what he said.

As the buzzing sound of the wheel in his ears softened, Li Huowang clenched his teeth and stood up despite the oppressive force of the Siming.

His body began to melt faster, but he didn't care. He exerted all his strength and chased after Hong Zhong.

Walking was faster than crawling. When Li Huowang finally caught up, he lunged at Hong Zhong and pinned him down. "Stop!"

If persuasion didn't work, force was his only other option.

"Alright, I get it. You're telling the truth. Let me go, and I'll follow you," Hong Zhong replied, looking at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang glared at him while he melted like a wax figure. "Don't pull that trick on me! It won't work! I know you don't trust me! If I let go, you'll run!"

"Even if you think I'm lying, we need to get out of here first! I'll explain everything once we're out of Kui Lei's range!"

He wouldn't survive to explain anything if they continued to stay here.

Hong Zhong looked at Li Huowang and finally nodded slowly.

He didn't hold Li Huowang back this time. They worked together and struggled towards the outside. As they moved, Hong Zhong's body also began to melt.

Soon, they were too preoccupied with escaping to guard against each other. Their melting bodies started sticking together, making them resemble conjoined twins.

However, the melting didn't slow down no matter how far they walked.

Li Huowang was certain that his current appearance was anything but human.

"What did you do to provoke this thing with the previous me? You even dared to annoy a Siming? Are you crazy?" Hong Zhong complained angrily.

“We didn’t provoke it! It just showed up!” Li Huowang answered with difficulty.

The two of them continued to walk under the Siming’s pressure, unable to speak much.

Just as Li Huowang thought they would make it out, an unexpected beam of light shot down from above. Is Kui Lei watching me?

Li Huowang stopped. He felt his body was immobilized entirely, and his consciousness started to melt along with his body.

He was about to die. This was a feeling that any dying person would recognize.

As he neared death, Li Huowang’s gaze shifted upward involuntarily. The Siming of Death, which had been previously unbearable to look at, now seemed exceptionally comforting. It was even akin to the warm embrace of a mother.

Li Huowang saw himself getting closer to it, and a smile gradually spread across his face.

As he drew nearer, the object on the ceiling transformed into a flat, black mirror in front of him.

He saw his pitch-black self in the mirror. As their eyes met, Li Huowang understood some of the Heavenly Daos and the rules contained within.

The mirror was part of him and also part of Kui Lei. Since every living being carried “death” from birth, every living being was a part of Kui Lei.

The aggregation of all deaths was Kui Lei. Death was an eternal constant in the ever-changing world.

After an unknown amount of time, Li Huowang was about to see how he would die in the mirror. However, the mirror suddenly shattered, as if it had been pushed by something else.

The incomparably warm sensation disappeared.

Li Huowang felt as if he had been reborn. He did not know what happened, but he realized that whatever had been above him was now gone.

Suddenly, he felt the ground beneath him give way, and he plummeted rapidly. He realized that his face was floating while his body was still connected below.

When he came to his senses, he found that he had been standing still for a long time.

Both Li Huowang and Hong Zhong collapsed to the ground, gasping for breath. Li Huowang felt lucky to be alive.

What just happened? Li Huowang tried to recall, but most of his memories were already a blur.

Though he didn't know why, it seemed he had narrowly escaped death.

Did Ji Zai intervene?

After catching his breath, Li Huowang asked, "Do you know the pattern of this thing's appearance?"

"You said it yourself. My memories only last an hour. Do you think I'd remember what happened?" Hong Zhong mocked.

Li Huowang didn't ask any more questions. The current Hong Zhong had no information—all of it had been inscribed on the giant pillar.

In any case, surviving an encounter with the Siming was a stroke of luck. It was better to forget about it since dwelling on matters involving Simings was unwise.

With the immediate danger now gone, Li Huowang turned to Hong Zhong, who was still gasping for air on the ground with his mahjong tile face.

Chapter 740 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Li Huowang looked thoughtfully at Hong Zhong.

It wouldn't be challenging to get Hong Zhong to agree to his request again. He just had to follow the same steps as before.

However, Hong Zhong had already agreed earlier. Li Huowang still had some doubts in his heart since Hong Zhong was from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

He had always been wary, even towards the previous Hong Zhong. He was unsure if the other had any ulterior motives.

Since this guy had just reset, why not take this opportunity to test the Li Huowang from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?

It didn't matter even if this guy saw through him. He wouldn't remember anything in an hour anyway.

Li Huowang calmly asked the distraught Hong Zhong, "Hong Zhong, can you answer a question? Why did you run away once you saw me? Do you really have such a poor impression of me?"

Hong Zhong chuckled. "What do you think? Do you really believe the impression others have of you... is good?"

He continued, "Stop deceiving yourself. If you had the choice, you wouldn't want to be with yourself either."

Li Huowang's brows furrowed. "Remember, you are Li Huowang too."

"Hahaha, that's right. I am Li Huowang too, so I also hate myself. Sometimes, out of boredom, I even deceive myself."

These weren't good words to hear. After a moment, Li Huowang asked, "So even if I sincerely wanted to help you, you wouldn't trust me?"

Hong Zhong smiled. "Would you trust someone who says they're sincere? You don't trust me, so why should I trust you?"

He added, "Zhuge Yuan didn't trust you either."

Li Huowang clenched his back teeth. He now understood the previous Hong Zhong's thoughts about him.

Maybe he would accomplish what he said he would, but he probably had his own hidden agenda too.

After considering things briefly, Li Huowang looked at Hong Zhong again. "Don't be so sure. The previous you cooperated with me."

"What did you tell the previous me? Let's hear it." Hong Zhong propped himself up.

"Fine, let's talk while we walk. I'll repeat what happened before, and you can judge if I'm lying."

Li Huowang began to explain quickly, knowing that Hong Zhong might forget everything again in an hour.

This time, Hong Zhong didn't run away. He silently listened as they walked.

After he fully understood the situation, he nodded in sudden realization. "Oh~! So that's how it is. You should have said so earlier."

"Would it have mattered? You ran away before I could explain."

As Li Huowang spoke, the Antrabhara Temple appeared upside-down on the distant ceiling.

"Well?" Li Huowang looked at Hong Zhong. "Since you understand me, Li Huowang, you should know I'm not lying now."

"You already made your choice once, but I'll let you choose again since you have different memories. Cooperating with me is better than waiting here aimlessly."

Hong Zhong replied, "Heh, not necessarily. Maybe someday Doulao will awaken and I'll be able to return."

“Don’t repeat yourself. You said this an hour ago. If you keep saying this, your thoughts are the same as the previous Hong Zhong’s.”

“Is that so?” Hong Zhong chuckled and scratched his head. “Alright, my choice is the same as last time.”

“Then let’s go quickly. The next hour is almost here, and I really don’t want to repeat this a third time.”

Having made up his mind, Li Huowang led Hong Zhong toward the Antrabhara Temple.

As they approached the temple, Li Huowang heard the buzzing sound of the wheel again.

Although Hong Zhong couldn’t enter the temple, Li Huowang could forcibly pull him in.

Their bodies began to stretch and elongate. Finally, with a buzzing sound, they entered the wheel in the hands of a Lama.

When Li Huowang opened his eyes again, he could clearly feel the people around him sigh in relief.

He gently reached out to pat Li Sui’s head, who had come up to him. He sifted through his thoughts quickly.

Soon, he felt a new segment of memories in his mind. They were memories from childhood to becoming Hong Zhong of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. These were the memories Doulao had implanted in him.

With these, the technique to cultivate ‘Lies’ was naturally included as well.

Li Huowang sighed with relief. Despite the twists and turns he had experienced, the results were still acceptable.

“Thank you for your help, masters.”

Li Huowang thanked the Lamas, but they said nothing in return and turned away indifferently.

Clearly, they had seen through Li Huowang’s tricks and realized that the division hadn’t disappeared.

Li Sui was very worried. “Father, are you alright? You really died just now, and it scared me.”

“I’m fine. It won’t happen again,” Li Huowang patted her head and walked out of the Antrabhara Temple.

On the way out, Li Huowang began to eagerly review the memories from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, looking for the cultivation method of ‘Lies.’

“To sit is to move. To forget is to contemplate. Without sitting, there is no end to labor. Without forgetting, thoughts cease. Without labor, the spirit calms down. Without thoughts, the mind is at peace...”

As Hong Zhong, he knew most of the Sitting Oblivion Dao techniques from childhood, even the incantations to summon Doulao. However, knowing them didn’t mean he could use them.

Li Huowang wiped his face and tried to change his appearance, but nothing happened.

He sighed. Back then, he could use the powers of the Sitting Oblivion Dao because Doulao had directly infused them into him.

Now that Doulao was gone, everything had been stripped away.

Even though he had found Hong Zhong’s memories, he had to relearn all the techniques of the Sitting Oblivion Dao from scratch.

However, Li Huowang wasn’t too concerned. The Sitting Oblivion Dao wasn’t proficient in direct combat, and he didn’t expect their techniques to help him fight against the Dharma Sect. His own ‘Truth’ cultivation ability was sufficient for that.

He had sought these memories to balance his ‘Truth’ cultivation and mitigate its severe side effects, which he no longer wanted to endure.

“Let’s see...” Li Huowang exited the Antrabhara Temple and sat down at a nearby teahouse, then began to review the most basic Sitting Oblivion Dao techniques.

However, as he sifted through the Liar's Scripture in his mind, he fell into deep thought.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao didn't start with how to cultivate or practice techniques, but rather with how to become a true scammer.

Chapter 741 - Liu Wan

“Brat, don’t just study and follow the book's instructions. You won’t learn anything like that. Here, let me teach you how the Sitting Oblivion Dao deceives others.”

Li Huowang continued to drink his tea while looking at Liu Wan.

"Deceiving others is the lowest form of deceit," a man with shifty eyes explained to the young person standing before him. "A more advanced form is to allow them to deceive themselves."

He continued, "You need to make them reconsider their words and make them believe that they’re the truth. They will then believe every single lie we tell them, no matter how implausible it may sound.”

Just then, a frail old woman walked past the tea shop with a basket of vegetables.

“Look at her. Her husband has gone to the military and hasn't returned after ten years. Most people would’ve believed that their loved one had died, but she refused to believe that. She holds onto the hope that her husband will come back one day. This is how we can trick her and make her deceive herself. You don’t even need to know what her husband looks like. The more they cling to their obsession, the easier it is to deceive them. Watch.”

Liu Wan wiped his face with his hand. He changed his appearance to that of an old man with tattered robes.

Dang~ Liu Wan knocked on his bowl and approached the woman.

Li Huowang couldn’t hear what they were talking about from afar, but he saw Liu Wan say something to the old woman. The old woman let go of her basket and the vegetables fell out. She immediately hugged him and cried.

The two of them finally reunited and entered their house as they held onto each other.

A short amount of time passed before Liu Wan exited the house, once again looking like a beggar.

“See? It’s that simple.”

Li Huowang ate some peanuts as he said, “You didn’t even deceive her?”

“Who said I didn’t deceive her? She would give me free food for her entire life if I wanted to. Even if she were to die, her son would still let me live out the rest of my life in peace while providing food for me, assuming her son didn’t want to get scolded by the neighbors for being unfilial. This is called the cuckoo method. Some old, childless tricksters have used it to live the final moments of their lives in peace.”

Li Huowang started drinking from his cup. “Wouldn’t she eventually realize you’re a fake if you lived under her roof for a long time?”

“Oh? This is where the method becomes interesting. So what if she realizes that I’m a fake? Would she tell the others? Would she tell the others that the reunion with her long-awaited husband after ten years was a deceit, even after having slept with him for several months? She would feel humiliated if she were to tell others that not only did her husband not come home, but she also slept with another man! It would tarnish her husband’s family honor, and the village would kill her for it. She’d rather believe in a beautiful lie than face the tragic reality.”

“Wow, senior. You are a prick and a lowly livestock.”

“A livestock? We’re all made of flesh. We are livestock to begin with. Morality is nonexistent to us, though we get to deceive so many people thanks to it.”

Liu Wan put his tea down and said, “We are the Sitting Oblivion Dao. We need to deceive them with more elaborate tricks. The more people we deceive, and the more impact it has on the people, the more False Qi we get.”

“False Qi?”

“Yeah, though it has several names. The name itself doesn’t matter, but we call it the False Qi. With it, we can use the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s techniques, ranging from simple face-changing techniques to planting spies or living dolls. The more you deceive others, the more joy you get!”

“Is that so? Thank you for your guidance!” Li Huowang revealed a thirst for more power.

“But you have to remember that we are the Sitting Oblivion Dao. We are not deceiving others to get False Qi—we are doing it for fun! The more fun we have, the more False Qi we get! More importantly, we get to laugh our hearts out every time we deceive others!”

“Liu Wan, you’re right. We are in this world to have fun, which is why I joined the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

“Oh? You’re very smart, but I think it’s too early for you to deceive me. I know you didn’t join it on your own accord. Those in the Sitting Oblivion Dao were deceived into joining it.”

Li Huowang remained silent.

Liu Wan continued, “Don’t worry, it’s not the end of the world. That’s also how I joined the Sitting Oblivion Dao. That’s also how Shai Zi came in last time.”

Li Huowang smiled. “These tricks are too crude for you, it seems. I just wanted to see how much False Qi I would get from tricking you.”

“Oh? If you needed False Qi, you should’ve told me from the start. I’ve already prepared the stage and just need a partner. Want to join me? You can get quite a lot if we pull it off.”

Liu Wan picked up his cup and drank his tea before he looked at Li Huowang. “Did you poison my cup while I was deceiving that old woman?”

“No,” Li Huowang said calmly.

The two of them smiled at each other, then raised their tea cups in a toast. Their tea splashed into each other’s cups as they clinked them together before drinking.

Liu Wan smacked his lips together. “Your poison is a little lacking. The women living in the mountains are more well-versed in poison.”

Li Huowang ignored Liu Wan and said, “Alright, I will follow you to see what you’ve prepared. Thank you for your guidance! What should I do to deceive them?”

“What do you mean deceive them? We are helping them.”

Li Huowang followed Liu Wan.

They walked on the clean street as they approached a more secluded area.

Li Huowang asked, “Senior, where are we going? Who are we helping?”

“We are going to help a certain good man. I should also tell you that the amount of False Qi we get differs from the type of people we deceive. Those who are illiterate yield the least amount, followed by those who can read a few words. People from the palace or officials come next, and finally, we have those within our own business. The greater the influence, the greater the False Qi we obtain.”

“Oh? Is that so? Then wouldn’t we get the most if we deceived an emperor?”

“Of course. How do you think our current Shai Zi became a Shai Zi in the first place?

Chapter 742 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Li Huowang perked up when Liu Wan talked about the person at the peak of Sitting Oblivion Dao. “Please tell me how he became Shai Zi.”

“He became one by ruining an entire small nation. Shai Zi is amazing—he deceived an entire nation!” Liu Wan longed for the day he could do the same.

Since he tricked the Liang Kingdom, he might actually have had the chance to replace Doulao.

While thinking about it, Liu Wan reached a large estate. “This is the place.”

“How should we trick them?” Li Huowang was nervous.

Liu Wan looked at Li Huowang’s Daoist robes and smiled. Liu Wan changed his appearance to that of an old Daoist before chuckling and entering the estate. “Just react accordingly.”

The gardener tried to stop Liu Wan, but he ignored him. Instead, Liu Wan maintained an expression of worry. “Your lady has been possessed today. Do not block the way if you want her to live. Show me the way.”

The gardener was shocked and didn’t understand how the person before him knew about this.

“Stand aside! How dare you try to delay the mission of the Surveillance Bureau?!” Liu Wan pushed the gardener away. Unknown forces pinned the gardener to the wall.

Liu Wan then brought Li Huowang into the depths of the estate. They arrived safely, but they couldn’t be certain that Liu Wan’s fake identity as a member of the Surveillance Bureau had truly deceived them.

They had just entered the inner courtyard when they saw a room plastered with talismans and a crowd outside of it.

“Move away!” Liu Wan pushed through the crowd.

Li Huowang had barely managed to push past the crowd when he saw a young lady tied up in her bed. She was trembling a lot.

The people in the room seemed to be her family, looking at her with concern.

“Oh no! An evil entity has invaded her heart!” Liu Wan rushed to the side of the bed as he took out a strange bell. The end of the bell was a fork instead of a regular handle. He rang it wildly.

“Everyone, please don’t be afraid. We are from the Surveillance Bureau. Your beloved will be cured soon.” Li Huowang made the entire situation look even more realistic.

“That’s amazing! You two must be the Immortals that have descended from the Heavens! Please save my daughter!”

Li Huowang wanted to say something else after seeing the patriarch believing them without any hesitation, but a massive man with killing intent blocked him. “You’re from the Surveillance Bureau? Show me your identity plate.”

Li Huowang raised his head and saw that the man was at least two heads taller than him. He kept calm and nodded as he reached into his pockets.

He felt something and was about to take it out when Liu Wan called for him.

“Disciple! Come and help your master now!”

Li Huowang’s face turned serious, and he immediately ran towards Liu Wan. He recited and made some seals using his hands before stamping them onto Liu Wan’s back.

When Li Huowang did so, the veins in Liu Wan’s body bulged out.

Liu Wan took out a roll of red thread with talismans on it. He flicked the end of the thread, and it magically wrapped around the lady's hair.

"I seek the Supreme Treasured One to help your disciples, protecting our body and mind! Call for the Azure Dragon, White Tiger, Black Tortoise and the Scarlet Phoenix to come and help us!"

He had just chanted when the lady's eyes turned white as she started fighting back against her restraints. It was as if something was coming out of her body.

Liu Wan then took out a bronze coin pagoda and placed it on one end of the red thread. A white light flowed from the lady's head into the pagoda. The pagoda started shaking violently as the little bells on it rang wildly.

"Disciple! Hold the pagoda down! The pagoda is protecting the lady's soul, so you must not move it!" Liu Wan then threw the rest of the red thread to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang took the red thread and pushed the pagoda onto the ground when Liu Wan carried the lady out of the house. When he carried her out, the lady was releasing black smoke from her orifices.

Liu Wan soon disappeared with the lady as the red thread became longer and longer. The only one left in the scene was Li Huowang, along with the pagoda and the red threads.

Everyone looked at Li Huowang and the pagoda with anxious looks.

They had all heard that the pagoda was the thing protecting their daughter's life. All of them watched Li Huowang holding the pagoda down without moving.

Time slowly passed, and the pagoda's bell ringing became softer. Everyone started to panic.

No one dared to ask Li Huowang any questions, fearing that it might distract him from his intense focus and put their daughter's life at risk.

“Patriarch! Patriarch! Bad news!” The gardener from before ran into the inner courtyard.

“Patriarch! The old Daoist ran out of the city! He cut off the red threads on the lady’s hair before he ran away. We couldn’t stop him even on horseback since he ran into the woods!”

“What?!” The patriarch was shocked, and his wife even fainted. Everyone suddenly glared at Li Huowang, who was holding the pagoda down.

As he looked at them staring at him, Li Huowang gently lifted the pagoda and found nothing inside.

Li Huowang realized he had been deceived! Liu Wan had never intended to work with him!

This was a trap set for Li Huowang. Liu Wan left him behind to prevent them from chasing after him! Li Huowang was just a tool.

Li Huowang smiled calmly as he stared at the people surrounding him. “Don’t worry.”

He then tore off his face and revealed the lady’s face.

Everyone fainted when they saw the lady’s face in front of them.

Liu Wan was already fifty li away from the city when he laughed. Tears poured out of his eyes as he recalled how he had deceived Li Huowang.

“Brat, remember that the Sitting Oblivion Dao has no junior or senior relationships in your next life! Our only rule is to deceive others! Serves you right for getting deceived by me!”

“Senior Liu Wan, the lady is just a Curved One. Is there any reason to be that happy?” Li Huowang’s voice suddenly came from below his chin.

“Huh?” Liu Wan thought he was holding the lady when a stabbing pain blossomed in his chest.

Liu Wan threw the lady onto the ground. He looked down and saw a metal rod had been stabbed through his body.

He raised his head and was shocked to see the lady tearing off her face to reveal Li Huowang's face instead!

Chapter 743 - Real Or Fake?

“Hehe... You brat! You are fucking vicious!”

Liu Wan held his injury in pain. He twisted his arm to remove the steel rod from his back, but his efforts proved futile. The steel rod had somehow fused into his body.

Li Huowang chuckled, approaching the dying Liu Wan. “Don’t try to take it out, senior Liu Wan. You won’t be able to do so. I am a Sitting Oblivion Dao member myself, so I know what kind of techniques you have. This is an artifact that I acquired by deceiving others, and I went to great lengths to obtain it. It’s specifically designed to kill you.”

Liu Wan stared at the young man before him, a mix of fear and respect filling his eyes. “You... You were pretending. To use False Qi so easily... You must’ve been in the Sitting Oblivion Dao for quite a while. I can’t believe I fell for your deception...”

“You faked being my senior to try to trick me, right? I just set up another plot to counter yours.”

Liu Wan nodded approvingly. “To think there’s someone better than me at tricking others here. The future of the Sitting Oblivion Dao is going to be bright. I lost. The Curved One is yours! I won’t take it from you.”

Li Huowang shook his head, “No. Liu Wan, you must be kidding me. What use do I have for a Curved One? You should know what I want. Honestly, I don’t even have an identity, so I can’t call myself a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

Liu Wan panicked and touched his face because he knew what Li Huowang wanted. Li Huowang wanted his face!

Li Huowang took out a dagger and slowly approached the struggling Liu Wan, but it was too late. Li Huowang soon dismembered Liu Wan's limbs.

Li Huowang looked down at Liu Wan before sitting on his chest and grabbing Liu Wan's neck. Li Huowang used the dagger to slowly carve the sides of Liu Wan's face.

"Do you know how long I planned for this day? How long I have been stalking you? I know how many secret agents you have and how many backup plans you have. I even know you have a son."

Li Huowang cut off the old Daoist's face before putting it on. Li Huowang's voice became the old Daoist's voice too.

"But that doesn't matter to you anymore. All of this is mine now." Li Huowang cut off another face with a mustache before placing it on his face. "Your secret agents are mine. Your backup plans are mine, and even your son is mine."

Li Huowang carefully carved out the faces before plastering them onto his own. Only one face remained—the original face of Liu Wan, adorned with the mahjong tile bearing the Liu Wan symbol. Li Huowang didn't stop at all.

Li Huowang chuckled. "Don't blame me. These are the rules of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. I need to trick others into thinking I'm the real Liu Wan. I will then become the real Liu Wan."

He plastered the final face onto his own before cutting off Liu Wan's neck. "Now, I am Liu Wan."

Li Huowang laughed out loud when he saw Liu Wan's hatred seething in his eyes. "Senior, you were right. I should deceive as many people as I can!"

Li Huowang's faces flickered like the pages of a turning book before his face returned to normal.

He slowly closed his eyes and removed himself from the memories of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Li Huowang slowly explored the memories in his room.

He now had a deeper understanding of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

“I need to trick others to obtain False Qi... And then use it to cultivate the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s techniques?”

Since he also had Hong Zhong’s past, he already had a good understanding of the techniques of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. What he needed now was False Qi.

However, False Qi was different from the primordial breath of a Strayed One. He needed to deceive others to obtain it. He had to cultivate ‘Lies’ to counter the side effects of cultivating ‘Truth.’

Still, he wasn’t sure of how to do so—he also didn’t want to truly become someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Li Huowang looked around and saw Li Sui lying on the bed. He stood up to leave, but Li Sui suddenly woke up.

“Dad, where are you going?”

“Watch the house. I will be back soon.” The stench was unforgiving within the city since there were feces everywhere, but at least it was a proper city. Even though there was a war with the Dharma Sect, there were still a lot of people here too.

“How should I trick someone?” Li Huowang looked around and squatted down in front of a stall.

The stall owner saw Li Huowang was an outsider and tried to communicate in the official language, saying, “Do... What... Do you want?”

Li Huowang picked up the objects being sold. He looked at the honest-looking merchant before he placed the items down.

Sigh. Li Huowang didn’t feel like doing something against his morality.

Li Huowang was thinking about what to do when he picked up some unusual sounds.

Since I don’t want to trick ordinary people, I can just trick some bad people instead. I would feel better doing that too.

Li Huowang followed the voice's direction before he found several young people from Qing Qiu brandishing knives and surrounding a man.

The man's skin was tender and pale, suggesting that he was not from Qing Qiu. He appeared to have been taking refuge here.

“Maybe I can try something here...” Li Huowang approached them.

“Uh... There’s a fire.”

He coughed to get the attention of the youths. They all turned around and saw fire at the base of Li Huowang’s feet.

Li Huowang tapped the ground with his feet. The fire snaked towards the youths and scared them away.

After scaring them away, Li Huowang stood still but felt nothing. There wasn’t any False Qi.

Huh? I just tricked them, so why am I not getting any?

He then realized that even though he tricked them, the fire was real since he used his cultivation to conjure it. Since the fire was real and could’ve burned them, it was not trickery.

Should I use my cultivation to conjure something fake? To use ‘Truth’ and conjure ‘Lies’? Cultivate ‘Truth’... Cultivate ‘Lies’...

He frowned from his confusion.

Chapter 744 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Li Sui was riding in the carriage as she rounded the small alleyway. Behind her carriage were two people. One was a skinny man with a messy beard, while the other was Li Huowang, who had changed his attire.

The skinny man was a pickpocket, but this time, he was Li Huowang's prey.

As the carriage trundled along the street, a small bag slowly opened up, revealing the reflection of silvers inside. The bag of money instantly attracted the skinny man.

"Go!" Li Sui drove the carriage even faster. The bag fell off the carriage and onto the ground before spilling out the silvers onto the alley.

Li Huowang was in front of the skinny man. When Li Sui's carriage wandered off, he quickly grabbed the bag of silvers. He then looked around and saw the skinny man.

"Shh! Let's be quiet and split this in half!"

"Al... Alright!" The skinny man's body trembled when he saw the bag of money.

Li Huowang chuckled when he saw the skinny man's reaction. Since I can't really fool others, I should just refer to the tricks that I read in the Liar's Scripture.

This was the missing bag trick, and also one of the classics.

It was a simple and reliable method of deceiving others. People still fell for this trick, even though it has been used since ancient times.

As long as the tricks remained reliable, there was no need to introduce new ones incessantly. This particular trick targeted the greed residing within one's heart.

Now that the bag had been picked up, Li Huowang needed to take some of the silver, hide them away in a corner, tie up the bag again, and then wait for Li Sui to return to search for the bag. In reality, Li Sui was an accomplice. Li Sui was also a natural-born actor when she shouted to call the officers, saying that the money in the bag was less than the original amount. All they needed to do now was give the money in their own purse to appease Li Sui.

Even though Li Sui's expression was slightly exaggerated, it was still very believable. After Li Sui left, Li Huowang took out the hidden bag of silver that he had taken from Li Sui's bag.

Soon, Li Huowang took his portion from the skinny man before leaving. He then hid in a corner to see the skinny man holding his half of the share.

The skinny man waited until he confirmed that both Li Huowang and Li Sui weren't returning. He quickly opened his bag and checked the silver in it. He bit onto one and was happy to realize they were real silvers.

"Hm? What's going on?" It was Li Huowang's turn to be confused. According to the scripture, the man should've found a bag of stones rather than silvers, thus completing the deceit.

That was how Li Huowang was supposed to get some False Qi, but why wasn't it working?

"Dad, he didn't get deceived. That really is a bag of silvers," Li Sui muttered.

"I know, but I placed stones in that bag just now, so why did it turn into sil..."

Li Huowang suddenly realized his mistake. He had turned the stones into silvers!

Now that he couldn't control his powers to cultivate the 'Truth,' everything he said would become true. The trick would fail in that case since it was the ‘Truth.’

The skinny man had indeed taken a bag of real silver. It wasn’t a trick at all!

Shai Zi was right to say he would suffer by cultivating ‘Truth’ but not ‘Lies.’ It would be difficult for Li Huowang to cultivate ‘Lies’ right now since he was too powerful.

“Wait, let’s follow him!” Li Huowang refused to give up. He took Li Sui and tailed after the man.

When he saw the happy-looking man trying to pay for a prostitute, Li Huowang focused on the bag and kept muttering, “Those are stones! Those are stones!”

The man opened the bag and realized the silvers had become stones!

He panicked and shouted. He ran out to find Li Huowang for payback, but the latter was long gone.

Technically, the trick should’ve worked, but Li Huowang didn’t feel any False Qi flowing into his body. It had failed.

Utilizing ‘Truth’ to set up a trick to obtain False Qi appeared ineffective. The two sides of the same coin balanced each other out, and Li Huowang gained nothing.

“Sigh, it’s one thing to not get any by turning them into real silvers, but why didn’t I get any even after I turned them back to stone? Why is this so hard?”

Li Huowang made several attempts and continued until sunset, then returned to the inn feeling defeated.

He reached his room and saw Li Sui sitting on the stool with an unhappy face.

“Dad! You lied to me! You said you would come back soon! Why did you return so late?”

She had just said that when Li Sui, who was beside Li Huowang, disappeared. Li Huowang suddenly felt a faint trace of tingling coming from the base of his spine entering his brain.

Even though it was very faint, Li Huowang immediately knew what it was. This is False Qi!

Li Huowang now understood what it took to cultivate ‘Lies.’ He had to use lies and tricks. He couldn’t use his cultivation of ‘Truth’ at all.

“So this is how I should do it!” He finally found the most important aspect of cultivating ‘Lies.’ It was exceedingly simple, but Li Huowang overcomplicated it.

Li Huowang didn’t bother explaining to Li Sui why there was another her when he decided to look for his next “victim.”

As Li Huowang was celebrating the success of his trip to Qing Qiu, Xuan Pin’s illusion floated up from the ground

Li Huowang stared at Xuan Pin’s illusion and felt the little trace of False Qi in his brain as he pondered.

He was already annoyed from seeing Xuan Pin, but there wasn’t much False Qi for him to use. He could only change his face.

Xuan Pin was about to say something when Li Huowang sat on the stool as he changed his face. His face flickered, and soon, Shai Zi’s eighteen-sided head replaced his actual head.

Li Huowang then copied Shai Zi’s tone and chuckled. “Xuan Pin, did you really think I didn’t have a backup plan? It’s not that easy to kill me.”

Xuan Pin’s illusion froze up and Li Huowang felt a tsunami of False Qi surging into his brain. He couldn’t withstand it and laughed.

“HAHAHA! You fell for it! You really fell for it!”

Chapter 745 - Information

When he saw Li Huowang laughing hard, Xuan Pin realized he had been tricked.

“Do you think this is funny?” Xuan Pin revealed a rare unfriendly side of himself.

“Of course! You lost nothing and helped my cultivation a lot! Be proud of it.” Li Huowang held his stomach and laughed again.

Xuan Pin remained still and Li Huowang stood up. He changed his face back to his original one.

“Don’t be so stingy. You’ve been using others all this time, so why does it matter if I tricked you? How about this? Let’s say our grudge from when we fought the Earth Dragon has been settled.”

Li Huowang had obtained a lot with just a simple trick. He quite literally received an ocean of False Qi.

It was also payback since Xuan Pin had left him in the Earth Dragon’s stomach.

Ignoring Li Huowang, Xuan Pin explained his purpose. “I’m here to tell you that Taishan Shi has confessed.”

“Oh!” Li Huowang became serious. “Can I see?”

“Alright.” Xuan Pin waved his bone-like fingers and placed them on Li Huowang’s shoulder. Everything shifted around them.

Li Huowang blinked and saw that he was in a dark and humid dungeon. The lines around them were squiggling a lot, but soon became solid.

“Hm? Hm...” Xuan Pin looked around him in confusion.

“What’s wrong? Is there danger?” Li Huowang realized that this differed from the illusions Xuan Pin showed him in the past.

Li Huowang touched the metal fence and felt the coldness of rusted steel. He looked at Xuan Pin in amazement.

“Xuan Pin, you are truly wondrous! To think you could transport me from Qing Qiu to Si Qi. Why didn’t you do this last time?”

Compared to the Imperial Preceptor flying on his sword, teleportation was exceedingly more powerful.

“...”

Xuan Pin remained quiet for a moment before he nodded. “You know I prefer to be secretive. I don’t trust others, and there was no reason for me to show you this before.”

Li Huowang never thought someone could be shameless enough to say something like that.

“Let’s talk more about it next time. Where is Taishan Shi now?”

“Here.” Xuan Pin led Li Huowang into the depths of the dungeon.

They walked down a stairway plastered with talismans before Li Huowang saw Tai Shanshi. The latter was currently immersed in blackish water, with numerous talismans floating on the surface.

Compared to his previous self, Taishan Shi looked much more disheveled now.

His eyes were sunken and his face was pale. It was as if he would die at any moment.

More importantly, someone had removed Taishan Shi’s scalp, leaving his brain missing and the interior of his skull exposed to the open air.

“Oh, to think we have rare guests here.” Zheng Boqiao was confused to see both Li Huowang and Xuan Pin here.

“So the Chief of Si Qi interrogated him personally. Is there any news?” Li Huowang said.

“You can see them yourself.”

Zheng Boqiao took out a porcelain bowl and dipped it into Taishan Shi’s exposed skull. He scraped the insides of Taishan Shi’s head against the side of his skull before scooping out a large jumble of his blood and brains.

He swallowed it as if he was drinking soup. Zheng Boqiao used his own body as a furnace to refine a pill.

Li Huowang frowned when he saw what was happening. “Uh... You can just tell me. There's no need to show me.”

Zheng Boqiao blinked before regurgitating the contents back into his mouth, then chewing and swallowing them again.

“There wasn’t much valuable information, but I did obtain a backup plan from him. They plan to summon a god into the mortal realm if they start losing the war. They are willing to put in a lot of effort into it.”

“Summon? Who? Is it god Yu’er?” Li Huowang frowned.

“No. If god Yu’er could be summoned, they would’ve done so already. There would be no need for them to fight and scheme so much. They shouldn’t be summoning a Siming, but something else—something just below a Siming.”

Something just below a Siming? Li Huowang recalled the beings waiting outside of Baiyu Capital.

“Something like the God of Happiness?” Li Huowang recalled how hard it was to fight against it.

“No. You don’t even need to summon them. You can just call for them here. It’s something stronger than a God of Happiness. Since Taishan Shi came from the Great Qi, he only knows this much. The others didn’t reveal anything to him.”

Li Huowang looked into the glowing mirror and checked the situation at the frontline. The war was not looking good for the Dharma Sect, so Li Huowang thought this would be when they sprung their plan.

The reinforcements from the Liang Kingdom had arrived at Si Qi. The Dharma Sect would fall if they failed to get their own reinforcements.

Li Huowang considered it and looked at Xuan Pin. “Do you have anything to fight against the thing they are summoning?”

“We shouldn’t even let them summon it in the first place. Since we know what they will do, we should stop them.”

He continued, “We can’t send the army to their location since that would reveal our intentions. We need to send a small group of elites to destroy their plans.”

“Why are you looking at me? Isn’t there anyone else?” Li Huowang frowned.

“The strong naturally get the most work. Don’t worry, others will accompany you. But I will only truly be at ease if you go. To be honest, you are stronger than me now.”

“Stop trying to place me on a pedestal. I don’t have time to do this. You need to figure out a plan yourself.”

Li Huowang actually wanted to go destroy the Dharma Sect, but he needed to cultivate ‘Lies’ first. He was just starting and didn’t want to stop.

If he couldn’t deal with the side effects of cultivating the ‘Truth,’ he would be in big trouble on the battlefield. No one would know what would happen to him.

“Don’t worry.” Zheng Boqiao stopped them. “We also need to send informants and spies to see if it’s true. You can tell us when you’re ready. It would be best if you could make it, but if you can’t, then it’s fine.”

Li Huowang took one last look at the half-dead Taishan Shi before he left the dungeon. “Xuan Pin, remember to take my daughter from Si Qi.”

Li Huowang left, and the dungeon was quiet once more. The two chiefs looked at each other and shook their heads.

“Working with him is not easy.”

“Don’t worry, his fate won’t be a good one. I have a feeling that we won’t be in contact with him much longer after this crisis is over.”

Chapter 746 - Let Go

In the incense-filled temple, Bai Lingmiao sat cross-legged on the lotus stone table with her long hair draped over her shoulders. Her teeth protruded from the corners of her mouth, while black porcupine quills and green snake scales were hidden among her white hair.

It was already a significant improvement compared to before. At least her face now had exactly two eyes, although one of them was still a beast's eye.

The monks of the Great Qi Righteous Monastery stood around her lotus platform. They sat cross-legged on their mats and rhythmically struck their wooden fish.

As they struck the wooden fish, they chanted esoteric Buddhist scriptures, "Assembly of the Lotus Pond, Amitabha Buddha, Guanyin and Mahasthamaprapta sit on the lotus throne, guiding us to the golden steps. The great vow is widely opened. May all be free from the dust of the mundane world. Homage to the Lotus Pond Assembly..."

As they chanted, Bai Lingmiao's body began to change gradually. The foreign elements within her body started to squirm and slowly transformed her deathly pale skin.

Some monks exhibited signs of beastly transformation, but they were quickly suppressed.

After two hours, the transformation slowly ceased. Bai Lingmiao lowered her hands and gently touched her face with her four hands. She found that her previously disfigured face had returned to its original state.

Bai Lingmiao bowed from the lotus platform and respectfully bowed to an old monk with a kind and benevolent face. "Abbot, thank you for your care over these past few days.”

“Amitabha, there is no need for such words, female benefactor. In this realm of Luoism cultivation, this humble monk can offer only this meager assistance.”

After exchanging some polite words, Bai Lingmiao bade farewell to the Abbot of the Righteous Monastery. She turned and left the backyard, walking into the bustling temple at the front.

In the main hall, a giant, run-down Buddha enjoyed the offerings and worship of the people.

Bai Lingmiao took four incense sticks, followed the others, bowed three times to the Buddha, and then carefully placed the incense sticks in the incense burner.

As she walked out of the hall, a chaotic and bustling city came into the scope of her perception.

It was hard to imagine that just a month ago, this large city was under the control of the Dharma Sect, but it was now occupied by Great Liang.

The once ubiquitous black cloth strips and white scarves were gone. They were now replaced by white lotus marks on their foreheads.

“Saintess! The Saintess has arrived!”

“Hurry! Son, bow to the Saintess! May the Saintess bless your father to return soon.”

All the followers of the White Lotus Sect immediately prostrated themselves on the ground and bowed deeply. Nearly half of the people in the street also knelt down.

The speed at which the Dharma Sect expanded was now matched by the rapid growth of the White Lotus Sect, especially with the imperial court’s support.

Notices were even posted throughout the city, which mandated belief in at least one faith. Anyone who dared not to was directly executed.

Though simple and crude, this method was very effective in countering the infiltration of the Dharma Sect. As long as they believed in the Heavenly Mater, few would place their hopes in god Yu'er.

The Heavenly Mater could also deliver what god Yu'er promised, so why not choose the safer option?

Bai Lingmiao slowly walked past them with a gentle expression.

As she did, she lightly touched some people's heads, making them feel ecstatic as though they had received the Heavenly Mater's favor.

She saw an injured little beggar struggling to crawl towards her and approached him.

He looked at Bai Lingmiao with eyes full of longing. "Saintess, my parents and my elder brothers are dead. If I believe in the White Lotus Sect, will they really not become wandering spirits and live well in the Hometown of the true void?"

Bai Lingmiao saw that his face was unnaturally yellow, and his belly was already infested with maggots. She knew the child had little time left.

Regardless of how a war was fought, it always caused suffering for the same kind of people.

"Yes, rest assured, your parents and siblings are all in the Hometown of the true void." She gently patted the beggar's head, and he looked genuinely happy.

"That's great. I will be able to see them soon."

Bai Lingmiao saw him smile happily. She took out a small drum from her waist and lightly beat it. The boy's appearance quickly improved with the help of the Bai family immortals.

"Your parents also said they want you to live well and have many descendants."

"I will! I will rebuild our Yao family ancestral hall and get married to carry on the family line!”

Bai Lingmiao stood up and began to comfort others, just as she had comforted the boy.

When she returned to a White Lotus Sect hall, she saw Lu Xiucan focused on explaining cultivation matters to some new followers.

Lu Xiucan had completely changed from when he first arrived. His left cheek was sunken, with all his teeth missing. His collarbone was wrapped in a blood-stained cloth where the skin was gone.

His left sleeve was empty, and his right hand had only four fingers without nails. His body was covered with scars, and he looked extremely tragic.

The Profound Records had allowed Lu Xiucan to survive the horrendous flesh-and-blood mill, but it came at the cost of parts of his body.

Lu Xiucan heard her voice and waved his four-fingered hand happily, “Mistress! [\[1\]](#) Long time no see! Are you here to see Master?”

The bitter and vengeful Lu Xiucan was gone, replaced by the carefree figure he had once been.

Bai Lingmiao’s expression turned complex as she sensed the unhealed wounds on his body. “Go back to Cowheart Village. Your father is just mad and not dead. Don’t forget your little niece.”

Lu Xiucan’s smile remained on his face. “It’s fine. Puppy and Zhao Wu will take care of them. I swore in front of my father that I wouldn’t stop until the Dharma Sect was eradicated.”

“I can’t return as long as the Dharma Sect still exists.”

The vengeful Lu Xiucan hadn’t disappeared. He had just learned to hide his feelings.

Bai Lingmiao sighed lightly. “Xiucan, there are many to fight against the Dharma Sect. One more or less won’t make a difference. You should let go.”

It was foreseeable that Lu Xiucan would soon die if he continued like this. Too many members of the Lu Family Troupe had died. She didn't want Lu Xiucan to follow the same path.

Lu Xiucan's smile gradually faded. He looked at Bai Lingmiao and asked, "Mistress, have you let go?"

1. As in his master's wife. 🤔

Chapter 747 - Help

“Mistress, have you let go?” Lu Xiucan’s words made Bai Lingmiao’s heart tremble as some buried memories surfaced in her mind.

She wanted to say she had let go, but no words would come out.

Lu Xiucan saw Bai Lingmiao standing there in silence, then bowed to her and turned to leave the White Lotus Sect hall.

“Mistress, you don’t need to persuade me. I, Lu Xiucan, may not be of much use. Still, if I can kill even one more follower of the Dharma Sect, then I am of some use.”

The sound of drums calling for the military camp’s assembly echoed in the distance. Lu Xiucan excitedly adjusted the bronze coin sword on his back. He ran towards the sound, singing theater lyrics as he did.

“If I succeed, I return to my homeland. If I fail, I die in a foreign land! It is my duty to avenge my relatives! Alone I stand, with loyalty! Boiling blood, burning with passion!”

Lu Xiucan’s song faded away. Bai Lingmiao’s mind became increasingly unsettled as she silently turned and walked deeper into the hall.

This area was heavily guarded since it housed the most important treasure of the White Lotus Sect.

She pushed past a door and walked behind two screens. A white lotus that emitted a soft glow appeared before her.

The lotus had blossomed even further since its discovery in the ancestral hall of Cowheart Village. Its gentle radiance now remained constant.

A group of people of both genders and all ages formed a circle around the white lotus. Only those most qualified within the White Lotus Sect could approach it.

Bai Lingmiao sat cross-legged on a mat and quietly prayed to this Twelve Merit Jade Lotus.

“Heavenly Mater, Hometown of True Void. Heavenly Mater, Hometown of True Void...”

She prayed to the Heavenly Mater, as if trying to convince herself that the Hometown of True Void existed.

The white lotus mark on her forehead mirrored the white lotus on the table, and her upper body involuntarily split into two halves.

The two upper half bodies were back to back, with four hands forming lotus seals. They floated in mid-air like tree branches, making her look like a short and white fleshy tree.

This appeared to be a cultivation method of the White Lotus Sect, but only the White Lotus Saintess knew its specifics.

After two hours, the sky outside had gradually darkened, but the room remained as bright as day, illuminated by the white lotus.

Suddenly, Bai Lingmiao stopped. She stood up calmly from the mat, then turned to one side and listened intently. “What is it?”

Her senses were very sharp, and even the slightest sound couldn’t escape her notice.

“Saintess, the people from the Si Qi said that His Majesty wants to see you.”

“The Emperor of Si Qi?” Bai Lingmiao couldn’t help but recall the two Dragon Veins used as bait.

Although she didn’t know why he was looking for her, Bai Lingmiao didn’t dare to take her time since he was the emperor of a country. She quickly set off with her entourage.

Even though Si Qi had fallen, the emperor’s title still held weight. It was enough to secure a courtyard with three entrances as his residence in this crowded city.

Bai Lingmiao almost couldn’t recognize the Emperor of Si Qi because he looked completely different from his previously disheveled state. The last time she had seen him, the Dragon Vein had just been dragged out of the mud, covered in dirt and unrecognizable.

But now, the Emperor of Si Qi was dressed in a bright yellow robe embroidered with the pattern of a dragon soaring over the sea. The imperial crown, with its pearl tassels, glinted like black jade. He exuded the majestic aura of a ruler who commanded respect without the need for force.

“No need to kneel. Provide a seat for Miss Bai.”

The Emperor of Si Qi waved his hand. Two elderly eunuchs immediately brought over a chair.

Bai Lingmiao bowed and thanked him, then gently sat down. “May I ask why Your Majesty has summoned this humble woman?”

The Emperor of Si Qi looked Bai Lingmiao up and down. “It’s said that the White Lotus Sect has been rapidly expanding recently and taking over many areas previously held by the Dharma Sect. Almost all the common people have been converted.”

Bai Lingmiao felt uneasy, sensing something off about his words. “Your Majesty, you flatter us too much. The White Lotus Sect’s efforts are insignificant, and it’s all done to prevent the Dharma Sect from making a comeback.”

“No flattery at all! Not in the least!” A plump man in armor came forward. “The people who believe in your White Lotus Sect are worth a country with a thousand chariots. Nothing else can compare if that’s insignificant.”

Bai Lingmiao remained silent. She was unsure of his intentions.

“I looked for you, and there’s no special meaning.” The Emperor of Si Qi descended from his throne and slowly walked toward Bai Lingmiao’s side with his hands behind his back.

“Since so many White Lotus Sect followers now heed your command, I wish to discuss a small matter with the Saintess.”

Bai Lingmiao slightly turned her head and waited for him to continue.

The plump man interrupted, “Hey, Your Majesty, let’s cut to the chase.”

He didn’t wait for the emperor to speak. “Saintess, here’s the thing. The Antrabhara Temple in Qing Qiu has a plan. They can perform a ritual to defeat all remaining Dharma Sect forces in Si Qi. However, the ritual requires something strange, so we’re here to seek your help.”

“Antrabhara Temple?” Bai Lingmiao felt a wave of unease at the mention of the name.

“They need human lives, not the kind extended by lifespan pills. They need human sacrifices. 1.81 million, to be exact.”

Bai Lingmiao remained silent. She was clearly stunned by the number.

The Emperor of Si Qi glanced at the chubby general. The general continued, “The strange part is that those Lamas insist that they must be willingly sacrificed.

“Can you believe it? The people of Qing Qiu must have twisted brains. How can we manage voluntary deaths? Hence, we seek the Saintess’s help.

“There must be some useless people in the White Lotus Sect, right? For instance, the old, weak, sick, and disabled. Why not make good use of them?

“Just use the same words as before, like telling them that dying will take them to the Hometown of True Void. They’ll happily go to their deaths.”

After the general finished, the Emperor of Si Qi added, “Rest assured, as long as you help rid Si Qi of the Dharma Sect and restore my throne, I’ll compensate you with five times the followers!

“What? Do you think I’m not a man of my word? I can swear before my ancestors! That much should be enough reassurance, right?"

Bai Lingmiao's hands began to tremble. She suddenly recalled the female general Peng Longteng as she looked at the emperor.

"Your Majesty!" Bai Lingmiao's voice trembled. "It's 1.81 million lives!"

"So what? They're going to the Hometown of True Void to find happiness. Or does the Saintess doubt the existence of the Hometown of True Void?"

Chapter 748 - Choice

Bai Lingmiao clenched her hands slowly as her expression turned extremely grim. She seemed to have some trouble standing steadily.

The Hometown of True Void does exist. The Heavenly Mater said so herself. Her family now leads carefree lives there.

Bai Lingmiao was very certain that she would join them after her death.

However, Bai Lingmiao felt deeply conflicted when this deeply held belief involved the lives of 1.81 million people.

If the Hometown of True Void is real, dying is merely moving to a different place. If so, why am I... why am I hesitating?

At this moment, the Si Qi emperor continued, “Miss Bai, think about it. With the lives of around a million old, weak, and disabled followers, you can secure nine million good followers in the future. When has there ever been such a profitable deal?”

“You see, it’s a win-win situation—even the Heavenly Mater in the Hometown of True Void wins. No one loses. What are you still hesitating for, Saintess?”

Bai Lingmiao took a deep breath. Her hand, which trembled over her chest, suddenly steadied. She had made up her mind.

“Your Majesty, is this really a deal ? Do you always calculate things like this? Do you understand that they... that they are all people, living people? Even if they are disabled or useless, they are still living people!” Bai Lingmiao recalled everything from Cowheart Village.

She continued, “Do you know how much pain their deaths would cause? Do you know how painful it is to lose family members?!”

The Si Qi emperor and the plump general beside him were visibly shocked. They hadn't expected the leader of a cult, known for its sacrificial practices, to say such things. It was as if hell had frozen over.

"And Your Majesty! Among those 1.81 million, the majority are your subjects. Have you not considered them at all?"

A hint of anger appeared on his face. "Hmph! Why should I care about them? Do you know what I have sacrificed for this throne? I have earned all of this with my hard work!

"My main concern is my empire! Without it, I am just a king without a country! Those common people are like grass growing on my land. Even if they are cut down, they will grow back in time."

Bai Lingmiao clenched her fists tightly. Her sharp nails dug into her palms, but she did not let go.

She replied with a sharp tone, "Your Majesty! I cannot comply! They are not grass—they are people! They can't die like grass. Once they die, there's nothing left!"

The Si Qi emperor seemed puzzled. "Hmm? Haven't you realized? According to your beliefs, they aren't really dying. They are going back to the Hometown of True Void."

"What? Does the esteemed Saintess of the White Lotus Sect believe there is no Hometown of True Void? Is it all a lie fabricated by the Heavenly Mater to gain your faith?"

Bai Lingmiao took a few deep breaths and suppressed her anger. "Your Majesty, the Hometown of True Void does exist, but the Heavenly Mater has decreed that suicide violates divine laws. Those who take their own lives cannot enter the Hometown of True Void."

"Ridiculous. Why haven't I heard your White Lotus Sect say this before?" The Si Qi emperor frowned as he sensed rejection from her.

"I am the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect, and naturally, I receive divine messages. If I say the Heavenly Mater has said it, then the Heavenly Mater has said it! This matter is not up for discussion.” Bai Lingmiao stood up to leave.

The Si Qi emperor stepped before Bai Lingmiao again. His expression filled with cold anger as dragon scales began to appear on his body. “Wait. You should carefully consider your actions, Miss Bai. Do you realize who you’re defying?”

Bai Lingmiao, who had been looking down, slowly raised her head as a slight smile lifted her lips. Her entire demeanor seemed to have shifted. “Your Majesty, Si Qi is still occupied by the Dharma Sect, isn’t it? If you’re so capable, why don’t you reclaim your lost territory yourself? Oh, that’s right. We were the ones who saved you from the Dharma Sect, weren’t we?”

Bai Lingmiao poked the Emperor's dragon robe with her finger, its nails painted black.

“I am from the Great Liang, not Si Qi. Besides, you are still a dethroned emperor. A fallen phoenix is worse than a chicken. What can you do if I defy you?

“Will you send troops to destroy the White Lotus Sect? Alas, Your Majesty, you have no soldiers under your command now. You only have a group of old eunuchs.”

Bai Lingmiao glanced disdainfully at the general beside her, who had his hand on the hilt of his sword but did not draw it. She chuckled. “You’re still putting on airs with me when you’re so short on men that you even dare bring such lowly individuals out in public.”

The Si Qi emperor trembled with rage, yet he dared not act against Bai Lingmiao. He could not afford to make enemies of those who had helped him reclaim his kingdom, even if he could defeat them.

Bai Lingmiao stepped out of the grand courtyard, her expression gradually softening. She silently walked through the chaotic city.

The voice of the Second Deity resounded in her mind. “What are your thoughts? Do you believe in the Hometown of True Void or not? I’m confused.”

Bai Lingmiao didn’t know. She could no longer care about her own matters.

She realized that, at some point, she had gained the power to control the lives of millions of people at her whim. If she wished, she could command these people to die.

Her power had unknowingly grown to such an extent that this invisible pressure made her anxious.

Bai Lingmiao continued to walk as she observed the lives of the White Lotus followers in the city.

In times of war, the lives of the ordinary people were naturally difficult. However, they always found ways to eat and live as well as they could.

She had seen it before, but what she saw seemed slightly different from before.

A group of people gathered around a large black pot emitting white steam by the roadside, eagerly holding long chopsticks.

Inside the pot was a mix of leftover food sold by the street. Each bite was a bronze coin, regardless of what one picked.

Despite seeming dirty, this sort of business became more popular the more chaotic the times were. People often arrived early to ensure they didn’t miss out on the best selections.

This was the place where they could eat meat for the least amount of money.

A young girl, around thirteen years old, had a white lotus drawn on her brow and wore patched clothes. She hesitated for a long time before finally tossing her bronze coin into the bowl.

Chapter 749 - Cultivation

The little girl picked up the chopsticks and squinted closely along the edge of the pot for a long time. After a while, she forcefully plunged the chopsticks into the pot.

She pulled her chopsticks out and found she had grabbed a braised duck head with a portion of the neck still attached.

She paid no heed to the heat and cheerfully brought the duck head to her two waiting sisters.

The three of them ate the duck head as if it were a gourmet delicacy, their eyes brimming with joy. The youngest even tilted her head back and giggled with delight.

Bai Lingmiao walked silently, seemingly able to sense their happiness as her lips curled into a slight smile of her own.

She once had a younger brother too, and she would share her tasty food with him. As she watched the young girl, Bai Lingmiao seemed to see her former self.

Soon, she reached a bustling alley where a newlywed couple was worshipping the God of Prosperity. Everyone was cheering and laughing as if the hardships they had just endured were merely an illusion.

They brought out two cherished persimmon cakes and cut them into small pieces to share as wedding candies.

No one looked down on the makeshift candies. On the contrary, they ate them eagerly and savored this rare sweetness by letting them dissolve in their mouths. Some even carefully stored the candies in their pockets to take them home.

Are they all dead, having gone to the Hometown of True Void to the Heavenly Mater?

Bai Lingmiao was suddenly overcome with a blinding sensation as this thought emerged. The telepathic connection granted by the relic stopped responding, and she felt that she had been plunged into darkness.

No, they... they don't need to go to the Hometown of True Void. Living well is enough for them. Only someone like me, who needs to escape, needs the Hometown of True Void.

Suddenly, Bai Lingmiao felt her telepathic senses granted by the relic extend even further. She could feel activities up to two or three miles away.

The next moment, she sensed Li Huowang speaking with a young man on the main street.

“Senior Li?” Bai Lingmiao stopped walking. She felt the emotions of other people within her sensory range.

In the past, she valued her own emotions greatly. Now, she realized that these emotions were not everything in life.

Her feelings were insignificant compared to the lives of all the followers of the White Lotus Sect.

Bai Lingmiao turned and walked towards the entrance of the White Lotus chapel, “Second Deity, let’s go.”

“Where to?”

Bai Lingmiao sensed the emotions of half the city and slowly said, “Too many people and too many lives depend on us. We can’t just think of ourselves.

“We need to find a way to prevent more people from losing their families. The feeling of losing loved ones is very painful. I don’t want my past experiences to happen to others.”

The Second Deity replied, “Alright then. At least you’re not conflicted anymore. If that brat Lu Xiucan can do it, surely we can too.”

In the kitchen, stones were constantly boiling in a pot of water. A man with a white cloth wrapped around his head earnestly added firewood to the stove.

Hu Biao followed his routine and poked the stones in the pot with chopsticks. His expression turned very excited. The stones had actually softened from boiling!

Sir Arrogant Stone had said that once the stones were boiled soft, eating them would cure all diseases and even lead to Immortality.

“Father! Father!” Hu Biao rushed out with the ceramic pot filled with soft stones.

As soon as he ran out the door, he saw his senior coming towards him with a pot.

Hu Biao quickly pretended to be calm, carrying the softened stones home.

As they passed each other, Hu Biao’s senior suddenly raised the pot and smashed it towards Hu Biao’s ceramic pot.

The ceramic jar broke, and the stones tumbled onto the ground, bouncing softly. His senior watched on dumbfoundedly.

“You! You actually boiled it soft! It’s real!”

The Dharma Sect members peeked out from the eaves, windows, and behind wooden doors. They all watched the stones on the ground with shock and desire.

Hu Biao immediately reached out to grab the soft stone and stuff it into his mouth.

However, a flying stone hit his head and caused blood to stream down. The stone in his hand fell to the ground.

“Grab it!” Someone shouted, causing all the Dharma Sect members present to charge at Hu Biao.

The once close members turned against each other for this opportunity to become immortal, and they fought brutally in the narrow alley.

The soft stone kept changing hands. Even if someone swallowed it, others would cut open their belly to retrieve the stone and swallow it themselves.

After some time, the alley was completely covered in blood and corpses. Only two severely injured people remained and stared at each other. Hu Biao was one of them.

He swayed and muttered to himself, "It's mine... it was supposed to be mine..."

Li Huowang was currently standing on the eaves and watching the carnage below. Stones couldn't be boiled soft. This was all part of Li Huowang's plan.

Li Huowang smiled as the last man eagerly swallowed the stone. He didn't achieve immortality and instead revealed a look of despair.

Tricking people felt really good, especially when it came to his enemies.

Li Huowang nodded with satisfaction as he felt the False Qi flow into him. He jumped down and kicked the man's head, causing it to explode.

Li Huowang finally understood why the Sitting Oblivion Dao liked to deceive so many people at once. Even the tiniest amount of False Qi from deceiving mortals could accumulate significantly.

Some experts of the Sitting Oblivion Dao liked to set up schemes that, when well-maintained, provided a continuous flow of False Qi akin to a spring.

The schemes could be complex or simple, sometimes needing only a rumor. The genital shrinkage scam he encountered a few years ago was such an example by the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

As he felt the increasing False Qi within him, Li Huowang realized the importance of shifting his mindset.

In the past, he often couldn't distinguish between the truth and falsehood. After many deceits, he finally sensed the true difference between what was real and fake.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao often lost their genuine emotions through their deceit, which made them believe everything was fake—morals, family, friends, and even themselves.

If everything was fake, then one could naturally act without any restraint.

Cultivating 'Truth' but not 'Lies' would lead one to easily go crazy. On the other hand, cultivating 'Lies' but not 'Truth' would have the same effect.

Chapter 750 - Pursuit

The Sitting Oblivion Dao actually cultivated ‘Lies’ that led to madness. However, no one had ever seen anyone successfully cultivate both ‘Truth’ and ‘Lies,’ so the Sitting Oblivion Dao and other factions saw this state as acceptable.

“Pitiful, how pitiful,” Li Huowang muttered to himself. Shai Zi might have known this already, but it was hard to turn back as he was in too deep.

Li Huowang looked down and cut open the belly of the person before him. He took out the softened stone and placed it beside the person’s abdomen.

A tentacle emerged from Li Huowang’s navel and dragged the stone back inside.

The stone that these Dharma Sect members had fought over was actually a piece of Li Huowang’s liver that he had cut.

He had looked for other substitutes, but still found this to be the most suitable.

“Father, what have you been doing lately? I don’t quite understand,” Li Sui said. Two slits appeared on her neck, which revealed her eyes with double pupils.

“I’m deceiving them.”

“So that’s what deception is.” Li Sui had a sense of realization, having learned something new from her father.

Li Huowang needed to leave this place since he had already achieved his objective.

At the moment, he was deep within the territory occupied by the Dharma Sect. Such a commotion would naturally attract their attention soon.

Li Huowang heard footsteps behind him and immediately took action. He wiped his face and transformed it into the likeness of the dead Hu Biao.

He cut off his right hand, threw it to the ground, then lay down with an expression of agony.

“Quick! He ran that way!” Li Huowang lifted his bloodied hand shakily and pointed the pursuing Dharma Sect members in the wrong direction.

After the enraged Dharma Sect members went in the wrong direction, Li Huowang stood up, picked up his severed hand, and stealthily followed them.

When they realized they had been deceived and started to go back, Li Huowang gradually withdrew in the direction they had abandoned.

Having changed his appearance again, Li Huowang arrived at a remote county. He was finally free from pursuit.

He sat in the common room of an inn, hungry after his long ordeal. “Innkeeper, some food, please.”

“Of course. But Sir, in these chaotic times, some ingredients are hard to come by. I’ll see what the kitchen has and bring you whatever we can make.”

“No problem, as long as it’s filling.”

Soon, half a fragrant roasted lamb head was placed before Li Huowang, accompanied by two slices of guokui^[1].

“Sir, here’s some bean paste and vinegar. Cut the meat, dip it in the sauce and vinegar, and stuff it into the guokui. It’s quite delicious.”

Li Huowang stared at the lamb head for a while. After confirming that it did not start talking to him like last time, he picked up a small knife and began to eat.

As he continued cultivating ‘Lies,’ Li Huowang found that many of the side effects of cultivating ‘Truth’ had indeed lessened.

At least, he no longer had to worry that the people around him were the product of his cultivation.

Understanding ‘Lies’ more deeply inevitably led to a greater understanding of ‘Truth’.

Compared to the False Qi and the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s various abilities, the most significant change in Li Huowang was his mindset—the feeling of genuinely deceiving others with false things.

This change was exactly what he needed to counteract the side effects of cultivating ‘Truth.’

The key to differentiating truth from illusion was having the right mindset.

Cultivating ‘Truth’ and ‘Lies’ now felt like pulling on two sides of the same rope, which balanced each other out.

As he gradually understood falsehoods, he gained some more control over reality and his creations. Cultivating ‘Lies’ could indeed treat the deviations caused by cultivating ‘Truth.’

Li Huowang had to take the bait, whether this was part of Shai Zi’s scheme or just bait he had dangled.

Although the problems from cultivating ‘Truth’ were solved, he had to remain vigilant against Shai Zi’s schemes, even if there were no signs of them yet.

Shai Zi, what are you really up to? You’re dead and the Sitting Oblivion Dao was wiped out. What more are you trying to do?

Li Huowang was deep in thought. He lifted a piece of lamb meat on a small knife to his mouth.

Suddenly, he felt his heart jolt. A slit opened behind his left ear.

Li Sui’s eyes quickly glanced at the diners to his left. Li Huowang immediately sensed something was off when the couple glanced at him.

It would have been nothing if they had just glanced at him, but the speed at which they averted their gaze was suspicious. This was something ordinary people wouldn't be capable of.

"Sir, are you enjoying the lamb head?" The cook bent over and smiled at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's four eyes quickly scanned the surroundings to collect information. He gripped his purple-tassel sword and slashed out, beheading the cook.

Blood sprayed out all over, yet the cook's head did not fall. It transformed into a blood-soaked mask which flew towards Li Huowang's head.

A black tentacle emerged from Li Huowang's neck. It pulled out a bronze coin sword, which sliced the bloodied mask into pieces. The original peaceful inn had now become a battlefield.

The diners, the cashier, and the waiters stood up, pulling out weapons and charging at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang could handle these people, but his expression was grim. He couldn't figure out who had sent them. Were they sent by... Shai Zi?

Just as Li Huowang was about to take care of them, the beams of the three-story inn suddenly cracked. The upper two floors, which were laden with tons of weight, came crashing down on him.

In the ensuing crash, rubble and stones flew everywhere. Li Huowang stood up from the collapsed building, covered in black tentacles.

As the dust settled, Li Huowang noticed a significant change around him. Everyone in the small town had dropped their disguises.

They donned black cloth on their shoulders, erected white flags, and carried a massive idol as they surrounded the collapsed inn.

However, Li Huowang felt a strange sense of relief when he saw the Dharma Sect marks on them.

The Dharma Sect had ambushed him. Despite his efforts to hide his whereabouts, they had still found him. Li Huowang realized he might be facing a formidable opponent this time.

At that moment, a path opened on the left side of the crowd. Four strange figures holding umbrellas slowly walked out.

Their faces were hidden by the black umbrellas. Standing at least ten feet tall, they wore knee-length clothing and their long arms were covered by sleeves, leaving no flesh exposed.

Chapter 751 - Plot

All four of them held their umbrellas as they stuck to each other as close as possible. If the person in front didn't raise their feet in time, the rest would've fallen back.

Their strange movements and the four broken black umbrellas made them look like a single entity. It was as if they were tied together by a thread, and their heads resembled mushrooms.

This was the first time Li Huowang had seen someone like that in the Dharma Sect. Something was off, and his senses were warning him of the danger. What was even more concerning was that he didn't sense any gazes from the four people.

As Li Huowang was thinking about what the four of them were about to do to him, the shadows of the Dharma Sect members quickly converged together and gathered around him. They formed a massive, smoking black edict. [\[1\]](#)

The moment the edict appeared, the skies turned black, and dark clouds rolled in. It swiftly became nighttime.

Li Huowang knew this would be a difficult battle after seeing how tense the atmosphere was. The Dharma Sect had painstakingly laid out plan after plan to ambush him.

Li Huowang feared that the Dharma Sect had designated him as the highest-ranking threat ever since he took away Taishan Shi.

Li Huowang took a deep breath as he materialized Peng Longteng behind him.

Just as everything was on the brink of descending into chaos, Xuan Pin suddenly floated out from the ground.

"Don't move. I will take you away from here," Xuan Pin whispered as he revealed six bony arms from under his robes.

He then made seals and chanted, "μλ%Oγ∨U划类ψ豸

&≤λδΦ✱γπ8θ$9.”

Li Huowang had no idea what Xuan Pin was chanting, nor did he recognize any of the seals Xuan Pin was making.

Li Huowang suddenly noticed a forest rapidly emerging in his peripheral vision. Before he knew it, he found himself in a new location—a forest.

The skies were bright again, and everything was peaceful. Li Huowang had been saved!

Li Huowang looked at Xuan Pin with shock. Xuan Pin proved himself useful this time, Li Huowang finally felt a sense of camaraderie with him.

Li Huowang asked, “What technique is that? That’s so convenient! You can escape from anything anytime you want! But why did you need to chant this time? You didn’t need to do so last time.”

Xuan Pin turned and looked at Li Huowang with a “complicated” expression. “I can’t tell you that. You already said I’m a secretive person. Did you think I would teach you that?”

Li Huowang frowned. His image of Xuan Pin had just shattered a bit. He’s so shameless.

Still, he refrained from voicing his thoughts since Xuan Pin had indeed saved him.

“Who were those guys with umbrellas? They look tough.”

Xuan Pin calculated with his fingers. “I don’t know. I can’t divine anything from them.”

Li Huowang frowned. “Even you don’t know?”

He understood that only people with certain levels of strength could make Xuan Pin fail his divinations. More importantly, they were targeting him.

Now that he knew the Dharma Sect was actively hunting him down, he had no choice but to be more covert next time. But this was a bad plan. Passively defending against ambushes would be much harder.

Xuan Pin said, “Don’t worry about their ambush. I have a mission for you. If you succeed, everyone in the Dharma Sect of Si Qi will be destroyed.”

Li Huowang gestured for Xuan Pin to continue.

“The informants are all dead, but the Lamas from the Antrabhara Temple recalled their souls to obtain the information. Taishan Shi was right—the Dharma Sect is planning something big. They want to gather all of us in one location before killing us with whatever they are summoning.”

“Hmph! I want to see them try.”

“Since we know their plans now, we can devise ways to disrupt them. Might as well as go along with their plan for now.”

“Why should we go along with their plan?”

“I can’t tell you that. First, we follow their plan, but then I will cause a massive disruption. While they are distracted by me, I need you to bring some elite fighters to infiltrate and destroy their plans.”

“Oh? Is that why you saved me?” Li Huowang asked, pointing at his chest.

“Why? Do you not want to go? I thought you were someone who would risk his life to save the citizens.”

“Of course I do, but why do I think that you are using me as a chess piece?”

Li Huowang frowned, sensing that Xuan Pin was hiding something from him. This was not the first time it had happened.

Xuan Pin retracted his six arms. “What do you mean chess piece? We’re all fighting the Dharma Sect to protect the Liang Kingdom.”

“Really? Then tell me, what are you planning to do to deal with them? Why do I have to be the one to go? Why can’t you?”

“Because I’m not as strong as you. I’m old and withered.”

“Bullshit. You are still hiding something. Fine, I won’t do it. You can find someone else.”

Li Huowang turned and was about to leave the forest.

However, Xuan Pin called him back in a grave tone. “Wait.”

Li Huowang stopped.

Xuan Pin said, “Do you really not know why I’m not telling you? Do you think I should tell you?”

“Why shouldn’t you?”

“It’s one thing to let the others know about my plan, but it’s another to let you know about my plan.”

“Is it because I’m Ji Zai’s Twisted One? Or is it because I have the power to use ‘Truth’?” Li Huowang asked.

His questions were left unanswered.

He continued, “Tell me! Give me a vague reason! I don’t want to keep doubting all of you! I hate it when I’m fighting for my life while having to suspect you people are trying to kill me too!”

Xuan Pin hesitated before replying, “We are helping.”

“Helping what? Who?”

“Just as we are fighting at the bottom, they are fighting at the top too. Do you remember what I said before? About dealing with the problems at the root?”

Li Huowang realized what Xuan Pin was talking about. “You can enter the Baiyu Capital? You can talk to the Simings and get them to help us?!”

1. This is the symbol drawn on Daoist talismans.

Chapter 752 - Departure

“You’re helping the Simings to fight god Yu’er?” Li Huowang asked.

He had to confirm with Xuan Pin again to make sure he had understood correctly, as the idea sounded ridiculous. He never thought such a thing was possible.

Xuan Pin remained silent.

Li Huowang questioned rapidly, “Which Simings are you helping? Which of them are fighting god Yu’er? How’s the situation?”

Xuan Pin continued to stay silent.

“Answer me, dammit! Do you think it’s funny to see me talking to myself like this?”

This time, Xuan Pin replied, “I can only tell you this much. Think carefully about what I’ve said before. Any more, and you will be tainted by their cause and effect.”

Li Huowang frowned. “Just you alone? Can the Surveillance Bureau really work with the Simings? I don’t believe it.”

He suspected that Xuan Pin wasn’t telling the truth.

Xuan Pin chuckled. “Hehe, so you think you know me? Or do you know the Simings a lot?”

“I’m not doubting you, but what you’ve said is too ridiculous.”

No matter what, a Siming was still a Siming. Li Huowang had seen them before and never thought Xuan Pin would be able to help them in robbing the Heavenly Daos.

“The fact you haven’t seen it doesn’t mean the method doesn’t exist. Since we can survey the Heavens, we also have our methods. Also, the other sects are hoping for the Dharma Sect’s downfall. They will naturally come and help us.”

Hearing that, Li Huowang wanted to ask more questions.

However, Xuan Pin gestured for him to stop. "That's enough questions for now. I cannot answer anymore. These aren't your concerns at the moment. What you need to do is to accept this mission and work hard. Only then can we prevent this disaster."

Li Huowang frowned before he raised one finger at Xuan Pin. "One last question. How are things up there? Which side is winning? Is it us or god Yu'er?"

"That depends on how well you do in your mission. If you are successful, god Yu'er will be dead in a few days. There's no reason to doubt me. No matter how many secrets I have, you have to remember that we are on the same side. I even gave you the Shimmer Mirror, which is an incredible artifact and a sign of my goodwill to you."

"How many times will you bring that up? Fine. Who else will be coming with me?"

"Some other experts."

Xuan Pin took out a Surveillance Bureau's identity plate. On it were two words: Third General.

Li Huowang already knew about the Surveillance Bureau's ranking system. This identity plate was leagues above his Seventh Banner rank.

Xuan Pin explained, "With this, no one will bother you. Everyone will also listen to you. They will even die for you if you order them to."

Li Huowang took the identity token and looked at Xuan Pin. "Where are they? When do we depart?"

Xuan Pin pointed at the mirror floating beside Li Huowang. "Go there and someone will explain to you."

Li Huowang said nothing as he looked at the glowing dot on the mirror and walked towards the designated spot.

Xuan Pin called out to him from behind, "Don't worry, I'll save you if you are in danger.”

Li Huowang, however, preferred to rely on himself when it came to his own life. He still remembered how Xuan Pin hadn't saved him from the Earth Dragon's stomach the last time. I doubt that he just learned that technique.

“Alright, I understand. That's all for now. I will hang up now.” Li Huowang hung up after he pressed the glowing red button on the phone screen.

“Who called you?” Yang Na asked as she happily sipped her milk tea.

“Who else? It's the grad student. He wants us to go to his place for a bit. Probably something to do with Zhao Lei,” Li Huowang answered, looking warily at the crowded streets.

“Alright, let's take our stuff and go.”

Suddenly, Yang Na's eyes lit up. She shoved the milk tea into Li Huowang's hands before running towards a girl with braids in the distance.

Yang Na greeted her close friend excitedly. “My looove! Did you miss me?”

On the other hand, the girl in braids was visibly less excited than Yang Na. She stared at Li Huowang warily from a distance.

Despite wearing a different outfit and even sporting sunglasses, the girl still managed to recognize Li Huowang. She was Yang Na's close friend, after all.

“Meng Meng, where's the taser?” Yang Na asked.

She took the bag from Zhang Xiaomeng and opened it. Inside were several unopened packages of high-voltage tasers.

After what happened last time, Li Huowang understood the importance of having a weapon. Since he couldn't get anything illegal, he had no choice but to stock up on legal ones.

Zhang Xiaomeng pulled Yang Na further away from Li Huowang and whispered harshly, “Why did you think I went through so much to get you a taser last time? Don't you know who you are supposed to be wary of? Why are you still with him? Do you have Stockholm syndrome?"

"What are you talking about?" Yang Na punched her lightly. "Huowang has been cured."

"But he killed someone before! You could've easily found someone else, so why did you stay with a crazy maniac like him?"

"It's complicated!"

Yang Na talked with her friend for a bit longer before she returned to Li Huowang with the tasers.

Li Huowang passed the milk tea back to her and opened the bag. He inspected the tasers and was satisfied with them.

"How much were they?" Li Huowang asked.

Yang Na answered, "Not much. It cost me a couple of milk teas, I suppose. You don't have to pay me anything."

"I'm not paying for them, and neither should you. We are getting them for the others, so Qing Wanglai is supposed to pay for them."

Yang Na sipped on her milk tea as she held onto Li Huowang's arm. "Is that so? That's good, then."

"Also, we don't have to tell him the real price. Just give him a larger figure. He's rich."

Yang Na laughed when she heard that. Even so, her eyes were filled with worry.

The situation was becoming more serious, and she was worried that it would get out of her control.

The two of them rode a bike and departed for Orange Isle.

For now, the only good news was that when Li Huowang brought Yang Na out, no one would ask them too many questions. It was normal for youngsters like them to go on dates.

Chapter 753 - Mental Illness

Orange Isle was deserted at night, but that didn't mean it was crowded during the day. It was empty all day long. The sunlight only made the paint on the half-built buildings look brighter, highlighting the work of unvirtuous real-estate developers.

Li Huowang saw that Wu Qi's RV and Qing Wanglai's sports car were already there. He was late.

He brought Yang Na up the half-built building's concrete stairs to their meeting place. Everyone was discussing something.

"We need to do something, but you keep telling us that we can't do this or that. We can't just sit around!" Chen Hongyu's voice echoed around the place.

Qing Wanglai nodded at Li Huowang and Yang Na. "Of course we can't just sit around and do nothing. We need to act first and seize the initiative. Zhao Lei has confessed, and we now know where their temporary base is. We need to attack them before they relocate."

"Really?" Li Huowang perked up. He would finally have the chance to retaliate after having been passive for a long time.

"How many guns can you get for us?" Li Huowang asked Qing Wanglai impatiently.

"Not a single one. It's not like we can buy illegal firearms here."

"Tsk ." Li Huowang took out all the tasers he had. "We can't win with just these. We need some bladed weapons, or maybe a crossbow or two."

Qing Wanglai sighed. "Li Huowang, we live in a society. We can't brandish our knives or wave our guns around just because we're facing a slight difficulty."

"You want to subject them to the law? You think that's possible? We already killed once. Do you really think the law would apply here?"

"I'm ready!" Qian Fu excitedly pulled a plastic tarp off the corner of the wall, revealing several rebars that had been ground until they were sharp.

It was clear that Qian Fu had taken them from this building after seeing the concrete on the rebars.

"Wait a minute!" Chen Hongyu stopped them. "Do you think we can solve this problem if we go and kill all of them? They're an organization that wants to rob our special powers. The people we are attacking will just be their pawns. There's a chance that the organization's higher-ups are giving instructions through a satellite phone."

Everyone was shocked to hear that.

Li Huowang said, "Since we finally have the initiative, we should make the first move. We need to strike them first to gain as much advantage as possible before settling it once and for all."

"I agree with Chen Hongyu," Qing Wanglai said. "No matter their projection, we cannot just look at the surface. It's not as easy as we think. We also have to look into their interior. Still, if we manage to deal with it at the root, we can naturally escape this danger together."

Li Huowang looked at Chen Hongyu and then at Qing Wanglai. "Then what do you want us to do if we don't fight? You think they would surrender if we pleaded with them?"

Qing Wanglai took a test tube from his pocket. The test tube was sealed, and the liquid sloshed inside.

"Evaporates easily, odorless and tasteless. It will render a person unconscious and relax all of their muscles. It will also cause temporary memory loss.”

Li Huowang’s eyes widened when he heard the effects of the drug. “You really have something like that? Where did you get it?”

It was much stronger than a taser.

“Through a legal channel,” Qing Wanglai said as he placed the test tube back into his pocket. “It’s best if we don’t have to fight. We can try to negotiate with them. This way, both of us can reap some benefits. Even if our negotiations fail, we will still get to know what their goals are. It will help us solve the mystery of their projection.

“Alright. Let’s not waste any time. We should go now.”

Li Huowang, however, held onto his tasers and rebars. He needed to make sure that he had some weapons in case Qing Wanglai’s drug failed.

All of them walked down as they carried the things together.

While they were heading down, Li Huowang asked Qing Wanglai, “Since Zhao Lei confessed, will you send him out of this country?”

“No,” Qing Wanglai shook his head. “Since Zhao Lei betrayed them, he will die if he gets out. It doesn’t matter if he’s willing—he will return to us even if I let him go. He has no choice but to stand with us.”

“How can you be so sure? Do you know him that well?”

“Not really, but he used to stand by our side.”

As they chatted, Qian Fu quickly passed by them, keeping his head low.

They turned around the corner, and Li Huowang caught a glimpse of Qian Fu’s eyes. His eyes were filled with dread.

“Qian Fu, wait. I have something to ask you.” Li Huowang sensed something was wrong. He slowly reached his hands into his shirt to take the taser.

Qian Fu ran faster.

“Quick! Chase after him! His personality changed again!” Li Huowang immediately ran after Qian Fu.

Li Huowang got closer and closer to Qian Fu, who was ultimately forced into a corner of the building. Qian Fu grabbed one of the sharpened rebars and started stabbing at everyone.

Li Huowang and the others retreated slightly as they blocked the surrounding exits.

“What are you crazy bastards trying to do? You guys are crazy! Why are you dragging me into your mess? I’ve already suffered enough! What do I need to do for you to let me go? Go away! I want to go back to the hospital! I want to get my treatment!”

“Qian Fu, don’t be rash. Look at me,” Qing Wanglai said as he slowly approached him. “Do you remember who I am? We’ve met before.”

“Who are you? You guys are a bunch of psychos, and you, Qing Wanglai, are the craziest of them all! Stop trying to fool me! I know you were the one who killed the two nurses! You are framing others for your crime too!”

Qing Wanglai frowned and whispered to Li Huowang, “This is tricky. Qian Fu’s condition is too unstable.”

“Is that so?” Li Huowang glanced at Qing Wanglai but said nothing.

“I’ll say it again! You guys are the crazy ones! Stop trying to drag me into your mess! Go away!”

“Alright, we will move. Don’t get too agitated.” Qing Wanglai gestured for the others to move away from the staircase leading downwards.

Qian Fu was about to run when a shiny object fell and shattered in front of him. He froze, then realized it was the test tube with the chemical.

He attempted to escape, but his consciousness was quickly fading. His limbs went limp and he collapsed to the ground.

Chapter 754 - Reinforcements

The sound of horse hooves never stopped as Li Huowang weaved past the mountains on horseback. Corpses were scattered everywhere, clearly indicating that it was a dangerous area.

Both sides were using Si Qi as their battleground. The situation left ordinary people in the middle, forcing them to rely on themselves for survival.

Li Huowang headed towards the place Xuan Pin had designated. He was still suspicious of Xuan Pin, but he had no choice. He needed to see things with his own eyes to confirm the truth.

Li Huowang was still wary even after having forced Xuan Pin to divulge some secrets. He might be telling me the truth, but he might also have hidden some of the details. Still, he's right—I must handle this myself. The Dharma Sect must be destroyed!

Li Huowang suddenly heard footsteps coming from the front. A group of Dharma Sect members suddenly charged towards him! All of them had black cloths wrapped around their shoulders.

Li Huowang looked at them before he quickly galloped past them. The Dharma Sect member somehow ignored him as they continued to run.

This was not the first time Li Huowang had encountered people from the Dharma Sect. He was deep in enemy territory and one wrong move could cost him his life.

He was meticulous in concealing himself with his powers, paying attention and avoiding any mistakes.

Li Huowang continued his journey until he reached the red dot displayed by the Shimmer Mirror. He stopped and looked around to find that he was in a corpse-riddled battleground.

The maggots, dogs, vultures, and crows were having a feast here. The death of humans had given them life instead.

They tore apart the corpses and littered them everywhere, causing the place to look like hell.

The stench was overbearing, but Li Huowang endured it.

He calmed the frightened horse as he looked around. He was confused about why Xuan Pin set this area as the meeting place.

The day turned to night as Li Huowang waited. The moon wasn't visible tonight and everything was dark. The only sound that reached Li Huowang's ears was the crunching of bones.

Even Li Huowang didn't know how to keep track of the time now that a single day had lost a lot of divisions. By the time he heard footsteps approaching, he didn't know what time it was, but he was certain it was during the darkest hour of the night.

He took out a glowing green stone and threw it towards the location of the sound. A strange figure appeared in front of him.

The man's appearance was weird. His skin was pale and smooth, and a braid hung down from under his cap. Li Huowang thought that the man looked like an eunuch.

The mysterious man wasn't wearing anything special either. Just a regular gray coat and a yellow robe.

But then Li Huowang noticed the strange part. He could hear footsteps, but the mysterious man left no footprints on the ground, as if he was floating.

The strange man bowed respectfully to Li Huowang. His posture gave him away as a eunuch. "Hou Shu's Deputy Chief Zhao Jiabao greets Daoist Li."

So even the royal family is sending their people here now?

"Why are we meeting here?" Li Huowang frowned.

"It's because this place has been taken over by something else.

The Dharma Sect cannot spy on us here. They can neither see nor hear us.” An ancient voice came from somewhere else.

Soon, three Lamas appeared from the stone's greenish glow. They resembled triplets and clasped their hands together to greet Li Huowang.

In contrast with the Lamas from the Antrabhara Temple, the Lamas in front of Li Huowang were covered in sutras. The sutras were written across their wrinkled skin.

Li Huowang looked at the various bone trinkets covered in gold and jewels before he realized that the three Lamas in front of him were most likely at the top of the hierarchy of the Antrabhara Temple. He recalled how the hanged Lamas were dressed similarly.

The other people slowly walked out from the darkness too.

There weren't many, but Li Huowang sensed that all of them were strong in their own right. Xuan Pin was going all out this time.

All of them greeted him at the same time. “We greet Daoist Li!”

Li Huowang looked at their attire. Apart from the monks from the Righteous Monastery, he didn't recognize any of the sects present here.

“Xuan Pin told me you know where the Dharma Sect is conducting their ritual. Is that true?” Li Huowang asked.

“Yes, Daoist Li.” Zhao Jiabao took out a map and showed it to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang glanced at the constantly shifting map before he looked at them again.

“Since you are already here, I assume that Xuan Pin has told you who we're facing this time? I know each of you is very strong, but can you defeat our enemies?”

No one here was stupid. They knew how much security the Dharma Sect had prepared to defend their ritual site against intruders.

“We are naturally not as strong as Daoist Li, but the Chief had informed us to do our best to assist you. Your strength will naturally win us the war.”

Looks like Xuan Pin did tell them that. He really likes giving the credit to others.

“Alright. Let’s talk as we move. This is not the time to be sitting down.” Li Huowang jumped onto his horse.

Li Huowang was about to urge his horse to start running when a plump woman with a mole on her face approached him. She was holding onto a black glutinous rice dumpling tied by a red thread. “Daoist Li, this is an item that will help us stay hidden. That way, the Dharma Sect won’t know we are coming.”

Li Huowang inspected the item before keeping it on his waist. “Which sect are you from?”

The woman chuckled and flirted with him. “Oh dear~ I don’t belong to any sect. I’m just a weak, frail matchmaker. I don’t think I will be able to help much.”

“Matchmaker? A devotee of God Ru?” Li Huowang looked down and saw that the matchmaker had small feet. He wasn’t sure if it was a coincidence or not.

“Are you an evil entity that became a human by asking someone and obtaining their karma?” Li Huowang joked.

The plump woman took out a red handkerchief and covered her mouth as she chuckled. “Oh, Daoist Li is such a joker. I thought all of the Daoists were boring.”

Li Huowang turned serious before urging his horse into the stench-filled battlefield.

Chapter 755 - Deity

Li Huowang got to know them better as he traveled with them. Even though they came from different backgrounds and exaggerated many of their stories, Li Huowang knew there was a kernel of truth in their words. At the very least, the black glutinous dumpling tied in the red thread was working. They were deep in enemy territory, yet no one blocked them. It was a stark difference compared to how things were last time.

Xuan Pin floated up from the ground as he looked at the various moving red dots on the Shimmer Mirror. “Don’t worry, I chose some of the best for you. We will succeed and destroy the Dharma Sect’s plan.”

“I hope so.” Li Huowang knew that it was useless to argue about it right now. The most important thing for him to do was to succeed in his mission.

“What’s happening on your end? When will you start your plan?”

Li Huowang was sitting in front of a tea stall. At this point, they were all incredibly close to the ritual site. Li Huowang was certain that they would’ve been discovered if they didn’t have the black glutinous rice.

“Look over there.” Xuan Pin pointed at a red dot in the Shimmer Mirror. The red dot was close to Li Huowang. “Once the fight starts, we will shift the battle towards this direction. Afterward, you can begin your mission.”

Li Huowang tapped on the red dot and immediately saw rows upon rows of soldiers. All of them were standing calmly despite the upcoming difficult battle.

“Do the soldiers have a Siming?” Li Huowang asked suddenly.

Li Huowang had long pondered this question about it but never had the time to ask.

“Of course.”

“Which Siming is it?”

“Jiang Xiangshou.”

“It should be helping us in the Baiyu Capital too, right?”

Xuan Pin shook his head. “You ask too much. Prepare yourself. The war drums are beating, so it's time for you to move now. The fate of everyone's lives is in your hands.”

The sound of war drums spread far and wide. Li Huowang raised his head and saw a massive dark cloud in the sky. The sound of thunder coming from the clouds rumbled dangerously.

Li Huowang quickly finished his tea before leaving. He walked past Xuan Pin's illusion and headed towards one of the smaller paths to the left.

The path led deep into the mountains. The deeper they walked, the more desolate it became. But it was surprising that such a desolate place could hide so many people.

As Li Huowang continued to walk, the experts gathered by Xuan Pin gathered around the bushes as they moved discreetly.

They swiftly took down the guards stationed by the Dharma Sect along the way.

The atmosphere grew tense as the thunder rumbled consistently, resembling the beat of a drum. Everyone's heart was racing.

Li Huowang touched the banner icon on the Shimmer Mirror but realized too late that it was a mistake. The bloodlust and murderous aura pouring out from the mirror made it hard for him to breathe.

“Kill! Kill! Kill!” To the left of the battlefield was a massive formation. The soldiers inside the formation were cloaked in murderous aura. Their eyes were bloodred as they snarled and howled.

They looked like they had lost their sanity, but their movements were surprisingly coordinated. They moved in unison as their formation shifted from one to another.

Hundreds and thousands of soldiers moved as one. Their bodies were like a shared skeleton, while the murderous aura enveloping them was their blood.

Compared to them, the Dharma Sect was just a group of ragtag refugees. Despite their massive numbers, their formation was in shambles.

Just then, You Zixiong swung down his yellow-colored triangular flag. “Charge forth towards the Heavens and Earth! Transform into a tiger with wings! Subdue the tiger and amplify its power! Use it wisely and transform it infinitely! Never doubt your potential!”

The soldiers shouted. The murderous aura solidified and pushed Li Huowang’s vision out from the mirror.

Li Huowang decided not to touch the Shimmer Mirror for now. He also noticed that he had reached his destination.

In front of him was a massive wooden city wall. To think that the Dharma Sect had built a city in the middle of a mountain.

Even though the wall was covered in red cloth, the green leaves on the wood were a clear indication that they had been chopped down not too long ago.

The sound of thunder rumbled again as it started to rain heavily.

Li Huowang took a deep breath as he saw the Dharma Sect members pouring out from the city to charge into the battlefield. He ensured he was safe before several tentacles sprouted out from his body.

“Let’s go!” Li Huowang stomped the ground and jumped forward. He was about to crash into the wall when he imagined that he was entering a pond instead.

His body phased through the wooden walls and he entered the city.

Li Huowang was surprised by what he saw inside the city. There was a massive statue of a deity with four legs.

The statue was hidden under a massive bamboo hat. Underneath the bamboo hat were innumerable red ribbons tied to several different areas of the city, forming red bridges leading towards the statue.

Li Huowang ignored the gazes on him as he grabbed one of the red ribbons. He looked down and saw an altar covered in white smoke.

I have to destroy it no matter what they're trying to summon.

Several witches from the Dharma Sect approached Li Huowang in an attempt to stop him. This was where the experts came in. They intercepted the witches so that Li Huowang could fight freely.

Li Huowang approached the altar before being stopped by a strange person blocking his path.

The person wore a rectangular hat, but instead of having a regular veil at the front, it was a veil made of flesh.

At first, Li Huowang thought the person's face had melted off, but he then realized that it was actually a veil. The veil was essentially several organs and skin sewn together.

The person also had red ribbons coming out from his sleeves or hanging from his body.

Li Huowang then saw the person's legs. To his surprise, the person had chicken legs!

The chicken-feet man ignored Li Huowang as he worshipped the deity on the altar. He carefully lit up some incense and danced.

The white smoke from the incense pot moved according to the chicken-feet man's rhythm.

Every time he finished a section of the dance, the chicken-feet man would lie down or kneel down, raising the incense high up into the air to pray to the deity.

The white smoke from the incense floated towards the top of the statue and into the depths of the bamboo hat, where numerous red ribbons originated from.

The strange ritual was being conducted during the rain.

Li Huowang gritted his teeth as he saw the chicken-feet man ignoring him.

He's not from the Dharma Sect! His strange dance, the statue, and the entire ritual look entirely different from what the Dharma Sect does!

Li Huowang didn't care what it was—he knew that the chicken-feet man was his enemy, and that was enough.

Li Huowang raised his head. A horse neighed loudly while Peng Longteng charged towards the chicken-feet man with her halberd. She swung her halberd down with enough force to crush the chicken-feet man's head.

Chapter 756 - Chicken-Feet Man

The halberd swung down, but instead of hitting the chicken-feet man, Peng Longteng struck the altar. Stones sprayed everywhere, but the chicken-feet man remained unscathed.

Peng Longteng frowned and kicked her left leg into the horse's stomach. The horse lifted its left leg and kicked the chicken-feet man, who was now carrying the incense burner.

But the chicken-feet man's body twisted bizarrely, causing the horse's kick to miss him. The flesh veil trembled as he moved.

Just then, the chicken-feet man sensed that the rain had stopped. He looked up and saw Peng Longteng was already in front of him with her halberd already swinging down.

He swung his hand and threw the incense burner high up into the air. Just as he was about to attack Peng Longteng, he sensed the air rippling behind him.

It was Li Huowang with his three swords! Li Huowang decided to attack at the same time as Peng Longteng to destroy the ritual as soon as possible.

The two of them had almost hit the chicken-feet man when the flesh veil expanded outwards. A snarling beast's face bit into Peng Longteng's face.

Just as the beast bit into Peng Longteng's face, she opened her mouth and bit back. At the same time, she swung her halberd the other way around to attack from the bottom.

The chicken-feet man raised his legs and stepped forcefully on the halberd. The sound of clanking metal exploded! Clank! Clank clank!

Even though the chicken-feet man was kicking down the sharp halberd, his feet were not injured at all. Li Huowang hadn't expected this. His feet are as strong as metal!

The chicken-feet man utilized his momentum to jump high into the air. He dodged both Peng Longteng and Li Huowang's attacks before landing safely.

After landing, he extended his arms and caught the incense burner that had been flying in the air. He then continued the ritual as he danced beside the statue.

"What the fuck!?" Peng Longteng spat out a bloody wad of saliva after losing half of her face. She was suddenly engulfed in flames, and her armor glowed a dull red.

"Charge!" Peng Longteng held her massive burning halberd as she charged towards the strange chicken-feet man.

But the mysterious chicken-feet man was surprisingly strong. He didn't lose to Peng Longteng even though she was on fire.

Both of them fought valiantly in the heavy downpour.

After some time, both of them took a step back. The chicken-feet man slowly placed the incense burner down before a guttural beast-like growl came from behind his flesh veil. He stomped his chicken feet down onto the ground like nails before slowly dragging them backward, causing a screeching sound.

The chicken-feet man then howled like a wolf. Out of nowhere, a Bei[1] jumped out from nowhere and hopped onto the chicken-feet man's back. It used its slender legs to hook itself tightly onto the chicken-feet man's shoulder.

Both of them howled at the same time. Several invisible figures emerged from everywhere and dived into the chicken-feet man's body.

As more invisible figures entered him, his body rapidly expanded. Several beast faces began appearing on his body as the ribbons on his body started pumping like arteries.

The chicken-feet man became monstrous and a strange ancient aura started radiating off him. The aura induced a feeling of horror to those affected by it.

Peng Longteng was naturally unaffected by the aura. She sensed that the beast's aura was at its peak before she threw her halberd at it.

The chicken-feet man was about to hit back when the ground beneath him collapsed. He lost his balance and his attack missed.

Before he could stabilize himself, a purple-tassel sword filled with murderous aura suddenly stabbed upwards from the ground beneath him.

The chicken-feet man was about to step on the purple-tassel sword when another attack came from the bottom. A rift flew towards him as it sprayed out a mysterious liquid.

One of his chicken feet stepped into the rift. Before he knew it, half of his body was already in the Qi Kingdom.

Several distorted organs sprayed out with blood before falling onto the ground. No matter how strong he was, he still died from that attack.

Li Huowang swiftly swam out from the ground. He quickly cut down the incense burner in half.

He sighed in relief when he saw the white smoke dissipated.

He then looked up at the statue still covered in the bamboo hat. "You can't cross over now! Your incense has been cut off!"

"Li! Turn around!" Peng Longteng suddenly called for him.

He turned around and saw why. There was a floating incense censer appearing from the depths of the mist. The white mist around Li Huowang suddenly solidified a lot.

The owner of the censer soon made his appearance, too. It was also another chicken-feet man with a flesh veil covering his face. He danced in the same strange rhythm as the ritual to summon down the deity continued.

But this time, the chicken-feet man was dancing on a single leg.

Li Huowang frowned because he knew the ritual had yet to be interrupted. He then saw several more censers appear out of the mist.

At first, there was one, then two, then five, then ten, and then there were too many for him to count. All the chicken-feet men hopped out from the rain and mist on one leg.

Water splashed everywhere as they hopped up and down.

Li Huowang's heart fell because he knew he was in trouble if all of them were as strong as the first one.

"Hey! Are you all done up there? Where are you guys? Are you all dead?" Li Huowang shouted towards the red ribbons on top of his head.

Dak! A strange, deformed man holding onto a single blade landed near Li Huowang. He had four artificial limbs on his back, but all of them were now broken.

Soon, Zhao Jiabao, the matchmaker, and the others landed too.

The atmosphere was tense.

Before long, everyone from Li Huowang's side had landed, but Li Huowang saw that they were still outmatched. It was going to be a bitter battle.

1. A legendary wolf that's crippled but has increased intellect.

Chapter 757 - Break

Even though Xuan Pin had told him they had lured away most of the Dharma Sect members, the people conducting the ritual here were still very powerful. It was clear that they didn't come from the Dharma Sect.

Li Huowang took one look at the glowing red dot in the Shimmer Mirror before turning to the incense smoke arising from multiple directions around him. He gripped his spine sword tightly.

“Xuan Pin said that you would die if I ordered all of you to do so. Now is the time! I don't know what they are worshipping, but we have to stop them! I will charge in with everyone. Your life is in your hands from now on! Go!”

No one hesitated as Li Huowang gave his order. They all followed Li Huowang's red robes as they charged into the horde of chicken-feet men. The sound of them killing each other never stopped.

Li Huowang's purple-tassel sword stabbed into one of the chicken-feet men's abdomen. At the same time, the chicken-feet man stabbed his talon into Li Huowang's abdomen. While they made their moves simultaneously, Li Huowang could tolerate pain beyond what the chicken-feet man had imagined.

Li Huowang opened his mouth as several tentacles shot out and plastered themselves onto the chicken-feet man's face.

He took advantage of the chicken-feet man's panic and twisted his sword upwards. The chicken-feet man was bisected.

Li Huowang stomped on the censer, but he wasn't happy. He only killed one of the many chicken-feet men.

The censers continued to release incense smoke, covering the entire ritual area in a white haze. No matter where it drifted, the smoke ultimately floated towards the top of the statue.

The ritual continued uninterrupted, and they knew they were losing time. They had to deal with it no matter the cost.

Li Huowang dragged one of the corpses closer to him and tore its abdomen open. He then vomited his own daughter into the corpse before setting his own skin on fire.

Ba-Hui somehow sensed his presence, and Li Huowang's body tore open. Flames surged into his wounds and burned his organs too.

"AAAAAH! BA-HUI, YOU MOTHERFUCKER!" Li Huowang kneeled on the ground in pain as he cursed.

The pain had somehow increased even more than it did last time.

He looked at the flames on his body, which were being extinguished by the rain before lighting up again and again, and he realized why.

Li Huowang tasted the rain—it was salty.

It was a bad premonition, and his heart raced. Xuan Pin was right! This is not god Yu'er coming down here! I need to hurry up and stop them!

Li Huowang stood up and flames burst forth from his body. He was like a wicker man that burned everything around him.

The chicken-feet men felt something was wrong after seeing Li Huowang's transformation. Many of them surrounded Li Huowang as they worked together to bring him down.

Various beasts howled as their bodies turned beast-like. They attacked Li Huowang simultaneously as the red ribbons pumped rhythmically.

Li Huowang brandished a dagger and opened a slit on his abdomen. He tore off a large piece of his flesh and skin before throwing it at one of the chicken-feet men. The burning skin covered the chicken-feet man and didn't break, no matter how hard he struggled.

Li Huowang then picked up several stones and chewed them forcefully. He spat out his broken teeth along with his burning blood.

The burning molars shot forward like a buckshot, piercing many of the chicken-feet men and inflicting burning wounds.

Li Huowang was about to charge into the fray when two birds appeared in the rain.

They flew high up as they circled the statue. One had the face of a human, while the other had the face of a horse. They sang in unison in an ugly tone.

“Recollect the murderous aura~ Receive their souls~ Recollect the murderous aura~ Receive their souls~”

As they sang, the red ribbons originating from underneath the bamboo hat started to vibrate a little.

Even though the vibrations were minute, Li Huowang still managed to sense them. He became anxious and launched several heavy-hitting attacks.

However, the chicken-feet men didn’t budge—they just stood still as they took on the attacks. They only started to dodge when they realized that Li Huowang outmatched them.

Even when Li Huowang and his group used all of their strongest attacks, the white smoke only cleared a little bit. The ritual continued on since the white smoke had yet to dissipate.

“Slow! It’s too slow!” Li Huowang tore off his rib bones, and maggots sprayed outwards like confetti. He used the Five Element Intercalation as he sprayed the burning maggots onto the group of chicken-feet men.

Li Huowang knew they were in deep trouble when he heard the scalp-numbing sound of the moving statue. Everything would be over if he didn’t stop them now.

Li Huowang rapidly thought about his array of techniques, only to realize that none of them could help avert the crisis—except for the Cang-Qiang Ascension.

Just then, Zhao Jiabao jumped to Li Huowang's side, enduring the heat. With his only remaining arm, he took out a piece of paper and held it out. "Daoist Li! Take this! This is the note that the Chief told me to give you!"

"A note at this time? Who the fuck does he think he is?" Li Huowang swiftly opened the note for fear that the fire would burn it before he could read it.

Li Huowang was shocked. "What?! You mean the teleportation technique was due to my cultivation? He never had any teleportation techniques?!"

But he didn't have time to bother with that now as he continued reading.

Li Huowang, now that you know the truth, I can't save you through teleportation. We're sinking the boat with an axe, leaving no escape. Only then can you use your full powers. Don't worry—there is a way out. Your ability to bring yourself all the way here from Qing Qiu shows your mastery in cultivation. If you're in danger, you can conjure up anything with your cultivation to save yourself. Think carefully, the clue to averting this crisis is within you. What can you conjure now to save yourself?

"Something that I can conjure to save myself?" Various memories surfaced in Li Huowang's mind.

He remembered something, and his pupils shrunk. Li Huowang immediately pressed his temple and started using his power. A white figure slowly appeared in the air.

Li Huowang's veins were bulging and his head was engorged from the exertion, but the figure never fully materialized.

He was dismayed as his arteries continued to pump blood into his brain. He suddenly remembered his spine sword. He unsheathed and stabbed it onto the ground.

He then stared at the sword.

Blood flowed out of his nose as he continued to use his powers. Even the blood vessels in his brain started to pop one by one.

But the spine sword slowly transformed itself. First, there were organs, then flesh, then skin, and finally, clothes.

Pak! A white fan opened and Li Huowang saw the four words written on it.

Everyone. Has. Their. Purpose.

Chapter 758 - Death

The scholar in white stood still in the pouring rain, standing out to everyone.

It was the previous dead Zhuge Yuan that Li Huowang had brought back to life using the spine sword.

Zhugue Yuan took one look around and knew what was happening. He held onto his brush and dipped it into the red ground. He held onto it tightly and swung the brush across the chicken-feet men.

His brush was like his original Kuixing Brush. The chicken-feet men all slumped to the ground when he pointed his brush at them. The censer was also extinguished without any hope of it lighting up again.

Zhugue Yuan turned and looked at Li Huowang. “Junior Li, we haven’t seen each other in a while. How is everything?”

Li Huowang endured the head-splitting pain and wanted to smile, but the pain forced him to kneel down again.

He had to be clear that even though the man in front of him looked similar to Zhuge Yuan, he was not the real one. Li Huowang had materialized him using his cultivation of ‘Truth.’

Now that his cultivation had reached a great height, he could conjure Zhuge Yuan using the spine sword, but it was ultimately not the real deal. He was well aware that the original Zhuge Yuan was already dead.

He conjured Zhuge Yuan as a tool to help him fight, just like Peng Longteng! He could not attach any emotions to the Zhuge Yuan in front of him.

He wanted to differentiate what was real from what was not, but as he tried to do so, Zhuge Yuan’s body started to crumble rapidly. He was on the brink of turning back into the spine sword.

The existence of anything conjured using his cultivation depended on his thoughts. He couldn't differentiate them clearly if he wished to use his powers. If he convinced himself that the Zhuge Yuan in front of him was fake, Li Huowang wouldn't be able to sustain Zhuge Yuan's existence.

Zhuce Yuan sensed what was wrong. "Junior Li, regardless of whether I'm fake, I will cease to exist the moment you think I'm fake."

Li Huowang howled and looked at Zhuge Yuan with tearful eyes.

Zhuce Yuan's crumbling body stopped and rematerialized.

Staring at the familiar face, Li Huowang extended his fingers and pointed at the enemies around them.

"Kill... Kill them all!"

Zhuce Yuan nodded and waved his brush in the air.

The chicken-feet men started dropping like flies. They sensed that something was seriously wrong.

This time, every single one of them focused on the groveling Li Huowang rather than the formidable Zhuge Yuan.

They had seen how Li Huowang conjured Zhuge Yuan and guessed what would happen if Li Huowang died first. But they couldn't get close to Li Huowang with Zhuge Yuan blocking all of them.

The battle was over the moment Zhuge Yuan appeared.

The chicken-feet men struggled and used various methods, but Zhuge Yuan stopped all of them. The difference in strength was clear.

The chicken-feet men were like children compared to Zhuge Yuan. A single stroke of his brush killed many of them. Their incense censers were also extinguished and the white smoke no longer drifted into the bamboo hat.

In the end, Zhuge Yuan stood alone on the bloody altar, gripping his sword. The only sound that remained was that of the falling rain.

“Junior Li, let me go. I’m the fake Zhuge Yuan. The real one is already dead.”

Li Huowang held onto his head as he slumped onto the ground. He panted as the rain continued to fall on him.

Maintaining Zhuge Yuan’s materialization for even a single moment hurt him a lot. He felt that his head was going to burst.

Without Li Huowang’s power, Zhuge Yuan’s body swiftly crumbled away. Before he was gone, he asked one last question.

“Junior Li, could I ask you one thing? Is the Qi Kingdom safe?”

Li Huowang nodded slightly and Zhuge Yuan turned back into the spine sword happily. It fell and embedded itself into the ground.

“Father,” Li Sui crawled towards Li Huowang and helped him up. “Father, don’t worry. Your head is still here.”

Li Huowang ignored her and stood up to see the aftermath of their battle.

The corpses of the chicken-feet men were littered around the altar. Almost all of them were dead, while the remaining ones were being hunted down by Zhao Jiabao and the rest.

The rain mixed with the blood in the wooden city. The grand city in the middle of the mountain was completely soaked in blood.

In the middle of the blood-soaked city was the massive statue covered in ribbons, depicting the deity with four legs.

It looked more scary with the blood on it, but at least it wasn’t moving anymore. Li Huowang sighed in relief.

But he did not let his guard down. He turned and commanded Zhao Jiabao, “Bring your people and spread out. Kill everyone in this city and leave no one alive!”

He mustn’t let his guard down at the moment of their victory. He dared not risk it since it was directly related to the demise of the Dharma Sect.

He tried to stand up on his own, but the blossoming pain in his head prevented him from doing so.

Zhuge Yuan was a Twisted One, so he needed more strength to conjure him. He was barely able to do so, even by using the spine sword as a medium.

“Xuan Pin! Xuan Pin, get over here!” Li Huowang shouted loudly. He was angry, yet Xuan Pin’s illusion surprisingly didn’t appear this time.

“Xuan Pin! Get out of here!” Li Huowang shouted in the rain but nothing happened.

“You think you can hide? Just you wait till I get back!” Li Huowang cursed.

He felt the pain in his head subsiding a bit before he stood up. He looked towards the left and saw some of the blood flowing out from the window of the buildings.

It seemed that there were other people in the city besides the chicken-feet man. He wasn’t sure what the city was being used for.

Still, everything was now over.

He looked up at the massive statue and saw that it remained motionless.

“The Dharma Sect has failed this time, right?”

He brought out the Shimmer Mirror to check how the frontlines were doing when he saw something that made his blood run cold.

The massive red dot representing the allied soldiers had a bite mark on it. It was as if something massive had eaten the soldiers!

Chapter 759 - Being

Li Huowang stared at the Shimmer Mirror. He thought he was seeing things wrong because of his pounding headache.

The red dot representing the soldiers in formation had indeed been bitten by something!

“Impossible! I just interrupted the ritual!” Li Huowang looked at the motionless statue and then at the dead chicken-feet men lying in the pools of blood.

Li Huowang snarled as he touched the glowing red dot on the Shimmer Mirror. He needed to know what was happening.

His vision changed, and he found himself riding a warhorse and galloping away from the battlefield.

He turned around and saw an incomprehensible sight. The soldier’s massive formation was fighting against an invisible being.

Even though it was invisible, it was still clearly present. Every time it moved, the space around it distorted and sank.

By staring at the distorted space, Li Huowang saw that the being had four legs. It was both enormous and flat, with several ribbon-like objects floating around its body in the air.

Other than that, Li Huowang couldn’t make out any more details.

“What is that? What the fuck is that?” He gritted his teeth so hard that they cracked. No matter what it was, the Dharma Sect had successfully summoned that being down into the mortal realm. It appeared that they had a backup ritual somewhere else.

Even if they stopped the ritual here, the Dharma Sect’s other ritual had succeeded.

Taishan Shi’s memory was faulty to begin with! Regardless of whether the Dharma Sect had intentionally kept him in the dark or if this was part of their trap, the situation had taken a turn for the worse.

Li Huowang snapped himself out of the Shimmer Mirror. “Go! Go towards the southwest and help them!”

Zhao Jiabao and the others wasted no time and immediately moved. They quickly charged towards the southwestern part of the frontline.

Li Huowang also prepared to follow them. His head was hurting, but he decided to go too.

He had to go. Otherwise, the invisible being would kill the soldiers. By then, the entire Liang Kingdom would be a sitting duck for the Dharma Sect to invade.

“I need to go! Faster!” Li Huowang held onto his head as he shouted.

Splurt! A sharp halberd pierced through his chest. Peng Longteng swung the halberd, forcefully launching Li Huowang high into the southwestern direction. Her immense strength made it possible for her to throw Li Huowang way past the city wall’s height.

The rain and wind were still intense. Li Huowang couldn’t open his eyes as he flew in the air. He could only determine his direction after landing and using the Shimmer Mirror.

Li Huowang wasn’t sure how far he had flown or how many times he was thrown, but he knew he had reached his destination when the cold air high in the sky froze his charred body. He saw that he was directly above the red dot.

He fell through the clouds and saw the being directly. It sat still in the middle of the crater-filled battleground.

It looked like a toad but was even more deformed than one. It resembled the statue in the wooden city, but there were also some differences.

Its body was shifting slightly. Somehow, its previously invisible body was now crawling with wriggling steel and flesh.

Li Huowang only realized what it was after he heard war cries—it was the soldiers! The soldiers were using their bodies to latch onto the being like ants!

The being suddenly shouted, its voice a mix of a wolf and a tiger. It shook off the soldiers from its body, causing them to rain down

The soldiers retreated slightly, and the being returned to its original form. It was distorting the space around it, but its body was still transparent.

The soldiers' attacks appeared ineffective, or maybe they worked, but the being's blood was also invisible.

The soldiers that had fallen regrouped, yet Li Huowang visibly saw their strength diminishing.

“Xuan Pin! Xuan Pin! I don't know where you are, but you better show yourself now! There's a huge problem here! Don't tell me you don't see that massive fucking being! Don't tell me you don't have any backup plans for something like this, you sly old fox! The Dharma Sect actually managed to summon the being, so stop hiding your secrets!”

Li Huowang's voice echoed across the battlefield, but there was no answer. It was as if Xuan Pin didn't care about what was happening.

Li Huowang was angry but somehow he had a feeling that something like this was going to happen. He then slowly approached the being.

“Xuan Pin, if I get back alive, you better clench your teeth!”

Li Huowang howled and Peng Longteng materialized. She hooked Li Huowang's shoulder with her halberd, and they both charged into the battlefield.

But the being was so massive that they underestimated their distance. Li Huowang ran on horseback for more than fifteen minutes before he reached the proximity of the being.

He only sensed how strong the being was when he got close. A strange feeling was bubbling from the being's body, assimilating everything around it.

It was the feeling of barbarity and ambition.

Even though Xuan Pin said it wasn't a Siming, Li Huowang thought it was already close to one. Only Simings had the power to assimilate their surroundings into themselves.

The sound of a horrifying creaking reverberated as the being crunched on the soldiers. A lot of them were smashed into a pulp of flesh and blood as they rained down.

Once again, the soldiers latched onto the being's body as they attacked with their weapons, but none of them did any sizable damage.

It was as if the being was impervious to the weapons.

"What should I do?" Li Huowang didn't know what to do against such a being, but he needed to conjure someone since the soldiers were dropping like flies. "Fuck! I have to try it no matter what."

Li Huowang gripped the spine sword, but the pain in his head had yet to recede. He placed the spine sword back onto his back.

"No, I can't conjure another Zhuge Yuan right now. I need someone else."

Chapter 760 - Ma Tuo

Li Huowang had some other ideas after he managed to conjure Zhuge Yuan. Since he could do it with Zhuge Yuan, he should be able to conjure others too.

But he was looking for someone only slightly weaker than Zhuge Yuan, and he didn't know many people who fit that bill.

He wasn't sure if it would work, but he would rather give it a try than give up.

Even if his attacks only bought some time, it would still give others hope that reinforcements would arrive later.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and recalled the moment when Dan Yangzi took over his body. It was a memory that he had tried to hide in the past, but now, he was digging it up.

Li Huowang's charred skin grew back, but instead of his original skin, it was skin and flesh covered in wrinkles.

His skin turned into a tar-like substance as feathers protruded out. Li Huowang's head also split into three, forming the three heads of Dan Yangzi. The youthful, middle-aged, and elderly faces of Dan Yangzi appeared as a white shawl swiftly grew on his shoulder.

All three mouths opened at the same time. "Hahaha! I'm alive! I knew I would have the same lifespan as the Heavens themselves! Li Huowang was fake! He's just part of my Three Corpses!"

As he shouted, Dan Yangzi's organs swiftly grew outside of his body. He ignored everything and floated upwards.

The invisible being that had been decimating the soldiers was immediately transfixed on Dan Yangzi the moment he appeared. The aura of a Half-Immortal was special.

It started moving as the soldiers hung onto its body for dear life. The being charged towards Dan Yangzi in an attempt to ram him.

“What is this stupid beast that’s trying to stop me from becoming an Immortal?” Dan Yangzi thrust his hands into his organs and pulled out a fleshy bronze coin sword.

Dan Yangzi blocked the being with his sword, but he was still knocked backward by the massive impact. Luckily, he remained unharmed from the attack.

Dan Yangzi steadied himself in the air and bit into the three fingers on his right hand. He started writing several runes on his bronze coin sword using his black blood.

“Supreme Heavenly Star of the Altar, respond to me with haste! Expel all evils and bind all demons for me to achieve peace of mind. The Three Souls endure for all eternity while the spirit remains unscattered. Respond to my command with haste and urgency!”

As he finished his rune, the eyeballs on the bronze coin sword exploded, forming a dense red mist. Dan Yangzi swung his sword, and the red mist flew towards the being.

Even though it was powerful, it was still ineffective against the invisible being. No matter what kind of technique Dan Yangzi used, they all landed ineffectively on the being.

Dan Yangzi had used all of his techniques, but he was still outmatched. An invisible tail slapped Dan Yangzi, dispersing his body. The weakened Li Huowang fell downwards.

“I guess it was useless?” Li Huowang fell onto the ground. His breath was ragged, and he was on the verge of death.

The being wanted to kill Li Huowang to stop any future threats against it. Suddenly, the hundreds and thousands of soldiers adopted a martial arts stance and raised three incense sticks in their hands.

The unusual movement of the soldiers caused the being to ignore Li Huowang, charging back toward the soldiers.

Just as the being was about to crash into the soldiers, they all opened their eyes in unison. They stabbed the incense sticks into the ground at the same time.

“We soldiers are machines! The realm of life and death, the path of survival and extinction! Jiang Xiangshou is above us! Jiang Xiangshou is in our heart! Jiang Xiangshou is under us! Annihilate the Gods! Annihilate the Immortals! Annihilate the Buddhas! Annihilate the Daos!”

An enormous amount of murderous aura surged into all of their bodies. All of their bodies were barely able to contain the murderous aura as they suppressed their bodies from exploding. Veins bulged and blood trickled out from their orifices.

The soldiers in formation and the being crashed into each other, but neither side gave away.

The sound of the horrific crash came again, and Li Huowang was affected by the feeling bubbling off from the being’s body. He felt the unending barbarity in the air and the ambition that could never be satisfied.

Regardless of what the being was, Li Huowang sensed that it was holding onto two different Heavenly Daos.

Wait, barbarity? Li Huowang realized something and stood up shakily. He looked towards the being and sensed the change in the air. The Heavenly Dao also visibly affected the soldiers as their strength waned.

The closer Li Huowang got, the more familiar the feeling got. He sensed a familiar feeling before, one that was very warm.

Ambition was an offspring of greed.

“Wait, answer me! Are you holding onto the Heavenly Dao of Greed?!” Li Huowang shouted angrily.

But the being ignored him, continuing to clash with the soldiers.

The being did not answer him, but Li Huowang was sure now.

He remembered that greed used to be paired with rot, but something had changed. Now, greed was paired with barbarity instead. One of the Siming's Heavenly Daos had been plundered.

The only Natural Disaster that happened recently that involved rot was the day when the Benevolent Nunnery was destroyed.

“You?! YOU KILLED ABBESS JING XIN? YOU KILLED THEM ALL?”

Li Huowang's eyes were bloodshot as he glared at the being. His anger continued to grow until it threatened to swallow him whole.

Li Huowang embedded the spine sword onto the ground as he howled in anger. A ribcage slowly grew on the spine sword.

Li Huowang's head expanded continuously as veins covered his scalp.

Zhuge Yuan's body was only halfway materialized when he slumped onto the ground with blood flowing out from all of his orifices.

He could cultivate the 'Truth,' but using it to materialize Zhuge Yuan, the Twisted One of the Three Ancient Ones, strained his body too much.

Zhuge Yuan's body was slowly crumbling away when Li Sui tunneled into Li Huowang's body. “Dad, let me help you! I will help you! Zhuge Yuan is real!”

Their thoughts linked together. Li Sui, who had been eating Li Huowang's flesh and blood, finally showed her usefulness. Zhuge Yuan's body swiftly materialized.

But even with Li Sui's help, Zhuge Yuan's body was still incomplete.

“A little more! Just a little more!” Li Huowang fell onto the ground in pain. “MATERIALIZE!”

Pop! Li Huowang's head exploded, leaving only the stump of his neck exposed in the air.

At the same time, Zhuge Yuan materialized.

Zhuge Yuan stared at the being fighting against the soldiers and frowned. “The ritual had been interrupted, so how did Ma Tuo get summoned here?”

Chapter 761 - Change

Zhugue Yuan's question was destined to remain unanswered. He was the only one who knew the being's name: Ma Tuo.

Li Huowang's head was missing, so he didn't answer Zhugue Yuan's question either.

Still, Li Huowang's head exploding finally allowed him to catch a glimpse of the being's actual body. It looked just like the statue from earlier—the one with the bamboo hat.

However, the statue was but an interpretation of Ma Tuo. Its actual body couldn't be captured by mortals and chiseled in stone.

The bamboo hat was not its head—it was its heart! Furthermore, the various red ribbons were actually its blood vessels.

The other interesting feature of the Ma Tuo was its head. Ma Tuo's head was an ever-changing amalgamation of beasts. The beasts disappeared and reappeared, with some detaching and flowing on the red ribbons towards the heart. It was a horrifying sight.

Without his head, Li Huowang could finally see Ma Tuo's invisible features. He was certain that if he still had his head, he wouldn't be able to look at it for even a single second.

“Senior Zhugue!”

Zhugue Yuan heard the voice and took out his almanac before looking at the ground. In the middle of a pool of blood, he saw half of Li Huowang's mouth.

“That thing! Its left leg is injured! That's its weakness! Attack there!”

Zhugue Yuan leaped into action. He flew towards Ma Tuo and pointed his brush at Ma Tuo's left leg.

Zhuge Yuan was not the only one who heard Li Huowang's words—Peng Longteng and the other soldiers also did. They moved in unison.

“Junior Li! Hold on! Give me a little bit of time!”

Zhuge Yuan suddenly jumped behind Peng Longteng and began drawing on her back. “General Peng, do you have the courage for this gambit?”

Peng Longteng saw the massive being in front of her and laughed. “What do you mean courage? We kill the Gods, Immortals, and the Daos! Kill them all!”

Just as she finished shouting, Zhuge Yuan had also finished drawing. It was a drawing of a demon filled with a murderous aura. The demon had a belt made out of skulls, green skin, and large fangs. It was eating the viscera of a poor man.

For the final touches, Zhuge Yuan painted the demon's eyes, which were filled with bloodlust and glee.

And so, the drawing came to life. The demon laughed, crawling out from Peng Longteng's back and superimposing itself on her. The demon's face was perfectly layered with her face, making her look even more menacing.

Zhuge Yuan never stopped, continuing to wave his brush around. Peng Longteng's massive frame slowly became thinner, and she eventually became a flat piece of art.

Ma Tuo tried to cover its injured leg, but the soldiers coordinated their efforts, sending two cavalries to protect Zhuge Yuan with their very lives.

“Open!” Zhuge Yuan waved his brush on Ma Tuo's injured leg. The flat Peng Longteng easily slipped into its wounds, hurting Ma Tuo and making its attacks less frequent.

The other soldiers finally saw hope when a blood-red liquid flowed out from the injury. They sent a small group of soldiers to pierce the wounds like a lance and attack from the inside.

Ma Tuo wanted to retaliate, but Zhuge Yuan threw his almanac into the air. “Prohibited: Siming descending onto this world!”

The old almanac only burned halfway. Li Huowang’s current cultivation wasn’t strong enough for it to elicit its complete effect.

But it was enough. Zhuge Yuan saw Ma Tuo’s body flickering and smiled. He then changed back into his spine sword. He had done his best.

The soldiers continued to pour into Ma Tuo’s wounds before tearing the wound wide open. Ma Tuo finally lost balance and fell onto the ground.

Li Huowang struggled to stand up as he held onto his sharpened rebar. He struggled for breath, staring at the large lorry burning after crashing into the wall.

The others looked at Li Huowang with shock. Wu Qi gave him a thumbs up. “What a badass.”

“See? What did I tell you? Your chemical doesn’t work!”

Li Huowang touched his head but found that it wasn’t there. He then collapsed onto the ground. Soon, a palm-sized skin doll appeared from his abdomen. It grew into Li Huowang’s size.

However, it was as flat as a leaf that could be blown away by the slightest wind. The doll ate Li Huowang’s shadow before expanding.

Li Huowang sighed in relief after he was revived. A smile spread across his face as he looked at the unmoving Ma Tuo.

The Dharma Sect’s plan had failed. Ma Tuo was dead, and Li Huowang had won.

Ma Tuo’s body crumbled to dust, leaving nothing behind. The only thing that remained was Peng Longteng’s flattened body.

Li Huowang felt tired. He had just changed into a new body, but the fatigue remained—mental fatigue.

He wanted to sleep forever.

“Father, are you alright?” Li Sui carefully helped him up.

“I’m fine.” Li Huowang’s eyes were unfocused when he said that.

“Father, look! The people are coming here! Someone is here to help us.”

“Reinforcements? Why are they only coming now?!” Li Huowang suddenly had a surge of strength as he got up and approached the sound of the horses’ hooves.

Li Huowang was dizzy, and everything kept changing form in front of him. It took him a long time to recognize that there was a horse in front of him.

Li Huowang gritted his teeth, stabbing his own feet with the purple-tassel sword to wake himself up.

“Xuan Pin?! Where is Xuan Pin?!” Li Huowang shouted at the reinforcement. “Xuan Pin, get over here!”

Li Huowang had lost all of his trust in that old fox.

A familiar voice called out to him. “Senior Li.”

Li Huowang looked up and saw that it was Gao Zhijian, the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom. He was holding a wooden plate with a grim expression.

“Why are you here? Where is Xuan Pin? Get him over here!”

Gao Zhijian was devastated when he passed the wooden plate to Li Huowang. “Senior Li, Xuan Pin is dead.”

On the wooden plate were Xuan Pin’s red robes. Li Huowang was stunned and only recognized what it was after a long time.

“Senior Li, Xuan Pin really is dead. Just as you were having trouble, he had unforeseen circumstances there too...”

Li Huowang took a deep breath and paced around as he got angrier.

“You... Mother fuckers!” Li Huowang suddenly slapped the wooden plate away, causing Xuan Pin’s red robes to fall to the ground.

“Why?! Why is everyone the same?!”

Chapter 762 - Fatigue

"I believed you were strong! I believed you were cunning! Didn't you use me like a chess piece? I thought you could summon the dead! You even successfully summoned a dead Siming, the Divine Mountain Ghost Eye! And this is how your life ends? Just like that? Are you kidding me?!"

Li Huowang shouted and vented his frustration towards everyone. He didn't care if Xuan Pin heard him. He just needed to let it all out before his bottled emotions drove him crazy again.

"Weren't you arrogant? Didn't you say you were strong? You said you could help the Simings and uncover their secrets! I had thought you were someone amazing. But now? You're dead, just like that? Embarrassing! Xuan Pin, you are a disgrace!"

Li Huowang's angry face abruptly transformed into one of laughter. "Hehehe, you're trying to trick me, aren't you? You're faking your death, right? Bullshit! I don't believe that you are dead! You won't trick me! Xuan Pin! Get over here! The Sitting Oblivion Dao has used this technique for ages!"

"Senior Li!" Gao Zhijian held onto Li Huowang's shoulders, his grief evident in his voice. "Senior Li, don't be like this. Calm down, I know you're sad, but—"

"Hah! I'm sad? Who do you think he is? I won't be sad because of his death! In fact, he's just playing tricks on me again! This isn't the first time he has done this. I had yet to make him pay for everything he had done, and now you're telling me he's dead?"

Li Huowang stood still as he laughed. "Do you think that's plausible, Gao Zhijian? Do you think that's plausible?! Why? Why do they keep throwing all the problems at me while they just kick the bucket?! Why?!"

He was not only referring to Xuan Pin.

Gao Zhijian didn't know how to answer. He stood there and just looked at Li Huowang.

As Li Huowang slowly accepted the news, Gao Zhijian said, "Senior Li, I know you have reservations about Xuan Pin, but he was working really hard without rest. He did everything he could in places where you couldn't see. You didn't know this, but he was actually heavily injured. He didn't even get to recover, and he refused to let you know because he was afraid of your powers."

Gao Zhijian slowly explained, "When the Dharma Sect invaded us, their true goal was to destroy Xuan Pin. They had laid down plan after plan, ambush after ambush, all for Xuan Pin. Aiming for you was just a distraction. They knew you weren't an easy target, but they didn't care because their true goal was Xuan Pin."

"Xuan Pin was the one who unified all the soldiers and the other kingdoms to push back the Dharma Sect. He was the key individual in pushing the Dharma Sect back. That's why the Dharma Sect paid a heavy price to kill Xuan Pin and the others."

"Others?" Li Huowang slowly raised his head. "People other than Xuan Pin died?"

Gao Zhijian's lips quivered, seemingly afraid to utter the words, but he explained nonetheless. "The Liang Kingdom's Imperial Preceptor, Hou Shu's Imperial Preceptor, Qing Qiu's Chief, and the Liang Kingdom's Chief are all gone."

Li Huowang thought he had misheard. "They are all dead?"

"Yes."

Li Huowang refused to believe it, making his head buzz. No matter how much they had schemed and lied to him, they were still allies.

But now, they were all dead, just like that. The few remaining competent fighters had died.

Li Huowang felt a growing emptiness in his heart. He had always thought someone would stand and hold the Heavens up when they fell.

Now, he found himself alone as the tallest one.

Li Huowang might need to face the Dharma Sect by himself now.

He suddenly felt fatigued, more than he had been in ages. He sat down on the bloody battlefield and sighed when he looked at the sky.

Li Huowang didn't want to do anything. He just wanted to return to Cowheart Village to live out the rest of his life. Why must the fate of the world be in his hands? He was tired.

He closed his eyes to try to forget everything. A long time passed before he took another breath.

"Since Xuan Pin is dead, who will inherit his position?" Li Huowang said, lying in a pool of blood.

"The Chief of Hou Shu is temporarily holding it. I haven't told the others yet because it would demoralize them."

Li Huowang opened his eyes and struggled to sit up.

He picked up a broken blade on the ground and stabbed into his abdomen. He shouted angrily as he twisted up his insides.

He only stopped when he felt his intestines had been cut into pieces. He dragged his bloody body up and looked at Gao Zhijian.

He had no choice. They were all dead, and he was the only living person that could handle it.

Thunder rumbled in the skies as they noticed someone was running towards them. It was a messenger on horseback.

"Report! Victory from Xu Zhong! Victory from Xian Yang! Victory from Hu Laoguan!"

An old eunuch took the scroll and read it before whispering to Gao Zhijian.

Gao Zhijian revealed a victorious expression. He turned and looked at Li Huowang. "Senior Li! Xuan Pin's sacrifice was not in vain! Their sacrifices were not in vain! After you defeated that being, the Dharma Sect realized their defeat and retreated from Si Qi! We have reclaimed Si Qi!”

Anything that would demoralize the soldiers should naturally be kept hidden, but anything that would bolster their morale should be spread out far and wide! Soon enough, word of their triumph reached every soldier’s ears.

The soldiers who had fought against Ma Tuo shouted and cheered happily, regardless of their ranks. Their cheers came in waves.

Everyone thought that they were winning and could soon return home. This large battle was ending soon.

They were filled with confidence in the outcome of the war, but none of them knew that their leaders had been killed by the Dharma Sect.

Li Huowang just stood there, his body covered in blood, as if he didn't belong among them.

Chapter 763 - Prisoners Of War

Li Huowang carefully pulled open his curtain and checked for suspicious gazes.

He ensured everything was clear outside before nodding at Yang Na. "It's safe now. Let's go!"

"Mom, I'm going out to have a meal with Nana. You don't have to cook for us," Li Huowang shouted.

"You're going out again?" Sun Xiaoqin was practicing a dance with her phone on a stand. She rolled her sleeves and looked out the hall to see Li Huowang and Yang Na leaving.

She sighed. "To think you would forget your mother after getting a wife."

Still, she was secretly happy because her son was finally acting like someone his age. He was finally taking time to go out and play.

Both Li Huowang and Yang Na hopped on their rental bikes and departed for their destination.

They were still headed for Orange Isle, but they wouldn't meet the others in the unfinished building this time. Instead, they were going to an underground room of an unfinished mansion.

They chose an underground room because they had managed to capture some of the assailants after winning last time.

Chen Hongyu was guarding the entrance when Li Huowang and Yang Na arrived. They spoke briefly before heading into the underground room.

As they entered, they saw Qing Wanglai talking to one of the prisoners.

"Osankodinakinatikokinaravu?"

“Eioiko?”

“Eseganiduanoau, nakaeakaseeibibieiochio...”

Yang Na whispered to Li Huowang as she recorded the conversation with her phone, “It’s not English. I don’t think it’s an Indo-European language...”

Li Huowang approached Qing Wanglai as he glared at the bearded man tied to the chair. “How’s the interrogation going?”

“Not that well. They are very guarded against us. They wouldn’t open their hearts to accept us, much less talk to us.”

Wu Qi rummaged through the prisoner’s belongings as she said, “These guys bought some passports from a poor island nation. Even their identities are fake. I don’t have any leads on them.”

“What about you? Is there anyone watching you at your home?” Qing Wanglai asked.

Li Huowang was visibly calmer and less anxious than before.

“None. No one came to stalk me after we destroyed their base last time, so I think they really were the ones who had been stalking me!”

Li Huowang looked at the guy tied to the chair with hatred. It was because of them that others wrongly believed Li Huowang had a relapse of his illness. He wasn’t sick at all!

“Where’s the woman with the umbrella, though? Everyone we saw was a man. We didn’t get to catch her.”

“It can’t be helped if someone did manage to escape. Don’t worry, since most of them are in our hands. They will become our bargaining chips,” Qing Wanglai said before continuing to talk to the prisoner.

Li Huowang approached the other prisoners and looked at their faces. He wanted to find the people that kidnapped him in the first place.

However, since it had been some time since that happened, Li Huowang had forgotten what his kidnappers looked like. It didn’t help that most of them were foreigners, making it harder for him to distinguish them.

The prisoners didn't know what Li Huowang wanted to do, but they all shrank in fear when he approached them.

They were horrified by what Li Huowang had done last time.

"Hey, someone is here!" Chen Hongyu's voice alerted everyone in the basement.

A familiar face soon appeared. It was Zhao Lei.

He averted his gaze a lot and seemed somewhat awkward.

Despite this, he stood there without any intention of walking away.

"You're back?"

Qing Wanglai approached Zhao Lei and patted his shoulder. He then turned around and announced, "Everyone, let's give a round of applause for our old comrade joining us again. If not for him, we would never have been able to capture them!"

Amidst the sparse applause, Zhao Lei's previous betrayal appeared to have been pardoned.

Li Huowang frowned. It was hard for him to think Zhao Lei would be loyal to them after betraying both sides.

Zhao Lei was visibly awkward since he was caught between two parties he had betrayed, but he ignored their gazes and stood in place.

"You worked with them before. How about you try talking to them?" Qing Wanglai pointed at the bearded man tied to the chair.

Zhao Lei nodded. He had barely said anything when the bearded man spat on him. The bearded man said something vehemently.

Li Huowang didn't know what the man was talking about, although it was clear that he was saying some nasty things.

Zhao Lei retreated and Li Huowang approached him. "See? This is the result of betrayal."

Zhao Lei disregarded Li Huowang's words as he looked around anxiously. “Where is Qian Fu?”

“We tied him up. His other personality came back.”

Li Huowang thought Zhao Lei would talk more about Qian Fu, but then Zhao Lei whispered to him urgently, “Do you really think that’s true? Do you think that everything that had happened was real? This is too strange!”

Hm? Why is he acting crazy again?

Li Huowang distanced himself from Zhao Lei.

He had barely taken a single step when Zhao Lei grabbed his arms. “Think carefully! Do you really think everything is true? So many people died, and yet the police still haven’t come and found us yet. Why is no one noticing what we are doing? Think about the details! You need to consider the details where the bizarreness is less noticeable!”

“Zhao Lei!” Qing Wanglai spoke in a strangely stern tone when he called for Zhao Lei.

Zhao Lei let go of Li Huowang and retreated a bit. While his eyes were still darting around, he didn’t speak to Li Huowang again.

“We will take it from here. Li Huowang, why don’t you go back and rest? I will message you if we have any new details.” Qing Wanglai smiled lightly.

“Thank you, but I don’t need to rest now. I have some time to help you now.”

Li Huowang suddenly recalled something and started checking the hands of the prisoners one by one.

He remembered biting off two fingers from one of the individuals who had tried to kidnap him. He should be in this group of prisoners.

Chapter 764 - Weapons

Li Huowang was slowly checking the hands of the prisoners in the underground basement. He wanted to find the person who had tried to kidnap him.

He checked everyone's hands but was surprised to find that none of them were missing any fingers.

That's strange. This shouldn't be right. Li Huowang was still pondering it when he recalled what Zhao Lei had told him just now.

Li Huowang shook his head and looked at the tied-up prisoners again. He found it strange that they didn't seem afraid of him.

He had a sudden idea and rechecked the hands of the prisoners. This time, rather than just looking at them, he pressed on each of the prisoner's fingers.

This time, he discovered something new. Li Huowang was checking the fingers when he noticed that one of the prisoners had different textures on two of his fingers. He looked at the prisoner before lightly pulling the fingers to reveal they were fake! The kidnapper had attached fake fingers to his hands!

"So it was you." Li Huowang stared at the prisoner in front of him.

The prisoner started scolding Li Huowang after seeing that the latter had taken his fingers away, but Li Huowang didn't understand a single sentence from the man.

Li Huowang turned to Qing Wanglai. "What is he talking about? Could you translate it for me?"

Qing Wanglai had been talking to Zhao Lei when Li Huowang called him over. After listening to the prisoner briefly, Qing Wanglai explained, "He's cursing you. Do you really want me to translate that for you?"

“Nevermind.” Li Huowang kicked the prisoner in his abdomen before speaking to Qing Wanglai. “Do you think it’s fine to keep so many prisoners here? We also killed a lot of them last time.”

“Don’t worry, everything is fine. As I’ve said, I have a lot of connections, and these people don’t have legal status to begin with. Just leave it to me to deal with them.”

He continued, “Also, don’t risk your life like last time. It was an entire truck! It’s solid metal, and you’re just flesh and bone. One wrong move and you would’ve been squished.”

“I know. You don’t have to tell me twice.” Li Huowang frowned out of annoyance. “We captured so many of them, but we only have a few people on our side. What if they don’t want to cooperate with us? It’s not like we can keep them locked up for that long.”

“Then we will use them as bargaining chips to talk to their leader. It would be best if we can determine what their goal is. Also, you should probably call them to ask about the thing on your ankle. It should’ve been removed already.” Qing Wanglai said, concerned about Li Huowang’s ankle monitor.

“I’ve already asked them about it. I need to wear it for two years and cannot approach any schools within these two years.”

“Two years? That’s not the protocol. Let me ask my lawyer friend about it.”

Li Huowang was surprised. “I didn’t know graduate students had such a wide network. I never thought you would know so many people.”

“Hoho. Are you praising me?”

“Just continue to interrogate them. I want to see how Qian Fu is doing. Sister Wu Qi, give me the keys.”

Li Huowang took the keychain, which was attached to a Swiss army knife. Afterward, he left the underground room and walked towards the RV parked beside the house.

Along the way, he saw Qing Wanglai’s sports car and patted it.

He reached the RV and unlocked it. He opened the door, and the first thing he saw was the tied-up Qian Fu. Qian Fu was stretching his neck while trying to grab a dagger on the table near him with his mouth.

Li Huowang grabbed the dagger and threw it into the pile of weapons on another table in the distance. The weapons had been taken from the base of the kidnappers.

Qian Fu felt frustrated when he saw his escape plan had failed. "What do you guys want?! I beg you! Let me go!"

Li Huowang walked towards the pile of weapons and inspected them.

"Qian Fu, be quiet. I'm doing this for your own good. It's clear that they are targeting us. If you run now, they will capture you for sure."

Li Huowang was still uncertain whether they would send any more people even though they had destroyed one of their bases.

Qian Fu looked at Li Huowang as if he was a maniac before he took a few deep breaths. "What did Qing Wanglai tell you? You've been tricked! He's a liar!"

But Qian Fu's face became pale when he saw Li Huowang pick up a crossbow and point it directly at him.

"Don't be fooled by his appearance! He's faking it! I was once admitted to the same hospital as him. He always managed to fool the doctors into thinking that he was cured, but he would always get locked up again sooner or later due to his illness. Don't trust him!"

Li Huowang placed the crossbow down. "Who else should I believe, then? I definitely wouldn't believe you. It's best if you stay here for now. To be honest, we don't want to tie you up. Once this is over, you can go anywhere you like. I won't even care if you pick up garbage to eat on the streets."

Li Huowang then ignored Qian Fu and inspected the pile of weapons again as he picked some of them up.

Qing Wanglai couldn't get me a gun, but the kidnappers were kind enough to drop theirs for me. Li Huowang held the heavy lump of metal and played with it.

He felt much safer with it in his hands, although he had no clue about how to use it properly.

Even though Qing Wanglai's chemical hadn't been that efficient, Li Huowang still recognized that it had been vital to them. Without it, it would've been difficult for them to capture so many people.

Li Huowang toyed with the gun until he realized that he didn't know how to replace the magazine or turn off the safety. He then gingerly placed the gun down.

He was hoping that Qing Wanglai would have the time to teach him.

Li Huowang then picked up a military knife. It was sharp and broad, but Li Huowang placed it down.

The knife was more suitable for slashing people rather than killing them. Unless he managed to cut a person's artery, the enemy would have a higher chance of running from the adrenaline rush instead.

Li Huowang rummaged around the pile until he found a narrower knife.

The knife was completely black, approximately thirty centimeters long, and razor sharp. The hilt was even wrapped in hemp rope to prevent the user's blood from making it slippery.

He picked it up and stabbed the table in front of him. The knife easily left a hole in it.

He checked the hole in the table and nodded with satisfaction before he picked up another knife to keep behind his back.

It was helpful to have a knife because it could be easily concealed and required no training to use.

Chapter 765 - Ba

Li Huowang chose the weapons he liked the best before leaving the RV.

Since they are our enemies, we should always be prepared for the worst-case scenario. We can't even be sure that Qing Wanglai will successfully negotiate with them.

Qian Fu panicked when he saw Li Huowang leaving the RV. "Li Huowang! It's fine if you don't trust me, but please go and ask the others! They all know what Qing Wanglai has done! They just didn't tell you!"

Li Huowang turned around as he held the door knob. "Then answer one question. If they already know what Qing Wanglai did in the past, why are they still following him?"

Qian Fu remained silent.

Li Huowang continued, "I don't care what Qing Wanglai did in the past. It's not my job to bring him to justice, even if he killed someone. I don't care what he did before.

"I can assure you that I do not think of them as a family. I am only working with them to take care of the external threats I'm facing. Do you understand? Do you really think I like mingling with mentally ill people like them?"

Li Huowang was about to leave the RV when Qian Fu shuddered and twitched.

"Hm?" Li Huowang stopped.

"Li Huowang? Where am I? Why am I tied up?" Qian Fu asked Li Huowang in confusion.

"Oh? You are back?" Li Huowang approached him to release the ropes.

"You have a really good time here. We did all the dirty work while you were staying here.”

“Really? What did you do?” Qian Fu was surprised and asked Li Huowang for more details.

“We followed your instructions and destroyed the UFO of the aliens.”

“Really? Aliens? What happened?”

Li Huowang stopped suddenly. He took two steps back and examined Qian Fu again. He then realized something was off.

“No, you’re not the other Qian Fu. You’re pretending to be him. It’s a shame that you’re not convincing enough. Just stay here quietly.” Li Huowang left, ignoring Qian Fu’s angry shouts.

He returned to the underground basement to tell the others about Qian Fu so that they wouldn’t get tricked by him.

But then, he saw someone unfamiliar speaking with Qing Wanglai near the entrance to the basement.

The person was dressed strangely and had a buzz cut. His entire body, neck, and half of his face were tattooed with thorny vines. His ear lobes were pierced with a huge hole capable of fitting two fingers in. As he talked to Qing Wanglai, Li Huowang also saw a tongue piercing in his mouth.

Li Huowang observed Qing Wanglai’s expression and deduced that the strange newcomer was someone they knew. His grip on the knife behind his back loosened slowly.

The man was very cautious, however. He shut up the moment he saw Li Huowang getting close to him.

“This is...?” Li Huowang wanted to ask who it was, but before he could, the man glared at Li Huowang warily and left.

Li Huowang looked at the man’s back and saw that the hair on his head was also a tattoo. The man was originally bald and had a buzzcut tattooed on his head!

“Who is he?” Li Huowang asked.

“Do you remember when I said that there were other people who realized that we are mere projections? Other than us, there are others who couldn't be reasoned with, and others who wouldn't join us. He's the latter."

"Then why did he find you today? Does he want to work with us?"

"No. He was confident that he could deal with the problem alone. He just noticed we were taking action and came here to confirm it with us."

"That's strange. I never imagined someone would refuse to join us after learning about what had happened."

"Everyone has their own thoughts. He's almost like a hermit. We can't force him to join us."

"What's his name?"

"His surname is Ba. Ba Shengqing. He opened a tattoo shop and is quite skillful. You can find him if you need a tattoo."

"Ba Shengqing? What a stupid name."

"There are people with that surname, but it is very rare. I suspect he's from an indigenous tribe and doesn't want to tell us about it," Wu Qi said.[\[1\]](#)

Li Huowang committed the name to memory and checked the time. "I need to go back first. My family will be suspicious if I keep staying outside. Let me know immediately if you have any progress."

Li Huowang took one last at the prisoners before he left.

"Hey, remember to bring some snacks for us next time you come here. There's nothing at this dump," Chen Hongyu grumbled.

"I understand." Li Huowang hopped on his bike before realizing he had heard something familiar a long time ago.

Yang Na noticed Li Huowang's confusion. "Huowang?"

Li Huowang shook his head and left.

He had just exited Orange Isle when his phone rang. He saw the name and was surprised because it was none other than Yi Donglai.

“Doctor Yi? Is something wrong?”

—I just called to make sure you are fine. How is everything recently? Are there any new hallucinations? Or maybe new symptoms?

“No, I’m fine right now. I’m completely cured. Thank you for your help, Doctor Yi! It seems that my mom sent the brocade to the right person.”

Just then, Li Huowang saw a motorbike parked just off the street. The person beside the motorbike was none other than Ba Shengqing.

They locked gazes, and Li Huowang noticed another interesting detail. It appeared that Ba Shengqing’s eyeballs had tattoos too.

It was the first time Li Huowang had seen eye tattoos.

—Li Huowang? Can you hear me?”

“Oh, yes, I’m listening. Please continue.”

—I’m asking if you are still taking your medicine on time.

“Yes, I’m still taking it on time.” Li Huowang lied. He hadn’t done so.

He stopped taking his medications after he captured the prisoners.

Now that it was certain that someone was stalking and trying to kidnap him, Li Huowang did not need to take his medicine. He thought that he was fine.

His medications had severe side effects. If he continued taking them, he could get a new disease soon.

—Then that’s good. Remember to take it on time to avoid relapsing. More importantly, it will prevent you from hallucinating again.

Li Huowang saw Ba Shengqing approaching him and nodded. “Alright, I understand. Doctor Yi, I still have some things to do, so I need to hang up now.”

1. The surname Ba has four possible origins. One hypothesis suggests that the surname Ba came from a place called Ba Shui, currently somewhere on the eastern side of Sichuan. Back then, there were five tribes, and the Ba tribe was one of them. 📖

Chapter 766 - Woman

“Li Huowang?” A black motorbike rumbled and stopped beside him.

Li Huowang looked at the tattooed man, Ba Shengqing. He gave Li Huowang a bad impression due to his tattoos.

Even so, Li Huowang extended his hand for a handshake. It wouldn't hurt to have another ally. “Nice to meet you.”

Ba Shengqing did not shake his hand and instead stared at Yang Na.

Li Huowang frowned and took a side step to block his gaze. “What did you talk to Qing Wanglai about just now?”

Ba Shengqing ignored Li Huowang's question. “Were you involved in the recent events?”

Li Huowang naturally didn't answer him since Ba Shengqing never answered him either. He just glared at Ba Shengqing.

“You shouldn't get involved.” Ba Shengqing understood something from Li Huowang's silence.

“Hoh. As if I could get away from this by ignoring them. They were the ones who attacked me first. You shouldn't give me any advice if you don't know my situation.”

Ba Shengqing flicked his wrist, and his motorbike roared to life. “Come. My sister wants to see you.”

“Your sister?” Li Huowang wasn't sure what was happening. Who is his sister? Why does it seem that they know a lot about me?

But Ba Shengqing had no intention of answering him. He just revved his motorbike and sped away.

Li Huowang was still hesitating when Yang Na whispered, “Huowang, it's best if we don't go. He doesn't seem like a good guy.”

“I know, but...” Li Huowang couldn’t tell her what he was thinking. Somehow, the gaze coming from Ba Shengqing was familiar to him.

“Let’s just go and see what’s happening. There’s no reason for me to be afraid of his motorbike if I can destroy an entire truck.” Li Huowang then followed Ba Shengqing with his rental bike.

But Li Huowang didn’t trust Ba Shengqing completely, either. He decided he would turn back and leave the moment Ba Shengqing rode towards a remote location.

Li Huowang was surprised to see Ba Shengqing riding towards a busy street instead of a remote place.

Li Huowang followed him to the second floor of a row of shops, where he saw Ba Shengqing entering a tattoo shop called Bloody Bonfire. His name was strange, and so was the name of the shop.

Li Huowang was hesitating about bringing Yang Na into a potentially dangerous place when she took out her phone.

“Huowang, I won’t stop you from entering. I will record from the outside and look out for you. The moment there’s anything wrong, I will call the police and inform Qing Wanglai.”

“Alright.” Feeling the knife on his back, Li Huowang relaxed a bit before entering the shop.

Ba Shengqing’s shop was the same as the other tattoo shops. It was decorated with photos of various tattoos.

The shop had numerous cubicles separated by black cloths. The sound of ominous buzzing came from some of them.

Ba Shengqing threw his motorbike keys onto the counter and entered one of the cubicles without waiting for Li Huowang.

The buzzing sound stopped for a moment before it resumed. A woman walked out from the cubicle with a cigarette in her mouth.

She looked just like Ba Shengqing, with her face and neck covered in tattoos of thorny vines. The difference was that her tattoo was on the left, while Ba Shengqing’s was on the right.

Her hair, however, was real. Her dyed grey hair covered the tattoo, which extended all the way to the top left part of her head.

She had piercings on her left eyelid, and both of her ears were heavily gilded with accessories. Her eye shadow and lips were black too.

She looked pretty in her getup.

Li Huowang noticed some similarities with Ba Shengqing and thought that she was most likely Ba Shengqing's sister.

The two looked at each other and said nothing.

Li Huowang was certain that this was the first time they had met, but there was a familiar feeling coming from her too.

"Are you Ba Shengqing's sister? You wanted to see me? Do you know me? Have we met before?"

She took her cigarettes with two of her fingers and exhaled the smoke onto Li Huowang. "Fuck. You talk like you are trying to sleep with me."

The familiar feeling vanished. Li Huowang was disgusted by her mannerisms and tone.

"Why are you looking for me? I will take my leave if you have nothing to say." Li Huowang had just turned around when she blocked his path.

But before she could say anything, Li Huowang already had his knife on her neck.

Sensing the cold metal, she became serious as she placed the cigarette in her mouth. She slowly pushed the knife out of her neck. "Don't trust Qing Wanglai. He's not a good guy."

Li Huowang didn't react to her words. He wasn't someone stupid that would trust anyone that came to him. For now, Qing Wanglai had done nothing to harm him.

But he did notice that her tongue was forked like a snake.

Even though he knew he shouldn't judge someone based on their looks, her appearance was far too off-putting for her to make a good impression.

“Thank you for your warning. Did you ask your brother to bring me here just for this? I will keep that in mind. Thank you.” Li Huowang sheathed his knife and turned to leave.

“One more thing. Qian Fu and Qing Wanglai are working together. Everything he’s doing is most likely an order from Qing Wanglai.”

Li Huowang was already at the door, with Yang Na waiting just outside of it. “And why are you telling me this? To stir up trouble between us?”

“Sit.” The woman tapped her cigarette on a table filled with drawings of tattoos before tossing the cigarette butt into an ashtray. She then lit up another.

“I’m sure Qing Wanglai probably told you something about projections and parallel worlds? Don’t trust him. He’s crazy.” She pointed at her temples.

“I don’t care if he’s crazy or not. It won’t stop me from working with him to fight my enemy. As for you siblings... You guys were just sitting here and doing nothing.” Li Huowang scoffed.

“Fuck. Who said we didn’t do anything? This is the first time you have met us. Do you think you know us well?”

Li Huowang turned around and saw that the woman had already placed both of her legs up on the table. “Don’t follow Qing Wanglai’s plans. He will lure you into a trap. Since everyone has a different perspective, you should walk your own path. It would be bad if you got together just for the sake of working together. You can deal with anything if you follow your own path.”

Li Huowang didn’t understand what she was talking about. He had the feeling that she was going to talk about her views.

Chapter 767 - Awakening

“Are you guys really siblings? Is your surname Ba too?”

Li Huowang decided not to follow their conversation anymore. He was ready to leave if they didn't have any helpful information. There was no reason to listen to their baseless accusations.

The woman noticed that Li Huowang had changed the subject. “You’re right. I am Ba Nanxu, and he is Ba Shengqing. We’re twins.”

“Twins? I don’t see the similarity. He’s quite tall while you’re quite skinny.”

“That’s because we were conjoined twins. He took most of the nutrients, which caused me to be skinny.”

Li Huowang was shocked by this revelation. Ba Nanxu then pointed at her tattoo of thorny vines.

“We were once joined here. The tattoos are used to cover up the scars.”

Li Huowang recalled the tattoos on Ba Shengqing’s face. He never thought the tattoos were used to cover up scars!

“Then the surgery must’ve been dangerous, right?”

“We didn’t have the chance to undergo surgery. Our parents died early, and we had no money. We used a pair of scissors to separate ourselves.”

Li Huowang recovered from his shock when he heard that. “I don’t believe you. If you did that, the pain would’ve been unbearable. You would’ve passed out and even bled to death.”

“Hahaha, yeah.” Ba Nanxu took a deep drag on her cigarette. Why is she not getting to the point?

Li Huowang looked around the tattoo shop and stood up to leave.

“Ji Zai, something was stolen from you.”

A familiar gaze caused him to turn around and look at Ba Nanxu. "What did you say? Who were you calling?!"

"Hm?" Ba Nanxu looked at him, puzzled.

"What did you call me just now?!" Li Huowang grabbed her wrist as he shouted.

"Just now? I didn't say anything. Although this is quite a unique way to flirt with me."

"Ji Zai! You called me that just now! Why did both Qian Fu and you call me that?!"

Why does everyone know my name? How do they know the fake name that Zhuge Yuan had given me?

The memories started resurfacing against his own will.

Li Huowang tried to forget everything, but the memories crept up like a vine enveloping his brain. Zhao Lei's words echoed in his ears.

"Answer me! Why are you calling me Ji Zai?!"

"Let go." A cold voice came from his back. Ba Shengqing somehow appeared behind him, his tattoo gun on Li Huowang's back.

Li Huowang released Ba Nanxu and looked at Ba Shengqing seriously. He suddenly had a very disturbing thought.

"Both of you are conjoined twins. Why are your surnames Ba?"

"Because my father has the surname Ba. Is there a problem with that?" Ba Nanxu crossed her arms and looked at Li Huowang with confusion.

"No. Something's wrong." Li Huowang looked at their tattoos, forked tongues, and various piercings. His eyes lit up with a sudden epiphany.

"Pain! It's pain! I understand now! Both of you are..."

The words were just at the tip of his tongue, but he couldn't say them. That feeling drove him crazy.

Li Huowang stabbed his own palm with a knife.

The pain gave him clarity.

He pointed at the two and shouted, “I understand now! Both of you are Ba-Hui! You are a projection of Ba-Hui! Everything is fake!”

As he said that, Li Huowang felt his heart going empty.

Not only did he recognize Ba-Hui, but he also recognized Chen Hongyu, the one who had told him to get snacks for them. She was also a Siming—Abbess Jingxin’s Siming!

The others are probably Simings too. I don’t recognize them since I’m not familiar with the other Simings, but I am very familiar with Ba-Hui.

That was why he felt their gazes were very familiar.

The Ba siblings stepped back in unison when they saw Li Huowang acting strangely. The customer in the cubicle had already run out without his shirt because he was shocked by Li Huowang’s actions and bloody hand.

“The two of you were originally one! No, the two of you should be a single Siming! I know you guys! No wonder you guys are so familiar! You are Ba-Hui!”

Then why are they calling me Ji Zai? Who is Ji Zai?

It was not just a simple fake name. It meant something more.

“If you are the projections of a Siming, then am I...” Li Huowang looked at his own body. “Am I a Siming too? Am I a projection? Impossible! When did I become a Siming? When? What kind of Siming am I?”

Li Huowang started recalling the things he had been suppressing.

“I was conjured with the cultivation of ‘Truth’? I really am a Siming? Does that mean this world is fake? Is it all just a projection?”

Fear gripped his heart. He ignored Ba-Hui and bolted from the tattoo shop into the sunlit streets.

Yang Na followed him and anxiously asked, “Huowang? What’s wrong? What happened just now?”

Li Huowang looked around while panting, unable to focus on her words.

He suddenly squatted down and touched the stone path. The surface was smooth and hard. He even rubbed his face over the stone.

“This is so real. How could it be fake? How could this be the projection?”

Li Huowang suddenly stood up and ran towards a pillar.

He looked at the poster pinned to the pillar before tearing it down. He shakily tore the poster in half.

He listened as the sound of paper being torn reached his ears, and then he saw the gradual tearing of the paper right before his very eyes.

The contradiction hurt him. Maybe I'm overthinking? Maybe everything is real?

He suddenly crouched onto the ground and picked up the paper strips before chewing on them. He tasted it and felt his saliva turning the torn poster into wads of damp paper.

He felt gazes coming from all directions. He looked up and saw the crowd pointing at him.

What are they? What are their projections? Other Simings or enemies? Why are they crowding around me?

Li Huowang snarled slowly as he held tightly onto the hilt of his sword.

Chapter 768 - Ba-Hui

Who are they? What do they want? I am a Siming, so are they Simings too? How many Simings are there in the Baiyu Capital? What do they want?!

Li Huowang couldn't differentiate between what was real and what was fake, so he was wary of everyone right now.

He was going to take out his knife to protect himself when he felt the cold press of metal on his back.

The cold metal crackled, and intense pain surged into his body from the electric shocks.

"Who's attacking me?!" Li Huowang turned around with difficulty from the pain.

What awaited him was Yang Na's crying face. She was crying as she took out another taser, pushed it into Li Huowang's clothes, and pressed the button.

"It's you?! Why?"

Yang Na bit her lips. She had to do this because Li Huowang was ill again. If she didn't stop him now, he could end up killing people on the streets.

If he did that, he would be locked up forever.

Yang Na originally got a taser not to fight enemies but to prevent Li Huowang from doing anything stupid if his illness were to strike again.

The two of them locked eyes. Li Huowang's lips trembled as the taser continued to shock him. "Wait, stop a moment."

Yang Na's sadness and the intense pain slowly pulled Li Huowang out of his bewilderment.

But she refused. She continued to press the buttons on both tasers to shock Li Huowang. She refused to stop until he was unconscious.

“I said stop!” Li Huowang grabbed Yang Na’s hands for a brief moment. The electrical current surged into Yang Na briefly. She yelped and dropped the tasers.

Li Huowang picked up the tasers and held her in his embrace. She was already slumping over from the shock.

“I’m fine. I’m fine,” Li Huowang repeated. It wasn’t clear if he was trying to calm himself down or calm Yang Na down.

The two of them hugged. The crowds were disappointed by the lack of action, so they lowered their phones.

“Hey lady, are you alright? Is he threatening you? Do you know this scarred man? Do you want us to call the police?” Several youths came forward to check on her.

Yang Na cried as she placed her face into Li Huowang’s embrace. “It’s fine. I’m his girlfriend. We were just breaking up.”

The crowd heard that it was just a lover’s quarrel. They lost interest and scattered in a flash.

Li Huowang hugged Yang Na and stumbled towards the stairs. He entered the tattoo shop again to place her on the sofa.

The Ba siblings didn’t chase them away. Instead, they temporarily closed their doors and stopped receiving customers.

Li Huowang’s body was still twitching occasionally, a side effect of the electric shocks. But there was a bigger problem that he had to consider. He was still confused.

“Is everything fake? If you’re fake, then whose projection are you? Why are you so real despite being fake?” Li Huowang looked at Yang Na’s tearful eyes and felt his heart ache from seeing Yang Na’s worried gaze.

He kissed her. He wanted to know what was real or fake.

He didn’t want to care if he was a projection or not. He only cared about whether Yang Na was the same Yang Na that had stayed up late at night on the rooftop to look at the stars with him.

One of the Ba siblings kicked the sofa. “Why the hell are you kissing so passionately? Do you want to get naked and give us a good show? Do you need a condom?”

Li Huowang stood up suddenly and looked at Ba Nanxu. “Stop pretending! What did you mean just now? Who stole something from me? And is this world real or not? You wanted to turn me into your Twisted One, didn’t you? Then tell me what is happening, and I will be your Twisted One!”

Li Huowang refused to accept this as reality because if it really was a projection, his parents, Yang Na, and even his experience of being discharged were all fake.

If he really transmigrated, he would never be able to get back. Everything he knew would be gone forever.

Ba Nanxu chuckled. “Well, it seems I was mistaken. You are much crazier than Qing Wanglai. It’s a good thing you found him.”

With a flash of steel, Li Huowang unsheathed both of his knives and snarled, “Tell me everything, Ba-Hui! I still haven’t paid you back for all the suffering you caused me!”

Ba Nanxu scoffed and threw the cigarette onto the ground. “You want to threaten me with a knife? Do you even realize that when you were just a baby, I was already burying people? Your little tricks won’t scare me.”

“Stop pretending! I’ve already recognized your gaze! You are Ba-Hui!”

“Who said I’m pretending? Also, put down the knife! One, two, three!”

Li Huowang heard the sound of the wind whooshing and sensed the impending danger. He dropped to his knees, narrowly avoiding being hit in the head by a colossal glass cabinet. He would’ve died if that had hit him.

The person who swung the glass cabinet was none other than Ba Shengqing!

Li Huowang turned and stabbed towards Ba Shengqing's legs with his knife. Just then, he felt pain coming from his waist.

He didn't turn back since he knew it was Ba Nanxu's doing. Instead, he continued to stab his knife towards Ba Shengqing in an attempt to injure him. He wanted to wound them no matter what!

A sharp cry stopped both of them just as blood was about to be drawn. "AAAAA! Stop it!"

They turned around and saw Yang Na had sat up. She raised her phone high. "Qing Wanglai wants to talk to you! Stop fighting and just talk it out!"

Everyone slowly retreated.

Li Huowang touched his waist and pulled out a spike-like earring.

"Crazy bastard!" Ba Nanxu took the phone. "Hey, you've gotta be a fucking psycho to take in this lunatic. Did you know that I was going to find him, so you told him to cause some trouble for me?"

Chapter 769 - Projection

Li Huowang frowned and stared at Ba Nanxu talking on the phone. If they are Ba-Hui and Chen Hongyu is the Siming in control of rot, then what kind of Siming is Qing Wanglai? Does he know something about this world?

There are so many Simings. There must be one of them who knows about what is happening.

Ba Nanxu frowned and threw the phone at Li Huowang. “Get out of my shop once you finish your call! What a waste of my kindness!”

Li Huowang grabbed the phone as he looked at the two siblings, who were placing the cabinet back in its original location. “Hello?”

—It’s me, Qing Wanglai. Yang Na told me about the situation. Don’t panic, and slowly explain what happened. Why are you suddenly behaving like this?

Li Huowang hesitated. He decided to speak after considering that Qing Wanglai was the one who introduced him to the hypothesis of different projections. “I finally understand what is happening in this world. I always wondered why this place was weird. It’s because this is not the world where I should be staying!”

Qing Wanglai paused when he heard Li Huowang’s explanation.

—Li Huowang, I think I understand what happened. Is it because you think this world is fake? Do you think your real girlfriend and parents are somewhere else? Do you think that you’ve transmigrated and that everything here is fake?

Li Huowang was conflicted when he looked at how real Yang Na was. “Isn’t it true? Didn’t you tell me that everything is a projection?”

—I did tell you that the entire world is a projection, but that doesn't mean it's fake. We have flesh and our own thoughts. We are real. We are real projections, you understand? So why did you think that your past was not a projection?

—When I said that this world is a projection, I also meant that your past is a projection. You've always been here. The Yang Na you knew is the same. Your parents are the same. You are the same as us, so you don't need to be confused. We are just projections.

“They are all projections? Everything I've seen in the past is a projection?” Li Huowang pondered, reflecting on his memories from kindergarten, primary school, and high school. “They are all projections? Impossible!”

—Why not? Nothing is impossible. It's just that you never noticed it in the past.

Li Huowang fell into silence upon hearing this.

—Don't worry. You never got transmigrated. You're the same, and they have always been by your side. Nothing has changed. You just need to accept this hypothesis.

This hypothesis seemed much more reasonable compared to what he had previously thought and the despair it had caused him. It was easier for him to believe that everything had always been a projection.

Li Huowang remained silent as he took it all in. “And is there any proof? I need proof to believe that everything in the past was a projection. I won't just take your word for it.”

—Do you have proof that your past was not a projection?

“I do!”

Li Huowang's certainty confused Qing Wanglai.

—You do? Then tell me.

“I might be a Siming, but I was materialized using the power to cultivate the ‘Truth.’ That means that my past is not a projection!”

Both sides of the phone remained silent.

—Li Huowang, maybe it's best if we're honest with each other. I fear that we won't get to the end of it if you continue to argue about this ceaselessly.

"Fine! I will have to prove it with my own methods!" Li Huowang hung up.

Even though he said that, his mood was already visibly better than before.

Qing Wanglai had given him a good hypothesis. If he was a projection in the past, then he didn't have to worry about what the projections of his family and Yang Na were.

It was bizarre, but Li Huowang was currently experiencing something even more bizarre. He set aside the hypothesis for now, focusing on finding answers instead.

He wiped the blood on the phone with his shirt before returning it to Yang Na.

The two of them looked at each other. Li Huowang pondered if he should ask her, but it would be a waste of time if she really was a projection.

"Let's go back. We can talk more later." Li Huowang held Yang Na and headed towards the exit.

He was already at the door when he turned around and looked at the Ba siblings.

"Ba-Hui, we are technically old acquaintances. If you can help me figure out what's happening, I will consider joining forces with you. That way, you won't be all alone if you're attacked. They are targeting the Simings, and some of them have already died. Are you sure you won't be next?"

"Crazy bastard." The two siblings ignored him and shut the door.

That's strange. Ba-Hui should've recognized me. We even met numerous times. Was I wrong? Li Huowang shook his head. No, they must be Ba-Hui! They even warned me just now. I must be right, but why aren't they talking to me?

“Is this because everything is a projection? Is the projection warping their meanings? What is this projection, then? How come there's a layer of projection after I've become a Siming?”

He recalled the people attacking him and frowned. I've been so focused on my own problems that I never really spent time figuring out who they were. If we are the Simings from the Baiyu Capital, then who are the attackers?

Li Huowang's frown deepened at the thought that so many figures could threaten a Siming.

“Li Huowang, let's go back. You should take your medicine. Did you become like this after you stopped taking it?”

“What medicine? I finally figured out what was wrong and who they really are! They must be the people from god Yu'er!”

Li Huowang took Yang Na away from the busy street, feeling like he had finally pieced everything together.

Chapter 770 - Bai

Dong dong dong~ Dun dun dun~ The drum beat rhythmically.

“Mount the Heavenly Disc, and the sky will rotate. Mount the Earthly Disc, and the earth will rotate. A black fish carries the earth while the qi above supports the skies. The black fish supports the moving earth. The qi supports the revolving sky. This was how the stars were arranged.”

Amidst Bai Lingmiao’s drumming, the incense from the house’s four corners slowly enveloped the dying baby.

White smoke entered the baby’s orifices. Bai Lingmiao took out a pair of scissors and cut open a small hole in the baby’s left palm.

Bai Lingmiao pressed hard on the baby’s left palm. The white smoke and a dark yellow gelatinous goo were forced out from the small wound.

As she continued to squeeze out the goo, the baby’s face became redder, and he soon started crying.

An old man also began crying when he heard the baby crying. “My son is alive! My family finally has an heir!”

The old man brought his entire family and kneeled on the ground before Bai Lingmiao, “Saintess! Thank you for saving our entire family! For the sake of the White Lotus Sect’s prosperity, we will donate our belongings! From now on, we will devote our everything to the White Lotus Sect!”

Bai Lingmiao walked out of the courtyard. Meanwhile, devotees of the White Lotus Sect marked chests filled with gold and silver with tapes of the sect as they hauled them out from the estate.

“Are we doing the right thing?” Bai Lingmiao asked.

The Second Deity scoffed. “We’re already this late into the game and you still have the time to think whether this is fine? Think about what he had done in the past! If I was the one who made the decision, I would've blackmailed him using his son and taken all of his belongings instead!"

Bai Lingmiao remained quiet as she stared at the beggars downing bowls of porridge near a stand.

The world was in chaos, so it wasn't a time to be considerate to others. This amount of money could be used to save so many more people. The old tycoon would've just kept the money in his vault to rot. Money was meant to be spent to maximize its value!

Now that they were at war, there were very few people working in the fields. The cost of food was rising rapidly.

Bai Lingmiao walked out of the city and looked at the devotees working hard in the fields. All of them ran towards her and kneeled the moment they saw her.

"I am Qian Chaoqing. I greet the Saintess."

"How's the field?"

Qian Chaoqing's face was covered in dirt when she frowned.

"Saintess, it's as you've said. It's very bad right now. We've lost so many divisions in a day that the calendar is worthless now. I don't even know the season now. More importantly, the weather for the past few years has been bad."

Bai Lingmiao looked up. The clouds were flowing in a weird pattern, condensing and dispersing occasionally, as if something was fighting inside them.

"It's either a drought or flood. Saintess, I've been working in the fields for over forty years, but this is the first time I've faced so much difficulty. We have a lot of laborers from the White Lotus Sect, but no matter how hard we worked, we only managed to get half the amount of food compared to the previous years. There are even places where they yielded less than me."

"Do not worry about this. We will work as hard as we can while we leave the rest to the Heavenly Mater.”

The white lotus on Bai Lingmiao’s forehead glowed faintly. Qian Chaoqing felt as if he had found the greatest treasure of his life, and he smiled before returning to his fields to work.

This was Bai Lingmiao’s idea—delegate the task of planting food to those with weak comprehension skills. Since they couldn’t learn any techniques from the White Lotus Sect, they were used as laborers.

For the sake of defeating the Dharma Sect, the devotees of the White Lotus Sect were willing to do anything.

The White Lotus Sect was rapidly expanding and providing background support for each country. She was maximizing every single resource in each one.

Producing food in every country was extremely helpful. Transporting the food from the Liang Kingdom to Si Qi would’ve wasted too much time and resources. Bai Lingmiao was certain that most of the food would’ve been eaten during the journey.

“I thought the Heavenly Mater was strong? How come she can’t just produce food?” The Second Deity taunted.

Bai Lingmiao shook her head lightly. “Even the Immortal Families can’t do so. I sent people to scour the lands, but none of them reported anything about a deity that could give us bountiful crops.”

“Hmph! Many of them can’t even help us. All they know is how to take from us.”

“We have to think of a plan. We don’t know how much longer we’ll have to fight.”

“Rather than thinking about how to produce more food, we should get rid of the Dharma Sect as soon as possible. We can then take over their granaries. That way, we won’t have to worry about food anymore.”[\[1\]](#)

Bai Lingmiao did not protest that idea. She continued to walk and reached the barracks. They were special because the banner was a white donkey following a white lotus.

She saw numerous shirtless young men around fifteen to sixteen years old. They were all standing there and observing the master on the stage turning impervious to all bladed weapons. They yearned to learn that technique.

The youths were specially selected for their excellent comprehension abilities and physical bodies.

They had a wide selection of candidates since they could recruit a lot of people, but they were expanding so fast that they didn't have enough masters to teach the disciples.

Rather than a barrack, the place was more like a mobile temple for the Heavenly Mater. There were altars and drawings of the Heavenly Mater everywhere.

The White Lotus Sect accepted both men and women. All they required was good comprehension. Bai Lingmiao soon saw a familiar face on another stage, Chun Xiaoman.

She was very strict in her teachings. The black hair covering her body scared everyone.

“You are all women! If you want to live you will follow my training! You will not stop until I tell you to stop! If you lose on the battlefield, you will face an ending worse than death! I chose all of you because your family was killed by the Dharma Sect! If you think you can't endure it anymore, think about how your family was killed by the Dharma Sect! Think about how you swore to kill them for revenge!”

As she shouted, the women started stomping and chanting their sutras. All of them had a red dot on their forehead.

As they chanted, they began walking barefooted onto a large path of burning coal.

Many of them were unharmed when they walked out, but some were less proficient and got burned.

Thankfully, there were people on standby with buckets of sand. The moment any of them burned up, they threw the bucket of sand at them. Whoever had been burned would then be eliminated.

Bai Lingmiao couldn't stomach it, but she didn't call for them to stop. If the Dharma Sect won, there would be even more deaths.

Only after taking command did Bai Lingmiao realize there were no perfect plans, only the best ones possible given the circumstances. She could only choose plans that required the least sacrifice.

Bai Lingmiao had thought that her personality wouldn't allow her to do so, but every time she remembered how the Emperor of Si Qi talked about sacrificing 1,800,000 people for the sake of the world, she steeled herself to prepare for the worst.

She was doing this not only for herself—it was also for the sake of the other members of the White Lotus Sect.

She remembered what she had sworn to do, to prevent the others from losing their family. She didn't want them to suffer what she had gone through herself.

Bai Lingmiao had been working hard for that.

She was patrolling the area when she saw a paper crane flying down from the air.

She opened the paper crane and thought she had misread it. Xuan Pin was calling for her to discuss something.

1. The Dharma Sect drinks stone water to begin with. I doubt that they would leave the granary unpoisoned. 🙏

Chapter 771 - Banquet

Bai Lingmiao slowly made her way towards the grand hall under the guidance of four eunuchs holding lanterns.

This was not the palace of Si Qi's Emperor. It was a smaller place he lived in to escape the summer heat. [1] Even so, the entire place was built based on the palace itself.

Bai Lingmiao grew closer and heard the sound of cheerful music.

She entered the hall and saw hundreds of people sitting in two rows, chatting happily and toasting each other.

There were civil officers, martial officers, monks, daoists, and several others who looked like they didn't belong there.

In the middle of the hall, several beautiful ladies with small feet were elegantly and gracefully dancing in the palm of a massive armored man.

"Is this a celebratory banquet?" Bai Lingmiao wasn't sure what was happening. "Is this why Xuan Pin sent a message for me to come here?"

"Saintess, please sit here." The eunuchs guided her to a designated seat.

As soon as she sat, several rare dishes, such as bear paws and deer antlers, were served to her.

Bai Lingmiao ignored the food. She turned to look at the massive person in red robes sitting beside the main throne.

It was Xuan Pin. The dead Xuan Pin has somehow appeared again.

Bai Lingmiao wanted to take a closer look, but Xuan Pin noticed her. He shook his head gently and gestured to her to remain still.

She felt a familiar presence and frowned but still complied. She sat down without a word.

Bai Lingmiao then looked towards the main table and saw the emperors sitting on their thrones. The Liang Kingdom's Emperor, Qing Qiu's Khan, Si Qi's Emperor, and Hou Shu's Emperor were all present.

Gao Zhijian's status was the highest, so he sat in the middle. Qing Qiu's Khan sat at his side while the emperors from Si Qi and Hou Shu, who had just regained their kingdoms, sat on the edge.

Gao Zhijian held his cup, and the eunuchs gave the dancers a knowing look. The dancers swiftly finished the dance and retreated.

"Today." Gao Zhijian's low voice silenced the hall. "Today, I am thrilled to announce that the kingdom of Si Qi has been reclaimed from the evil Dharma Sect!"

Everyone in the hall smiled at the good news.

Gao Zhijian continued his speech. Bai Lingmiao had no formal education, but she still felt that his speech was meaningless.

The point was that the Dharma Sect had been defeated in Si Qi, and everyone was called to work towards its complete eradication diligently, with the goal of restoring normalcy by the end of the year.

The dancers made a comeback. This time, they didn't dance on the man's palm—they danced on top of some drums! Their tiny white feet moved rhythmically on the drums, synchronizing with the beat of the music. The crowd loved it.

Bai Lingmiao felt conflicted when she witnessed how wasteful the others were being, all while her followers had to make do with nearly spoiled vegetables.

She waited until the banquet ended late at night.

When almost everyone had left the hall, Bai Lingmiao approached Si Qi's Emperor. "Your Majesty, the war is not over. I don't believe spending so much on a feast is necessary."

“I was the one who told them to do it,” Gao Zhijian said. He looked exhausted, as if the weight of his crown was too heavy.

“Junior Bai, I understand what you are trying to say, but we cannot skimp on this. If we don’t do this, the people beneath us will speculate a lot. The expenses for tonight are a minor cost to reassure everyone and make them believe everything is running smoothly.”

Bai Lingmiao looked at Gao Zhijian and noticed that he was much different now.

Bai Lingmiao decided to let it go and asked another question. “And what about Xuan Pin? Isn’t he dead?”

Gao Zhijian waved his hands and signaled the guards to surround the palace. The eunuchs became the second line of defense as they surrounded the place too. “Let’s talk inside.”

They entered the inner palace. Then, Bai Lingmiao saw that Li Sui and Li Huowang were hidden beneath Xuan Pin’s robes. Li Sui slithered out of the robes with her tentacles, revealing Li Huowang’s face beneath the robes.

The Xuan Pin that everyone had seen at the banquet was fake—it was actually Li Huowang and Li Sui in disguise. The real Xuan Pin was dead.

The red robes filled with weird runes were trailing on Li Huowang’s body like a large bedsheet.

However, the red robes eventually became smaller until they became a good fit for Li Huowang’s body.

Li Huowang hugged Bai Lingmiao lightly before letting her go.

“We cannot let news of Xuan Pin’s death spread. It would affect the soldier’s morale,” Gao Zhijian said as a group of people walked into the inner palace.

Those who could enter the place were naturally the core nucleus of the allied army. Everyone in the room knew what had happened.

The banquet was just a smokescreen. The real fight began here.

As everyone took a seat on the chairs adorned with gold embroidery, the eunuchs served them a cup of tea before making their way out.

In contrast to the festive mood outside, the atmosphere within the inner palace was rather somber. A wisp of white steam escaped from the teacup, yet silence hung in the air, with no one daring to break it.

Li Huowang was the first one to talk. “Xuan Pin is dead and there’s no need to hide anything from me. How’s the situation?”

Li Huowang steeled himself for the battle to come, no matter how hard it would get.

But no one replied to him.

“What? Do you all think my rank is so low that I don’t have the right to ask?”

He looked at Gao Zhijian, who gestured at the deputy chief of the Liang Kingdom’s Surveillance Bureau to speak.

“The Dharma Sect is now hiding in Nan Ping. We’ve just sent the informants and we have no insight into their internal structure yet.”

Li Huowang frowned. “That’s it? I don’t believe that you guys would still hide information from me when the situation is already this critical.”

“Daoist Li, Chief Xuan Pin instructed not to divulge certain information to you.”

“Stop trying to use him to suppress me! I don’t have to listen to his orders! How did he die if he’s really that strong? Don’t try to push me to the side—I intend to fight in the war! Tell me everything, including what you expect me to do. I’ll decide if I want to do it or not!”

Gao Zhijian waved lightly at Li Huowang to calm him down. “Senior Li, please don’t be upset. They are not trying to hide anything from you. What specific questions do you have? They will talk.”

“How did Xuan Pin die? What happened to them while I was fighting Ma Tuo?”

1. Essentially a summer home 📌

Chapter 772 - Plan

“How did Xuan Pin die? What happened to them while I was fighting Ma Tuo?”

Li Huowang wanted to know urgently. Did Xuan Pin and the others fight against the other Simings even though they were weak, or was it another ambush from the Dharma Sect?

Both scenarios were possible, but the former was less probable.

Xuan Pin was the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. He clearly knew about the Simings' strength, and they were not idiots who would charge into the Baiyu Capital to fight the Simings.

Li Huowang was worried that the Dharma Sect had ambushed Xuan Pin. He never thought the Dharma Sect would have the power to both summon Ma Tuo to distract him and ambush Xuan Pin.

If that was the case, the Dharma Sect's strength had far exceeded everyone's expectations. They could swoop in and kill everyone if they wanted.

It would also mean that the Dharma Sect retreated not because they were defeated, but rather because they wanted to regroup and recover their strength. That way, they could destroy the Liang Kingdom in one fell swoop.

They really couldn't lose now. Si Qi, Qing Qiu, Hou Shu, and the Liang Kingdom were all allied now. If they lost, the Dharma Sect would dominate the entire land, and they would end up like the Qi Kingdom.

The deputy chief did not reply to Li Huowang's question. They whispered among each other while looking at Gao Zhijian from time to time to ask for permission.

“Let me tell you what happened. The deputy chiefs don't know what happened because there were certain things that even Xuan Pin did not tell them.”

An unfamiliar voice came from the group of people. Li Huowang stood up and noticed a man sitting in the corner. The man was wearing an oversized Nuo opera mask.

Li Huowang recognized the massive Nuo opera mask depicting two distorted faces stacked on top of one another. It was the Chief of Hou Shu’s Surveillance Bureau, Zhang Tan. He had survived since he hadn’t gone with Xuan Pin.

“Xuan Pin observed earthly and celestial signs to predict that there would be chaos in the Baiyu Capital. He came up with a plan to use three Dragon Veins as the base of an array to help the Simings fight against god Yu’er. Don’t ask me how—I don’t know how he did it. Xuan Pin’s techniques are very mysterious.”

“Wait, which Simings did he try to help?”

“The Heavenly Mater, Ji Zai, Kui Lei, Doulao, Jiang Xiangshou, the Five Dhyani Buddhas, the Three Ancient Ones, Ba-Hui, and the Sacrificial God.”

“Wait a minute. Even Doulao is helping the other Simings fight against god Yu’er?” Li Huowang remembered that Doulao had been fighting against Ji Zai and wondered why it was helping now.

If that was true, he couldn’t imagine what was happening in the Baiyu Capital.

Zhang Tan didn’t answer Li Huowang’s question. “I didn’t follow them that day since I was guarding the Dragon Veins to prevent an ambush from the Dharma Sect. I also don’t know what happened there.

“However, there were corpses of Dharma Sect members on the ground. I believe that god Yu’er informed the Dharma Sect about their location, allowing them to send people to disrupt the ceremony.”

“So,” Li Huowang clenched his fists, “the Dharma Sect ambushed Xuan Pin and the others while they were in the array? Is that why they died? Because they failed?”

“No,” Zhang Tan shook his head, “Xuan Pin and the others succeeded. They sacrificed themselves and now god Yu’er is dead.”

“Wait, what?!” Everyone in the inner palace stood up from shock.

They all knew that the Dharma Sect worshiped god Yu’er. If god Yu’er was genuinely dead, it was only a matter of time before the Dharma Sect crumbled.

“Wait, that’s not right!” Li Huowang’s voice calmed the others down. “There’s no reason for so many Simings to work together to defeat god Yu’er alone, especially since they also needed Xuan Pin and the others to help them!”

Zhang Tan nodded. “You are right. God Yu’er is dead, but the Dharma Sect has other patron gods too like Sir Arrogant Stone and the others still hiding in the darkness.”

Everyone deflated and sat back down.

Li Huowang took a deep breath. At least Xuan Pin’s sacrifice was not in vain. They killed god Yu’er in the process. While the situation is not looking good, at least there’s still a chance of overturning it.

One of the Lamas from the Antrabhara Temple stood up and whispered to Gao Zhijian after Li Huowang finished asking his questions. Gao Zhijian was shocked. “Is that true? Then please do so!”

“Did the Lamas have a method to defeat the Dharma Sect?”

Li Huowang drank his cold tea as he looked at the Lamas heading out to find someone.

“Senior Li, why are you wearing Xuan Pin’s robes?” Bai Lingmiao asked curiously.

Li Huowang felt the robes on his body and pondered before saying, “They’re thick and don’t burn up.”

Li Huowang touched the flowing runes on the red robes gently. “Xuan Pin is already dead, so he does not need them anyway.”

He wasn't superstitious, so he didn't mind wearing a dead person's clothes as long as they held value to him.

The robes could also shrink or enlarge freely, and there was the added benefit of fooling the Dharma Sect into thinking that Xuan Pin was still alive.

The Lama brought someone into the inner palace while Li Huowang placed his teacup down. The Lama had brought in an old man with white eyes. He held onto a white banner and trembled every time he walked forward.

Li Huowang stared without any reservation but found nothing special about the old man.

He was still thinking about what was happening when the blind old man knelt on the ground and kowtowed to the direction Gao Zhijian was in with the help of a eunuch. The old man then took out an old tortoise shell scribbled with various runes from his bag.

The old man fished out several coins and threw them into the tortoise shell while he chanted mysteriously. He then shook the tortoise shell with the coins clinking inside.

Once he was done, he swung the tortoise shell downwards. Eight coins flew out, with six facing heads up and two facing tails up.

The blind man touched the coins with his wrinkled hands and revealed a joyous expression. He knelt on the ground and started kowtowing in a random direction. "Your Highness! This is the divination of great fortune!"

"Oh my god!" Li Huowang pressed his temples with pain and stood up. "What the fuck are you guys doing? The situation is dire! Can you stop being superstitious? Can you really kill the Dharma Sect with your divination?!"

Chapter 773 - Solution

Everyone frowned upon hearing Li Huowang's words.

Qing Qiu's Khan wanted to say something but was stopped by Gao Zhijian.

"Senior Li, a divination before the battle has always been our tradition. The man standing before us is the famous Half-Immortal Fu Su. His divinations are known for always being accurate. While he may not be able to help us defeat the Dharma Sect, a divination of great fortune could greatly benefit us."

"Hoh." Li Huowang stared at the old man. "You can do divinations to see whether we're lucky or not? Which Siming do you follow? Which Siming's strength do you borrow?"

Half-Immortal Fu Su, who had been respectful towards Gao Zhijian, showed a prideful look on his face. "We fortune tellers do not borrow anything from other beings. Everything has its cause and effect, including the Simings. I calculate the fate of the heavens and find the cause and effect of the Simings!"

"So you're saying you can calculate the fates of the heavens when you yourself are already one foot into the grave? Are you saying that you can observe constantly changing fates? Are you stronger than a Siming?"

Li Huowang had seen too many things and was very skeptical.

Fu Su replied, "You're also a Daoist, so why don't you believe in fate? What is a Siming? As their name implies, while they control fate, they also have their own fate. Everything they do and will do is set in stone. Isn't that right, Li Huowang?"

Li Huowang felt surprised when the old man called out his name without ever hearing it before, but he soon calmed down.

"So you can tell my fortune? Well then, go ahead and enlighten me! I want to see what else you can dig up. Tell me where I come from.”

Surprisingly, Fu Su shook his head. “I cannot calculate that.”

“Haha! So just like that, you can’t tell me my fortune? Why don’t you join the Sitting Oblivion Dao and become a Shai Zi if you’re so great at lying?”

“I cannot calculate because someone else has done it for you. It’s up to you to believe me or not, but the sign of great fortune is real. Unless... You want me to calculate great misfortune instead?”

“I—” Li Huowang shut up. The old man was right. He wanted to win, not lose.

Gao Zhijian sat down on his throne and looked at Li Huowang with a complicated expression. “Senior Li, now is not the time to fight. Could you stop fighting for the sake of my honor right now?”

Li Huowang remained silent and sat back down.

Fine. Let them be superstitious. I suppose it’s not bad for him to come up with a sign of fortune. Might as well consider it a good start.

Li Huowang believed in divination, but he didn’t believe that the old man could predict the end just like that.

Fu Su left and Li Huowang remained silent. Gao Zhijian then took the chance to announce, “A sign of great fortune. The heavens are helping us!”

Gao Zhijian glanced at Li Huowang, who was drinking tea. “Let’s put that aside for now. We have more important matters. A kingdom cannot lose its ruler for even a single day, and the same thing can be said for the Liang Kingdom’s Surveillance Bureau. Now that Xuan Pin has passed away, we need a new chief. We cannot leave that position empty.”

Everyone nodded in agreement. They were about to fight the Dharma Sect, so the position was critical.

“I thought you wanted me to masquerade as Xuan Pin to calm the hearts of others? Wouldn’t we reveal that Xuan Pin is dead if we have a new chief now?”

“Senior Li, you will continue to masquerade as Xuan Pin. On the outside, you are still the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau, but on the inside we have someone else using Xuan Pin’s name to operate everything.”

Gao Zhijian had just answered when someone suggested, “Your Majesty, you have the highest status here. Whoever you nominate will become the Chief!”

Gao Zhijian glanced at Li Huowang before looking at everyone else. “This isn’t about just filling the position but about finding the most suitable person for the role. We are now at war. In addition to managing all the affairs within the Surveillance Bureau, the person also needs to help us defeat the Dharma Sect. If the new Chief makes a single mistake, it could cause irreversible damage.”

Gao Zhijian looked at the Deputy Chiefs of the Surveillance Bureau. According to the law, the royal family couldn’t partake in the matters of the Surveillance Bureaus.

However, the Liang Kingdom’s Surveillance Bureau lacked a leader. Despite his lack of knowledge regarding the affairs of the Surveillance Bureau, he needed to appoint a new leader.

“I can give it a try, at least until everything blows over,” said Zhang Tan, the Chief of Hou Shu’s Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang said nothing as they continued their discussion. He wasn’t someone perfect. While there were things Li Huowang excelled in, the things that Xuan Pin did were not something he could replicate.

In order to defeat the Dharma Sect, it was important for everyone to focus on their individual strengths and do what they do best.

Li Huowang was actually thinking about something more important. When he snapped back, he noticed that everyone was already paying their respects to the four emperors before leaving.

Gao Zhijian approached Li Huowang and bent down slightly. “Senior Li, you cannot go to Nanping or An Xi to fight alone. The Dharma Sect took over a long time ago. The only ones alive in those two kingdoms are undoubtedly the people from the Dharma Sect.

“Master Xuan Pin said that the Dharma Sect was aiming for you. The moment you go, they will do everything in their power to ensure your demise. The safest option is for you to go when we send our soldiers down to Nanping. You can follow them.”

Li Huowang shook his head lightly. “No, the Dharma Sect is not the pressing matter here. It’s the Simings that are supporting the Dharma Sect!”

“Senior Li, what are you talking about?”

Li Huowang looked at the familiar giant in front of him. “Do you remember what Xuan Pin did? He borrowed the strength of the other Simings to kill god Yu’er. This means that we can affect the heavens above with our meager strength. If we can kill the Simings supporting the Dharma Sect, we will naturally eradicate the Dharma Sect.”

Gao Zhijian wanted to persuade Li Huowang against doing something so dangerous. “But Senior Li, have you forgotten that Master Xuan Pin died because of this? It’s too dangerous!”

Li Huowang waved his arms in annoyance. “He died because he didn’t prepare thoroughly and got ambushed by the Dharma Sect. It doesn’t matter to me.”

He stood up and headed outside. “Since we already found out that there are Simings supporting the Dharma Sect, it’s only natural for us to try and destroy them, isn’t that right?”

It was a chance to end the war. Xuan Pin’s success had pointed him towards the direction that he should take, especially since they had managed to kill god Yu’er.

Chapter 774 - Chief

“Try? Of course we must try it! I never said we shouldn’t.” Gao Zhijian blocked Li Huowang. “I will send as many people as possible to try it!”

Li Huowang replied, “As if they have the strength to do so. I don’t think any of them would know where the Baiyu Capital is located. I went there once, and I’m a Siming’s Twisted One. I can do this, but we could do this together to increase our chances of winning.”

Gao Zhijian held onto Li Huowang’s robes. “Senior Li! It’s very dangerous to partake in the matters of a Siming! You will die!”

“Idiot. You spent so much time with me after we left the Zephyr Temple. Have you ever seen me afraid of death?” Li Huowang turned his robes incorporeal and escaped Gao Zhijian’s grasp.

Li Huowang’s departure left Gao Zhijian feeling quite anxious. If he had known this would happen, he would’ve encouraged Li Huowang to go to Nan Ping to fight instead. It would’ve been much safer compared to going to Baiyu Capital.

Gao Zhijian asked Bai Lingmiao for help. “Junior Bai, please try to persuade him! It’s too dangerous.”

Bai Lingmiao pursed her lips and shook her head with sadness. “If you couldn’t convince him, neither could I. Senior Li is also right. Handling the problem from the top would also destroy the Dharma Sect for good. We wouldn’t have to go through so much suffering either.”

“But Senior Li could die!”

Bai Lingmiao clenched her fists. “The White Lotus Sect and I will do everything in our power to keep him alive.”

The two of them were still discussing when Li Huowang left the palace. Even though he knew what he needed to do, he still didn't know how.

Xuan Pin treated Li Huowang like a snitch and revealed absolutely nothing to him. He had no choice but to find the way to enter the Baiyu Capital by himself.

Li Huowang headed towards the Surveillance Bureau in hopes of finding the method that Xuan Pin had used.

He reached a small estate guarded by two lions. Li Huowang flashed his identity plate and entered the estate without a hitch.

There were many people inside, most of them here to exchange for treasures. The Surveillance Bureau could mobilize so many people because they quite literally had a trove of treasures to attract mercenaries.

After all, asking people to fight against the Dharma Sect with just ideals wasn't realistic.

"Master." Li Huowang thought he had misheard, but he turned around and saw Lu Xiucan.

Lu Xiucan had undergone a drastic transformation from his initial naive appearance. His entire scalp was gone, one of his eye sockets was empty, his trousers were dangling in the air, and his mouth was devoid of teeth.

Lu Xiucan had become what his father had initially told him last time: an evil entity that Li Huowang would fight against.

Lu Xiucan's shirt was in tatters, and he used his one remaining arm to hold onto his modao, using it as a crutch to stand.

He used his modao to jump forward when he saw Li Huowang approaching him.

"What are you doing here?" Li Huowang frowned as he looked at Lu Xiucan.

"I don't have any legs and can't walk quickly. I'm here to see if there's anything I could use." Lu Xiucan smiled.

“When did you join the Surveillance Bureau?”

“I didn’t. The Surveillance Bureau opened up their vault to the outside. Those who fought against the Dharma Sect can exchange items. Don’t you know about this?”

“Why would I know something like this?” Li Huowang looked at Lu Xiucan’s missing legs and shouted angrily, “Why did you cut off your leg? How did you use the Profound Records? Don’t you know that you should skin yourself first? You could even cut off your feet instead!”

“Master, I did. But it was a difficult battle. Skinning my leg and cutting off my feet didn’t work. I had to cut off my legs.”

Li Huowang sighed. He understood the agony of losing limbs in comparison with losing skin. Lu Xiucan must’ve faced a really strong opponent.

Li Huowang had thought Lu Xiucan had either died or returned to Cowheart Village. He never thought that Lu Xiucan was still on the front lines. “Why did you fight so hard? You should go back now.”

Lu Xiucan shook his head and smiled. “No, Master. I won’t return until the Dharma Sect has been completely crushed.”

Li Huowang looked towards the Surveillance Bureau. “I have something to do, so you better be careful.”

“Please go ahead.”

Li Huowang had just taken a few steps when he turned around and took out his dagger. He cut open a small wound on Lu Xiucan’s abdomen.

Li Huowang then took out a small human-skin doll from his own abdomen and stuffed it into Lu Xiucan’s body.

Li Huowang pressed the wounds tightly and Lu Xiucan’s abdomen was healed.[\[1\]](#)

“I am giving you one more life. Go back when it’s gone. If you die, the Lu family will be gone forever.” Li Huowang patted his shoulder and turned to leave.

“Thank you Master!”

Lu Xiucan turned and hobbled to a different direction than Li Huowang.

Lu Xiucan reached a wooden counter before giving them his collection of black cloths and left ears, which he had collected from the Dharma Sect members he had killed. He planned to exchange them for lifespan pills to get something from the vault.

“Dear Sir, what do you need?” An eunuch with coins sewn into his eye sockets smiled.

“I don’t have legs anymore. Are there any treasures that make me walk again so I can chase down people?”

“Is that so? Please go and wait behind the screen. I will check for you.”

“Alright.” Lu Xiucan hopped on his modao towards the screen.

He initially struggled to hop around on his modao. But now, he was surprisingly skilled at doing so.

He sat behind the screen while touching the place where Li Huowang had cut him on the abdomen previously.

What did Master give me? A life? Could that thing really give me another life? Lu Xiucan was still intrigued when several people approached him from the other side of the screen.

It wasn’t the eunuch with coins for eyes, but instead several people wearing large robes and tall hats. Lu Xiucan caught the stench of blood the moment they entered.

“What do you want?” Lu Xiucan wasn’t worried because this was the Surveillance Bureau’s territory. He was certain that no one would stir up trouble here.

“You and I were fated to meet.” The elder in front revealed a bloody Profound Records and pointed at Lu Xiucan’s Profound Records, which was barely peeking out of his bag.

1. He could've just regrown Lu Xiucan's limbs with his "Truth" cultivation... 🤔

Chapter 775 - Underground

Lu Xiucan wasn't quite sure about what they wanted. However, he recognized the Profound Records in the man's hands, so he had a good guess about who they were. He was no longer a youngster who knew nothing about the world. "You guys are... from the Ao Jing sect?"

"Pleased to meet you. I am Zu Yi." Zu Yi shook Lu Xiucan's hands.

"I am Lu Xiucan. Is there a reason you were looking for me? And what did you mean by 'fated'?"

Zu Yi smiled and sat down next to Lu Xiucan with the other Ao Jing Sect members. He looked at Lu Xiucan's battle-worn body and said, "That's not the proper way of using the Profound Records, but your talent is undeniable. Did someone teach you how to use the Profound Records?"

"My Master."

"I don't think your Master is from the Ao Jing Sect, is he?" Zu Yi probed.

Lu Xiucan didn't answer. He was unsure what they were trying to do, so he didn't want to reveal too much.

"You've used the Profound Records and show no signs of stopping despite your body already being like this," Zu Yi explained. "That means your potential is very high. I am here to invite you to join us. That's what I meant by fate."

Lu Xiucan thought they were bluffing since they were very direct. "I am happy you wish to recruit me, but I must respectfully decline. I am currently a disciple of the White Lotus Sect."

“So what? You can keep praying to your white lotus. The Sacrificial God and Ba-Hui don’t need prayers. Only pain connects us to them.”

Lu Xiucan remained silent. Only then did Zu Yi reveal some benefits to him.

“You’re already like this. Are you afraid of someone taking advantage of you? Have you ever wondered why I still have all of my limbs while you only have a single arm left? As I said before, you’re not using the Profound Records correctly. We have methods to regenerate your limbs in our sect. Have you ever seen any of us missing a limb?”

Lu Xiucan’s eyes widened in realization. He still remembered how his Master regenerated his wounds and severed limbs. It must’ve been a technique of the Ao Jing Sect!

“Will you teach me?” Lu Xiucan wanted that power. If he could use it just like his Master did, he could regenerate his wounds and kill more members of the Dharma Sect. His power would increase too.

Zu Yi chuckled when he heard Lu Xiucan’s sincere plea. “You need to ascend. The Profound Records is the martial technique of Immortals. If you retain your mortality and do not ascend, you can only use the methods listed in it for a limited amount of time.”

“Ascend? Do you mean the Cang-Qiang Ascension?” Lu Xiucan recalled seeing it in the Profound Records before, but the conditions were too harsh.

Zu Yi shook his head. “It’s not limited to that. While the Cang-Qiang Ascension is useful, you might not be able to do it. There are different levels of ascension. The Profound Records is a versatile technique, but it’s not the only one we have in the sect.”

“Oh, then what other techniques do you have, if I dare ask?” Lu Xiucan was intrigued. He knew too little about the Ao Jing Sect. The only thing he knew about the Ao Jing Sect was that it was unlike other sects—its members didn't need to read or have good comprehension skills. This was very helpful for him.

Zu Yi didn't tell him. "As long as you join us, we will naturally tell you."

Lu Xiucan frowned. He looked down, noting his own battered appearance. He decided to join the Ao Jing Sect.

He was already so broken that there was nothing the others could want from his body. The only thing he could do now was kill more Dharma Sect members, and he was ready to pay any price to do so. "Fine, I will join the Ao Jing Sect!"

"Talking here isn't convenient. Let's go back to the Cross Temple and discuss more."

Lu Xiucan grabbed his modao and was about to stand up when Zu Yi stopped him. "Since you want to join us, you cannot move around like that anymore. You've used the Profound Records before, so you should know how we do things, right?"

"But senior... I don't have legs. How should I walk?"

Lu Xiucan screamed when a sharpened wooden stick was stabbed into him to act as his amputated left leg.

After that was the right leg.

Lu Xiucan, who had lost both legs, stood up once more with wooden sticks as legs instead. The pain was unbearable, causing him to tremble and his face to turn pale.

They were looking at Lu Xiucan when he gritted his teeth. "You go first. I will follow you!"

Lu Xiucan had just taken a step with his right leg when the wooden stick sank deeper. Blood flowed down the stick.

However, Lu Xiucan did not hesitate. He saw it as a trial.

"Alright, we will wait for you in the temple." Zu Yi had no intention of waiting for Lu Xiucan. He brought the others and exited the screen before leaving the Surveillance Bureau.

Just then, one of the individuals behind Zu Yi asked, "Elder, are you sure about this? He may be Li Huowang's disciple, but it's possible that Li Huowang doesn't favor him."

Zu Yi glared at him. "Just do your job. You have no right to question the grand elders."

The man lowered his face and remained silent.

Unbeknownst to them, Li Huowang was walking through a narrow corridor just fifteen meters below them.

Even with no one around, Li Huowang could still clearly feel the gazes of others. This was the core of the Surveillance Bureau's temporary base. Their sentries and traps were merely invisible, not absent.

As Li Huowang reached a bamboo door, it opened by itself. On the other side of the door was a spacious underground hall with torches on the side.

Li Huowang found the person he was looking for in the middle of the hall. It was Zhang Tan, the Chief who temporarily took on Xuan Pin's mantle.

Several burly men were holding up four bamboo poles wrapped in red cloth. They held it in a way that made the poles cross each other in the middle.

Zhang Tan was jumping on the poles as he performed a Nuo Opera with music.

Li Huowang had seen a lot of operas and performances thanks to the Lu family, but he couldn't bring himself to think that the one Zhang Tan was performing was a show.

Zhang Tan was still wearing a large wooden mask, which covered his body. He twisted his body in a way that no normal person could do. He effortlessly hopped onto an elastic bamboo pole.

Sometimes, Zhang Tan brought both arms together behind him. Sometimes, he hooked his right foot on the bamboo pole and twirled.

Just then, the drum sounds became faster. Two figures, one black and one white, hopped onto the bamboo pole.

Li Huowang was surprised since he recognized them. They were the Lion Dances that he had fought before!

Chapter 776 - Search

Li Huowang thought his eyes were playing tricks on him when he saw the Lion Dances, but he became certain when he saw the numerous feet beneath the white cloth. It was the same Lion Dances he had fought against underneath Qing Qiu.

At Zhang Tan's guidance, the two Lion Dances jumped, leaped, climbed, and prayed on the bamboo poles.

Li Huowang could understand if Zhang Tan was just performing the Nuo Opera, but he never thought the Lion Dances could be incorporated into it.

When taking a closer look, Li Huowang could see similarities between the masks of Zhang Tan and the Lion Dances.

As he watched, Zhang Tan ended the Nuo Opera. In the past, the person performing would sing a bit, but this time, Zhang Tan remained silent until the music ended.

As the Lion Dances left and the men carried away the bamboo poles, Li Huowang approached Zhang Tan. "What were you doing just now?"

"Welcoming an old guest."

"Why?"

Zhang Tan turned and faced Li Huowang, looking at him from beneath his large wooden mask. "Do you need something?"

Li Huowang decided not to pursue meaningless questions and instead said what he needed.

"I need to know the method Xuan Pin used to assist the other Simings to kill god Yu'er."

"I don't know."

"You don't know?"

"Yes, I don't know." Zhan Tan turned to leave before being stopped by Li Huowang.

“Do you really not know, or are you just pretending you don’t? The people who know are dead, and you’re currently the highest-ranking person here. If you don’t know, no one else in the Surveillance Bureau would. Don’t forget that I am also your ally in trying to eradicate the Dharma Sect.”

Zhang Tan stared at Li Huowang through his mask. “If Xuan Pin didn’t trust you, why would you think he would trust me? Do you think he would tell me everything?”

Zhang Tan left without looking back. Li Huowang frowned. “You don’t know? I don’t trust you.”

Li Sui’s tentacles helped Li Huowang put on Xuan Pin’s red robes. Li Huowang disappeared into the darkness of the robes and became Xuan Pin.

When he extended his arms out of the robes, they had already turned into Xuan Pin’s long, skeletal arms.

He then waved lightly before Shangguan Yuting appeared beside him. She smiled and waved at Li Huowang.

Now that his cultivation of the “Truth” had reached a considerable level, he could manifest any illusions that Xuan Pin used. And instead of manifesting fakes, Li Huowang could manifest the real illusions.

Li Huowang was certain that Xuan Pin wouldn’t leave zero traces of such an important ritual, especially after he succeeded in doing it. There must be some traces in the Surveillance Bureau.

Since he doesn’t want to tell me, I will have to find it myself. I am also using his identity as the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau right now.

For now, Li Huowang was indeed the highest authority of the Surveillance Bureau. No one could stop him.

“Let’s go to his study.” Li Huowang floated up with Shangguan Yuting and phased through the ceiling.

They soon reached Xuan Pin’s room. Since Li Huowang was masquerading as Xuan Pin, no one stopped him.

He was surprised to find Xuan Pin's room wasn't large compared to his massive body. It was actually narrow.

There was nothing except for books lining up all four walls and a table with an inkwell, brush, and papers. The room was so bare that there wasn't even a bed.

It was also very messy, either by design or because Xuan Pin had been too busy to tidy up the place.

"Didn't he need to sleep?" Li Huowang inspected the table and the documents.

He was disappointed to find that it was just a map of constellations.

"Or maybe it's in the book?" Li Huowang looked at the books stacked all the way up to the ceiling. "I thought his techniques all came from Ji Zai. Does he even need to read?"

Li Huowang flipped a random book and noticed that the ink was slowly moving.

"Amitabha, amitabha." Li Huowang turned around and saw the old monk was praying to the books.

"Xuan Pin most likely died in the Baiyu Capital. I don't think he can reincarnate, so there's no reason to pray for him."

"Daoist, I'm not praying for him. I'm praying to the Buddha."

"Buddha? Here?" Li Huowang approached the old monk and saw a small Buddha statue on the book shelf.

He picked it up and inspected it. He frowned because he had seen it before in the Righteous Monastery.

"Help me find out if there's anything else." The other illusions scattered in the room to search for any noteworthy objects.

They soon found a lot of things.

"Daoist, I found the prayer wheel of a Lama."

"There's also a talisman depicting a cow's nose," Peng Longteng said.

They found more and more things. Li Huowang caught on to key information when they found a mahjong tile of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

It appeared that everything here was connected to different sects, all of which worshiped the Simings who worked with Xuan Pin!

“I should’ve known!”

Xuan Pin didn’t go to the Baiyu Capital directly when he said that he was helping the Simings.

He first contacted the various sects so that they would allow him to seek their Simings. Then, he went to the Baiyu Capital after they finalized and approved the plan! They must’ve been sitting on the sidelines when Xuan Pin was contacting the Simings.

Li Huowang placed the items down and walked out.

He looked at the Shimmer Mirror and contemplated which sect he should visit first. The closest one in Si Qi was the Righteous Monastery. The other sects had either been destroyed or were too far away.

“Let’s go!” Peng Longteng appeared and threw Li Huowang towards the direction of the Righteous Monastery.

He flew high and fell down numerous times before he reached the Righteous Monastery.

He had come here once before, but now it was different.

The monk at the entrance immediately noticed him.

“Amitabha. Benefactor Li, please follow me.”

Li Huowang followed him and walked past the crowd to enter from the side door. It wasn’t the path that Li Huowang took last time, but he still ended up in front of the Abbot of the Righteous Monastery, in the hall with the five massive Buddha Statues.

Chapter 777 - Abbot

Underneath the five Buddha statues, two abbots wearing red robes were chanting while fiddling with their prayer beads.

One of them was the Abbot of the Liang Kingdom, whom Li Huowang had met before. His appearance was still as conspicuous as ever, with his distinct pink pupils. He had albinism, just like Bai Lingmiao.

The other abbot was ordinary, but he looked like the old monk's illusion that was following Li Huowang around. He was none other than the Abbot of the Qi Kingdom's Righteous Monastery. The last time Li Huowang had seen him was back in Cowheart Village, and he had visibly gained weight since then.

"Amitabha."

"Amitabha."

The two of them greeted and gestured to Li Huowang to sit down at the same time.

"Benefactor Li, it would be a little impolite not to burn some incense for Buddha since we're at the temple," the Abbot from the Qi Kingdom said.

Li Huowang looked at the five Buddhas when he raised his hands. Three lit incense sticks materialized as he prayed simply and stabbed the incense sticks into the hard stone floor, causing it to crack from the impact.

"It's been a while, Abbot. I suppose you didn't think that we would meet again after last time, did you?" Li Huowang asked the Abbot who tried to kill him previously.

He still remembered how the Abbot had tried to trick him into staying in the temple after coming out from the Zephyr Temple. When that failed, he even sent people to kill him.

It was only thanks to Dan Yangzi parasitizing his body that Li Huowang managed to survive.

“Amitabha. Those who become monks must put kindness and compassion first. I was trying to save more people that time.”

“Bullshit! You are a fake! I know what you were thinking. You wanted to kill me because I’m a Strayed One!”

“I am saving people. You are indeed a Strayed One, a being capable of harming many others. Benefactor Li, am I wrong? Did you not cause the death of many after you escaped?”

“Bullshit!”

Just as they were about to fight, the Abbot from the Qi Kingdom intervened. “Alright, that’s enough. There’s no need to bring up the past. Benefactor Li, why are you here today?”

Li Huowang really wanted to kill that baldy, but he needed to let the abbot live if he wanted to defeat the Dharma Sect. He couldn’t ignore the big picture and help the Dharma Sect by killing him.

Li Huowang shamelessly accepted Chan Du's offer to step down and let the matter rest. He was here to talk with them.

He looked at them and said, “Then I’ll get to the point. Did Xuan Pin speak to the Five Dhyani Buddhas through the Righteous Monastery?”

Li Huowang briefly explained why he was there. After explaining, he noticed a slight change in the faces of the two abbots. Li Huowang looked up and realized that the facial expressions of the five Buddha statues had also changed slightly.

Li Huowang stared at the Abbot from the Liang Kingdom while frowning. “Did Xuan Pin really not come here to talk with the Five Dhyani Buddhas? Or are you guys just as clueless as Zhang Tan?”

“No, the Chief did come here before, but he didn’t find him. He found me.” Li Huowang turned and looked at Chan Du, the Abbot from the Qi Kingdom.

“Xuan Pin did come to find me, and I helped him meet Buddha.”

“What did he say? How did Xuan Pin help the Five Dhyani Buddhas?” Li Huowang’s heart was pounding rapidly.

“I apologize, but I am unable to assist you with that. The secrets of the Buddha cannot be spilled. I naturally do not know what the Buddha has chosen to keep secret.”

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth. “You don’t know either?! Fine, let me meet the Five Dhyani Buddhas myself! Since Xuan Pin could meet them, I can too! Let me meet them!”

Li Huowang had just shouted when the Abbot from the Liang Kingdom admonished him, saying, “Preposterous! Do you think the Buddha is someone you can meet just because you want to?”

“I can’t meet them even if it’s to defeat the Dharma Sect? Weren’t you the one who said that those following the teachings of the Buddha should prioritize kindness and compassion? How many people can we save if we defeat the Dharma Sect? Won’t the Five Dhyani Buddhas meet me to help the people? Or did you bring up doing kind deeds just to justify killing me? Why aren’t you doing anything when there’s suddenly an opportunity to do an incredibly good deed?”

The Abbot from the Liang Kingdom replied, “No! I do not trust you. Buddha’s true form cannot be seen by just anyone. Who can take on the wrath of Buddha if we disturb them?”

“Senior, I am willing to shoulder their wrath should it come our way.” Chan Du’s words extinguished Li Huowang’s anger.

Li Huowang had anticipated they wouldn’t cooperate, but he never thought they would agree so quickly.

“Are you sure? You’re not fooling me, right?”

“Amitabha. Those following the teachings of the Buddha don’t lie.”

Li Huowang liked the Abbot of the Qi Kingdom much better than the one from the Liang Kingdom. Their personalities were very different.

“Great, when should we start?”

“The ceremony requires a lot of preparation. Benefactor Li can rest for the night here. Both my senior and I will send you to Buddha tomorrow afternoon.”

“Alright! Let’s do this tomorrow!” Li Huowang stood up.

He was about to leave when he turned around. “Abbot, I hope that this won’t be like last time, right? Haha.”

Li Huowang opened his stomach and took out the spindle Zhuge Yuan had given him, which had been stuck to his intestines. He pulled it out along with a portion of his intestines.

He threw it onto the ground, and his identity as a Strayed One became as plain as day to the two abbots.

“I trust that you wouldn’t ignore the big picture while the Dharma Sect is still around. Also, I’m no longer a weakling who has to run away from every single enemy.”

Li Huowang left as the two abbots stared at the spindle in silence.

“Benefactor Li is paranoid.”

“I agree.”

“Tomorrow afternoon,” Li Huowang mumbled as he paced around the temple. This was the first time he would meet a Siming other than Ji Zai of his own accord, so he was nervous.

He recalled what he had seen in the Baiyu Capital and snarled. His body started trembling uncontrollably and his surroundings began to warp.

Chapter 778 - Buddha

Li Huowang sensed something was wrong and started rapidly punching his own head.

He realized that it wasn't working. He stabbed his head with a long needle instead. The intense pain stopped his thoughts in time.

"Hah!" Cold sweat drenched his blood-red robes as he panted and gritted his teeth. No matter what the Siming was, since he had to defeat the Dharma Sect, he had no choice but to meet them.

Just then, he felt a pair of eyes staring at him.

"Who's there?!" he shouted. Three tentacles sprouted out, with Li Sui gripping a sword in each of them.

He then saw Chan Du, the Abbot of the Qi Kingdom, shuffling out from a small alley.

"Benefactor Li, I require a bit of assistance. Would you be kind enough to help?"

I knew that there would be a price to pay. No wonder he agreed so fast just now. He wanted me to help him with something...

Li Huowang pondered before asking, "What do you need? I can't do many things, and I don't have the time to travel anywhere far away."

Li Huowang hated doing other people favors to get what he needed, especially when they were allies. Nevertheless, he couldn't be bothered to argue.

He only needed to find out the method that Xuan Pin had used. Everything else was insignificant at the moment.

"Benefactor Li does not have to fight. Please follow me."

Li Huowang sheathed his three swords and followed Chan Du.

Even though Chan Du wanted Li Huowang to help him, he never explained what he needed. He just brought Li Huowang deep into the temple.

The monastery still looked beautiful, though the Righteous Monastery was not as clean as before.

Li Huowang walked slowly through the monastery as the sun set and the bell tolled. He stared at the majestic temples, emanating an aura of reverence.

They walked for fifteen minutes before they approached a large hall.

The hall looked new. There was no sign on it, and a few monks were still busy painting the wood.

Several old ginkgo trees surrounded the large hall, which was solemn and majestic from the front. Since it was new, there were very few devotees there.

Li Huowang followed Chan Du into the hall before realizing it was empty inside. There was an altar with a lotus seat, but there was nothing there. The hall was completely empty.

For some reason, there was a lot of lit incense in the incense burner, even though there wasn't a deity or statue in it.

"What's going on? Did your Buddha run away? You want me to track it down?"

Chan Du shook his head and lit three incense sticks before praying earnestly towards the empty altar.

"Benefactor Li, I've sent some of my disciples outside to scour for information. They told me it wasn't a coincidence that we survived—we were saved by someone else. We were supposed to die, but someone saved us by connecting the Dragon Vein of the Qi Kingdom to the Liang Kingdom."

Li Huowang gradually let his guard down when he heard Chan Du. He somehow knew what Chan Du wanted him to do. "You are right. Someone saved you."

Chan Du perked up attentively. "May I know our savior's name? I've also heard that this matter concerns you?"

“He’s already dead. Why are you asking for this now?”

“No, every survivor of the Qi Kingdom is indebted to our savior. We, who follow the teachings of Buddha, do not allow ourselves to be indebted to another person without repaying their kindness. I wish to erect a statue of our savior so that the others can pray and give their thanks.”

Li Huowang stared at the empty altar and chuckled. “So that’s how you become a Buddha? Would he actually become one? He doesn’t even believe in Buddha, so that’s quite a joke.”

“Benefactor Li, what is a Buddha? Is a Buddha a cultivator who has undergone all three major tribulations? Or is it one who has obtained sufficient merits and wisdom? Or is this a Buddha?” Chan Du pointed at the empty altar.

Li Huowang sat on the ground and wrote “Buddha” on the marble. He stared at the writing before sighing.

“Those capable of saving hundreds of thousands of people should become a Buddha. I’ve even asked my disciples to spread the word of the savior who rescued us from the Qi Kingdom. I wish for the remaining survivors to come and pray to the savior.”

“He’s already dead. What good will it do?”

Li Huowang raised his hand, and the marble tiles of the hall slowly began to stick together. Eventually, they formed a marble statue of Zhuge Yuan on the altar.

Chan Du’s eyes widened with shock upon seeing this. “It’s him?!”

Li Huowang sighed and left the newly opened hall.

Chan Du did not move. He stood still and stared at the statue. “So this is what a Buddha looks like.”

Once news spread out of the new hall, every surviving monk who came from the Qi Kingdom put down their work and started making their way to pray to their savior.

Soon, several groups of survivors from the Qi Kingdom somehow caught wind of the newly opened hall. They made their way towards the new hall, carrying offerings and taking their children along. They prayed earnestly to Zhuge Yuan's statue, and their prayers didn't stop, even late into the night.

Li Huowang stared at the crowd from a corner in the dark. He looked at the statue enveloped in incense smoke and heard the prayers coming from the devotees with his sharp hearing.

Their prayers were so earnest that even Li Huowang thought the statue would come to life and reply their prayers.

Li Huowang stared at them and realized that Zhuge Yuan had indeed saved a lot of people.

The old monk illusion beside him jumped excitedly. "Daoist, please materialize me! I want to do good deeds and become a Buddha!"

Li Huowang ignored him and turned to leave. Just then, Li Huowang saw the other Abbot leading a group of serious-looking monks into the hall.

They were conducting a ceremony, but Li Huowang didn't know the details about it.

The Abbot held a roll of yellow fabric and carefully wrapped it around the statue. He then took out a brush dipped in cinnabar before drawing a single red dot on Zhuge Yuan's forehead.

Li Huowang laughed when he saw Zhuge Yuan with a red dot on his forehead. "HAHAHA!"

His laughter spread out far. Several monks and devotees were looking at where the laughter came from.

"Pfft! Hahaha! It's alright, just continue doing your things! Hahaha!" Li Huowang laughed as he left the hall.

Chapter 779 - Ceremony

“Benefactor Li, I will explain what will happen later since you don’t practice the teachings of the Buddha. My disciples, you, and I will conduct the Samgharama Ceremony in the Thousand Buddha Hall. At the same time, my senior, Abbot Xin Hui, will lead the Great Equal Assembly in the other four halls.”

Chan Du, wearing his robes, walked in front of Li Huowang. As he did, he held a purple alms bowl that seemed to be an artifact.

“Great Equal Assembly?” Li Huowang felt disgusted. “Birds of a feather really do flock together. Never thought one needed to do one to gain the attention of the Buddhas.”[\[1\]](#)

“Benefactor Li, the Great Equal Assembly is a ceremony that allows everyone to participate. It doesn't matter if someone is a noble, criminal, monk, civilian, kind, evil, smart, or stupid—everyone is treated equally during the assembly.”

“Oh? It looks like I was overthinking. No need to explain it to me. I just need your help to meet the Five Dhyani Buddhas.” Li Huowang suddenly felt that he was seeing the Righteous Monastery in a very negative light. He had thought it was another kind of ceremony.

But when he passed by the halls, he saw rows upon rows of monks praying with their hands clasped together. They had their back against the wall, and they were completely naked except for the prayer beads on their neck. They were hitting the wooden fish rhythmically. Li Huowang realized that Chan Du hadn’t explicitly denied what he had implied just now.

He got closer and heard them chanting. “Deeply practicing the perfection of wisdom, for a long time he saw clearly that the five aggregates are all empty. Bodhisattva, relying on the perfection of wisdom, thus proclaimed the mantra of great knowledge: Gone, gone, gone beyond. Hail to the Bodhisattva!”

Under Chan Du and the other monk’s guidance, Li Huowang changed into a clean robe as he entered the Thousand Buddha Hall.

The hall was filled with lit incense, obscuring Li Huowang’s view of the Buddha’s head while still revealing the rest of their body.

In addition to the Buddha statue in the middle, the surroundings were adorned with many other Buddha statues, each depicting different gestures. Some were lying down, while others were seated.

Li Huowang wasn’t sure if there were really a thousand Buddhas in the hall, but he was certain that the hall was much more important than the others because all of the statues here were coated in gold.

Li Huowang sat on the cushion and closed his eyes.

He took a deep breath and opened his eyes again. The Buddha statues around him had completely changed. The sound of drums, bells, and gongs from outside filled the hall.

The Buddhas, both large and small, had turned into the disgusting form that Li Huowang had once seen before.

Despite being coated in gold, they still seemed perverse and disgusting.

The giant heap of flesh sat on the altar like a mound of clay. Its bumpy back was covered in thick blood vessels and goo.

Several strange and twisted reproductive organs rhythmically extended and retracted, moving in sync with the pumping of blood. They also swayed in the air as the body pulsed.

The disgusting being was covered in naked monks and large incense sticks roughly a meter long.

The monks eagerly inhaled the white smoke as they excitedly used their own bodies to plug in every hole they could find in the “Buddha’s” fleshy body. They pulsated and moved in sync with the rhythm.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and closed his eyes. Leaving Li Sui outside was the right call.

As the loud tolling of the bell spread throughout the Righteous Monastery, Chan Du led his disciples and sat around Li Huowang.

“Benefactor Li, if you wish to see Buddha, you must be virtuous. Only then will Buddha notice you. If not, you will fail to meet Buddha.”

“I understand. You can start now.”

Chan Du took a long incense stick and hit it lightly on his alms bowl. Dang~

The monks surrounding Li Huowang started doing each other while the “Buddhas” sitting around the hall looked at them with merciful eyes through the openings in their bodies.

Simultaneously, the monks fervently prayed, their prayers blending with the vile sounds of bodies colliding and perverse utterances.

The sounds of the wooden fish, chants, and flesh on flesh entered Li Huowang’s ears. His body started trembling uncontrollably as he felt his senses melding together.

Li Huowang focused on himself and attempted to discard all stray thoughts. He kept praying earnestly to Buddha.

It might be difficult for the others to pray earnestly without any stray thoughts, but it was easy for Li Huowang. Cultivating the “Truth” required the same requisite. If he had stray thoughts while he cultivated, he would’ve accidentally materialized them too.

Li Huowang wasn’t sure how long he had been praying for, but he realized that everything was quiet around him. So quiet that he could hear a pin dropping.

He opened his eyes warily and saw an astonishingly bizarre entity floating just in front of him. He saw it! The five Dhyani

Buddhas from the five worlds had merged.

They were half-male and half-female, with their reproductive organs inserted into each other. They pleased each other and themselves at the same time.

But the scene didn't last long. Li Huowang barely made out any other details when his eyes exploded. A mortal body couldn't view the Five Dhyani Buddhas directly.

Despite that, he could still perceive the Five Dhyani Buddhas with other senses—touch, smell, and hearing.

A Siming was a special being. Li Huowang could feel their existence even without his eyes.

However, Li Huowang couldn't last long. His organs were quickly dissolving as his brain started expanding rapidly.

Li Huowang shouted with all his breath, "I'm here to help you! No matter who you are facing! If Xuan Pin could do it, so can I! Tell me what to do! Tell me what I should do to help you!" His voice spread far and wide, but there was no reply.

Li Huowang endured the pain of his organs dissolving and moved closer.

But he sensed something was wrong when he got close. His body was being assimilated by the Heavenly Dao of the Five Dhyani Buddhas!

His body shifted wildly like a child playing clay. There was not much he could do other than relying on his cultivation of "Truth" to maintain his body.

1. The Chinese raw 无遮大会 is quite literally translated as uncensored or exposed conference. He thought it was a ceremony where everyone gets naked. 🙌

Chapter 780 - Secret

Li Huowang refused to die right after finally meeting a Siming. The Siming did not react to his words, so he materialized his body and decided to try a different approach.

“I am Ji Zai’s Twisted One. Don’t you recognize Ji Zai? Didn’t you guys fight god Yu’er together?!” Li Huowang’s left ear dropped off as he said that. He quickly picked it up and reattached it to his head.

The Five Dhyani Buddhas did not react to him. Li Huowang felt his brain hurting again and panicked. “What the fuck do you want? How come Xuan Pin can help you guys but I can’t?! What do you want?”

This time, Li Huowang finally felt the Five Dhyani Buddhas react. In the next instant, he felt something incomprehensible enveloping him. He felt his skin, flesh, and bone being peeled away until there was nothing left.

“Try and kill me if you can! Ji Zai will kill you if you do!” Li Huowang used all of his strength to materialize his body again. However, his body soon disintegrated again. The Five Dhyani Buddhas were assimilating his body until everything disappeared. There was nothing left in the space.

And just like that, the Five Dhyani Buddhas left.

“What the fuck is going on?! I’m here to help you! Are you crazy? Can’t you differentiate who’s good and who’s bad? Can’t you talk? Don’t you have a mouth?”

As Li Huowang dejectedly prepared to leave, he felt something come to a halt at the spot where the Five Dhyani Buddhas had been.

Something was there, but Li Huowang had no idea what it was. It was a strange feeling, and his body wasn’t being assimilated by any Heavenly Dao this time.

“Ji Zai? Is that you?” Li Huowang asked and readied himself to leave at any moment.

He wasn’t sure if he was in the Baiyu Capital right now. If he was, he had to seriously consider what was behind him.

Li Huowang suddenly heard a fleeting voice. It was a profound and familiar voice that stirred his deepest memories.

“I’ve seen it before!” Li Huowang tried to recall, but the more he looked into his memories, the more he forgot.

Just then, the being appeared once more. Li Huowang could make out its size this time. It was a very profound being. Its body was both large and small—it was both so big it could cover the Heavens and so small that one could barely perceive it.

Li Huowang wanted to determine if it was a Siming, but his eyes had been blinded, so he had no choice but to rely on his other senses.

I don’t think it’s a Siming. I’m not being assimilated by a Heavenly Dao.

He extended his hands in a daze before touching something that resembled a ribbon.

The being appeared once more before disappearing for good. Li Huowang suddenly felt a strong force that pulled him downwards.

“Father! Father!” Li Huowang opened his eyes forcefully and saw Li Sui looking at him worriedly.

"Father, are you okay? Is everything fine? I tried to wake you up by shaking you, but it didn't work," Li Sui said, wiping the sweat off his forehead with a wet towel.

“I’m... I’m fine!” Li Huowang held his head in pain. He stared at the copper basin and washed his face with the cold water.

His grogginess faded as the cold water woke him up. He felt much better now.

What was that thing? What did it want? Li Huowang frowned and pondered when he suddenly noticed something was wrong with his reflection in the water. He had seven eyes!

Li Huowang finally realized what the ribbon-like being was. It was a Shangji Guankou! The very same Shangji Guankou that exchanged one secret for another secret.

However, in contrast to the Shangji Guankou he had encountered previously, this one was much older and held a higher rank.

Li Huowang had not revealed any secrets and yet received seven secrets.

It gave me the secrets... Does it want me to find out how Xuan Pin helped the Simings?

Li Huowang thought that it was possible since he had no use for the seven secrets to begin with.

His goal had been achieved, but he was still confused. What did that thing want? Why does it want me to help? If it's a Siming, it should be in charge of one of the Heavenly Daos.

Shangji Guankou... Secret... Heavenly Dao? Is there a Heavenly Dao of Secrets in the fifty Heavenly Daos?

His question would remain unanswered. He attempted to recall everything in hopes of learning something from the small clues.

Then, he felt that something wasn't right. His memories were swiftly disappearing!

"What's... What's happening?" As Li Huowang was trying to figure it out, someone knocked on his door.

"Who is it?"

"It's me, Chan Du."

I wonder if the abbots know anything. I did manage to meet the Simings through their ceremonies. Li Huowang didn't even wear his shoe when he opened the door in a hurry.

He saw Chan Du was standing there with the purple alms bowl with the group of monks behind him. All of them were clasping their hands and staring at him.

“Amitabha. The hour of the ceremony is approaching. I shall lead you there.”

Li Huowang stepped back in surprise. “Are... Are you kidding me?”

He gazed at Chan Du but noticed that the Abbot was serious, with no signs of deception.

Was everything just a dream? Was it fake? Li Huowang tried to recall his hazy memories but realized that he couldn’t differentiate them from reality.

He quickly looked at his reflection in the water and saw the seven eyes from before on his reflection. It hadn’t been a dream. It was real!

“Benefactor Li, what happened? I thought you wanted to meet Buddha. Did you change your mind?”

Li Huowang heard his questioning and understood something.

Everything was real, but it hid the entire ordeal! It must’ve been the Siming that controls secrets!

Chapter 781 - Siming

“You recognize me, don’t you? You definitely do. You once called me Ji Zai in the psychiatric hospital. That’s absolutely true. Others might not know, but you surely know something!

“No need to hide it anymore. I already know. I am fully awakened now. I know who I am. I am Ji Zai—the Siming of Bewilderment!

“What kind of Siming are you? What Heavenly Dao do you oversee? Which Heavenly Daos do the others oversee?”

Qian Fu watched the rambling Li Huowang as he slowly stuffed his mouth with a hamburger. He turned his head and asked Chen Hongyu beside him in a muffled voice, “What’s wrong with Li Huowang?”

“He’s gone mad.”

Li Huowang suddenly turned his head towards her. He asked emotionally, “Abbess? Or rather, a part of the Abbess? The thoughts of everyone at the Benevolent Nunnery were connected. As the Siming of Rot, you should have some memories of her, right?”

Chen Hongyu rolled her eyes in disgust and moved toward the back of the RV, where Wu Qi was making a phone call. She asked, “Has Qing Wanglai arrived yet? How much longer do we have to wait?”

Wu Qi didn’t answer. She walked further in, holding her phone to her mouth as she chuckled.

“Huowang, don’t be like this. Please take your medicine,” Bai Lingmiao said, stopping Li Huowang from walking towards Wu Qi and handing him the medicine and water.

Li Huowang gripped the steaming glass cup, then sat down on the stool and let out a heavy sigh.

He had already understood his identity, and he was sure the others were also Simings.

Since they were Simings, the threats they faced had to be from god Yu'er and the Dharma Sect. This way, all the logic from before was completely connected.

Simings in the Baiyu Capital usually only cared about their own affairs. However, they were forced to unite when facing external enemies.

"Is god Yu'er really that powerful? Forcing seven Simings to join hands. No, it's probably not just god Yu'er. It doesn't seem like a single Siming could achieve the previous schemes by themselves."

Li Huowang looked at his companions again. Unfortunately, he could not communicate effectively with them, even if he understood. They wouldn't listen no matter what he said to them now.

This projection was obviously distorted when refracted, which made it difficult to convey the meaning of his words.

How can I make them understand my point? Wait, if I am a Siming, does everything from before exist? Are Puppy, Bai Lingmiao, and Gao Zhijian still around? How are they doing? Li Huowang thought of them and his expression turned heavy.

"Come on, be good. Take your medicine quickly." Yang Na placed the medicine in Li Huowang's hand and then guided his hand to his mouth. "Place the medicine at the base of your tongue first, then wash it down with water so it won't be bitter."

Li Huowang still didn't take the medicine. He held the medicine in one hand and the cup in the other as he stared blankly at Yang Na. "Nana, what kind of Siming are you?"

Li Huowang was certain that he had only been a Siming for a short time, so there shouldn't have been any Simings that had such a good relationship with him.

This was very strange. Or maybe, the projections on both sides were not perfectly matched.

Yang Na couldn't hold it in any longer and burst into tears as she leaned on the table.

Li Huowang's heart trembled when he heard her heartbreaking sobs, snapping out of his previous state.

It didn't matter what Siming Nana was—she was his Yang Na first and foremost.

He had been too eager to uncover the truth and had completely ignored her feelings. It must have seemed like his mental illness had relapsed.

As Li Huowang comforted Yang Na, Wu Qi hung up the phone and walked over. "What's going on here? Why are you crying all of a sudden? Are you two breaking up?"

"Li Huowang is going crazy and upset his girlfriend. Who were you calling just now?" Chen Hongyu asked while fighting with Qian Fu for fries.

"My best friend." Wu Qi put her arm around Yang Na's shoulders and gently comforted her.

"You have a best friend? I thought you were too busy driving this broken car around to make friends."

"How can you say that? How come I can't have friends? Come help out. Can't you see that she's crying?"

Chen Hongyu grabbed the Coke from Qian Fu's hand. "I wasn't the one who made her cry, so why should I help? Anyway, don't interfere. This is a small issue. If they can't handle this, how will they deal with getting married and having kids in the future? This is nothing. They'll break up eventually."

"Nana! Look, I will take the medicine." Li Huowang displayed the medicine and capsules in his hand to Yang Na, then put them in his mouth and swallowed them.

Yang Na felt slightly less overwhelmed. Li Huowang's recent manic behavior was clearly caused by his old illness relapsing due to not taking his medication.

She realized she would need to monitor him to ensure he takes his medication. Yang Na didn't want Li Huowang to be sent back to the psychiatric hospital, and she didn't want to see him lose his sanity again.

Wu Qi saw Li Huowang signal her with his eyes, so she tactfully left her seat and gave him some space.

Li Huowang sat in Wu Qi's place then gently hugged and softly comforted Yang Na.

Li Huowang let out a soft sigh as he thought about the past. His feelings towards everything here were very complicated.

If everyone was a projection, then was it this side projecting that side, or that side projecting this side?

The only thing he was sure of was that he didn't want to give up now. He had to protect her and consider her feelings.

He couldn't talk to Yang Na about the current situation. He himself could not properly differentiate things, and he had been unable to care for both sides.

Now that he understood things clearly, he had to consider both sides.

After Li Huowang comforted Yang Na, she sniffled and got out of his arms. She grabbed her bag and went to the bathroom to fix her makeup.

At this moment, the sound of Qing Wanglai's car came from outside the RV.

He seemed very happy, grinning broadly as he placed the food on the table. "I have good news. After days of persuasion, the other side finally agreed to negotiate with us."

Li Huowang felt a bit better. As long as god Yu'er wasn't looking for a fight, the Simings wouldn't fight to the death either. It wouldn't benefit anyone.

If they fought up there, many people in the mortal realm would die.

“Great! The Leotians finally caved! Although it’s a pity we didn’t get their UFO.”

“Wanglai, be careful. The groups that steal special abilities are very cunning. They might say it’s a negotiation, but they could actually be setting a trap.”

Chapter 782 - Clothes

“Don’t take that. It’s too heavy and not flexible at all,” Li Huowang took the steel spear from Qian Fu’s hands and then looked over at Wu Qi.

“Sister Wu, didn’t those guys let us seize a lot of weapons before? Bring them all out.”

Wu Qi used a key to open the storage box in the bathroom and piled the previously seized items on the table.

Li Huowang reached for two heavy pistols. These pistols were a bit different from the ones in television dramas. Their stocks were long and looked like they could hold a lot of bullets.

Li Huowang weighed them lightly in his hands, then nodded at Qing Wanglai. “We have time now, right? Teach me how to use a gun.”

Li Huowang didn’t know how to use a gun, but he could still understand the value of firearms.

The gun is fast beyond seven steps and both fast and accurate within seven steps.

He didn't know what the gun corresponded to, whether it was the Simings’ use of the Heavenly Dao or some kind of weapon belonging to them.

It was sufficient for him that this thing could kill his enemies, no matter what they were.

“Uh... Li Huowang, we are going to negotiate, not fight,” Qing Wanglai said helplessly as he looked at the table full of weapons.

“Just because we say it’s a negotiation doesn’t mean it will be. The chances of successful negotiation might actually be higher with these things.”

“Hey, we have their people in our hands. They should be much more willing to negotiate this time.”

Li Huowang looked at Qing Wanglai. “Why talk so much? Just teach me how to use a gun. What’s the matter? Do you have to keep those skills from me too?”

Li Huowang’s expression suddenly became serious as he held the two guns and walked towards Qing Wanglai. He stared at his face persistently, carefully discerned his features, and then compared them to the Simings he remembered.

Li Huowang’s pupils shrank. “Zhuge Yuan? Qing Wanglai? You are... you are the Three Pure Ones!”

“Heavens, this guy has completely lost it. You were right not to teach him how to use a gun.” The others quickly gathered around, pulled Li Huowang back a few steps, and then took the guns from his hands.

“What are you guys doing? I’m not crazy!” Li Huowang shook off the hands holding his arms in frustration. He wouldn’t have blurted out his thoughts if he hadn’t been so shocked just now.

He had spoken the truth, but the others just viewed him as someone having an episode. He realized these people didn’t understand the true nature of reality.

Wait... The other Simings should know that Qing Wanglai is the Three Pure Ones. Why are they acting like this? Li Huowang looked uncertainly at the others.

If he was here, why were the other Simings surrounding him in the Baiyu Capital? What kind of event was this a reflection of?

“It’s okay, everything is fine.” Yang Na placed herself before Li Huowang. “He took his medicine. Just a few more courses and he’ll be better.”

Wu Qi leaned her back against the wall and sighed deeply. “What kind of people do I have around me? There’s not a single normal person.”

Li Huowang no longer planned to explain anything. They would always misunderstand him no matter what he said.

In the future, he would have to use the projection method to communicate with them. As long as the main goal was to join forces against the god Yu'er of the Dharma Sect, everything else could be set aside.

“Qing Wanglai, what Chen Hongyu said before was right. Think about it carefully; what if this is a trap? If we are not fully prepared, what if they wipe us out in one fell swoop?”

The others said nothing and simply looked at Li Huowang with confused expressions. What was going on with this guy? Why was he acting so erratically?

Qing Wanglai patiently explained, “Since I agreed to the negotiation, I have everything prepared. You don’t need to worry.”

“Okay, as long as you say so. Now teach me how to use a gun.”

“I already told you not to worry. Why do you still want to learn how to use a gun?” Qing Wanglai seemed a bit troubled by Li Huowang’s request.

“I’m not worried about the negotiation, but I do worry about potential problems afterward. Learning a new skill opens up new paths. Why are you being so stingy about teaching me?”

Li Huowang focused on Qing Wanglai’s expression, trying to figure out why he was hesitant to teach him how to use a gun.

What kind of Siming is Qing Wanglai? Why is he so wary of me? Does the gun symbolize something?

“It’s not as simple as you think. This thing isn’t as easy to use as you imagine. The way they show it in movies and TV, hitting the target with a single shot, is all just an act.

“Moreover, this thing is very sensitive. If someone sees it or if it’s caught on surveillance, it’ll be big trouble.”

“You can’t say that. If someone shoots at me, I can’t just rush at them with a knife.” Li Huowang became more suspicious the more Qing Wanglai explained. What is this guy guarding against?

“Actually, Li Huowang, I prepared something more suitable for you.”

“What?” Li Huowang frowned.

Li Huowang saw a black protective suit presented in front of him, but it didn’t feel quite right when he picked it up. The suit was very heavy and weighed down in his hands, with some hard sheets inside.

“This is...”

“Try it on.”

Li Huowang looked at Qing Wanglai, glanced at the others, and quickly changed into the heavy suit.

After putting it on, Li Huowang felt his breathing become more difficult. This suit probably weighed over twenty pounds.

“What is this?” Li Huowang asked. Before anyone could react, Qing Wanglai took out a gun and fired several shots at his chest.

The incredibly shocked Li Huowang was knocked to the ground by the strong impact.

As he quickly reached for his chest, he found there was no bleeding, and the pain in his chest was actually decreasing.

“How is it? With this bulletproof vest, you’ll be invincible if you combine it with your close combat skills. I also prepared a helmet for you.”

Qing Wanglai picked up a helmet thicker than a motorcycle helmet and was about to explain again.

Smack! Yang Na rushed forward and slapped him hard in the face.

Yang Na was trembling with anger. She stood in front of Qing Wanglai and glared at him with eyes filled with rage, as though she wanted to eat him alive.

Chapter 783 - Motorcycle

Qing Wanglai saw Yang Na looking like an enraged lioness, so he paused momentarily and calmly explained, “I had him wear it because the suit is bulletproof. Don’t worry, I know what I’m doing, your little boyfriend won’t get hurt.”

He waved the helmet in his hand towards Li Huowang, who had now climbed up. “And this thing is also bulletproof. It protects your head as well.

“More importantly, unlike a gun which can easily cause trouble, wearing a bulletproof vest is completely legal. You can even buy them online. These items cause much less trouble than a gun.

“If anyone asks about them, you can just say they’re motorcycle helmets and riding gear.”

“Really? Then I have to try it!” Li Huowang pulled Yang Na behind him, then took the helmet from Qing Wanglai and put it on.

“Why is this thing connected to my shoulders? I can’t even turn my head once I put it on.”

“The helmet needs to be connected to the shoulders. Think about it, if a bullet hits your head and the helmet isn’t connected to your shoulders, the impact could break your spine several times over.”

“Is that so? I’ve learned something new.” After putting on the whole set, he jumped up and down a few times before excitedly remarking to Qing Wanglai, “Awesome! This thing is amazing! Come on, shoot me again. Let me feel it.”

The gunshots rang out again, but Li Huowang was prepared this time. He staggered a few steps but didn’t fall down.

He pulled out a military knife and started attacking imaginary enemies in the air, trying to get a feel for combat in this gear.

Wu Qi, who had pulled Yang Na to the side of the bed, frowned. “He could dismantle a truck with a knife before. Now, he could probably take apart a plane.”

Qian Fu added, “Not just that. This guy is also mentally unstable, and killing people wouldn’t even be illegal for him. He’s practically invincible and can do whatever he wants.”

Yang Na’s face grew even darker upon hearing this.

Zhao Lei, who had been mostly silent, let out a cold snort while playing with a black fidget spinner.

“Here, catch.” Li Huowang caught two keys and a small black notebook that were thrown to him.

He opened the notebook and found it was a motorcycle license, complete with a photo of himself taken at some unknown time.

“What’s this?”

Qing Wanglai opened the RV door, revealing a heavy, brand-new black motorcycle.

“How can there not be a motorcycle if you have a riding helmet and protective gear? As long as you’re riding this, you can go anywhere. Even the traffic police won’t stop you.”

“Wow! You got this? You really went all out. This must’ve been expensive.”

Li Huowang got off the RV and circled the motorcycle, examining it just like a kid with a new toy.

“It’s not expensive. These are all just projections, and the cost doesn’t matter as long as they help us.”

The bike had a streamlined design and sporty side panels. It gave off a muscular feel, with many steel pipes that made it look even more robust.

The overall sense was full of mechanical beauty, and Li Huowang noticed a small hp4 logo on this beast.

He didn’t understand what it represented.

“Can a mentally ill person get a driver’s license?” Wu Qi asked Qing Wanglai.

“Yes, as long as they can prove they’re cured.” Qing Wanglai lightly touched his own face as he answered.

“Hmph, cured? I doubt it.”

Qing Wanglai chuckled and walked over to Li Huowang. “Li Huowang, do you know how to ride a motorcycle? I can teach you.”

“Don’t underestimate me. I can ride an electric bike.”

Under Qing Wanglai’s patient guidance, Li Huowang finally managed to ride the motorcycle after a long time. He enjoyed the thrill of speed as he rode through the unfinished buildings.

“You actually dared to let him ride it? Aren’t you afraid he’ll crash into a wall?” Chen Hongyu asked as she watched Li Huowang on his motorcycle.

“It’s fine. I told him to never exceed fifty kilometers per hour. As long as he stays under that, it’s no different from an electric bike. Some electric bikes are even faster. It’s safe, and this bike is just a disguise for his bulletproof gear.”

After Li Huowang rode for a while and got used to the new vehicle, he slowly stopped in front of the others. He struggled to take off his helmet and said to Yang Na, "Come on, let's go for a ride!"

Yang Na glanced at the others, who said nothing. She then hopped onto the back seat and wrapped her arms around Li Huowang’s waist.

“Text me the time for the negotiations! I’ll be there!” The engine roared as Li Huowang and Yang Na sped away.

Li Huowang rode down the road at a slow pace, with Yang Na clinging tightly to his back. Her soft black hair fluttered in the wind as she listened to his heartbeat.

“You felt it too! He didn’t hesitate at all when he shot you! Qing Wanglai is just pretending!”

Li Huowang put one foot down, and waited for the red light. He replied calmly, "Of course, but so what? It's good enough that he's pretending. After all, we're not related."

"Since we need to cooperate against external enemies, we have to at least maintain appearances. If we don't even pretend, it'll be awkward for everyone."

"Once this crisis is over, we probably won't see them again. After all, I'm going to spend my life with you, not them."

The light turned green, and Li Huowang twisted his wrist and slowly rode the new motorcycle home. "Trust me, Nana. I'm not crazy."

"..."

When they returned to the neighborhood, Li Huowang's new outfit immediately caught the attention of the old security guard at the gate. "Who are you? Are you a resident here?"

"It's me."

The security guard observed Li Huowang removing his helmet. He promptly took two steps back and directed his attention towards Li Huowang's motorcycle.

"Oh, no wonder you've been leaving early and coming back late recently. You've been going to a driving school to learn how to ride a motorcycle."

Li Huowang nodded immediately. "That's right. I've been learning how to ride a motorcycle."

After Li Huowang left, the security guard nodded with satisfaction. "Not bad, the young lad has ambition. Even if he can't go to college, he can rely on his motorcycle to make food deliveries. That's much better than staying at home and living off his parents. It seems like his illness has truly been cured. It's no small feat."

Chapter 784 - Dragon-Slaying Immortal-Killing

Li Huowang had returned from the Righteous Monastery. He was back in his simple bedroom, looking at his reflection.

He saw seven eyeballs on his forehead, which seemed to have a consciousness of their own as they stared straight back at Li Huowang.

These were seven secrets, and Li Huowang understood their value.

One eyeball alone had been able to determine the location of the head of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, Shai Zi. If Li Huowang wanted, he could use these seven secrets to uncover any secret in the world.

At this moment, however, Li Huowang's primary concern was how Xuan Pin had helped the other Simings in Baiyu Capital.

Although the problem had been resolved, Li Huowang was still worried about the origins of this thing.

Li Huowang's expression became solemn when he recalled his past experiences.

That being had casually given him such a precious thing, and the only thing Li Huowang understood about the being was its hair-like texture.

At this moment, his memories had disappeared. He could only understand what had happened before by relying on the notes he had written when he still had his memories.

Even though Li Huowang wrote the notes himself, they still felt unfamiliar to him when he read them.

"The Siming who controls all secrets..." Based on his personal experience, this Siming could easily uncover or conceal all secrets.

Anything that was concealed could become a secret, including a period of time, an object, or even an entire timeline different from his own!

Unlike Ji Zai and Ba-Hui, this unnamed Siming was obviously very mysterious and powerful.

The only thing that reassured him slightly was that this Siming didn't seem to be aligned with the Dharma Sect, at least for now.

Still, if we haven't defeated the Dharma Sect with such a powerful Siming as an ally, just how strong is the other side? Li Huowang thought silently.

Well, let's do our best and leave the rest to fate. Li Huowang shook his head and stared intently at his reflection.

"Back then, how did Xuan Pin help the Simings?"

He saw the seven eyeballs close slowly on the forehead of his reflection.

The next moment, Li Huowang's vision suddenly blurred. Various images quickly flashed before his eyes.

He clutched his head in pain as memories of what Xuan Pin had done slowly emerged in his mind. It seemed like a fragment of a past recollection.

"Chief, everything is ready." Xuan Pin heard the response from the imperial guard and put down the pen in his hand. He turned slowly and walked out of the house, heading to a huge altar stacked with torches at the edge.

In the center of the altar were the others who had died with Xuan Pin.

At the center of the circular altar stood a massive bronze tree, towering dozens of meters high.

Xuan Pin stopped under the tree and made various gestures with his six hands. Then, he suddenly halted.

"What's wrong?" asked Huangfu Tiangang, the Imperial Preceptor of the Liang Kingdom. He was barefoot and holding his Constellation Sword while preparing to perform a ritual.

Xuan Pin shook his head. "Someone is here."

"Someone?" Huangfu Tiangang's face immediately darkened. He pulled out a Daoist bell and shook it violently, causing the sound to echo around the altar.

When the sound of the bell ceased, Huangfu Tiangang looked back at Xuan Pin in confusion. "Where's the person? I set up a great formation outside. Not even a bug should be able to get in. It's impossible for someone to be here."

Xuan Pin didn't explain further. He seemed to notice Li Huowang's gaze and looked in the direction of his line of sight through the hole in his red Daoist robe. "I don't know who you are, nor do I know why you need the Dragon-Slaying Immortal-Killing Array.

"But since you need to learn it, the world must be in a very dire situation. I will teach you now, so pay attention.

"To begin the array, one must step on the Gang star that transcends the three realms. This step is the foundation of the Yu step. By retracing the steps, nothing is impossible. The steps need not be complex, but the heart must connect with the nine stars. The feet must inspire the nine spirits, and the body must embody the nine energies, thus achieving clarity."

As he spoke, Xuan Pin began to demonstrate to Li Huowang. "For men, the left foot goes first. For women, the right hand leads. The left hand follows, with the right hand forming the Taiyi gesture. The left hand follows again, with the right hand forming the Siming gesture for longevity. The left hand follows the right hand to form the Tianguan gesture."

As Xuan Pin explained, his three pairs of hands emerged from his Daoist robes and coordinated to form various gestures.

"Step into the Yang stance and recite with me: 陽氣生於左，陰氣生於右，左陽右陰，陰陽相生，生生不息。"

The incantation from Xuan Pin's mouth was incredibly cryptic, but Li Huowang immediately understood its meaning. Among the positions of the twenty-eight constellations, the Purple Star is the golden beam that supports the jade column.

As Xuan Pin continued step by step, the so-called Dragon-Slaying Immortal-Killing Array became imprinted into Li Huowang's mind.

The Imperial Preceptor raised the Constellation Sword and pointed it forcefully at the sky. Two Dragon Veins flew over from afar, coiling around the gigantic bronze tree. One of them was Gao Zhijian.

As the two Dragon Veins settled on the bronze tree, the tree brightened significantly, shifting from its original color to a shade of gold.

The clouds in the sky dispersed and revealed stars. Xuan Pin and those beside him continued to chant and perform rituals as the sound of dragon roars echoed in the air. The Dragon Veins connected with the Earth Veins, altering the landscape and Feng Shui across the world. The stars moved aside and revealed a patch of pitch-black sky.

Li Huowang finally understood why this secret required seven secrets to exchange. In that extreme darkness, he saw a massive jade door—the Ox Tail Gate.

A vast, multi-eyed creature was looking down through the Ox Tail Gate.

As Xuan Pin chanted and performed rituals, the Imperial Preceptor raised the Constellation Sword and lifted three Nine-Dragons Light-Emitting Talismans.

“With bare feet, urgently tread the Heavenly Gate. The energy of the Yin demons invades the south while the Nine Dragons rise and return the sun's rays. The sky clears as brilliance spreads across the vast universe. The evil Yin spirits perish, their shadows scattered. Om, Black Wheel Deity, heavenly light piercing the sun, obey the command urgently!”

The gold talismans on the Imperial Preceptor’s sword ignited instantly as dragon roars echoed in the air. Golden dragon bodies rapidly climbed from the bronze tree onto everyone on the altar.

Immediately, dragon scales and horns began to appear on everyone. They tore through their clothes and exposed deformed dragon scales as dragon qi emanated from them.

Conversely, the Dragon Veins on the bronze tree weakened, and numerous withered corpses hung all over the bronze tree.

Chapter 785 - Emperor

“It’s time!” Huangfu Tiangang shouted.

He was now completely transformed. Everyone resolutely extended their dragon claws and forcibly gouged their eyes out.

“Go!” Huangfu Tiangang said as he threw his Constellation Sword into the air and leaped onto it.

Then he flew toward the Ox Tail Gate.

Xuan Pin’s robes shrank. A strange golden dragon covered in golden claws emerged from it and charged toward the Ox Tail Gate.

Once they left, everyone else used their own unique abilities and followed them toward the Ox Tail Gate.

As they moved, the entire world’s Feng Shui and spiritual veins shifted with them. They weren’t only borrowing the luck of the Dragon Veins—they were tapping into the luck of the entire world.

When Li Huowang opened his eyes again, he found himself lying on the ground. He was bleeding heavily from his nose and felt so dizzy that he could barely stand.

Despite this, Li Huowang clearly remembered everything that had just happened, down to the smallest detail. This was not just a display of the secret but a forceful implantation of it into Li Huowang’s mind.

“So that’s what happened! On their own, they couldn’t help the Simings. They needed to borrow the power of two Dragon Veins and the world’s Earth Veins to intervene in the Simings’ battle! I knew Xuan Pin had a backup plan!”

Li Huowang’s excitement gradually faded when he realized that Xuan Pin and the others were still dead.

Before he could mourn, something strange happened. His memories about the events began to fade.

Li Huowang exclaimed frantically, “What’s happening?! Aren’t you helping me? Why are you taking it back!”

As the fading accelerated and even affected the spell Xuan Pin had recited, Li Huowang grabbed his head. “Come back! Don’t disappear!”

He tried to use his “Truth” cultivation abilities to stop the process, but they had no effect on the already fleeting memories.

“I said come back!”

Veins bulged on Li Huowang’s forehead. As he increased his force on both hands, he suddenly heard a crack as his skull fractured.

Li Huowang was momentarily stunned by the shattering sound, then his face showed a trace of joy. He inserted his right hand into the fissure in his skull and began to rummage through his brain.

Li Huowang quickly found the vanishing memory. He tightly held onto it with his right hand to prevent it from disappearing.

He used his trembling left hand to dip into the soft memory and quickly wrote on the ground. He couldn’t let the memory vanish, so he had to record everything.

Li Huowang held the memory in one hand as he wrote frantically. He wrote wherever he could, filling the floor, the walls, and even his own body with notes.

Finally, when he could no longer dip into the memory, he pulled his hand out of his head.

Li Huowang stood in the center of the room, surrounded by his writings. He breathed a long sigh of relief. He had recorded everything.

After resolving this issue, Li Huowang began to review his notes and organize his thoughts.

As he looked through them, he sensed something was off and frowned.

Something’s wrong! If they went to Ox Tail Gate, how did the Dharma Sect ambush them? Didn't Xuan Pin get killed due to a Dharma Sect ambush?

Zhang Tan wasn't there, so he might not know, but Gao Zhijian was there. How could he not know?

The truth Gao Zhijian had previously relayed to him now began to blur. Was he lying to me? Was he lying to me as well?

Li Huowang couldn't believe this possibility. He decided to confront Gao Zhijian and ask him personally.

He found Gao Zhijian on a large road outside of the military camp. He was dressed in his dragon robes and seated on a jade chariot pulled by sixteen carriages. The entire procession looked very grand.

The people dared not block his path, kneeling and bowing as he passed.

Li Huowang's appearance alarmed the eunuchs and guards, but they stood down at Gao Zhijian's command.

Gao Zhijian said, "Senior Li, can it wait? I'm heading to the military camp to send off the soldiers. If I'm late, it might upset them."

Li Huowang jumped onto the chariot and yelled, "Tell me the truth! How did Xuan Pin and the others die?"

"The Dharma Sect ambushed and killed them while they were helping the Simings."

"Nonsense! They set up the Dragon-Slaying Immortal-Killing Array, borrowed your luck and the world's luck, then went to the Ox Tail Gate! How could the Dharma Sect have harmed them?"

Gao Zhijian froze. "How do you... know all this?"

"Don't ask me how I know! I just want to know why you lied! You were there. You even participated in the array, so why didn't you tell me?"

"Are you still Simpleton, the one I could entrust my life to, or are you now a calculating emperor on the dragon throne?"

The yellow silk of the canopy fluttered in the wind as Gao Zhijian sat silently.

After a moment, he said, "Senior Li, Xuan Pin entrusted some things to be kept from you, and I agreed. I am still the person you can entrust your life to, but you once told me to be a good emperor.

"A good emperor can't speak freely—a good emperor must be shrewd and capable of lying without blinking.

"A good emperor must prioritize the country's affairs over personal matters.

"A good emperor must use imperial tactics without hesitation while treading carefully to avoid becoming a tyrant or a muddler.

"But if being a good emperor conflicts with being a simpleton you can entrust your life to, which one should I choose?

"Senior Li, you saved my life multiple times. Tell me which one to choose, and I will choose it without question."

Li Huowang's anger dissipated, giving way to a complex expression as he looked at Gao Zhijian. He remained silent.

As they stared at each other, a groan interrupted them. A pregnant woman kneeling nearby collapsed, with blood flowing from her body.

Gao Zhijian urgently pointed. "Quick, help her deliver the baby! Don't let her die!"

Eunuchs and maids from within the convoy rushed to assist.

Li Huowang finally replied, "A good emperor."

"Good."

Another shriek filled the air as the eunuchs and maids assisting in the childbirth fled fearfully.

A monstrous creature with a baby's head and a vulture's body emerged from the blood, laughing with a mouth full of rotten teeth.

Chapter 786 - Decree

“HAHAHAHA!”

The human-faced beast ignored everyone as it lay in the puddle of blood. The monster struggled to control its limbs as it laughed.

“Hahaha! May the sun and moon fall! The sun sets at dusk. It sets in the evening and rises in the morning! The Nine Calamities, the Celestial Dragons, and the Fallen Star! The Crimson Court falls, and the white jade darkens! The Celestial Deities’ ichor shall flow!”

Everyone saw the naked human-faced vulture ranting and laughing maniacally before falling lifelessly to the ground.

The events unfolded so quickly that no one could comprehend what had just happened. They just had their eyes fixed on the motionless corpse.

Despite the gaping wound on her abdomen, the woman who had been pregnant just a moment ago draped herself over the corpse of the beast and cried. “My son! Aaaaah!”

Her scream spurred everyone into action.

“GUARDS!” Gao Zhijian shouted.

His guards immediately surrounded him.

Li Huowang almost lost his balance when he realized what had happened. His face contorted in disgust and hatred.

It was an Omen. He had seen it once in the Qi Kingdom. The Qi Kingdom had fallen shortly after the Omen’s appearance.

The Omen was a sign of great misfortune, and now it had appeared in the Liang Kingdom. Li Huowang didn’t know what lay ahead, but he knew that everything was in grave danger.

Gao Zhijian did not recognize what it was, but some of the people around him did. An old eunuch with bronze coins sewn into his eye sockets quickly explained the Omen to Gao Zhijian in a hushed tone.

Gao Zhijian's eyes widened with shock as he stared at the monster in the puddle of blood.

Li Huowang nodded and said in a grave tone, "He's right. We are in grave danger."

Gao Zhijian didn't have the mood to go to the barracks anymore. He waved quickly. "Quick! Return to the palace!"

As if dissatisfied with how slow they were going, Gao Zhijian hopped on a horse and charged back towards the palace.

Li Huowang walked over and picked up the dead Omen from the lady's embrace before quickly following Gao Zhijian.

As the Liang Kingdom's Emperor, Gao Zhijian had the highest authority and could command everyone. He commanded his officials and the soldiers to prepare to depart at any moment.

The city was shrouded in uncertainty and depression. The civilians somehow sensed something was wrong. Even in broad daylight, the streets remained empty. Anyone who had to venture outside scurried like frightened rats and huddled close to the walls.

Before long, the upper-ranked officers were summoned. All of them stared at the dead Omen and listened to Gao Zhijian's explanation, but none of them said anything.

After some time, a young eunuch entered the room and reported, "Your Majesty, I've received news that we are not the only place to have produced an Omen. Si Qi, Qing Qiu, Hou Shu, and even the other counties in the Liang Kingdom... have... have reported the appearances of Omens."

The miniscule hope in everyone's heart was shattered. Something more dangerous than the Dharma Sect was now at play. The entire world was going to experience great danger.

"Your Majesty" A general with two scars on his face swiftly kneeled down. "Please allow me to fight! I will fight with my life on the line to destroy the Dharma Sect and destroy these inauspicious omens!”

With his words, a chain reaction ensued as everyone began echoing his words. The appearance of the Omens worried everyone, making them want immediately to leap into action. Even the civil officers and the Surveillance Bureau wanted to join.

Li Huowang was standing in the corner to observe the situation. Their reactions... They are afraid that the world is going to end.

Li Huowang was afraid too. The Qi Kingdom was gone, so its inhabitants ran to the Liang Kingdom. But what if the Liang Kingdom fell too? Li Huowang dared not imagine such an ending.

“General, do not be rash! We have to be careful. The Dharma Sect has lost a lot of their manpower. They are most likely using this to trip us up. Haste makes waste!”

Gao Zhijian calmed them down and started giving them different orders. He gave every person a suitable task and started aligning their hearts as one.

Gao Zhijian appeared to have learned a lot from the previous Dragon Veins. He had learned how to calm everyone during a major crisis and devise plans to tackle it.

The officers and generals slowly left one by one.

Then, Gao Zhijian looked at Li Huowang. “Senior Li, what do you intend to do?”

The Omen’s appearance had solidified Li Huowang’s thoughts. “I need to conduct the Dragon-Slaying Immortal-Killing Array. An Omen’s appearance usually indicates that something bad is happening up there. I need to go up there and see what has happened.”

“Senior Li, is there a need for you to do so?”

“Yes.”

Gao Zhijian sat on his throne and stared at Li Huowang. “Senior Li, do you remember what I said earlier about my choice?”

“I still remember.”

“Then I will have to advise you to not do so. Xuan Pin had told me that the array could destroy the Dharma Sect in one go, so I allowed him to take that risk. I let him become the nexus of the array, but look what happened.

“They all died, and now even Omens began appearing. That method is useless! I have a plan to deal with the Dharma Sect here. I need you to help me.”

Li Huowang shook his head. “No, this method will work. No matter what that Siming was, it gave me seven secrets in hopes that I would conduct the array. The Siming needs my help.”

Gao Zhijian gripped his throne tightly. “And what are those Simings? You don’t even know who the Siming is and you trust them? Can you be confident that they aren’t using you like a pawn? Maybe Xuan Pin died because he was fooled by those Simings. The fate of humanity must be held in our own hands and not in the hands of other beings!”

Li Huowang could tell how much Gao Zhijian detested the Simings from his tone.

“Senior Li, you are strong. You should stand where you are needed the most. With Xuan Pin’s death, you have to be our main strength. Only then can we win.”

Li Huowang’s anger started to bubble after seeing how stubborn Gao Zhijian was. “You think I’m only trying to destroy the Dharma Sect? Do you think everything would be solved with that? What if everything worsens even after we destroy the Dharma Sect?”

Gao Zhijian waved his arms after seeing Li Huowang still refused to listen to him. An eunuch quickly brought out a brush and a golden decree.

Gao Zhijian wrote his decree swiftly before placing it onto the tray. The eunuch then displayed the tray to Li Huowang.

“Li Huowang, receive the decree.”

Li Huowang did not move.

Chapter 787 - Explode

Li Huowang did not move, so Gao Zhijian repeated his command. "Surveillance Bureau, Third General Li Huowang, accept the decree."

Li Huowang was about to say something when Gao Zhijian stood up from his chair, approached Li Huowang, and stared at him calmly.

"Left and Right Jinwu Guards, Cavalry Commander Er Jiu, accept the decree."

Li Huowang looked at Gao Zhijian with a complicated expression on his face.

Gao Zhijian, in his dragon robes, suddenly knelt on both knees and kowtowed, his crown hitting the ground heavily in the process. "Senior Li, please accept the decree!"

Li Huowang looked at the massive body kneeling in front of him and relented. He took the decree and raised it up high in the air.

"Thank you, Your Majesty! Li Huowang accepts the decree!"

Li Huowang kept the decree in his robes and walked out.

Gao Zhijian stood back up after seeing Li Huowang exiting. The eunuchs quickly dusted him off with their horsetail whisks.

Gao Zhijian calmed down and sat back down on his throne. An imposing pressure emanated from him as he resumed his duty as the Emperor.

He said, "Da Nuo is facing great danger. Issue my imperial orders, and summon everyone into the palace. I shall meet each sect and each faction myself."

Li Huowang walked out from the cold palace without opening the decree. He didn't know what Gao Zhijian had ordered him to do.

Gao Zhijian wouldn't help Li Huowang even though he had finally obtained the Dragon-Slaying Immortal-Killing Array. And without Gao Zhijian's help, he couldn't use the Array.

Nevertheless, he was more worried about Gao Zhijian than himself.

Li Huowang had barely left the city when the sound of rapid drumming reached his ears, coming from within the city.

He listened carefully and recognized the signal. It was the signal for the soldiers to prepare for battle. They were heading out to Nan Ping.

It was hard to believe they only managed to obtain a brief respite before heading out to a gruesome battle.

Li Huowang's heart felt heavy when he recalled Gao Zhijian and the weight of the foreign object in his robes.

Gao Zhijian had changed immediately after saying that he had to change. He was not a stranger to Li Huowang, but there was nothing he could do. He was the one who had told Gao Zhijian to change in the first place.

"Father, are you upset?" Li Sui piped up.

"There's nothing to be sad about. No matter what I chose, we would still be sad," Li Huowang replied, feeling tired.

He then walked past a White Lotus Sect disciple who only had a single leg. Li Huowang stared at the white lotus motif on their shirt before approaching the White Lotus Sect's main hall.

He wanted to find someone to vent to, but there weren't many people he could talk to. Somehow, as time passed, there were fewer and fewer people he could confide in.

There was only one person he could rely on, the one who could make him feel slightly better, even if it meant resting on her shoulders temporarily.

Li Huowang soon found Bai Lingmiao. She was reading some papers.

As he approached her, she suddenly stood up. “No, this won’t work. Nan Ping is too far away, and there are too many people. We don’t have enough food for them. Quick, contact the people and find a way to do this.”

“Understood, Saintess.”

“Also, send out some of our people to test out their capabilities on the battlefield. If they do well, we can rotate some of our people to go to war to help the Liang Kingdom end this as soon as possible. Please give me notice every time our disciples are heading to war. I will request the Heavenly Mater to bless us so that we may achieve victory. One last thing... Send out orders for our disciples to stop any rumors the moment they encounter them.”

Bai Lingmiao suddenly felt something to her left and stopped talking. She felt a familiar gaze and turned around.

She walked towards the direction from which she sensed the gaze and extended her hands, searching for someone. However, no one was there.

“What’s wrong?”

“No, everything’s fine,” Bai Lingmiao said, shaking her head. She turned around and resumed her work.

They were in a crisis. As the Saintess, she had various things to do. She could not rest now.

Just as the situation had finally stabilized, everyone was spurred into unrest again. The Dharma Sect, who had been forced away from Si Qi, would not relinquish it that easily. The witches from the Dharma Sect also detested the Surveillance Bureau. Neither side refused to go down without a fight.

Li Huowang had no choice. He followed the decree’s instructions and accompanied the military as they marched down towards Nan Ping.

Near the borders, both the soldiers and the Dharma Sect charged towards each other on sight.

Words were useless here—there was no room for reconciliation.

Li Huowang was the vanguard. Black tentacles sprouted out from his body as he raised his spine sword high into the air. He stood on the skull of Peng Longteng's horse as he charged into the Dharma Sect.

Explosions of blood came into view wherever he went. Every path he took turned crimson red.

Li Huowang was like an incredibly sharp weapon for the soldiers. Every time he broke through one of the Dharma Sect's formations, the soldiers following him would immediately surge into the cracks of the formation, destroying any members of the Dharma Sect they encountered.

Li Huowang's appearance had attracted the Dharma Sect's attention, but they did nothing. It was as if they were waiting for something. Meanwhile, Li Huowang continued butchering their ranks.

Half a division later, when the Dharma Sect was slowly breaking down, a ragged umbrella brushed past Li Huowang. A tall and skinny man wearing ragged Daoist robes appeared in front of him.

Li Huowang recognized that man. It was the same person who had tried to ambush him! He never thought the umbrella man would appear.

The man was tall. His head seemed elongated, with the top of it stuffed into a white urn. The only thing he revealed was his mouth.

There was a red cloth wrapped around the white urn. One word was written on the cloth—tribute.

Li Huowang took half a step back when he felt someone behind him. An eye opened on the back of his head, and he saw another umbrella man standing behind him. The newcomer looked exactly like the first umbrella man.

No, there were two more, one on his left and another on his right. They had isolated Li Huowang from the others.

It was clear that they were here to ambush Li Huowang!

Just then, a massive general appeared. He expanded before exploding into bits of flesh. An old monk wearing a robe of flesh walked out from the remnants of the general's body. It was Chan Du.

“Daoist Li, do not be afraid. We are here to help!”

Chapter 788 - Ru Shou

“Fire!” Li Huowang roared as he and Peng Longteng were engulfed by fire.

They broke through the entrapment of the four strange men, charging towards the other Dharma Sect members.

Li Huowang had allies on the outside, so he wanted to group up with them to increase his chances of winning.

But the Dharma Sect was clearly trying to stop him from doing so. The four weird men opened their umbrellas simultaneously. It suddenly started raining out of nowhere, and the rainwater suppressed Li Huowang’s fire.

Fire and water collided, forming a dense mist of steam that the four weird men held onto. They pulled the steam and covered their surroundings in white mist.

With the concealment of the mist, Li Huowang and Peng Longteng lost sight of their targets.

Chan Du disappeared as well. Li Huowang had lost his bearings and didn’t know where his allies were.

Splat! Peng Longteng impaled Li Huowang with her halberd and launched him high up into the air. Li Huowang needed to find a way to escape through the white mist.

Li Huowang flew high before landing back into the white mist. Suddenly, he saw something red flashing in the mist.

Without hesitation, he stabbed towards the red light with his sword.

There were two stabbing sounds. One came from Li Huowang stabbing his sword into Peng Longteng, while the other was Peng Longteng stabbing her halberd into Li Huowang.

They stared at each other in a daze as the flames burned their bodies.

Peng Longteng swung her halberd and threw Li Huowang to the side. “What’s going on? Didn’t you fly up just now? How did you end up behind me?”

Li Huowang held his chest and stood up as he observed the white mist.

He had a gut feeling that something was wrong. He stabbed his sword into his mouth to pry off some of his molars before spitting them out like shotgun pellets towards his front.

He was surprised when the molars hit his back, causing sparks to fly from the impact. “Something’s wrong with the mist!”

The moment the words left Li Huowang’s mouth, the rain became heavier, threatening to extinguish his fire.

What should I do? Am I trapped?

Li Huowang shook his head to snap out of it. “No, this is good. I need them to buy as much time as possible! I already have a team of elites heading towards them from the back. They are doomed to die today from our pincer attack!”

He felt False Qi enter his body.

They believed it!

He smiled without anyone knowing.

Just then, the white mist to his left started to bubble and swirl before a weird man with the umbrella walked into his line of sight.

Li Huowang asked, “Who are you? Give me a name!”

He stomped on the ground and ran towards the weird man.

“Ru Shou.”

“Ru Shou.”

“Ru Shou.”

“Ru Shou.”

Four identical voices answered as the weird men threw their umbrellas at Li Huowang from four different directions.

Li Huowang swung his spine sword, sending a rift towards every umbrella.

The umbrellas spun through the air, shaking off droplets of rainwater. The rifts diminished in size as the rain continued to fall on them.

Who are they? Li Huowang wondered, looking at the four umbrellas flying towards him.

Without any hesitation, he tore off one of his rib bones and stabbed his own chest. Just as he did, he saw an eyeball underneath one of the tattered umbrellas.

The four umbrellas didn't stop at all, seemingly unaffected by the pain. They tried to stab Li Huowang, but they were not the only ones attacking Li Huowang. Even their shadows had joined in, attacking Li Huowang's shadow.

Peng Longteng's massive frame suddenly appeared in front of Li Huowang and blocked their attacks.

The umbrellas pierced her before spinning wildly. Peng Longteng's flaming body was split into pieces before scattering onto the ground.

Li Huowang stood still and glared at the four men in front of him. "You don't feel pain? Are you not alive?"

The four of them, Ru Shou, did not answer. Their emaciated bodies suddenly trembled. Li Huowang even heard their urns shatter underneath their umbrellas.

The four men suddenly expanded, though their lower halves were still long and thin.

Li Huowang thought they were going to attack him again, but the white mist around him suddenly cleared up a lot.

Soon after, Li Huowang saw a familiar Buddha consuming the white mist. It was the one he had seen in the Righteous Monastery. It was sucking the white mist into the holes on its body.

"Nan wu shi ji chui~ Yi meng ah li ye~ Po lu ji di shi fo luo leng two po~"

There was a superimposed chanting coming from the Buddha as a fleshy Bodhisattva with two faces crawled out from one of the Buddha's orifices.

The two faces were none other than Abbot Chan Du and Abbot Xin Hui.

“Sa po pu duo~ Na mo po jia~”

As they chanted, the four Ru Shous swelled up more and more, with lumps of flesh protruding out.

Li Huowang recalled that this was one of the very few times that he was fighting with his allies!

“Keep going, don't stop!” he yelled.

Li Huowang watched the four weird men, Ru Shou, slowly turn into mud.

Their umbrellas suddenly fell downwards, blocking Li Huowang's vision. Ru Shou had disappeared by the time the umbrellas landed on the ground.

The white mist scattered, and Li Huowang was back on the battlefield filled with bloodthirst and a murderous aura.

“He ran?” Li Huowang muttered, scanning his surroundings.

“No, he would not. If the Dharma Sect couldn't even hold their ground here, they wouldn't be able to defend all of Nan Ping,” Chan Du replied.

The ground suddenly trembled.

“Is the Earth Dragon turning again?”

Li Huowang focused on the ground to prevent himself being swallowed by the Earth Dragon once more.

Just then, the eyes growing at the back of his head widened with shock. “Father! Water! There's a lot of water behind us!”

Li Huowang turned around and saw muddy water surging towards them like a yellow dragon.

The water submerged everyone on the battlefield, both the soldiers and the Dharma Sect members. All of them were washed away.

Chapter 789 - Trust

The raging river surged through the battlefield, sweeping away horses, chariots, and even the soldiers in their formations. The murderous aura dissipated soon after.

However, amidst the tumultuous waters, one being remained unwavering—a massive Bodhisattva. It was Chan Du and Xuan Pin, who had transformed into a Bodhisattva several meters tall with two faces. They also had a thousand arms behind their back.

They stood with their waist submerged in their water. One of their bloody arms scooped up Li Huowang from the water.

Li Huowang didn't realize what had happened. He touched the Shimmer Mirror to inspect what had transpired.

He soon let go of the mirror and frowned. “Those crazy bastards destroyed the river banks!”

Si Qi, a kingdom abundant with rivers, faced a difficult situation because the Dharma Sect had decided to flood the entire battlefield. That single flood instantly erased the momentum that the soldiers had obtained.

The Dharma Sect also didn't care about how many people would die from the flooding water flowing downstream.

Just then, the flesh Bodhisattva suddenly stumbled. The two Abbots frowned. “Be careful. There are enemies in the water!”

Li Huowang scanned the water but saw nothing except for the muddy water.

The rain continued to fall and scattered his reflection in the water.

Swish! Suddenly, a black rope shot out from the water, wrapping itself around Li Huowang's neck before dragging him into the water.

“What is this?” Li Huowang held onto the rope with his hands before opening his mouth. Li Sui’s tentacles shot out and chased after the enemy.

When Li Sui retracted her tentacles, Li Huowang saw a strange entity entangled within them. It resembled a monkey, but its eyes were wide, like those of a fish. Furthermore, it had gills behind its ears.

“A water monkey?”[1]

Li Huowang remembered seeing them once on a boat, but they were completely different. The water monkey in front of him looked even more gnarly and ferocious.

Li Huowang had just said that when the massive Bodhisattva lost its balance and fell into the river. “It’s not just those smallish evil entities in the water! Be careful! There’s something massive in the water!”

With those words, Chan Du fell into the water along with Li Huowang.

The icy cold water of the river submerged Li Huowang.

Numerous tentacles sprouted out from Li Huowang’s body, allowing him to navigate freely in the water.

Regardless of what was in the water, Li Huowang understood that he could not fight it in its natural habitat. He had no reason to do so either.

He started swimming upwards with the help of Li Sui’s tentacles.

He attempted to resurface, reaching out to push through the water. However, he soon realized he couldn’t break through. It was as if he was trapped in the muddy water.

No matter how hard he pushed or how high he was, he was stuck underwater!

“This is just the surface. I can get out! I can get out!” Li Huowang mumbled, using his powers to try to surface.

As his hands finally broke through the water's surface, a surge of joy washed over him. But just then, numerous gazes fell onto him from beneath the water.

He looked down and saw four people standing in the muddy water. He didn't recognize three of them, but he did recognize Ru Shou and his four umbrellas.

It was clear that they were here to hunt Li Huowang down. It doesn't matter which side won today as long they caught Li Huowang. All in all, it would be the Dharma Sect's victory if they did.

Xuan Pin was dead. The Dharma Sect was naturally aiming for him next.

"I can get out! I can get out!" Li Huowang continued to push upwards.

He had just extended his arm out of the water when a flash of steel cut both of his arms off. His arms sank down into the muddy water with blood trailing out from the wound.

One of the figures, the one at the left, opened its mouth and ate both Li Huowang's arms.

Li Huowang had no choice but to fight. He raised his wounded arms up as the water was diluting his blood.

Two tentacles sprouted out from the opening of Li Huowang's arms. He snarled before charging towards the four figures. "Let me see how strong you guys are!"

The four figures split apart and charged towards Li Huowang from different directions.

As they got closer, bubbles floated up from the bottom, obscuring Li Huowang's vision. All of a sudden, a stone mask tangled in weeds flew towards Li Huowang's face.

Li Huowang stared at the stone mask intently. The person behind the stone mask slowly turned into stone and sank into the bottom of the water.

Both of Li Huowang's legs were spread apart out of nowhere. It was as if something was holding each of his legs, pulling them further and further apart until the sound of cracking bones rang out. If the pulling continued, Li Huowang would be split in half!

Li Sui held the purple-tassel sword and came out from Li Huowang's body to swing it at the thing holding Li Huowang's legs, but Li Sui's sword hit nothing.

"It's not invisible! It's the water! The water is alive!"

The next instant, Li Huowang's legs were torn apart from his body.

Splat! An umbrella suddenly stabbed into Li Huowang's chest. The umbrella had come from nowhere.

As the umbrella was on the verge of opening up to tear Li Huowang to pieces, he used Li Sui's tentacles to wrap around the umbrella. He was trying to prevent the umbrella from opening.

But it was useless as the other witches of the Dharma Clan encircled him.

Li Huowang stared at the single eye inside the broken urn of the umbrella before he laughed out loud.

"Did you really think I came unprepared despite knowing that you all were targeting me? How about it? Am I really that good at acting? Hahaha! To think that you believed me! You thought you were ambushing me? In reality, I am the one ambushing you! Didn't you realize that Chan Du is missing? I'm just bait to lure you all in!"

The witches of the Dharma Clan quickly looked around to prepare for the unseen attack.

Li Huowang laughed extremely hard upon seeing them. He laughed until he almost cried.

"Hahaha! I tricked you guys! I can't believe you guys believed it! Hahaha!"

rivers or other bodies of freshwater. It feeds on fish and prawns, though it may drink human blood too. 🐟

Chapter 790 - Tian Wu

Li Huowang laughed even harder when he sensed how angry they were. He wasn't afraid at all.

"You won't have the chance to laugh anymore!" The umbrella in his chest suddenly spun, cutting off Li Sui's tentacles.

Ru Shou unfolded the ragged umbrella, tearing Li Huowang's body apart into several pieces. His blood stained the water, turning it crimson red while his flesh descended into the depths of the muddy water.

Ru Shou held onto his umbrella and smiled at the pieces of Li Huowang's flesh.

Suddenly, black tentacles sprouted out from the pieces of Li Huowang's flesh. They stuck and pulled the chunk of flesh together before recombining Li Huowang's body together.

"Are you stupid? Did you really think there was no ambush just because I said so? Why don't you look around?"

Li Huowang had just said that when the water quickly subsided. Someone had blocked off the hole in the river bank.

Li Huowang stepped on the muddy ground, now completely free from the river's influence. He looked at his enemies and his allies.

There was the Righteous Monastery, the Antrabhara Temple, the Luo Sect, the Mo family, the Ao Jing Sect, the soldiers, and even several other sects that Li Huowang had never seen before. All of them encircled the Dharma Sect.

This was supposed to be an ambush to kill Li Huowang, but the situation had completely changed. Li Huowang now had the advantage.

Li Huowang inspected his enemies again. Due to how turbid the water was before, he had only seen them as shadows in the water. Now, he could see them clearly.

He recognized some of them, including Ru Shou.

But the most conspicuous one was a large pile of wet hair. On closer inspection, Li Huowang realized that they were the water monkeys. They huddled each other to protect something in the middle.

Their strength had greatly diminished without the river water.

Beside the water monkeys were four chicken-feet men. They all had a veil of viscera covering their faces. Li Huowang recognized them because he fought them before.

Beside them was someone he had never seen before. It was someone wearing a stone mask. The mask's eyes were empty, with rounded ears and a tall nose. The mask's mouth was slightly agape. Li Huowang had to admit that it looked somewhat divine.

It resembled the mask he had seen in the Liang Kingdom's palace. The difference was that those were made from copper, while the one in front of him was made of stone.

The final person was a hunchbacked man carrying a large gourd on his back. Half of his face was average, while the other half had been transformed into a large trailing lump of flesh. Various organs grew on the tumor on his face as he dragged it along the ground. The lump of the tumor also pulsated according to the person's breath.

Li Huowang wasn't sure what was happening, but he felt his body itching, so he scratched his chin with his arms. As he did, he noticed several red welts on his arms, resembling mosquito bites.

This was the battlefield. There was no reason to introduce themselves. The Righteous Monastery was the first one to attack.

"Mo lo... Di li ni... Mo suan li tai..." The flesh Bodhisattva was seated behind the Abbots. As they chanted, everything around the Bodhisattva turned into flesh and blood, regardless of what it was.

Mud, stone, wood, and trees slowly transformed into flesh, including the ground beneath the Dharma Sect.

The low roar of a dragon came from the middle of the group of water monkeys. Rain began pouring heavily, and the group of water monkeys scattered.

A woman with fish-scale tattoos appeared from the group of water monkeys. Li Huowang recognized her tattoo as the same one Yang Xiaohai's family used. She was a boat person!

However, compared to the boat people who worked on the sea for food, the one in front of Li Huowang appeared to hold even more power. She smiled and revealed razor-sharp teeth. She was holding a statue covered in fish skin. It was small, but it gave Li Huowang a bad feeling.

"Come!" Peng Longteng rode her horse as she threw Li Huowang towards the woman. It was clear that she was the one who had brought the rain.

Suddenly, a bunch of limbs covered in white tassels covered the group of water monkeys and the woman.

The organs of the water monkeys shifted rapidly in different directions. Li Huowang remembered what they were—the white tassels of the Lion Dance Palace!

Even they had come to help for the sake of their survival.

Seeing that someone was dealing with her, Li Huowang changed directions and charged toward the man with the tumor.

Li Huowang didn't dare let his guard down in this life-or-death situation. He wasn't sure what abilities the man with the tumor had, so he decided to use his cultivation to test the waters first.

Li Huowang glared at the man and slowly turned him to stone. The petrification process had almost been completed when the stone suddenly cracked open. Yellow smoke billowed out from the gourd and flowed towards Li Huowang.

"Longteng, go and see what kind of abilities he has!"

“Charge!” Peng Longteng kicked her horse and charged into the yellow smoke. Her target was the cracked statue.

When the yellow smoke touched her body, it quickly made her mutate. Screaming mouths grew on her body, along with several weird hands. They quickly seeped out from the chinks of her armor and continued to grow.

Her horse grew larger too. Its legs split into six before splitting into eight.

Several strange iridescent liquids dripped from Peng Longteng’s armor onto the ground. It somehow gave life to inanimate objects.

Li Huowang had seen the same liquid before! It covered the entirety of the Qi Kingdom and could mutate everything!

God Yu’er is dead. Did something snatch its Heavenly Dao? Or is this the Heavenly Dao of another Siming? Li Huowang waved his arms to turn Peng Longteng into an illusion again.

But something was wrong. Peng Longteng’s body continued to mutate. She didn’t turn into an illusion. Under the influence of the strange liquid, Li Huowang’s control over her had somehow been lost.

Peng Longteng was currently fused to her horse, and she started becoming slower and slower. She soon fell onto the ground and continued to mutate before becoming a strange fleshy gourd that continued to produce the strange liquid.

The strange man emerged from the back of the gourd and patted it before revealing his black teeth with a smile. “I am Tian Wu. I greet Daoist Li.”

Chapter 791 - Heavenly Dao

Li Huowang stood motionlessly as he looked at Tian Wu, seemingly deep in thought.

The next moment, Tian Wu's head plunged into his chest, avoiding a crack that shot from behind.

Li Huowang's figure gradually appeared behind Tian Wu. As he did, the motionless Li Huowang pulled off his face to reveal Li Sui's cute face.

Tian Wu was hunched over. He dipped two fingers into the strange liquid that had leaked from the crack, then put them in his mouth to taste it. "Hehehe, Daoist Li, you really like to play tricks. You even used a fake person to fool me."

"Daoist Li, are you really not going to join our sect? This opportunity won't come again. If you join us, we can discuss everything else."

"Are you stupid? We have you cornered in an ambush! You still want to recruit me despite your position? Do you think that's possible?" Li Huowang sneered as he stepped on the soft flesh. He drew his sword and stabbed himself in the abdomen, exposing his internal organs to the air.

The opponent's powers seemed extremely strange, so holding back was not an option. After finally capturing an expert from the Dharma Sect, he had to make them suffer.

Li Huowang spread out a scroll of the Profound Records on the ground. He tore out his liver and slapped it onto the red bamboo slips forcefully. "Wood Liver!"

When the Five Elements Intercalation was complete, Li

Huowang strode toward him with his abdomen covered in all sorts of twisted worms.

Just as he was about to touch the yellow mist, a gap suddenly cracked apart on the flesh on the ground and swallowed him whole.

“How interesting.” Tian Wu shook his gourd as the yellow smoke floating in the air drifted toward the flesh where Li Huowang had disappeared.

After a while, the flesh came alive. Bizarre limbs continued to grow out and quickly broke free from the control of the Abbot of the Righteous Monastery. Another gourd of flesh appeared, which secreted the strange liquid in all directions.

Tian Wu suddenly felt a pain in his feet. Looking down, he saw countless worms covering his feet and gnawing away.

Just as they were about to gnaw through, a blister swelled on the gourd beside him.

Pop! The blister burst and sprayed the strange liquid all over his feet.

The liquid covered the worms, causing their bodies to deform as it contended with Li Huowang for control of them.

“Is this all you can do, Daoist Li? I really don’t know why the Witch thinks so highly of you,” Tian Wu said.

Suddenly, a crack flew out from the ground, attempting to cut him in two.

Tian Wu, who seemed able to foresee the future, quickly leaned back and dodged the flying crack.

To his surprise, a long purple-tassel sword was thrust through the crack.

It stabbed into Tian Wu’s abdomen, then cleaved him in half with a forceful upward stroke.

Shortly after, the completely deformed Li Huowang emerged from a new crack. He held his head in pain while the wriggling things on his body quickly withered and disappeared.

He had used the crack to jump to the Great Qi and launch a stealthy attack, making this move hard to defend against. However, going to Great Qi in its current state clearly required a price.

If things in that place were all crazily deformed, a person could become a monster in just a few breaths.

Fortunately, with his “Truth” cultivation abilities, Li Huowang could reverse the deformation of his flesh.

It can't be wrong! This feeling, the liquid this guy uses, is the same as the one in the Great Qi! Li Huowang grimaced at the gourds secreting liquid.

He didn't know which Siming's Heavenly Dao it was that Tian Wu was drawing upon, but it clearly had something to do with deformation.

“Is deformation also a Heavenly Dao? What's the name of the Siming in charge of deformation?” Li Huowang muttered.

The hunched old man who had been cut in two suddenly stood up. “In your terms, you can call it the God of Pestilence!”

Strange liquid spurted from his hump like a volcano and splashed toward Li Huowang.

Worms flew out from Li Huowang's chest to block the black liquid, giving him time to dodge.

Li Huowang stood on a piece of protruding bone. He lifted his sword and looked at Tian Wu with an expression of uncertainty.

“Still not dead? Where is this guy from?”

“Hehehe... I have no origin. I'm just an ordinary old man,” Tian Wu said, with his two mouths still split open and his body still deforming.

“You're an ordinary old man? Like I believe that!” Li Huowang roared and charged at Tian Wu, his veins bulging on his forehead. Tian Wu's body split apart and forcibly merged again, the deformations on his body rapidly disappearing.

Tian Wu was about to use his magical powers as Li Huowang approached, but his body didn't obey his commands. At that moment, he truly seemed like an ordinary old man.

By the time Tian Wu reached for the weapon at his waist, it was too late. There was a flash of white light, and Tian Wu's head soared into the sky.

The next moment, blood spurted from his neck, almost reaching a foot high.

Li Huowang felt uneasy about Tian Wu's strangeness. He rushed to the headless corpse and then opened his mouth wide towards the spurting blood.

As the blood gushed into his throat, worms poured out from Li Huowang's mouth like fish, swimming against the flow of blood.

Bleargh! As Li Huowang forcefully vomited, the worms burrowed into Tian Wu's body, gnawing and devouring everything they touched.

The worms chewed and caused Tian Wu's headless corpse to shrivel up quickly. When Li Huowang finally threw away the skin, which was now supported only by bones, the worms crawled back into his internal organs through his robes.

Li Huowang didn't dare to rest after having dealt with this enemy. He rushed to help Abbot Chan Du, who was fighting hard. He needed to finish this battle before the Five Elements Intercalation ended.

"Wait... wait!!" The voice from behind made Li Huowang freeze. He slowly turned around and saw Tian Wu's shriveled body, with its limbs moving, crawling toward its head.

"He's still not dead? How is that possible?"

As Li Huowang stood in shock, a hand grabbed his ankle. A monk, with half of his face covered in blisters and his eyes unfocused, pleaded desperately, "Master! Kill me! It hurts! It hurts!"

Li Huowang lifted his foot and crushed the monk's head. Even as the red and white matter sprayed from his nose, the monk continued to scream in agony. “Ahhh! It hurts! It hurts so much!”

Li Huowang looked at the monk writhing on the ground in pain, then at Tian Wu, who was standing up shakily with his head in his hands.

When he surveyed the area, he noticed that despite the intense battle, there were no corpses around. He finally understood what had occurred.

A Natural Disaster had struck. Death was gone.

Chapter 792 - Death

Li Huowang's breathing quickened and his pupils constricted. He half-squatted and gazed at Qian Fu lying on the ground, spitting frothy blood.

He reached out and tried to press his hand against the bloody hole in Qian Fu's chest. However, no matter how hard he tried to stop it, the blood continued to seep through his fingers.

He was injured, and it seemed like a fatal wound.

"Sister Wu, Sister Wu!" Li Huowang called out as he saw Wu Qi. Her face was also bleeding, but she ran over with a box to tend to Qian Fu's injury.

Li Huowang drew two military knives and charged out from the corner of the wall. "I'll hold them off! You guys go first!"

As soon as he came out, he saw that the enemy had already snuck to this side along the wall.

"Aaaah!" Li Huowang roared and rushed forward. He pinned an enemy against the wall and frantically plunged the knife into the man's abdomen, stirring it around.

Bang! A powerful force struck Li Huowang's shoulder and sent him flying. He had been shot.

As he got up, two bullets hit his helmet and knocked him down again.

Li Huowang struggled to his feet, using the wall as support. He glared viciously at the enemies hiding behind cover not far away. They were the Simings of the Dharma Sect!

The Simings wielded weapons and were crouching with cold, statue-like expressions.

"Damn you!" Li Huowang hurled one of his knives, which spun rapidly and lodged itself in the head of one of the enemies.

There was a brief lull in gunfire, which Li Huowang took advantage of. He dashed into their cover, yanking the knife from the man's head and slashing it at the others around him.

Bang! Li Huowang was slammed against a wall. His head buzzed, and when he looked up, he saw a tall man raising the butt of his rifle to smash down on his helmet.

Li Huowang braced himself with his arms, enduring it before his head hit the ground.

"You dare to ambush us and kill Qian Fu!" Li Huowang shouted. He butted his head against the man's chest and caused a dent.

A stick swung down forcefully from the side, bending Li Huowang's left arm into an L shape.

Li Huowang screamed in pain as he slashed his knife across the attacker's neck. Blood splattered everywhere, staining the bulletproof glass of his helmet and turning his vision entirely red.

Amid the chaos, a smoke grenade landed at Li Huowang's feet and quickly spewed thick smoke.

The acrid smell seeped through the gaps in his clothes. It was clearly not an ordinary smoke grenade.

The pungent smoke made him cough violently. Soon, he felt dizzy, his head no longer feeling like his own.

"Huowang! Retreat!" Li Huowang quickly retreated while coughing violently, still using the wall for support.

At the stairwell, he saw Chen Hongyu carry Qian Fu down.

He lifted his knife and vigilantly watched for enemies through the smoke before quickly following them.

Their expressions became grimmer upon reaching the ground floor.

Three pickup trucks blocked the exit. Their enemies were using the vehicle doors for cover while aiming their black gun barrels at them.

Li Huowang heard the footsteps above them. He took a deep breath and charged forward. Bullets struck him, and he was soon bleeding from his abdomen.

He used his severed limb to cover the wound and kept pushing forward.

Bang bang! Two bullets hit his right knee and caused him to fall. Though the armor could deflect bullets, it couldn't prevent the impact from breaking his leg.

He saw that they were about to be surrounded. A sudden explosion occurred—one of the pickup trucks burst into flames.

At that moment, the glass on the left shattered. The siblings Ba Shengqing and Ba Nanxu appeared on their motorcycles. "Over here!"

Upon hearing the siblings, Li Huowang and the others moved towards them. Li Huowang moved the slowest with his broken leg. Zhao Lei stepped in to support and help him move forward.

They heard footsteps behind them. Without turning back, Qing Wanglai took out three test tubes and threw them behind him.

When they reached the parking lots, they quickly got into their vehicles and sped away.

In addition to Wu Qi's RV, Qing Wanglai's sports car, and the motorcycles of Li Huowang and the Ba siblings, there was also a red sedan and an off-road vehicle present. It seemed like more help had arrived, beyond just the Ba siblings.

Li Huowang couldn't think about so much now. He quickly mounted his motorcycle, revved the engine, and sped away from the abandoned building.

Just as they thought they were safe, a green truck suddenly appeared ahead and barreled towards them.

Li Huowang revved his engine and rode his motorcycle towards the front. He accelerated to the maximum, aiming for the truck's left tire.

Li Huowang stood up from his motorcycle and prepared to jump. Finally, he saw the terrified driver turn the steering wheel in a panic to swerve away from his motorcycle.

When Li Huowang managed to scare away the truck, peace was finally restored.

The vehicles stopped at Orange Isle. Li Huowang dragged his injured body and rushed into Wu Qi's RV. He saw Qian Fu lying there, with his blood flowing down and soaking the bed.

Li Huowang saw Wu Qi shake her head grimly through his blood-red helmet. Li Huowang questioned Qing Wanglai tremblingly, "What's your backup plan?"

"You made us walk right into their trap! Whose side are you on?"

"Don't worry, didn't we get help? Otherwise, how would we have escaped?" Qing Wanglai replied with a faint smile.

Li Huowang strained to remove his shattered helmet and hurled it at Qing Wanglai's feet. "Qian Fu is dead! Don't you see? He lost his life!"

Qing Wanglai picked up the helmet and set it aside. "I'm pained by Qian Fu's death, but we learned useful information from that half-hour talk. Our chances are good."

Li Huowang stepped back in shock. He stared at Qing Wanglai as if he were a stranger.

Chapter 793 - Change

Qing Wanglai looked at Li Huowang with a confident smile. “Based on my previous analysis, I thought dealing with them would be very difficult. But after our encounter, it turns out their situation isn’t as good as we imagined.”

“Madman! You’re a madman!!” Li Huowang yelled at him.

“Huowang? What’s going on?” Yang Na hadn’t gone with them and was unaware of the situation. As she walked up to the RV, she saw Qian Fu on the bed and screamed in fright.

She hurried to the bedside and tried to help Qian Fu, but she realized there was nothing she could do. Tears streamed down her face.

At that moment, Qian Fu’s bloody hand suddenly reached out and grabbed Yang Na, making her scream again.

Li Huowang rushed to the bed with rekindled hope.

He quickly turned to Wu Qi. “Sister Wu, start the car! Get to the nearest hospital!”

Wu Qi only sighed softly and walked towards the driver’s seat.

Li Huowang leaned closer to Qian Fu and said, “Hold on, we’re taking you to the hospital! Hold on!”

However, Qian Fu seemed oblivious to Li Huowang’s words. With his eyes fixed on Yang Na, his mouth widened into a grin and his grip on her tightened. “So... beautiful... truly magnificent...”

With those last words, Qian Fu released Yang Na. His pupils dilated, and his body went limp. Qian Fu was dead.

Yang Na stared at the corpse and the blood on her hands. She couldn’t hold back any longer and broke down in tears while backing off.

Li Huowang walked over with a solemn expression, gently reaching out to hold her and silently comforting her.

After a few minutes, Yang Na seemed to snap out of it. She opened her bag shakily. “Call the police! Call the police!”

A long hand reached over and snatched her phone away.

They looked up to see Qing Wanglai. His long fingers slid along the side of the phone and pressed the power button. “We can’t call the police.”

“Why not? Why can’t we? He’s dead!” Yang Na stammered.

Qing Wanglai looked at Li Huowang. “In your understanding of the world there, do the police exist?”

Qing Wanglai answered his own question. “We are projections, reflections. So what are they?”

Then, a woman’s raspy voice came from the front. “They are the rules. Every world has its own rules, and they are the embodiment of those rules.”

A woman wearing a white cotton shirt walked over. Her soft, black ponytail draped over her shoulder.

Her crimson lips parted as she explained to Li Huowang. “Don’t expect the rules to help you. Rules are rules. Those who rely on them will ultimately find themselves hurt by them.”

“Like being mistaken for a lunatic and locked up in a psychiatric hospital,” Qing Wanglai quipped.

The woman continued, “True existence isn’t as simple as you think. Do you know why the projection in our minds is different for everyone?

“Actually, according to my theory, everyone’s thoughts are correct because true existence is beyond human comprehension. We can only perceive it through a distorted worldview that we can understand.

“It’s like blind men feeling an elephant. You felt the trunk, I felt the mouth, Qian Fu felt the tusk, and Wu Qi felt the leg.

“But I’m different from you. I didn’t use my hands. I used the most powerful human sensory organ to explore everything over there. Mathematics.

“Therefore, I understand that world better than anyone here.”

Li Huowang stared in shock at the woman, then at Qian Fu’s lifeless body. He was unsure of what to say.

“Zhao Shuangdian,” the woman said, extending her slender white hand to Li Huowang. “Nice to meet you, Li Huowang.”

Li Huowang finally said, “You’re all insane! Don’t you see there’s a dead person here? Qian Fu is dead!”

Qing Wanglai nodded. “I know Qian Fu is dead. We’re all sad, but as adults, we should control our emotions and not let them interfere with important matters.”

“Besides, were you really that close to Qian Fu? Weren’t you also wary of him? Why are you so upset about his death?” Qing Wanglai looked puzzled.

Li Huowang glanced at Qing Wanglai and the unfamiliar Zhao Shuangdian before guiding Yang Na out of the RV.

“Huowang, where are you going? There’s important stuff to discuss. Don’t you want to know the information I got? Beauty Zhao brought people to rescue us. Shouldn’t you get to know her a bit?”

Li Huowang glanced at the distraught Yang Na then quickened his pace towards his motorcycle. “I need to take care of my girlfriend. Everything else can wait!”

Li Huowang cradled Yang Na in his embrace. He started his motorcycle and headed home. His face was dark and stern as he replayed the recent events in his mind, which was currently in a mess.

They soon arrived at their neighborhood. Li Huowang’s unusual behavior caught the attention of the residents, but he quickly brought the sobbing Yang Na upstairs.

When they reached their home, Yang Na rushed into the bathroom while covering her face.

Li Huowang saw that his mother was about to step out of the kitchen. He did not want her to see him like this, so he quickly went into his room.

“Son? Are you okay?” Sun Xiaoqin heard the crying from the bathroom and tapped the door with a spoon. “Did you have a fight? Be more magnanimous.”

“Mom, it’s nothing. Go do your own things,” Li Huowang wedged his broken arm between the coat rack and the wall. He gritted his teeth as he tried to set his arm straight.

I need to go to the hospital. I can’t handle this injury myself. Li Huowang dragged his broken arm along as he lay on the bed in pain.

Qian Fu was dead, just like that. But what angered him even more was Qing Wanglai’s attitude.

He was lying. That attitude wasn’t about suppressing emotions. He just didn’t feel the slightest bit of sorrow for Qian Fu’s death.

Chapter 794 - Why

Li Huowang sat on his bed for several hours. Eventually, he let out a long breath and finally calmed down.

Qian Fu was dead. He had known Qian Fu the longest, and his death made Li Huowang sorrowful. Still, the dead couldn't come back to life, so thinking about him was useless now.

At the moment, the issues concerning Qing Wanglai that came to light after Qian Fu's death were more important.

Li Huowang had always thought Qing Wanglai was just somewhat self-righteous and stubbornly believed his ideas were always right. Now, it was clear Li Huowang's impression of him had been wrong.

Something was very off with Qing Wanglai. The most troubling aspect was his emotions.

When faced with someone's death, even the death of someone he knew, he showed no concern. Qian Fu's death mattered to him even less than a helmet left on the ground.

Li Huowang had never seen such behavior in the psychiatric hospital, so he didn't know what kind of illness Qing Wanglai had.

Perhaps Qing Wanglai's projection was the most complete, as he was an existence that very closely resembled a Siming.

Someone like that, with no emotional fluctuations, would never act impulsively. If given the opportunity, Qing Wanglai would probably sell out Li Huowang without hesitation for his own benefit. He would abandon his useless companions without a second thought. Cooperating with such a person was undoubtedly a recipe for disaster.

Li Huowang remembered what Ban Nanxu had said. He had been skeptical before, but now mostly believed it.

A question arose: if he didn't cooperate with the Three Pure Ones, would he have to face the invading Simings of the Baiyu Capital on his own?

Li Huowang clearly couldn't handle it by himself. However, blindly following Qing Wanglai could lead to him being betrayed without even realizing it.

Li Huowang thought of the Ba siblings and the woman named Zhao Shuangdian. They weren't aligned with Qing Wanglai, yet they came to help.

"Seems like the Simings within Baiyu Capital have different factions," Li Huowang murmured to himself.

After some thought, he concluded it wasn't the right time to cut ties with Qing Wanglai. Instead, he should use this period to reach out to the other Simings, whom Qing Wanglai had said were unwilling or unable to collaborate.

He couldn't just take Qing Wanglai's words for granted. If he did, he might get sold out.

After careful consideration, Li Huowang realized his earlier reaction had been excessive. At least for now, he was still an ally with the Three Pure Ones.

He couldn't disregard Qing Wanglai just because he was cold-hearted. Fortunately, Qing Wanglai wasn't an emotional person. He didn't react at all when Yang Na slapped him, so he probably wouldn't mind losing face.

Li Huowang took out his phone and dialed Qing Wanglai's number. It rang a few times, then he answered.

—Hello? Li Huowang?

Qing Wanglai's voice was as casual as ever, with a hint of warmth even. However, Li Huowang now knew what lay behind it.

"Sorry, I acted impulsively earlier. Please apologize to Zhao Shuangdian for me. My girlfriend was really shaken by seeing someone die up close for the first time, so I had to take her away."

—Miss Zhao isn't that petty. Is your girlfriend okay? As her boyfriend, you need to comfort her.

"She's much better now. I'll make sure she stays home next time and doesn't come along."

He looked down at his injured hand and continued, "I'm not available today. I need to handle my injury, but can we meet tomorrow to discuss your findings?"

Qing Wanglai's expression hadn't been fake, so he must have obtained very valuable information. Since Qian Fu was dead, they could only hope his death wasn't in vain.

—Sure, tomorrow at noon, same place. I'll bring Zhao Shuangdian and the others to meet you.

"Zhao Shuangdian..." Li Huowang frowned and recalled the woman with the ponytail. If Qing Wanglai was the Three Pure Ones, what Siming was Zhao Shuangdian?

Her talk about the blind men and the elephant theory indicated she was indeed one of the Simings, but which Heavenly Dao did she govern?

Forget it, no point in guessing now. I'll learn more when we meet tomorrow.

After some thought, Li Huowang replied, "Alright. I'll hang up now."

—Hold on. Remember to bring the bulletproof vest tomorrow. After today's incident, some of the inserts might be damaged and need to be replaced.

There was a knock on the door.

Li Huowang tucked the phone between his ear and shoulder as he walked to the door, "Maybe Sister Wu should come tomorrow. It might cause trouble if I go to the hospital with my injuries."

He opened the door and saw six tall orderlies before him.

Li Huowang had just made out the red crosses on their chests when the men rushed in. They surrounded him and put him into a straitjacket.

“What are you guys trying to do?” Li Huowang tried to resist, but his injuries had weakened him greatly. “Why are you restraining me? Who sent you?”

“I’m cured! The hospital even issued a certificate. Or are you all their people?”

The worst-case scenario crossed Li Huowang’s mind, and his expression turned extremely wary.

While he was wondering who these men were, a familiar face appeared. It was Yi Donglai, his doctor whom he had not met for a while. He was still wearing a white coat and frameless glasses.

“I sent them,” Yi Donglai said.

Li Huowang was confused. “Why? Doctor Yi, I’m cured. My illness was cured!”

“Is that so? Your girlfriend says otherwise. She said you haven’t been taking your medication recently.”

Li Huowang saw Yang Na emerge from behind the door with her head down. He stared at her dumbfoundedly as the orderlies lifted him onto a stretcher and took him out.

As they passed each other, Li Huowang asked a single question in a trembling voice filled with anger and sorrow.

“Why?”

Yang Na suddenly cried. “Because you’ll die! This isn’t a game. People really can die! This time, it was Qian Fu. Next time, it could be you!”

“I used to go along with you, but not anymore! Even if we can’t be together, I’d rather you be in a psychiatric hospital! I don’t want you to be used as a tool! I don’t want you to die!”

Chapter 795 - Deal

Yang Na followed behind Li Huowang as he was carried away. She sobbed as she explained, “Huowang, don’t be afraid. I recorded all the conversations you had with Qing Wanglai and the others using a voice recorder.

“I’ve actually been collecting evidence all along. I gave all this evidence to Doctor Yi, and he knows that a group of people has been threatening you!

“Once you’re admitted, Dr. Yi will call the police, and I’ll tell them everything. Huowang, you’re safe now. You’re under their protection and won’t be in danger again!

“Huowang, don’t be afraid. You just need to take your medication!”

As the orderlies carried Li Huowang down the stairs, he continued to look up at Yang Na in disbelief, repeatedly asking why.

After Li Huowang uttered his final “Why,” Yang Na covered her face with her hands and squatted down, crying in despair.

The familiar areas of the White Tower Prison flashed before his eyes. The iron gate, barbed wire, the TV in the lounge, the fellow patients, and the isolation room.

Li Huowang sat in the isolation room, tightly bound. He ate when food was brought to him and took his medicine when it was given to him. Doctors treated his injuries, and he cooperated fully.

It was as if time didn’t exist. Li Huowang had no idea how long had passed.

When the restraints were taken off and his injuries had mostly healed, he was handcuffed and shackled. Then, the orderlies led him out of the isolation room.

He recognized the path they were taking—he knew he was being taken to Yi Donglai’s office.

He took his seat and, unsurprisingly, saw Yi Donglai.

The orderlies left at Yi Donglai’s signal, and then he sat down before Li Huowang with a tablet. “Don’t you have anything to say? This isn’t like you, Li Huowang.”

Li Huowang glanced around and observed Yi Donglai’s office. “What do you want me to say? Would you believe me if I said I wasn’t sick?”

It was a small, simple place. There was a desk with a computer and a therapy chair. Other than that, the only notable feature was the bookshelf on the left.

The tall bookshelf held various books related to Yi Donglai’s profession and some decorative items. One of them was an eighteen-sided die the size of a Rubik’s cube.

Yi Donglai noticed Li Huowang looking at the die and explained, “This is an eighteen-sided die inlaid with gold and silver. It is a relic from the Western Han dynasty. They used it for drinking games or Liubo chess.”

“Haha, a Western Han relic in your office? Are you crazy?”

“Of course, the original isn’t here. I saw it at Guanfu Museum in Shanghai and bought a replica from the gift shop.”

Yi Donglai picked up the die, quickly flipped it over a few sides, and showed Li Huowang the small characters at the bottom.

“See? Made in Yiwu. It’s fake.”

Li Huowang turned away, uninterested.

Yi Donglai placed the die on the table. “Why are you so calm now? Don’t you want to know how Qing Wanglai is doing? Or what happened to your enemies?”

Li Huowang clenched his fists. “There’s no point in me asking. I’m sure you will tell me anyway.”

“Let’s start with Qing Wanglai, the graduate student you and Yang Na mentioned. He doesn't work or study at that university. I couldn't find anyone named Qing Wanglai there."

Li Huowang's pupils shrank slightly. "That's impossible!"

"It is possible. See for yourself."

Yi Donglai handed over the tablet.

Li Huowang scrolled through quickly but did not find anything. Beside him, Yi Donglai joked, "So? Unless your friend is a computer expert who hacked the university's network to change his information?"

Yi Donglai paused briefly before continuing, "And as for those enemies who spied on you and later tried to harm you, if it was such a big deal, it would've likely been filed as a case—maybe even with a special task force. Unfortunately, no case was filed."

"Why?" Li Huowang pressed his thumb into the screen in frustration.

"Because there's no evidence. All the places Yang Na mentioned happened in places without surveillance. The places have all been checked, and no evidence was found.

"We live in a society governed by law. Even if you confess to murder, you are innocent without a body found.

"Normally, without any physical evidence, eyewitness testimony would suffice. But in your case, I'm afraid the police won't listen to you. As for Yang Na, the police won't believe her either."

"Why not?" Li Huowang asked, recalling Zhao Shuangdian's theory of rules.

At this moment, he found the world increasingly absurd.

"Because she has depression, which can cause delusions. Your case is more akin to schizophrenia, without any basis in reality. But with depression, delusions formed from a distorted view of reality are common."

"She's been cured for a long time! Where would the delusion be from?!”

Yi Donglai’s expression turned serious. “No. Her condition has relapsed, and it’s worse than before. She needs rest, not stimulation. More importantly, you shouldn’t have blamed her. You’re the cause of her current self-destructive behavior.”

Li Huowang’s fists tightened, his nails piercing into his flesh. “Where is she? I want to see her!”

“Forget it. She has other doctors caring for her. You two shouldn’t meet now. Focus on yourself first. This time, you might have to stay here for a year or two.”

“Yi Donglai! You tested me! I’m not sick!”

Li Huowang couldn’t stay for a year or two. God Yu’er and the other Simings had already infiltrated deeply. He would only become a target if he stayed here.

Yi Donglai replied sternly, “You’re not sick only while you’re on medication! Why did you stop taking your meds?! And how did you get injured?”

“I was beaten by those people!”

Clearly exhausted, Yi Donglai sighed. “Alright, it’s time to eat. After your meal, we’ll run some tests.”

Li Huowang turned and left with a heavy expression on his face.

Once he was outside the office, he quickly rushed into a nearby restroom instead of going to the cafeteria.

Li Huowang looked around, ensuring that no one was nearby. He then retrieved the eighteen-sided die and placed it meticulously in front of him.

He stared at the single large yellow dot and then said with a tone of negotiation, “Shai Zi, let’s make a deal.”[\[1\]](#)

1. Shai Zi is also the Chinese name for dice.

Chapter 796 - Help

Li Huowang frowned as he stared at his own reflection in the water. “Talk! Why aren’t you talking?”

Li Huowang was pacing around his room in anxiety. “The Natural Disaster this time is different! In the past, only ‘Rot’ or the sun had disappeared. But this time, ‘Death’ disappeared! Do you know what this means? It’s not some minor issue!

“A Natural Disaster occurs when there’s a change in the Heavenly Daos. Since ‘Death’ vanished, that means there’s something wrong with the Heavenly Dao of Death!”

Li Huowang stopped pacing, and a horrifying thought came to his mind. He stared at the reflection in the water basin. “Say something! Did the Simings of the Dharma Sect take away the Heavenly Dao of Death? Why aren’t you talking?! How can you still be confused when they are attacking us?”

His reflection finally replied, “I think I did fight back.”

Li Huowang harshly scolded Ji Zai when he heard the reply. “You finally came out! I thought you were dead!”

“I don’t think it’s time for me to die yet. Is something the matter?” Ji Zai’s response remained nonchalant.

Li Huowang didn’t want to waste time arguing with Ji Zai. He wanted answers. “What’s going on? What happened to Kui Lei? He was supposed to be the one who controlled the Heavenly Dao of Death.”

“He’s dead.”

Li Huowang’s pupils shrunk from shock. “He’s dead? Really? How did he die? Did the allies of god Yu’er kill him?”

Ji Zai’s eyes were blank. “I think so.”

“Then who’s holding the Heavenly Dao of Death right now?”

Why is the world like this?”

“Hmm...” Ji Zai tried recalling. “I don’t know. I didn’t see them.”

Li Huowang was so angry that his veins started bulging on his head. His fists trembled from anger. “Fine, then I want to ask you what you know. Which Siming gave me the seven secrets? Should I trust them?”

“Probably. At the very least, they should still be on our side. They wouldn’t betray me.”

Li Huowang’s anger calmed down a little after obtaining some helpful information. “Then how’s your situation over there? Was Xuan Pin’s help useful?”

“I am not acquainted with Xuan Pin right now. I think I will have met him a few times when you talk with me again.”

“Huh?” Li Huowang was confused. What does Ji Zai mean?

“Do you still have anything else to ask? I’m quite busy here.”

Li Huowang had finally managed to talk to Ji Zai. He didn’t want to waste his opportunity here. “One more question! Do you need me to go to the Baiyu Capital to help you?”

“That depends. Are you helping me, or am I helping you instead?”

Li Huowang lost his patience. “What the fuck do you want? Don’t play games with me!”

“Help. I will help you.”

Ji Zai became silent after saying that last sentence.

Li Huowang was so angry that he cut the bronze washing basin in half along with his reflection in the water.

“Fuck! Even calling you useless is a compliment!”

Li Huowang walked out angrily. Ji Zai is still useless. I need to figure this out by myself.

As he stepped outside, he immediately sensed that something was amiss within the barracks. A palpable sense of unease hung in the air as everyone periodically glanced towards the east.

The eastern side of the barracks had been isolated, with buzzing flies filling the air above the restricted area and smoke rising continuously.

Li Huowang frowned in disgust before walking towards the east. He stepped on a basket and was whisked upwards with a winch. While he was at the top, he saw a horrific scene displayed in front of him.

He had seen a lot of unmarked graves, but he had never seen one so revolting.

Numerous people in varying states of decay were concentrated in this place. They had all been stripped naked and stuffed into wooden enclosures. Almost all of them had suffered a lethal wound, with either their heads missing or half of their bodies gone.

However, no matter how severe their injuries were, their bodies were still moving.

Death was missing, but Rot and Pain were still in this world.

Eternal rest was withheld from everyone who should've died on the battlefield. They had to endure the pain of rot forever.

They saw their bodies breaking down with their own eyes. Their flesh slowly rotted as pus and maggots filled their body. Li Huowang and the others could only think of one way to release them from the pain. It was fire. They burned them in a large fire that was never extinguished.

The undying people, now no different from pieces of flesh that moved, were thrown into a fiery pit with the aid of large pitchforks.

Despite the fire engulfing their bodies, scorching their flesh and tongues, and causing their blood and brains to boil, they continued to struggle in pain as their cries echoed in the air.

The woeful cries mingled with the crackling of burning flesh, and yet they did not die. Death, the final chapter of their lives, eluded them.

It was only when their bodies had transformed entirely into ash that they became silent.

“They are not dead.”

Li Huowang turned around. An old mummified Lama with a crown approached him. The Lama was spinning the prayer wheels in his hands as the strange humming filled the air.

The Lama stared at the black smoke rising from the pit and the ashes at the bottom. “They are not dead. Their bodies have been reduced to particles, with each particle enduring the eternal agony of having their flesh torn. Now, they are experiencing pain hundreds and thousands of times worse than when they were alive.

“They do not scream, but not because they don’t want to. They don’t have mouths anymore.

“They do not move, but not because they don’t want to. They don’t have limbs anymore.

“Unless Mahakala returns, they will be subjected to this everlasting agony for eternity.”

When Li Huowang heard what the Lama from the Antrabhara Temple said, his scalp went numb and his limbs became cold.

Even Li Huowang, who was used to unbearable pain, trembled at the thought of experiencing everlasting agony.

“Death is a cycle, and also the fate of humans. Most people are afraid of death and go to great lengths to avoid it, unaware that death is the ultimate blessing bestowed upon us by Mahakala. Unfortunately, they did not realize how valuable it was until it disappeared...”

Chapter 797 - Clue

Li Huowang interrupted the Lama and said, “Stop chanting!”

He continued, “Chanting your mantras is useless. Can you chant for Death to return? You’re a Lama from the Antrabhara Temple! You need to figure out a way to end this! I thought your Mahakala controlled Death. Do you not trust him? Can’t you figure out a way to bring back your Mahakala?”

With his face filled with wrinkles, the Lama bitterly shook his head before sitting down with his legs crossed. He stared at the black smoke from the fire and began chanting again while turning the prayer wheels in his hands.

“Fuck!” Li Huowang cursed under his breath as he left the crematorium. He walked towards the largest tent in the middle.

He walked into the tent and noticed that the messenger pigeons were all on a big table, each carrying different information. The generals and tacticians were reading the messages.

Li Huowang ignored them and approached an old eunuch.

The eunuch was very old and one of the most senior eunuchs in the palace. He had served Ji Man, the previous emperor of the Liang Kingdom, Ji Lin, who turned out to be a woman, and finally, Gao Zhijian.

“What did His Majesty say? Are we not attacking Nan Ping yet? How much longer must we wait?” Li Huowang asked. They had set up camp here after the ambush and had not moved since then.

The old eunuch bowed gracefully to Li Huowang. “Daoist Li, we are now experiencing a Natural Disaster. This is not a good omen. It's not a good time to wage war.”

“Don’t you think it’s possible for the Dharma Sect to be the one responsible for causing this Natural Disaster? Do you want them to obtain the Heavenly Dao of Death before we start moving again?”

“Daoist Li, please be at ease. The Surveillance Bureau will handle the Natural Disaster. We are certain that the Natural Disaster will end soon. Also, how can we fight if there is no death anymore?”

The eunuch's words were not comforting. While it was true that the Surveillance Bureau had handled the Natural Disasters in the past, this time was different. Xuan Pin and his group were dead. Furthermore, Li Huowang wasn't sure they could have done anything even if they were alive.

The Natural Disasters in the past lasted a few divisions or two days at most, but the current Natural Disaster had been in effect for the past ten days. It was clear that the Natural Disaster this time was much more serious.

Li Huowang looked at the old eunuch one last time before leaving silently. He went straight towards the underground prison.

Despite the ongoing Natural Disaster and the numerous unforeseen circumstances, Li Huowang had to admit they had technically won this time.

This time, they captured many prisoners thanks to the disappearance of Death. Li Huowang wanted to interrogate them to obtain some information.

Li Huowang had just reached the prison when he saw an Ao Jing Sect member using a winch, as if pulling up a bucket of water from a well. However, instead of a well, the winch was hooked on a wheel, and the wheel was pulling out the intestines of the woman with fish scale tattoos. She was a boat person, and her intestines were being pulled out from her belly button.

The Ao Jing Sect, the crazy bastards who mutilated themselves, were the ones that benefited the most from this Natural Disaster.

They could now ignore death and mutilate either themselves or others without worry. Under such conditions, their strength had increased tremendously.

Zu Yi let go of the wooden handle and welcomed Li Huowang. “Elder Li.”

“How is it? Are there any updates?”

Zu Yi shook his head. “No, but we should be getting some information soon enough. She cannot tolerate the pain much longer.”

Li Huowang saw the woman was still glaring at him. He approached her without hesitation.

“Talk. Tell me everything you know, including what you did to cause the Natural Disaster. I will give you some respite if you tell me. If you don’t, your suffering will never stop.”

Despite her fear, the woman spat a mouthful of blood onto Li Huowang from her toothless mouth.

“Hehe... You guys have lost! You guys will lose! This is just the start! The start!”

Li Huowang stood there motionlessly as the Ao Jing Sect people carried her and threw her into a pot of boiling oil.

It wasn’t over. They poured down bags of coarse salt to fry her.

After several cycles, the woman gave up and shouted as she lay on the side of the pot, “I will talk! It’s because of the Dragon King! The Dragon King is so strong that they took away Death!”

As she cried, her eyes glazed over in bewilderment temporarily before she continued shouting, “The Dragon King is the true dragon! The Dragon Veins are fake! They have no right to be compared to the Dragon King of the Four Seas! The Dragon Veins were nothing but tributes for the Dragon King!”

Dragon King of the Four Seas? What Heavenly Dao do they hold? Wait a minute...

Li Huowang pulled her out from the boiling pot of oil. “What did you say just now? Dragon Veins? You guys have Dragon Veins in your possession?”

Li Huowang placed her back into the pot when he saw that she was hesitating.

She talked once more when she was dipped back into the pot of oil.

“Yes! We do! We have An Xi’s Dragon Vein and the Luo Sha Kingdom’s Dragon Vein. They were all placed on the altar as a tribute for the Dragon King to absorb the Dragon Qi!”

Li Huowang’s original plan, which Gao Zhijian had denied, came into his mind again.

If Gao Zhijian doesn't help me, I can get the help of the other Dragon Veins!

Li Huowang threw her back into the pot of oil as he paced around. He wasn’t sure if it would be possible.

It would be difficult for me to go and take the Dragon Veins from the altar, especially since I don't know what kind of entity the Dragon King of the Four Seas is. Still, I don't have time to figure it out. The situation is dire, and Ji Zai also confirmed that the ribbon-like Siming was most likely on our side.

It doesn't matter if the Siming who controlled the Heavenly Dao of Death disappeared or if the Heavenly Dao of Death itself disappeared. Whatever the case, it means that the Baiyu Capital is in danger. I need to find a way to help them.

Victory down here is irrelevant if the war is lost up there. I need to ensure that the Heavenly Dao of Death doesn't fall into the wrong person's hands.

Li Huowang rolled up his sleeves and picked up the boat people again from the pot of oil.

He needed to confirm the location where the Dragon Veins were being offered as tributes, or even if they were actually being offered as tributes. He had to know that they were the truth.

After obtaining the same information from another person, Li Huowang set his goal on taking back the two Dragon Veins.

By taking back the two Dragon Veins, he could also weaken the strength of the Dragon King. There was no reason for him not to do so.

But do I have to go alone? Li Huowang thought that it would be too risky. He needed help.

As he pondered over whom to bring, his gaze fell upon the members of the Ao Jing Sect. The Natural Disaster had coincidentally powered them up.

Chapter 798 - Lion Dance Palace

“Elder, what do you think about my proposal?” Li Huowang looked at the woman in black robes.

Li Huowang did not recognize any of the higher-ranking members of the Ao Jing Sect, but he was certain that the woman in front of him was one of them.

Her exposed skin was covered in myriads of weird bruises and scars. She did not have a single piece of complete skin on her body.

Her stomach was also engorged, but it didn’t look like a pregnancy. It looked like a tumor.

She opened her mouth and revealed the empty cavity inside. Her tongue had been removed, and even the skin in her mouth had been peeled off. Her mouth was filled with white pus and blisters, including her throat.

After demonstrating her inability to speak due to her disfigured mouth, she picked up a brush and wrote on a red bamboo slip. Li Huowang, I am Shen Benyou. I have long heard of your infamy.

This is a good method. We could both wound the Dharma Sect and take care of the Natural Disaster. Why aren’t the royal family or the Surveillance Bureau using this method? Why are you the only one implementing this plan? Are they stupid?

Li Huowang leaned forward. “The situation is critical. Do you really think we should spend our time discussing that? Just tell me if you want to help or not. I thought those who had ascended were treated as a higher-ranked individual in the Ao Jing Sect. Is my position that low?”

Shen Benyou dipped her brush into an inkwell before writing again. We will naturally help since we are allies now, but why should we? It's a dangerous mission. Since you've ascended before, you should also know that the members of the Ao Jing Sect want this Natural Disaster to last as long as possible.

“Is that so? Do you just want to suffer from the pain? This time, Death disappeared. Can you be certain that Pain won't disappear next time? Also, I thought your objectives were the same as those of the Sacrificial God—stealing the Heavenly Dao of Pain from Ba-Hui. Are you really sure that the current phenomena won't lead to another Siming taking the Heavenly Dao of Pain from Ba-Hui?

“If Ba-Hui's Heavenly Dao gets taken by someone else, wouldn't that mean that all of your actions—your self-mutilation, killings, and the pain you inflict on yourselves—would become a joke?”

Shen Benyou and the other Ao Jing Sect members remained silent.

Li Huowang approached Shen Benyou closer and stared into her eyes. “Don't think that this situation doesn't affect you. The Natural Disaster concerns everyone. You know that too, don't you? If you didn't, then why would you be here?”

Li Huowang calmed down a bit before he took a few steps back. “Also, now that we have lost Death, you guys won't die. You lose nothing by helping me.”

Saying more was meaningless. Li Huowang sat still and waited for their answer. If they don't want to help me, I'll have to find another way.

Shen Benyou wrote her response on the bamboo slip. You, Li Huowang, owe me a favor .

She didn't wait for his reply. You owe me a favor. The Ao Jing Sect will not only help you, but we will also help you find another ally to ensure our success.

Upon seeing those words on the bamboo slip, Li Huowang replied, "Let's make this clear. Do I owe you, and only you, a favor, or do I owe the Ao Jing Sect a favor?"

Me.

"Then it's decided!" Li Huowang stood up and agreed to it. He didn't want to waste any time.

"Call your allies here. We can depart immediately."

Li Huowang was about to walk out when he stopped. He forgot to ask them who their allies were. "Who are you planning to ask for help? Best not to find someone from the Surveillance Bureau. I fear that there may be imperial spies mixed in with them."

The Lion Dance Palace. Do not worry. I guarantee that there are no spies in there.

"Why them?" He recalled the few times he had encountered the Lion Dance Palace. He didn't really know a lot about them.

Li Huowang knew they lived underground in Qing Qiu and about the white tassels capable of shifting a person's organs. Other than that, he knew nothing else about them.

The Lion Dance Palace can dance with anyone and anything. They can help us.

Li Huowang couldn't care less about what the Lion Dance Palace was. He just wanted to take back the two Dragon Veins as soon as possible and end the Natural Disaster.

Shen Benyou did not walk by herself. Instead, she was carried away on a palanquin. Under her guidance, Li Huowang and the others got closer to where the Lion Dance Palace was located.

They walked towards a remote part of the forest. In the middle of the forest and mountains, there was a massive cave as large as a house. It constantly emitted a gust of cold wind. Li Huowang stood in front of the large cave.

"What are the Lion Dances? Why do they always stay under the ground?" Li Huowang asked out of curiosity.

Apparently, the thing they worshiped had a dispute with the sun.

They always cover up to prevent the sun from shining on them.

Shen Benyou pointed at the sun before they entered the cave.

The stairs in the cave were clearly man-made. They were new and very flat.

The stairs were also massive. It would take a regular person tens of years to complete such a feat.

Navigating the cave was easy for Li Huowang. He simply had to follow the only white light in the cave, just like he did in Qing Qiu last time.

He soon found the Lion Dance Palace. Rows of large faces lined up on the sides while a massive wall of human faces sat near the end.

The white light scattered here and there were the white tassels stuck between the large human faces.

The white tassels pulsed lightly, as if they were breathing.

The large faces, each the size of a dinner table, stared at Li Huowang together. The oppressive feeling made it hard for him to breathe.

When Li Huowang saw them, he recalled some bad memories and frowned. He hated them, even if they were to help him.

“What is it?” Various voices echoed from the other side of the wall of faces, blending together in a symphony of male, female, old, and young tones.

Shen Benyou did not speak. Instead, she threw a bamboo slip towards the wall of faces.

The white tassels extended like tentacles and swiftly disintegrated the bamboo slips before guiding them into the wall of faces.

“Do you have a good relationship with the palace master?” Li Huowang whispered.

They are not a palace, nor do they have a palace master. They can converge as one or divide as many units. Everything you see here is a single living being, and it's called the Lion Dance Palace.

Chapter 799 - Allies

Li Huowang's eyes widened in shock as he read Shen Benyou's explanation. He gazed at the wall of faces in front of him and the white tassels in between them.

He never thought the Lion Dance Palace was an entire entity and not the name of a sect!

"Wait, does that mean the Lion Dance Palace is cultivating the Dao of Fusion?" Li Huowang stared at the numerous legs underneath the white cloth of the Lion Dances before realizing what it meant for them to cultivate the Dao of Fusion.

According to Shen Benyou's description, the Lion Dance Palace was most likely a fusion of both their bodies and minds. They had a hive mind, and the entire hive mind was the Lion Dance Palace.

The techniques of a regular sect either amplify or destroy other sects' techniques, but the Lion Dance Palace is different. They can complement anything with no risk of backlash. They can merge other people into their bodies and vice versa, regardless of their sect. The righteous become even more righteous, and the evil become even more evil.

Li Huowang now understood why Zhang Tan had two lion dances on the side while he performed the Nuo Opera.

Suddenly, a man's flattened face on the left stared at Li Huowang with lantern-like eyes. The red and white light was unnerving.

The left lantern of the lion dance slowly shifted upwards, revealing a circular dark hole in its place. Several dried monkey-like black arms extended from the hole and placed themselves in such a way that made them resemble the eyelashes of the lion dance.

Several eyes, both big and small, filled up the empty eye socket and stared at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang thought that something as horrific as them were most likely worshiping something even more horrific. He had no idea what the entity that the Lion Dance worshiped would look like.

“I’ve touched you once.” Several voices overlapped with each other as they spoke.

Li Huowang recalled the night when he became something inhuman on Qing Qiu’s plains.

“Yes. All thanks to you. Thank you for letting me go that night.” Li Huowang waved his arm to brush it off.

“I’ve touched you once. Your body was stuck with cause and effect. That was why I let you go. It seems that it was fated to be.”

The wall of faces started to shake. Three Lion Dances and a single Dragon Dance appeared out from the wall.

As they crawled out, they took something black and sticky with them. The black goo had tentacles.

When the goo got out, it quickly moved into the darkness, but Li Huowang’s keen vision saw what it actually was. It was none other than the Black Taisuis.

Li Huowang now knew why the Black Taisui appeared in Qing Qiu. It was because they were related to the Lion Dance Palace!

Shen Benyou turned to Li Huowang. Daoist Li, since everyone is here, we can depart now.

“No wait, I need to go back first. Before I went to the crematorium, I left my daughter behind in the city.”

Li Huowang swiftly returned to the city.

Li Sui was currently walking happily on the main streets. Even though she was happy that she could help her father, she still preferred to walk on the streets when there was a celebration. She loved seeing things that she hadn’t seen before.

But as she walked, she slowly lowered the candied fruits in her hands. Many people were crying, and very few were smiling. Even those who weren't crying had a solemn look on their faces.

Are they sad? Is it because a lot of people died? The somber atmosphere also dampened Li Sui's mood.

I don't want them to be sad. I want to do something. Li Sui recalled something and approached a blacksmith.

When she returned outside, she was holding a bucket of molten metal. "Time to strike the tree flowers! Strike tree flowers! Everyone, come and look!"

After attracting a crowd, Li Sui used a wooden ladle to scoop out some molten metal before throwing it at the city wall.

The molten metal splashed everywhere. Even though it was daytime, the sparks from the molten metal still dazzled the crowds.

Li Sui started working harder after seeing that the crowd were reacting to her performance. She wasn't that good at doing so and a lot of molten metal fell onto her body, but she didn't mind it.

She soon finished her bucket, and everyone's expression slowly turned back to normal. They scattered after her performance, their worry and sadness returning after Li Sui's temporary distraction ended.

Li Sui seeing them leaving the place made Li Sui feel sad as well. "Did it not work?"

"Of course not. Striking tree flowers is not enough to make them happy."

Li Sui turned around and saw a handsome man in front of her. He had an identification plate on his waist, and she remembered that her father also had one.

"My father is not happy. Everyone is not happy." Li Sui squatted down near her pail.

The man squatted down and gently peeled off the cool metal on her back. "I have a method to make your father and everyone else happy, but it would take quite some time."

"What plan? Who are you?"

Li Sui turned to look at the man and saw that he was smiling lightly as he patted her head, “Remember your choice right now. You are simple, but your potential is huge. Do not hesitate when you have the chance to do something that only you can do. But I’m certain that you won’t hesitate as well.”

Li Sui grumbled because she didn’t want anyone touching her head except for her father.

But she was shocked when she tried to use her tentacles to remove the man’s hand. Her tentacles phased through the hand. The man didn’t have a body!

“Suisui!” Someone shouted, and with that, the man in front of Li Sui disappeared like bubbles.

“Father, someone was here just now. Did you see! It’s a guy!” Li Sui ran towards Li Huowang in a panic as she explained what happened just now.

“Someone was beside you just now?” Li Huowang frowned. He never saw anyone just now.

“Did you... become a Strayed One too?” Li Huowang answered her with hesitation.

Li Sui had eaten his flesh for a long time and had indeed obtained part of his cultivation to control the “Truth”. She might be turning into what he once was.

But then he thought that might not be the case. His illusions were created from times when he experienced strong emotional trauma. Li Sui hadn’t gone through such experiences, so how would she create illusions?

Li Huowang stared at Shen Benyou’s palanquin before dragging Li Sui towards it. “Let’s ignore the illusion for now. Once everything is over, I will help you figure out a way to deal with it. We have something more important to do. Let’s go!”

“Father, where are we going?”

“To the sea.”

Chapter 800 - Sea

A massive ship sailed on the azure sea. Li Huowang stared at the waves while occasionally checking the Shimmer Mirror.

“Captain, are you sure we are heading in the right direction?” He looked at the man with dark skin and calloused feet.

“I’ve been sailing for more than forty years. My ship will navigate flawlessly as long as you give the right coordinates.”

Just then, a muffled cry came from the bottom of the deck, sounding excruciatingly painful.

But the captain ignored the screaming from the Ao Jing Sect. He continued his work without acknowledging them. When he turned around, a single mahjong tile with the Hong Zhong pattern could be seen at the back of his neck.

The captain was not the only one with the mark. Li Huowang had tricked the entire ship's crew into turning them into his pieces.

Li Huowang didn’t want to employ any random group of people because he feared that there could be spies from the Dharma Sect. That was why he used the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s tricks.

After confirming they were sailing in the right direction, Li Huowang walked down from the deck and entered the cabin. He had just entered when he saw Li Sui meditating with her legs crossed.

“What are you doing?”

“Father, didn’t you say I turned into a Strayed One? I’m learning from you to cultivate the ‘Truth.’ I want to become as strong as you.”

The surroundings did not change, so it was clear that Li Sui did not succeed, but Li Huowang was still touched by her actions.

He patted her shoulders. “Cultivate well. We can solve it together if you encounter any problems. Also, did the illusion of the man appear again?"

Li Sui shook her head as she placed her legs down. "No. He only appeared once."

"Only once..." Li Huowang pondered. It didn't sound like an illusion created by being a Strayed One, so it wasn't a major issue.

"Don't worry, it's just an illusion. I have several of them, which have been following me for a few years. Even if you end up with illusions too, it won't affect you. At most, they would just be annoying."

"Alright father. I won't worry too much about it." Li Sui beamed as she squinted her eyes.

"Sorry for dragging you into this."

"It's alright." Li Sui hugged Li Huowang and snuggled into his embrace. "Father, I want to help you. I want to protect you and make sure you don't die."

As Li Huowang was patting her head, one of the Ao Jing Sect members interrupted them. "Daoist Li, Elder Shen is calling you."

He let go of Li Sui before following the person down deeper into the other cabins.

The cabins in which the Ao Jing Sect were staying was covered in the stench of blood. They also drew various runes using blood, but Li Huowang was used to it.

He approached Shen Benyou. "Is something wrong?"

"Does Daoist Li know who we're facing? Who are the Dragon Kings of the Four Seas?"

Li Huowang briefly explained what he had experienced at Yang Xiaohai's old home. "From the captives, we've learned that we are most likely facing the deities that the boat people worshiped. I've seen it once before, and it seems it controls water."

"The Dragon King's Heavenly Dao appears to control water and could forcibly change someone's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings.

You should prepare yourself.”

But Shen Benyou shook her head. They didn't exist in the past. We knew about the boat people's faith, but most were merely superstitious. They only prayed to calm themselves before they went out to the sea. It seems that an impostor took over and proclaimed themselves as the boat people's deity.

“Is it a Siming from another world? Did they come from beyond the Baiyu Capital?” Li Huowang wasn't surprised since he had a similar conjecture.

Shen Benyou shook her head again. “The Sacrificial God hasn't answered us in a long time. I do not know what to do. We should be careful this time. No matter who these Dragon Kings are, we should be careful since the Dharma Sect recruited them.”

“You can't die anyways. What are you afraid of? Aren't you ashamed to call yourself the Ao Jing Sect?” Li Huowang did not hold back. “Also, we are not fighting against them head-on. We only need to take away their tribute. The mission shouldn't be that dangerous. Once we are down there, I will steal their tribute while all of you suppress the Dragon King and the others.”

I'm worried, not afraid. There are too many variables. Daoist Li, do you not see them? Do you really think this is a coincidence?

“And what good is it for us to be worried? You are worried, and yet you wanted me to owe you a favor to do this? You wouldn't have accepted it if you were that worried.”

Li Huowang wanted to scold her further, but the captain's voice came from above the deck. “Sir, we are here!”

“We've reached the place. I will listen to you once this is over.”

Shen Benyou took a bag of metal thorns and opened her mouth. She dumped the contents of the bag into her mouth covered in blisters and ulcers before chewing on the steel thorns forcefully.

Four Ao Jing Sect members walked over and carried her palanquin. They followed Li Huowang up to the deck.

Everyone gathered at the top of the deck. They saw that the ocean was still the same, but Li Huowang sensed danger. He felt gazes coming from the bottom of the ship. Something had noticed them.

Li Huowang opened his mouth and swallowed Li Sui before waving his arm. The Ao Jing Sect members jumped into the sea like dumplings into boiling water.

Li Huowang jumped into the icy water and took a deep breath. The briny sea water surged into his lung and suffocated him.

Li Huowang instinctively struggled as his breathing became rapid and his body turned rigid. The suffocating feeling intensified until it reached a peak. Li Huowang quickly got used to the sensation of drowning.

Under normal circumstances, he would've drowned to death. However, with the Heavenly Dao of Death gone, he couldn't die. That was why he could dive into the water without any hesitation.

Several black tentacles with suction cups and hooks appeared out from Li Huowang's body. He swam swiftly in the oceanic current.

Li Huowang looked at the others. He saw the Lion Dance Palace had fused into a blob before transforming into a fish-like being. Densely layered palms covered in white tassels were arranged into the fins.

As for the Ao Jing Sect, they had turned the water around them into a bloody-red color.

Li Huowang pointed to the deep, dark ocean, and everyone descended even further.

Chapter 801 - Dragon King Temple

The cold seawater surrounded Li Huowang as he slowly descended. The pressure of the water slowly increased and pressed on him. It felt as if two walls were slowly crushing his body from both the front and the back.

However, this was not an issue for him since Death had disappeared.

He slowly sank as the surface grew further away from him. The waters around him turned darker as he descended. His visibility decreased, making it harder for him to detect any danger.

In the dark ocean, Li Huowang slowly sank into the depths as the darkness seemed to stretch on endlessly before him.

He suddenly stopped and stared at the murky depths around him.

He fished out three pieces of glowing rocks from the inside of his clothes before throwing them towards the front.

The green light dispelled the darkness, revealing a dense group of boat people with fish-scale tattoos and water monkeys.

One was human, and the other was an evil entity, yet there wasn't much difference between the two groups this deep underwater.

"Kill them!" Li Huowang charged into the group of boat people as each of Li Sui's tentacles held onto a torture tool. The sharp blades of the torture tools sliced up the boat people easily.

The Ao Jing Sect and the Lion Dance Palace did the same. The Lion Dance Palace swallowed a lot of the boat people before leaving behind a massive writhing pile of twisted flesh.

As Death had vanished, neither they nor their enemies could die, so it was pointless to prolong their fight.

Li Huowang was not here to kill them. He observed the glowing rocks descending, revealing a large crevice at the bottom. Li Huowang ushered Li Sui's tentacles to work hard to swim after the rocks.

"This is the Dragon King Temple! Follow me quickly before the Dharma Sect comes!"

Soon the battlefield shifted towards the crevice. Under Li Huowang's guidance, everyone swam towards the three sinking glowing rocks. Li Huowang had taken the initiative for the assault this time.

The glowing rocks weren't bright, but in the dark ocean they were like three miniature green suns that lit up the crevice.

Li Huowang saw several human and fish skeletons littered on the uneven rocks.

Li Huowang thought this was where the boat people and the water monkeys buried their dead, but as he swam downwards, he realized he was wrong.

The skeletons weren't scattered randomly but arranged in a specific pattern. Someone had deliberately placed them to form a mural on the walls. "Is that a human?"

The bones were arranged in the shape of a massive human taller than a mountain. The light coming from the glowing rocks wasn't enough to illuminate it.

Li Huowang could only rely on his memories and piece together the sections he had seen with the light coming from the glowing rocks to form a vague image of the man.

Whoosh~ Li Huowang suddenly sensed danger and quickly shifted sideways. He barely avoided a dark shadow zipping past him.

Hair?

Li Huowang couldn't make out what it was. He only saw something as large as a house disappearing in the darkness.

As he approached, the resistance he encountered started becoming fiercer. Something other than the boat people and the water monkeys was underwater. There appeared to be even more entities worshipping the Dragon King in the Dragon King Temple.

"Father, look! There's a temple in the stomach of the bone-man on the wall!"

"A temple in that thing's stomach? I'm looking for the Dragon King Temple, not an organ temple."

Li Huowang looked down when he heard Li Sui's warning. He saw an eerie temple lodged into the wall of the crevice, and its location was exactly at where the liver of the man made from bones on the wall would be.

He read the words on the rusted signage and realized it was exactly what he had been looking for.

Just then, the intense water pressure crushed the three glowing rocks and plunged everything into darkness again.

The moment the light disappeared, numerous shadowy objects swam up from the crevice, and as they did, the surrounding currents grew fiercer. In the darkness, all Li Huowang could see were shimmering scales.

Li Huowang didn't know what those things were, but he knew they would try to stop him from approaching the Dragon King Temple.

Li Huowang turned towards the direction in which the stench of blood was the heaviest before shouting, "Hey, do your job! Is this the limit of what the Ao Jing Sect can do?"

Right then, he heard the Ao Jing Sect all shout at the same time. "Wooden Liver!"

Many of them used the Five Elements Intercalation simultaneously as a dense mat of maggots burrowed into the flesh of the shadowy figures. The maggots made the surrounding waters murkier.

They shared the pain as howls from men and beasts alike resounded in the dark water.

Under the protection of the white tassel and maggots, Li Huowang approached the Dragon King Temple, which was shrouded in darkness.

Li Huowang fished out three more glowing rocks and threw them towards the Dragon King Temple. A horrific scene unfolded in front of his eyes as he saw numerous headless corpses floating upside down in the Dragon King Temple. They were neatly arranged in the water.

“I don’t care what those are—it’s your job to buy time for me! I will go take the offerings and finish this early!” Li Huowang shouted. Dense layers of maggots and white tassels surged into the Dragon King Temple.

Under their protection, Li Huowang projected his image and swam into the temple with the tentacles.

One of the headless corpses splayed open its limbs and flew towards him like a starfish, but a palm formed from maggots intercepted the corpse and dragged it away.

As the obstacles were cleared away, Li Huowang soon found a massive table filled with offerings. On one of the white jade plates were two entire Dragon Veins! The heads of the Dragon Veins, the Emperor of the An Xi Kingdom and the Emperor of the Luo Sha Kingdom, had been pierced by corals and forced to kneel towards something on the wall.

Faint golden lights were peeling off from the Dragon Veins like golden foil as they drifted towards the wall. Li Huowang followed the path of the light and stared at the wall.

He was certain that the Dragon King was not a dragon even though it looked like it. The thing on the wall looked more like a ball of whiskers covered in dragon scales and dragon claws.

“What is that bizarre thing?” Li Huowang was running out of time. He quickly swam over and grabbed the two Dragon Veins before tying them together and dragging them out of the Dragon King Temple.

But when the two Dragon Veins left the table, the entire Dragon King Temple started shaking vigorously, accompanied by the spread of a horrifying aura.

Li Huowang turned around and stared warily at the mural on the wall.

But the mural did not move. It was something else that moved.

Chapter 802 - Ao Mojie

Li Huowang sensed that the tremor and the terrifying aura were becoming stronger. The currents began to swirl chaotically. He understood what was happening and shouted at everyone, "Get out! The temple is sinking!"

The Dragon King Temple had fallen off from the wall and was sinking deeper.

They were already quite deep in the crevice. Li Huowang had no idea where he would reach if he sank even deeper.

The terrifying aura also came from the bottom of the crevice!

Sensing that the temple was sinking, the Ao Jing Sect and the Lion Dance Palace tried to swim out of the temple under Li Huowang's lead.

But the headless corpses, boat people, and water monkeys were all surging into the temple to block them from escaping. Both sides clashed intensely as they fought in the temple.

Bam! The black tiles of the temple roof blasted apart as Li Huowang's body, now stuck together with the Lion Dance Palace, blasted upwards from the temple as they escaped through the hole in the roof.

He didn't dare to stop as he continued to swim upwards. Halfway through, he looked back down and saw the horrifying aura coming from the darkness below. The darkness was impenetrable, even with the presence of light. Hot currents blasted upwards in a rhythmic pattern, almost as if the darkness itself was breathing.

The Dragon King Temple sank into the darkness and disappeared forever.

Li Huowang sighed in relief when he saw the darkness did not chase after him. He was glad that he managed to make it out alive at the last moment, or he would've been trapped in the stomach of that evil entity.

He then looked upwards. Their fight had altered almost everything in the ocean surrounding them.

He barely saw any empty patches of water on top of him as innumerable evil entities surrounded them from above like a blanket.

Li Huowang looked down at the two Dragon Veins covered in maggots before charging upwards at the evil entities. He wanted to break through the blanket of flesh!

Even though he didn't know what they were or where they came from, he had to admit they were terrifying. But even then, they were no match for Li Huowang. He was no longer the naive and weak Daoist who had just exited the Zephyr Temple.

Several rifts shot forward and cut up the flesh of every entity in the path. The strange fluid leaking out from the rift mutated everything it touched.

The amalgamation of flesh, white tassels, and maggots was even more terrifying. It was like a shark that consumed everything it touched. To it, flesh was nothing more than wet paper.

They charged upwards and reached the depth where the Dragon King Temple had previously been.

Li Huowang thought they were almost at the surface when the evil entities in front of him suddenly parted ways. They revealed the murky surface before a large shadow covered it. Something massive, one larger than a mountain, was sinking towards them.

"Be careful! Something as big as a mountain is coming!" Li Huowang warned his comrades and readied himself for combat.

But as it got closer, Li Huowang realized that he had been mistaken. "This isn't something as big as a mountain, it's an actual fucking mountain! Dodge!"

But it was too late. There were no more paths to evade the mountain. It was a crevice, and there was nowhere to hide. At the last moment, Li Huowang swam towards the mountain and extended his arms towards it. “Stand behind me!”

When his hands touched the mountain, the rock turned soft and became white tofu.

Li Huowang destroyed the tofu easily before revealing the next layer of rocks. He continued to use his cultivation to turn them into tofu as he tunneled through the mountain.

With Li Huowang carving up a tunnel in the mountain by turning the place he touched into tofu, the Lion Dance Palace and the Ao Jing Sect members were unharmed.

Li Huowang dug through the entire mountain and successfully survived being crushed by the mountain.

Li Huowang heard a massive crashing noise coming from down below in the crevice and thought that the mountain had most likely fallen into the darkness down there. He wasn't sure what the darkness was, but he was certain the mountain would hit it.

However, his happiness was short-lived as a terrifying chill came from below.

Suddenly, with a warm current surging from below, a large mass of dragon scales covering a lump of rotting flesh surged towards Li Huowang.

Li Huowang fought back and sent several rifts towards it.

The lump crashed into the rift and broke it apart like glass. The rift, which had been incomparably sharp, was destroyed just like that.

Li Huowang shifted his body and barely avoided it. He steadied himself and saw what it was.

He had seen it before. It was the mural in the Dragon King Temple just now, Ao Mojie.

“It's ... It's actually below us? There's a Siming below us?” Li Huowang saw the lump of dragon-scale flesh swimming towards him again.

Sensing that Li Huowang was being attacked, the maggots and white tassels swiftly attacked Ao Mojie, but none of them worked. Both the maggots and white tassels stopped moving the moment they touched Ao Mojie's body.

Li Huowang realized what was happening when he saw the scene. "Be careful! It absorbed the Dragon Qi, and normal techniques are useless!"

Li Huowang had once seen the Dragon Vein destroying the rifts coming from the spine sword and understood that the thing in front of him was going to be hard to fight.

Ao Mojie immediately charged towards him again. Li Huowang barely dodged it with his tentacles.

Just as the two zipped past each other, Li Huowang extended his arms and grabbed one of the dragon scales.

He ripped it off the lump of flesh, but a strange triangular head grew from behind the dragon scale and bit Li Huowang's hands with its two singular fangs.

Li Huowang grabbed the head and crushed it with his fingers.

He took a deep breath and stared at the lump of flesh. Both the Ao Jing Sect and the Lion Dance Palace are worthless here now.

He threw the Dragon Veins towards the back. "Take them and run! I will stop it!"

Chapter 803 - Dragon Vein

Li Huowang had no intention of fighting the being to the death. This was especially true because Death had disappeared. Killing the being would be difficult.

He hadn't forgotten the reason he was here. It would be a waste of time to try and kill the lump of flesh in front of him.

"I will stall it for at least the length it takes for an incense stick to burn, so swim as far as you can! We will meet again in Si Qi!"

Li Huowang swung his tentacles hard as he charged toward the being.

He got close before he swung the spine sword again to send a rift towards the being.

This time, the rift was not intended to attack Ao Mojie but to ambush it. Li Huowang swiftly vanished into the rift.

The rift then splintered against Ao Mojie. Li Huowang disappeared from the dark depths of the ocean.

Ao Mojie saw Li Huowang disappearing and didn't stand idly by. It opened the eyes surrounding its body and expelled a hot current from its intestines, propelling itself forward and upward towards the location of Shen Benyou and the rest of the group.

Just then, a rift suddenly materialized out of thin air, revealing a sharp blade that stabbed Ao Mojie. As quickly as it had appeared, the blade vanished once more.

Right after the sword vanished, it reappeared and stabbed Ao Mojie again. This cycle continued, with the sword repeatedly stabbing him until his blood stained the water all around.

Li Huowang stabbed it one final time. Unable to endure any longer, he fell out of the rift.

Even though his cultivation of the “Truth” was strong, the strange liquid from the Qi Kingdom altered his body. His body bulged outwards, and six twisting limbs sprawled out from underneath his robes.

The limbs all ended in a crab-like pincer. There were four thin white stems on his forehead, each with a flower-like structure. Eight green whiskers hung beneath his chin, surrounded by sparse white hair that extended to his neck, concealing a strange little head that had sprouted there.

However, the transformation was temporary. Li Huowang quickly returned back to normal after he used his cultivation.

Just then, the small, shrinking head on his neck said, “Li Huowang, what is the meaning of this? You promised me!”

Li Huowang did not look back. He tore off the small head forcefully.

“Hmph! And you believed my words? To think that you would call yourself Hong Zhong of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. I lied! I’ve already had enough illusions by my side. Compared to Shai Zi’s plan, I’m more worried about what you would do behind my back!”

Li Huowang threw the little head away and faced Ao Mojie again. Despite risking his life to attack Ao Mojie, his attacks had barely worked on the house-sized being.

But Li Huowang did not give up. He was here to buy time and not fight to his death.

Through the compound eyes growing on the back of his neck, Li Huowang saw that Shen Benyou and the others had reached the surface. Li Huowang then sliced off his compound eyes before charging towards Ao Mojie again.

Having discovered the two Dragon Veins, he had partially achieved his goal. His mission would be completed after he stalled for more time, but it seemed like Ao Mojie didn’t want to fight Li Huowang.

The scales on its body vibrated as it called for the boat people to gather around it. A high pitched noise coupled with warm currents spread out far and wide.

The cry reached the ears of both the boat people and water monkeys, prompting each of them to grab a dragon scale and devour a handful of Ao Mojie's flesh. Afterward, they placed the dragon scales on their faces and shielded their eyes.

The aura they gave off was now very different. While they still looked the same, Li Huowang sensed something was fundamentally different. They surrounded Li Huowang as he tried to use his cultivation of the “Truth” to stop them, but it was futile. It seemed like they had obtained some Dragon Qi.

Li Huowang knew something was wrong when he saw more and more dragon scales being distributed. Ao Mojie had an abnormal amount of Dragon Qi.

It didn't completely absorb the two Dragon Veins, so where is it getting so much Dragon Qi from?

Li Huowang had fought against a Dragon Vein before, but Ao Mojie was very different from the one he had fought before.

When the boat people and water monkeys arranged themselves in a massive snake-like formation with their eyes covered by the dragon scales, Li Huowang finally realized what was happening.

“You... You didn't rob the Dragon Qi! It's your own Dragon Qi! You are not a Siming! There's not a single Siming as weak as you.

“You are a Dragon Vein—a Dragon Vein from their world! Isn't that right? You're not stealing the Dragon Qi; you're reinforcing yourself with it!”

Ao Mojie had no intention of answering. It swam along with the massive array of boat people and sea monkeys like a dragon swimming in the water.

Li Huowang stared at Ao Mojie without fear. “Simings from another world, and now Dragon Veins from the other world. Why are you here? You have your own place, so why are you here to steal ours?”

Against the reinforced Ao Mojie, Li Huowang was suppressed throughout the fight.

Fortunately, Li Huowang couldn't die under any circumstances since Death was gone.

He was still questioning Ao Mojie even at this point. “Why? Why come and steal our Heavenly Daos? Don't you have Death in your world, or do you think it's fun to have two Heavenly Daos of Death?”

Li Huowang stopped when he said that. He recalled the Door God that tried to recruit him last time and realized that he had just hit the nail on the head.

Li Huowang was in a daze, so Ao Mojie seized the chance to attack and cut him in half. However, the black tentacles soon stitched Li Huowang back to normal.

“I understand now! I finally understand! There's no Death in your world! There's no Rot in your world! There's no Pain in your world! There's also no Lies in your world! You wanted them! You crave for Rot, Pain, Lies, and even Death because you don't have them!”

He saw Ao Mojie's eyes shifting slightly. Li Huowang smiled as he drew his spine sword.

“But... Don't you dare try to take them away! As long as I am alive, you will not take our Heavenly Daos! I want to see what will happen if I kill you! A portion of our time disappeared every time one of our Dragon Veins was destroyed, so let's see what will happen to your world if I kill you here!”

Chapter 804 - Destroy

Li Huowang cut the water monkey in front of him in half, its flesh ripping apart audibly.

As the battle dragged on, both Li Huowang and his allies suffered severe injuries.

But it wasn't over. There were too many enemies that had obtained Dragon Qi. Li Huowang was surrounded by enemies and encircled by the Dragon Vein.

Due to the disappearance of Death, no one could fatally harm the other.

Li Huowang understood that dragging things on was worthless, but his efforts would be in vain if they dismembered him.

The small fries weren't the problem. It was the Dragon Vein called Ao Mojie!

Li Huowang calculated his distance with the Dragon Vein before taking a deep breath of water and swinging his spine sword.

The rift appeared once more, and Li Huowang slipped into it using his tentacles.

The briny smell of seawater was exchanged by the shimmering strange liquid. Li Huowang's heart was filled with despair as his flesh began mutating.

Li Huowang endured it and charged towards where Ao Mojie would be. Since he couldn't do anything in the Liang Kingdom, he had to find a way to deal with it from the Qi kingdom instead. As long as he could align himself with the position of the Dragon Vein in the Qi Kingdom, he could appear directly in the stomach of Ao Mojie!

Time was ticking. Li Huowang acted swiftly as he approached Ao Mojie's location in the Liang Kingdom. His swimming speed increased thanks to the strange fins that were growing out of his tentacles.

“You think... You think you can escape if you don’t materialize me? I’ve always been in your body, and I am Li Huowang!” A strange diminutive face appeared on Li Huowang’s neck and struggled to grow outwards. “You are already a part of me, or else you wouldn’t have thought of lying to me with your usual demeanor!”

“Scram! I don’t have time to waste on you!” Li Huowang said.

He shaved off the skin on his neck, but he soon saw a new face appearing.

“Rubbish! Without me, you are just a pile of gullible rubbish that anyone could deceive!”

“Aiya, Aiya, stop fighting!” a third voice rang out.

Another head popped up in between them. This time it was the old monk trying to block them from fighting.

The old monk was not the only head that was growing on the back of his body like a strange tumor. Jin Shanzhao, Qiu Chibao, and Peng Longteng were all growing on his back with faces of fear, unease, and anger.

“Fuck!” Li Huowang cursed.

With the heads on his back, Li Huowang swiftly reached Ao Mojie.

He found the correct location and swung the spine sword, only for the rift to shatter when it appeared. He was too close—the rift touched Ao Mojie the moment it formed, causing it to shatter.

“I refuse to believe that I will die here!”

Li Huowang swung the spine sword rapidly as numerous rifts shot out.

Finally, after he tried shooting out the rifts from numerous angles, he found a particular angle that allowed the rift to stay up for a short period. Li Huowang knew that it was his chance.

The rift could sustain itself for a while, meaning that Ao Mojie's body was hollow inside. There was a space in there that he could fit himself in!

When he shot out another rift, he projected his body and slipped through it immediately. He had just come out from the other side when he felt his body was burning up. It appeared to be the stomach of Ao Mojie.

"Die!" Li Huowang yelled.

He stabbed the spine sword forward, and a splash of burning liquid splattered on his face. He tasted it and realized it was blood. Li Huowang perked up immediately.

He controlled the tentacles around him and sliced up his surroundings with his torture tools. Blood flowed out from the wounds and covered him.

The seawater couldn't drown him, so naturally, he couldn't drown in the blood either. As Li Huowang carved out more and more wounds, the space around him started to shake.

"How is it? You must've never felt this before right? This is the pain that you lack on the other side! You better savor it!"

Li Huowang stabbed his sword downwards and carved out a table-sized chunk of flesh.

His allies and enemies were fighting on the outside, but Li Huowang's battle was fought inside. He refused to get out until he dismembered Ao Mojie.

He was busy carving out the flesh when a hole in Ao Mojie's stomach suddenly appeared. A water monkey with a dragon scale covering its face swam from outside the hole and charged towards Li Huowang.

This was just the start. As Li Huowang cut the water monkey in half, more and more of them surged into the stomach. They were trying to stop Li Huowang from harming the Dragon Vein any further.

And thus a bitter battle began, this time inside of Ao Mojie's stomach.

Still, it was much easier for Li Huowang to fight inside there. He was fighting inside of Ao Mojie after all, so Ao Mojie couldn't do much. Victory was his.

Blood and seawater merged together and turned the area murky. The lack of light didn't help at all either.

Li Huowang was in the middle of ripping out the head of one of the evil entities when a chaotic turbulence erupted in the bloody water to his left. A massive ashen-white being, as big as a tree truck, crashed into Li Huowang.

The being was slimy and smooth on the outside until it revealed its spiral mouth.

The evil entity shot something out from its snout. It was so fast that Li Huowang only saw a blur in the dark when it crashed into him and sent him flying. The stomach wall suddenly opened up, and Li Huowang was shot out of Ao Mojie's stomach.

Li Huowang steadied himself in the cold seawater and was surrounded once more by the enemies cloaked in Dragon Qi.

However, things had changed. Ao Mojie had sustained a severe injury. Its body was dented and dehydrated, with numerous small wounds across the surface of its body. It wriggled around, yet it couldn't heal itself.

The flesh on the outside was rotting, but the interior of Ao Mojie was completely different. It was mismatched.

Staring at the strange beings entering Ao Mojie's body, Li Huowang asked with uncertainty, "Your appearance... Is it not what it was in the past?"

"Is it because of the lack of Death? Is that why your appearance slowly changed to what it is now?"

Ao Mojie ignored him.

Its worshippers shielded Ao Mojie as they charged towards Li

Huowang. Countless beings, all with a dragon scale covering their faces, were charging towards him!

Li Huowang was going to use the same trick again. However, before he could, a large portion of the evil entities were knocked away by a fleshy blob covered in white tassels.

“That’s... The Lion Dance Palace. What are you doing here?”

Li Huowang couldn’t understand what was happening when the blob of flesh covered in white tassels attached themselves to him.

Chapter 805 - Arise

“What are you doing here? I thought I told you to run?” Li Huowang tried to push the blob of flesh away.

“Help you. Deal with them first.”

The Lion Dance Palace uttered those words before increasing the speed of its fusion with Li Huowang. The white tassels and flesh started to force themselves into Li Huowang’s body and take over Li Sui’s space. Li Sui had no choice but to move most of her tentacles into Li Huowang’s mouth.

It was not over yet. Li Huowang’s body bulked up as his organs shifted around.

It wasn’t only him. The four strange tumor-like heads on his back were shifted around too.

Li Huowang had changed. His red robes covered in strange runes were the only thing that hadn’t changed.

Xuan Pin’s robes were somehow enchanted, fitting Li Huowang’s body no matter what. It didn’t matter that the Lion Dance Palace had enlarged his body.

In just a few breaths, in the dark depths of the ocean, Li Huowang had transformed into a monster several stories tall.

He was still wearing his red Daoist robes even though he was now several stories tall. The black tentacles were hanging down from his mouth, and the sensory organs on his face had shifted slightly. After sensing the change in his aura, the boat people, water monkeys, and the other evil entities became wary of Li Huowang.

Li Huowang felt as if he had grown a lot of eyes in this form. Each white tassel gave him a line of sight. He could even feel the white tassels inside the box that Puppy had stashed away for himself.

It wasn't just his vision—his body had changed too. He couldn't quite describe the way it felt.

The Lion Dance Palace wasn't assimilating with him—it was fusing with him! Li Huowang experienced a peculiar sensation, as if he had the power to control every aspect of his own body.

Suddenly, one of Li Huowang's eyes rolled down to the back of his left hands. "Ao Mojie is running away!"

Li Huowang was going to move when numerous white tassels sprouted out of his body and moved like a fin.

The evil entities tried to block Li Huowang as the Lion Dance Palace's voice came from inside his mind. "A sword made from a live Strayed One is very unique. Try using it. We can block the current danger with it right now."

Li Huowang reached behind his back with his disjointed right arm and shoved his hands into his flesh before pulling out his own spine. A bloody spine-like sword appeared in his hand.

He swung it around his body, and everything in the path of the attack was pushed back. Li Huowang also realized that even if his sword didn't touch them, the evil entities' bodies all became elongated beyond what was reasonable.

He no longer needed to be wary of their encirclement. He quickly swam to chase after Ao Mojie.

Ao Mojie tried to run but it was too late. Just as it had almost reached the bottom of the sea, Li Huowang caught it.

"Shatter!" Li Huowang swung his spine sword down hard and split Ao Mojie's rotting body in half.

But it wasn't over. Li Huowang swung his sword again and again. Rotten flesh floated around in the area as he continued his assault.

After torturing it to the point of being unrecognizable, Li Huowang tied Ao Mojie up in a knot.

He then swung the entire thing towards the wall of the crevice before pulling out a boulder larger than his own body and smashing Ao Mojie with it.

The dust settled and Ao Mojie was flattened into a meat paste. Everything became quiet as Li Huowang looked at the flesh floating upwards.

Li Huowang slowly swam upwards while the Lion Dance Palace slowly detached itself from his body.

Li Huowang broke through the surface of the water and stood on it.

He winced in pain as he forced his facial sensory organs back to where they belonged.

His body slowly turned back to normal and the four heads on his back slowly withered away.

Li Huowang looked down at the Lion Dance Palace hiding under the surface of the sea before asking, "What's going on? I thought I told you to go first. Why did you come back?"

Ao Mojie's flattened flesh floated up to the surface and Li Huowang kicked it away. Due to the disappearance of Death, Ao Mojie was still alive, though the condition it was in was no different from being dead.

He wanted to take back two Dragon Veins but now he had three. It was a surprising harvest.

"We can't go."

"Why not?" Li Huowang thought he had misheard. He turned around and looked at the Lion Dance Palace again.

The Dharma Sect has surrounded us. All twelve of their Grand Witches are here. Shen Benyou frowned as she surfaced from the water too.

Her engorged abdomen was now flat and flaccid. She exposed a large hole on her abdomen where her flesh had been pulverized.

The Ao Jing Sect members were behind her, but many of them were missing. Even the two Dragon Veins had disappeared.

“What’s going on?” Li Huowang was frustrated as he looked at the horizon. He soon saw numerous ships of different sizes.

Behind the ships were large waves and torrential rain.

As the boats got closer, Li Huowang saw someone unexpected in front of him. It was Xuan Pin. Xuan Pin was wearing his red Daoist robes as he stood at the bow of the ship!

“Li Huowang, surrender. You are finished. We have kept you occupied here while the Li Kingdom fights back on the other front. Victory has been decided. Everything is over. You’ve lost to us.”

Li Huowang stared at Xuan Pin with an incredulous expression. “Are you stupid? I’m wearing Xuan Pin’s robes. Who are you to try and imitate Xuan Pin?”

The Xuan Pin on the bow of the ship shook his head slowly. “I just faked my death. I defected to the Li Kingdom a long time ago.”

He continued, “I’ve told them the secrets of the Surveillance Bureau. Everything is over.”

Just as he said that, several azure gourds were thrown from the ship into the water. The strange black liquid slowly spread and formed a large circle around Li Huowang. The strange liquid slowly made its way towards Li Huowang.

At the same time, twelve individuals, each wearing a veil with the word “Witch,” appeared at the bow of the ship. All of them had a black cloth tied to their shoulders.

Even though they were very far away, Li Huowang could still feel how special they were. It was as if they were much heavier than the others that caused even space to distort around them.

“Hmph! Grand Witch?” Li Huowang spat out some blood. “Dream on if you want me to surrender! Victory has yet to be decided!”

Li Huowang’s face contorted in pain and blood sprayed out from his nose. Veins bulged on his forehead and his brain started expanding. “AAAAAAH! ARISE!”

A massive bronze tree shot up from the depths of the ocean. It pierced the flattened Ao Mojie on its crown and towered behind Li Huowang.

Chapter 806 - Ascend

What... What is that thing? Shen Benyou stared at the bronze tree behind Li Huowang in shock.

Ao Mojie, now nothing more than a flattened piece of meat, was impaled on the massive tree. Its broken flesh rained down from the impact as it landed on the tree branches on the lower levels.

The bronze tree that had been emitting a golden light was now covered by a layer of flesh. It was both bizarre and incredible to see.

This was the Dragon-Slaying God-Killing Array. Even though he was surrounded, Li Huowang still had one last card to play.

He was well aware that fighting in this place would be futile. Not only was he uncertain of his ability to defeat the twelve Grand Witches, but he also couldn't kill them since Death was no longer present.

Since they would act in the mortal realm, Li Huowang just needed to ascend and fight up there instead!

The twelve Grand Witches were flustered and charged towards him as they stepped on the strange iridescent liquid.

But Li Huowang had materialized the bronze tree, so it was too late to destroy the Dragon-Slaying God-Killing Array.

“Suisui! Hands!”

Li Sui sprouted four tentacles from Li Huowang's armpits. Under his guidance, the four tentacles split and became four arms instead.

Li Huowang recalled what Xuan Pin did to activate the array, copying his movements from memory.

As the array started, the skies beneath the dark cloud split apart. A dark rift appeared and was gradually being pulled apart by invisible hands.

Li Huowang saw the path to the Baiyu Capital!

Li Sui extended her head out of Li Huowang's robes using one of her tentacles. She held the bronze coin sword with her left tentacle and three talismans on her right tentacle.

As the tentacles moved swiftly, she impaled the three talismans using the bronze coin sword and started chanting according to Li Huowang's instructions.

"Walk barefoot, step on the Heavenly Gates with haste. The dark aura of the demons approaches Nanyang ..."

As Li Sui chanted, Li Huowang, the Lion Dance Palace, and the remaining Ao Jing Sect members all grew dragon scales and claws, and their bodies started to grow.

Two twisted dragon horns grew out from Li Huowang's forehead. They grew longer and blood trailed down his face.

Ao Mojie, the Dragon Vein that was impaled onto the bronze tree, slowly dried up. It looked like it was on the verge of death. If Death hadn't disappeared, it might've really died.

Just then, the Dharma Sect attacked. The seas around them were completely black, and a large wave crashed into Li Huowang and the rest.

The wave didn't do anything. They remained unscathed as the wave retreated. Thanks to the Dragon Qi, a once formidable technique had become utterly ineffective against them.

The dark clouds had been split in half, and a dark circle rotated slowly above Li Huowang. It was incredibly far, but the horrific aura emanating from it made everyone want to run.

"The Ox Tail Gate is open! Let's go!" Peng Longteng appeared beside Li Huowang and threw him high up towards the black rift in the air.

The twelve Grand Witches also flew upward, trying to intercept him.

Li Huowang smiled when he saw their frantic actions. They panicked the moment they realized I was going to the Baiyu Capital to nip this in the bud.

That also indirectly proved that his method was correct. He needed to head upwards to deal with the issue from the root!

Several artifacts and techniques crashed into Li Huowang's body, but the Dragon Qi shielded him from all harm without fail.

One of the Grand Witches tried to block Li Huowang from the front when a Dragon Dance imitating a real dragon appeared from below and wrapped the Grand Witch around its body. "Go! We will stop them!"

Shen Benyou stood at the crown of the bronze tree. She removed her clothes, skin, and finally her flesh. Each layer of hers was connected by the blood vessels.

She bathed herself in the pain and took out a book—the Ascension Volume.

"I owe you guys one!" Li Huowang shouted. Peng Longteng appeared once more before throwing Li Huowang towards the black rift.

With the Lion Dance Palace and the Ao Jing Sect buying him time, he flew faster and faster as he approached Ox Tail Gate. "Faster! Faster! I need to be faster!"

He barely entered the rift in the skies when it sealed up. Rain poured down once more.

After passing through the clouds, Li Huowang continued flying upwards into the star-filled skies.

He crossed through the stars and saw some familiar faces. They were the strangely mutated horrors that he had seen once before.

He saw the flesh Bodhisattva still siphoning something from its surroundings with a pink tentacle wriggling at the front of its body.

He saw a dull ash-red maggot with slime covering its body. There were incense sticks stuck all over it, and it expanded and contracted rhythmically.

He also saw the God of Happiness and the Immortal Families.

Li Huowang came here once before, but this time it was different. All of them scattered and made way for Li Huowang after seeing him.

He wasn't certain if they were afraid of him or the Dragon Qi on his body.

Li Huowang sped up because this was not the Baiyu Capital. He reached the deep part of the stars and saw a chaotic, colorless jade plate suspended in the air.

The jade plate was suspended by something hiding in the depths of the darkness, wriggling and moving.

The mountain-sized jade plate bobbed from time to time. There were three large contorted words on it: Ox Tail Gate.

But this time, it was different. Li Huowang saw that the two serpents holding the gate were gone.

There were also several cracks on the jade plate. Something black was trying to take over the Baiyu Capital!

Li Huowang realized that even the Ox Tail Gate was affected. His heart sank.

He shuddered whenever he thought the Ox Tail Gate could shatter and spill unspeakable horrors into the mortal realm.

"Thankfully I'm still not too late! I'm here now!" He looked inside the jade plate and saw nothing but primal chaos.

Li Huowang wasn't sure what would happen if he entered now, but he was clear that he had to do it one way or another.

"Everyone, hang on! I'm here to help!" Li Huowang shouted into the jade plate to notify the Simings before running into the Ox Tail Gate.

Chapter 807 - Mental Image

“Where are we going?”

Li Huowang walked down an illuminated corridor, his hands handcuffed as a nurse escorted him. They were following behind Yi Donglai.

“Somewhere nice. You will know when you see it,” Yi Donglai said without turning around.

Li Huowang had been in the hospital for quite some time and his hair had grown to the point where it almost covered his eyes. Through his bangs, Li Huowang stared at the back of Yi Donglai’s head. I wonder what Siming he is. He should be a Siming, right? Why isn’t he helping me escape if he’s on my side?

They reached their destination while Li Huowang continued making assumptions.

The nurse stood guard at the entrance while Li Huowang followed Yi Donglai into the room.

It was a simple room with several stools, a table of sand, and several cupboards filled with random knickknacks.

“Wait, a sand table?”

Li Huowang looked at the square table. Blue boards surrounded the edge of the tables while yellow sand filled the top.

Li Huowang looked at the table and then checked the cupboards. He saw various little models placed in them.

There were miniature humans, animals, trees, flowers, grass, cars, boats, flying objects, stones, and monsters. Li Huowang had a sudden realization.

“Oh. I understand now. You want me to make a miniature scene? I will have to place those objects in the sand table as a way to express my inner world?”

“Oh, so you know about it? In that case, there’s no need to explain. You can start when you are ready.” Yi Donglai took out a key and unlocked Li Huowang’s handcuffs.

Li Huowang rubbed his wrists and frowned. “You trust me that much? Aren’t you afraid that I will go crazy and kill you?”

“Li Huowang, you still have the time to joke with me? You don’t seem desperate enough. Did you know that your mom cried for a very long time yesterday when she called me?”

Yi Donglai sat on the opposite side of the sand table after he saw Li Huowang’s bitter face. Li Huowang was also clenching his fist in pain.

“You are already a regular here. I won’t explain much to you either. If you want to get discharged quicker, you have to follow the treatment plan. There’s no other way here.”

Yi Donglai tapped the edge of the table with his pen and placed a small human figurine in the center of the sand table.

“Imagine that this is you. What would you do next? Don’t think too deeply and just follow your heart.”

Li Huowang looked at the figurine with a complicated look on his face. He stood silently as he contemplated before he approached the cupboards. He returned with an armful of figurines and models.

Li Huowang picked up the human figurine in the middle of the sand table and contemplated a little before placing it back. He then started placing different models and figurines onto the sand table.

Yi Donglai frowned as Li Huowang placed more and more figurines onto the sand table. What is he thinking? Why is his mental image so weird? He placed several figurines next to each other... But why are they planted upside down into the sand?

Li Huowang stopped. Yi Donglai stared at the sand table and was unsure of what to say.

Li Huowang had used the monster figurines the most, but they weren't standing on their legs. Instead, they were either planted upside down or clumped together in a group. Li Huowang also dug a large pit in the sand.

"These things... Are they related to you?" Yi Donglai pointed at the human figurines at the edge of the pits.

Li Huowang shook his head and said nothing.

Yi Donglai stared at Li Huowang before he extended his right arm and grabbed the little figurine that represented Li Huowang. He then hovered the figurine at the top of the monsters before making a gesture of tossing the human figurine into the pit that was being observed by the monsters.

Yi Donglai observed Li Huowang's face cautiously as he did that. He wanted to detect any changes in Li Huowang's expression.

He did the same gesture a few times before he noticed that Li Huowang was staring at him with a weirded-out gaze. "Are you alright? I've already set it up. I want to go back if there's nothing else to do."

"Wait, don't be hasty. We are just getting started." Yi Donglai placed the figurine representing Li Huowang into Li Huowang's hands before taking out all of the figurines in the miniature scene. He then reset the sand table. "Come, continue. I want to see what else you will make."

Li Huowang sighed and did it again.

The miniature scene remained largely unchanged, except for one difference—the figurine representing Li Huowang was now positioned closer to one of the upside-down monsters.

"If..." Yi Donglai pushed the Li Huowang figurine forward until it touched the monster. "What about this? Is it better?"

"It's better if you say that it's better. Do we need to continue?"

"Yes." Yi Donglai said, placing the figurine back into Li Huowang's palms.

Li Huowang soon finished the third miniature scene. This time, the little figurine was buried in the sand with two monsters at the side.

Yi Donglai somehow understood something and started taking notes. "Don't look at me. Continue. Don't stop until I tell you to."

Li Huowang continued to place the figurines. The little Li Huowang figurine was sometimes in the pit and sometimes at the edge, but the two monsters continued to be by his side.

On the twelfth iteration, the figurine was placed on the head of the monsters.

"Continue, don't stop." Yi Donglai placed the figurine back in Li Huowang's hands.

This time, Li Huowang placed the figurine on the board at the edge of the table as he stared at Yi Donglai.

Yi Donglai asked, "What is the meaning of this?"

"It means that I've had enough!" Li Huowang punched the sand table, and the monsters were sent flying. Even the little plastic figurine of himself fell to the ground.

"Yi Donglai, do you think it's fun to play with me? You only need the patient to arrange the miniscape once if you want to learn of their inner heart!"

"The rules are dead. We are alive. Everyone has a different method in doing this."

Li Huowang endured his frustration and started arranging the miniature scene again.

"Since you're already frustrated, we can stop here for today. Go back now. It should be time for your meal too."

Hearing this, Li Huowang stood up and approached the door.

He came to a halt at the doorway. "Yi Donglai, I will go along with your treatment plan, but I have one condition. If my mother calls you again, just tell her that my treatment is progressing smoothly and that I will be discharged soon."

Chapter 808 - Dream

Li Huowang wolfed down his meal inside the brightly-lit canteen of the White Tower Prison. He was still thinking about what had happened just now.

Shai Zi is smart. He knows that he can't fight against the Simings. He has no choice but to work with me to get what he needs. He's just someone that I can kill at any time now.

Li Huowang was distracted and choked on something while his face turned red.

He stood up and clenched his throat with his hands.

Someone suddenly patted his back forcefully, causing him to regurgitate what he had eaten just now.

Li Huowang braced himself and looked at the messy table. He saw a small plastic figurine amidst his vomit.

The plastic figurine laid there silently and stared at him with the beady eyes.

"This is..." Li Huowang wiped his mouth and picked up the plastic figurine. He inspected it under the LED light and realized that it was the very same plastic figurine that Yi Donglai had given to him at the sand table just now!

Li Huowang was trying to figure out why the figurine appeared in his food when he saw the figurine opening its mouth to shout at him. "Ji Zai...! Ji Zai...! Ji Zai, don't get distracted!"

"Ah!" Li Huowang sat up from his bed out of shock. He panted as cold sweat poured out from his body.

He glanced around and realized what had happened.

"It... it was just a dream?" Li Huowang sighed in relief and looked at the clock on the wall. It was only three in the morning.

Li Huowang frowned and massaged his temples. He grumbled and complained about Yi Donglai's treatment plan. It included the miniature scene, which subsequently gave him that nightmare.

"Ji Zai!" Li Huowang turned around and saw the little plastic figurine somehow glowing and standing atop his bedpost!

Bam! Li Huowang smashed his head to the wall and woke himself up from the intense pain.

He looked around him and found that the little figurine was not anywhere. He then realized that it was another dream. He had dreamed within a dream.

Thinking back about what had happened, Li Huowang pressed his head in pain and lay back down on the bed. "Shit. To think that the figurine could glow in the dark."

Li Huowang rolled around in the bed, but he couldn't sleep at all. He ended up staying up all night.

The breakfast at White Tower Prison today was plain congee and buns. Though the buns were made using old flour, they were still tasty and chewy.

Li Huowang, who was tired from the lack of sleep, took his plain breakfast and sat in a corner. "Damn that Yi Donglai. Why does he want me to go and play with a sand table? My mind's a mess now!"

Li Huowang stared at the other patients and thought to himself. I've already sent Shai Zi out. As long as he manages to speak with Zhao Lei, Qing Wanglai and the others should come rescue me soon. I pray that Qing Wanglai's contact will help me get out of here "legally." I hope they don't try to resort to a jailbreak.

Li Huowang didn't care that the Three Ancient Ones were using him as a pawn. He didn't mind as long as the trouble could be taken care of.

But... I think the Simings from the Dharma Sect could find me first. I hope that Qing Wanglai and the others aren't too late.

Li Huowang stared at his surroundings as he thought about it.

Even though he was back in this place, he still knew how to tread carefully.

He was thinking about what to do when someone approached him. "Why are you back here? What happened outside? Is everything alright?"

It was a familiar face. She was Zhao Ting, the girl with depression. It seemed like she was doing much better after receiving treatment. She even came to greet Li Huowang on her own accord.

Another youth followed her and greeted Li Huowang. It was Wei Shili, the man with mania. His fingers still twitched occasionally. "You are back? Why? Did you relapse?"

Behind Wei Shili was a large youth. It was the one that Li Huowang had helped before. "Brother, here. Apple."

Li Huowang frowned and was wary of them. Even though he knew them, he couldn't guarantee that they wouldn't harm him.

Li Huowang looked at the apple on the table and didn't take it. He still remembered how it felt to have a needle stabbing into his tongue.

"It's nothing. Just a small issue. I can get out again once I'm done with it." Li Huowang left after tossing them those words.

He had no desire to make friends there or involve them in his life, regardless of their opinion of him.

Li Huowang walked outside and stood behind the wire mesh. He looked outside and saw the eighteen-sided die that he had thrown out was gone. With a sense of satisfaction, he made his way back inside.

He was soon called by a nurse and escorted back to the room with the sand table. Yi Donglai had been waiting for him.

"Feeling better today? Let's finish this early so you can rest." Yi Donglai tapped the table with his pen. The little figurine was already in the middle of the sand table.

Li Huowang wanted to explain something to Yi Donglai, but he ultimately said, “I need to go to the toilet.”

Yi Donglai nodded. “Go. Third door on the left. Do you need tissues?”

Li Huowang ignored him and entered the toilet. He turned on the tap and splashed his face with cold water.

Who does Yi Donglai represent? Can I trust him? Can I explain everything that I’ve encountered to him?

Yi Donglai was different from Li Huowang. He had helped Li Huowang before and hadn't harmed him so far, but Li Huowang didn't want to leave his fate in someone else's hands.

More importantly, Li Huowang was afraid that Yi Donglai was part of the Laws. He had once angered the Laws and was punished severely because of that. He feared something grave would happen if he angered them again.

He kept thinking before deciding on continuing to observe the situation once more. He chose to wait for the Three Ancient Ones to come and rescue him.

Li Huowang calmed down and returned to the room. He sat down on the plastic stool and reached for the plastic figurine in the middle.

Five enormous fingers, even larger than mountains, exerted pressure on the figurine, causing space-time to warp and emitting a resounding boom.

“Alright, let's start.”

Chapter 809 - Baiyu Capital

“Where... where are they?” Li Huowang floated around in Baiyu Capital and stared at the empty space around him.

The various beings—the Buddhas, the Bodhisattvas, and the gods—were gone. The once-populated Baiyu Capital was surprisingly vast and quiet.

Li Huowang was here to help. He thought that the war in the Baiyu Capital was intense, but apparently, that was not the case. He couldn’t find the Simings at all.

He did find several dangerous things, but he wasn’t sure if they were the Simings trying to invade Baiyu Capital.

Tentacles wriggled around his body, pushing him around in the empty space to search for clues.

Li Huowang still recalled how fast the Dharma Sect was acting down there. This place shouldn’t have been this calm.

“Ji Zai! Come out! I’m here! Where are you? What’s going on?”

This wasn’t what he had expected. It was not what Xuan Pin had seen when he was out here. Xuan Pin wouldn’t have died if it was this calm up here.

“Ji Zai! Ba-Hui!” Li Huowang continued to shout, but there was no response.

“Was I mistaken? Should I head back?”

Li Huowang was thinking about that when he felt a mirror appearing below him. He touched the mirror gently.

In the next instant, he saw himself being reflected in the mirror. His reflection was staring at him through the lake at Cowheart Village! Li Huowang himself rarely goes there.

In the blink of an eye, he caught sight of his own reflection in the mirror. Surprisingly, his mirrored self was gazing back at him through the lake at Cowheart Village, a place he rarely visited.

“Ji Zai?” His reflection spoke from the other side of the mirror. Li Huowang was so startled that he let go of the mirror.

Li Huowang raised and looked at his trembling hands. “I’m Ji Zai? I become Ji Zai the moment I reach Baiyu Capital?”

Li Huowang was filled with confusion as he realized that he had transformed into the very Siming that he had once resented. The disbelief washed over him as he reached out to touch the mirror once more. The familiar voice echoed from the other side once again.

The Li Huowang on the other side was very angry. “Hey! Speak! Why aren’t you speaking?”

“The Natural Disaster this time is different! In the past, the sun disappeared and everything stopped decaying. But now, Death is gone!”

Li Huowang let go of the mirror and his reflection paused. His reflection was waiting for him to answer.

Li Huowang looked at the scene in front of him with shock. He had said the exact same words previously! He was talking to his past self now! He was Ji Zai!

The moment Li Huowang understood what was happening, more mirrors appeared below him. Each mirror represented the different times that Li Huowang had been trying to find Ji Zai.

Some of them had happened in the past, while others had yet to happen.

He stared at his past and future self before he realized something. Only the mortal realm had time—there was no concept of time here in the Baiyu Capital. In this place, the past was the future. There were no distinctions between them. “Simings... Beings without past nor futures?”

As Li Huowang vaguely remembered what Zhuge Yuan had written on his fan, the surrounding space changed again. The space around him became very cramped as more and more mirrors appeared.

Some of the scenes happened in the past, and others happened in the future. The Baiyu Capital was a place without the concept of time, so everything occurred within the present.

“Something is moving!” Li Huowang snarled and swung the tentacles covered in dragon scales around him. He barely missed the beings around him.

His surroundings slowly became more chaotic, and Li Huowang found what he was looking for—the Simings. They were back!

They were fighting. The Heavenly Daos clashed against each other. The Baiyu Capital was torn apart and then stitched back together, again and again.

Li Huowang was currently stuck in a small pocket dimension, and his surroundings became increasingly dangerous.

He hadn’t figured out why the Imperial Preceptor and the others blinded themselves before coming here, but now everything had become clear.

Those with eyesight would stare too far into the Baiyu Capital and would know too much to focus, just like what was happening to him now.

“AAAAAAH!” Li Huowang’s pupils darted around as he stared deep into the Baiyu Capital and saw the things in the past.

He witnessed the unfolding of the past and why Da Nuo went mad. He also observed the Heavenly Daos that shouldn’t have existed creeping in.

The Heavenly Daos were still here, but the Heavenly Daos that were not from this world had caused Da Nuo to go crazy. The world had gone crazy!

As more Simings appeared, more details stemming from different time frames forced themselves into Li Huowang's mind. They continued to push into Li Huowang, forcing out the things that were supposed to be his from inside his body.

Li Huowang dug out his eyeballs and felt his surroundings finally return to normal. He could finally focus on what he needed to do.

Despite losing his eyes, he retained other organs to perceive his surroundings, along with six dragon whiskers. Although his range of perception had diminished, he could still sense everything in his vicinity.

He could still hear the Simings' voices, smell them, and taste them.

He felt Ba-Hui! He felt Death! He even felt Rot! They were fighting against something sticky, a sticky Heavenly Dao that was foreign to the Baiyu Capital.

The Heavenly Daos were glued together, cycling out one after another. The sticky Heavenly Dao were laws that didn't exist in this world.

They were trying to consume Baiyu Capital. Li Huowang had lost his eyesight, so he wasn't sure what they looked like, but he was confident that they were just a large black mass.

Li Huowang felt that suns were colliding above him as the Simings fought.

Li Huowang wanted to help—he was Ji Zai, the Siming of Bewilderment, but he wasn't sure what he could do given the intensity of the fight.

“No, it shouldn't be like this!” Li Huowang ducked and weaved while attacking whenever a gap presented itself.

“Xuan Pin and the others were up here! They should've killed god Yu'er!”

He seized an opportunity and jumped out from the little pocket that he was in. He floated in the space and swung both arms forcefully. “Die!”

Nothing happened. Ji Zai was somehow thrown back. He didn’t have the qualifications to join in the fight.

If not for Dragon Qi on his body, even looking at them for a moment would have been lethal.

Chapter 810 - Heavenly Dao

“Why... why? Why are my powers useless here?”

Li Huowang persistently attempted to utilize his powers, both on the Simings and in the vacant space before him, yet nothing happened.

“Unless... Unless... Unless I don’t have the Heavenly Dao of Truth and Heavenly Dao of Lies?” Li Huowang looked down and saw the vast arrays of mirrors with his reflection once more.

Ji Zai started searching the mirrors for clues to see if anything similar had happened before. He suddenly lifted his hands, and a specific mirror floated towards him.

The Li Huowang inside the mirror was different, with a lotus root as his head.

“Is that so? Do you really think that I’m fine? How would you explain Bei Feng’s words, then? Why do I feel that you’ve instigated it?”

Ji Zai listened to Li Huowang and wasn’t sure how to respond. He had said those exact same words once, but he had forgotten what Ji Zai had answered.

He paused for a moment, gathering his thoughts before addressing Li Huowang in the mirror. “It’s because something happened, and we need your help.”

“Help? How may I help you? Why are you acting as if I were your Twisted One?”

Ji Zai wasn’t sure what to feel about himself when he heard his past self. “There’s no reason to differentiate between ourselves. I am you, and you are me. We have the same Heavenly Dao.”

Li Huowang rubbed his temples; flesh had started growing on his lotus root head. “The denouement has come. Can’t I even live in peace?”

Ji Zai looked up at the chaotic battlefield and said anxiously, “You chose this, and my choice is your choice, so you should not complain.”

“Fine. Tell me what to do.”

“The Sitting Oblivion Dao has been annihilated, so this is our golden opportunity. I need your help snatching away Yinyang Doulao’s Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies.”

Ji Zai needed them to join in the fight!

The Li Huowang in the mirror was outraged and almost laughed because of how absurd the suggestion was. “You need my help doing that? Pfft! I’m just an ordinary person. How can I snatch those away? How can I help you deal with a Siming with two Heavenly Daos? Also, aren’t you responsible for the Heavenly Dao of Bewilderment? Are your hands not full just taking care of your own Heavenly Dao? Why do you need more Heavenly Daos to the extent that you’ve actually considered robbing a Siming for it? I’m tired... I’m really tired. Can’t I rest for a few years?”

An intense pressure shot downwards. Even though Ji Zai was covered in the Dragon Qi, he was still thrown away from the impact.

Ji Zai, now currently upside down, quickly said to the mirror, “I’m not the one seeking trouble here; I am simply trying to protect myself. Don’t forget that helping me equals helping yourself. If anything were to happen to me, what had happened would change.”

“Protect?” Li Huowang was shocked. He stared at Ji Zai and asked nervously, “Did something happen at the Baiyu Capital? No, even if something had happened, how could that event be significant enough to harm you—a Siming?”

“You'll know the answer if you think about the reason why the Surveillance Bureau wanted the Sacred Mountain Ghost Eye. You should also think about why Shai Zi even came up with such a complicated plan to obtain the Dragon Vein. Something major is happening, and they can feel it. How about you? Don't tell me that you don't feel anything.”

“Is it god Yu'er?” Li Huowang asked seriously.

Ji Zai smiled bitterly when he sensed the chaos above him. “If it were just god Yu'er, it would be easy to handle.”

This was not about god Yu'er's singular Heavenly Dao—it was a war between Simings.

“Who could it be other than God Yu'er? Who are they, where did they come from, and what do they want?” Li Huowang repeatedly asked questions from the mirror, causing Ji Zai to grow increasingly irritated.

After conversing for a while, Ji Zai finally recalled what happened to the Li Huowang behind the mirror. This conversation took place when he had just defeated Shai Zi. At that time, his head had burst, and he had temporarily used a lotus root to substitute his head.

“I can't tell you that, as they'll immediately learn of your existence the moment you learn of their existence. In addition, even your future self did not tell your present self.”

Li Huowang was confused—he had no idea what Ji Zai was talking about.

“You want me to help you snatch Doulao's Heavenly Daos, but you haven't told me how to do that. What do I need to do?”

“You can probably do it through Bei Feng. Find Bei Feng and Doulao's Twisted One. Kill them and leave the rest to me,” said Ji Zai.

Ji Zai smashed the mirrors with both hands after having said that.

Moments later, the Li Huowang from the other side of the mirror shouted angrily.

“What?! You could have told me that earlier! The Surveillance Bureau just captured Bei Feng! They are never going to let me make contact with Bei Feng!”

Ji Zai slowly raised his head and felt the minute changes around him. He slowly felt that the beings above him weren't as large as previously thought. He felt his distance between them slowly becoming smaller.

“Truth and Lies... I've obtained both of the Heavenly Daos!” Ji Zai shouted out what was destined to happen as he raised both arms and pushed away the darkness in front of one of the Simings.

A lot of information flowed into him the moment he touched it. All of the Simings were currently connected by an umbilical cord and acted as one! Each of them shared each other's Heavenly Daos! That was how all of them could feel pain, truth, and falsehoods.

They were now one, and they were stuck together in the Baiyu Capital. The umbilical cord was the Dao of Fusion! The connected Simings acting as one were Da Nuo!

“Do you think this is better?” Yi Donglai frowned and observed the sand table.

Several figurines were tied together into a ball with white yarn. The ball of figurines was placed in the middle of the sand, and the little figurine representing Li Huowang was also placed in the ball.

There was another ball in front of this ball. Various monster figurines were tied together with a black yarn.

Yi Donglai pushed his glasses up and looked at the silent Li Huowang. “And then? What happened? Why do you think you are one of them?”

Li Huowang coughed gently and didn't answer. He used his right hand to pick up the ball of figurines tied together with the white yarn.

He pondered shortly before winding up his arm and throwing the ball towards the black ball on the sand table.

Both balls collided, and their yarns snapped. Various figurines and monster figurines flew high up into the air.

Chapter 811 - Siming

Li Huowang was dressed in a blue and white striped hospital gown. He sat on a bench in the exercise yard and stared silently at the barbed wire fence in the distance. He was waiting for Shai Zi to contact Doulao.

At that moment, someone next to him gently bumped into him and passed him a small piece of paper.

Li Huowang reached out and unfolded the crumpled note. He read the contents as a slight smile appeared on his lips. "Has it finally arrived?"

Just then, Li Huowang saw his black motorcycle flash by on the overpass in the distance.

"What are you looking at? Why can't I see it?" A bald patient leaned over and asked Li Huowang in confusion.

Li Huowang sneered. "Hmph! You're not a Siming, so of course you can't see it."

"Bed number 13! Come here! Dr. Yi is looking for you!"

Li Huowang stood up and walked toward the sandplay therapy room. Yi Donglai was already waiting there.

"Li Huowang, based on my observations of your mental state these past few days, I must say your issues are quite serious." Yi Donglai adjusted his glasses. "Have you really not experienced any hallucinations recently?"

"No." Li Huowang sat back down in front of the sand table.

"You should reconsider it. Did you take your medication today? Maybe you have experienced them but didn't realize it?"

Li Huowang looked at the empty sand table, searching for something. "Where's the little figurine?"

"No, today we're doing something different. Those figures don't represent you.” Yi Donglai pointed his pen at the wall of models. “Today, you decide which model represents you. Whatever you choose will be you.”

Li Huowang glanced at the door, walked over to the model cabinet, and began to choose.

First, he picked up a ferocious monster, then a human figure. He threaded a rope through them and bound them tightly, back to back.

Suddenly, he thought of something. He reached into the drawer on the left, then took out two magnets stuck together and tied them together.

The rope rose high and made Ji Zai fly off the ground. Fortunately, the other Simings pulled it back, preventing it from flying away.

“Get away!” Ji Zai changed his opponents' Truths and Falsehoods. However, no matter how many times he altered them to be falsehoods, they always returned with their bodies spread from various angles. Their Heavenly Dao let them metamorphose!

No contact was needed. Just knowing of its existence was enough to become part of it.

This Heavenly Dao was too strange, clearly not originating from the Baiyu Capital. It was from outside, and there were sixteen others like it.

Voices traveled through the rope into Li Huowang's ears. “You need eyes to see the Five Purities. Heaven and Earth are born together. Just stripping away their shells is useless. You need to see their hearts.”

“Eyes? I'm blind now! How the hell am I supposed to have eyes?!” Li Huowang removed the extra metamorphosed parts of his body and shouted, “Who will give me eyes? I need to see them!”

“Eyes! The Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies are not enough! I still need eyes!” Li Huowang shouted with all his might.

“You have eyes! They’re with you. Find them carefully!”

“I don’t have them!” Li Huowang frantically searched for mirrors while he dodged the attacks. No matter how strange his reflections were, he never found the eyes he wanted.

“You do! Look closely, don’t just focus on one side.”

Li Huowang quickly altered reality and evaded the enemy’s attacks. He suddenly lifted his body. “Give me eyes!”

His body shuddered, and a slight smile appeared on his lips. He saw them—the eyes had arrived.

Li Huowang put down the model he was holding. “I want to go to the bathroom,”

Yi Donglai nodded. “Alright. Go ahead.”

At that moment, a phone call came in, which Yi Donglai quickly answered. Soon, a furious expression appeared on his face.

“What did you say? Transfer hospitals now? Do you have any idea how unwell this guy is right now?”

“Don’t tell me about these. His treatment has just started, so transferring is absolutely impossible.

“No matter who you send, it’s not happening! Don’t forget that the White Tower Hospital isn’t private!”

After he hung up the phone, Yi Donglai sat back down at the sand table. He noticed a drop of blood on the ground.

He frowned, walked to the model cabinet, and looked at the chaotic model Li Huowang had assembled. A few drops of blood had stained the table.

“What’s going on? Did Li Huowang cut himself on the model?” He used his pen to straighten the peculiar model.

Suddenly, on the back of the model, a terrifyingly bloodshot eyeball appeared and stared at Yi Donglai!

The eyeball had just been gouged out—it was Li Huowang’s left eye! At that moment, Li Huowang’s left eye was tightly bound to the model with a rope!

Just a moment ago, he had gouged out his own eye!

Yi Donglai felt a chill run down his spine. He immediately turned and rushed outside. “Orderlies!”

As he left, the eyeball on the model slowly slid down from the model to the edge of the table, then toward the ground. Upon reaching a lower point, numerous tendrils swiftly attached themselves to the flesh behind the eye, seamlessly intertwining them together.

“Father! Do you see it coming?” Amidst the chaos, Li Sui held up the eyeball and asked loudly.

“I... I can see! I can finally see!” Li Huowang gazed at them in the distance and made out even more details.

The lost divisions had not vanished. They were in their bodies, twisted into something more suited to them—their three souls and seven spirits!

With these divisions, they could come to the Baiyu Capital. Those missing divisions had been transformed into shells.

“Finally.....!” Li Huowang took a deep breath and raised his hands toward a division in the distance.

The missing divisions were returning to their rightful places. Li Huowang intended to forcibly take their three souls and seven spirits away!

Rip! One of their shells shattered. It vanished without its three souls and seven spirits, never to reappear in Baiyu Capital.

Li Huowang saw that it was effective, so he immediately seized the opportunity and continued his actions.

However, it was apparent that they did not plan to stand by and let Li Huowang attack. Some things overlapped with each other, and it would take Li Huowang a long time to remove their shells. The situation seemed to reach a stalemate once again.

Chapter 812 - Dragon Qi

This time, Ji Zai was not fighting alone. When the other Simings saw his movements, they immediately came to help.

The umbilical cords behind him pulsed continuously, which caused Li Huowang's body to grow larger and more deformed.

However, Li Huowang soon noticed a mirror appear out of nowhere before him. As he grew stronger, the mirror also grew stronger.

“What kind of Heavenly Dao is this?!”

As Li Huowang shouted, he saw his reflection in the mirror reach into its mouth and pull Li Sui out. Li Sui's tentacles twisted continuously, but it was useless.

“How dare you touch my daughter!” Li Huowang squeezed with both hands and caused the opponent's body to flicker like a faulty screen.

In the end, they still failed. The scales on Li Sui's body shone with a golden light, and the reflection of Li Huowang in the mirror released its grip.

The opponent's actions made Li Huowang realize their weakness. Their Heavenly Dao was ineffective against Dragon Qi!

Li Huowang charged forward without hesitation. With the Dragon Qi coursing through him, he slammed into them.

He watched the opponent's body fall apart from the impact, and a smile appeared on Li Huowang's face. The advantage was theirs, and they were going to win! The entanglement between different Heavenly Daos was not crucial—the key was the Dragon Qi from a mortal!

As Li Huowang thought this, the entire Baiyu Capital began to crack. Li Sui raised the eyeball high and moved it up and down to see what was outside the cracked Baiyu Capital.

Li Huowang could only see one side of it, but there was clearly more than just one side. He heard strange sounds. “Ancient moss is three feet thick, stepping on it feels like thin cotton... Stooping out from beneath it, touching the gas, mushrooms are fresh... The old sandalwood trees twist together in momentum... Ride a phoenix to pluck its flowers... your touch will turn into ancient smoke...”

Li Huowang suddenly understood what it was—a Greater Siming.

Li Huowang also finally understood that everything before was just a prelude to bring this thing into the Baiyu Capital. This thing was the key. It must not be allowed to come over!

Li Huowang rushed forward recklessly and pulled on either side with his hands, desperately trying to close the cracked Baiyu Capital.

However, no matter how hard Li Huowang tried, the crack continued to widen.

From behind, a mass of blackness rapidly approached him to try to stop him. However, some Simings on his side rushed over to block them.

Li Huowang’s body was stretched longer and longer like a rope. No matter how long he stretched, he refused to let go.

“Dragon Qi!” A familiar voice sounded in his ear. It was Shai Zi, who drifted past Li Huowang’s eyeball like a speck of dust.

The words Shai Zi was about to say appeared in Li Huowang’s mind. Use Dragon Qi to sew it up! Use your Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies along with your flesh and blood to mend the sky!

Li Huowang’s flesh rapidly stitched up the Baiyu Capital, and the crack was continuously healing. Just as it was about to fully recover, it stopped. The Dragon Qi was insufficient.

“Father, take this! It’s from my body,” A surge of Dragon Qi flowed into Li Huowang’s body and helped the cracked Baiyu Capital to recover a little.

However, Li Sui's form began to waver as she gave away the Dragon Qi from her body. Everything about her was being torn apart by the Baiyu Capital, and she was about to die.

"Wait... wait!" Li Huowang cried out in despair. He wanted to push the Dragon Qi back, but Li Sui had already left his body.

"Father, I'm sorry. I've always been so useless. I could only help this little. If only I could've done more for you."

"Li Sui, come back!" Li Huowang shouted in agony while Li Sui's body gradually began to disintegrate. It finally collapsed powerlessly and fell downward.

"Ahhh!" The crack in the Baiyu Capital rapidly healed with Li Huowang's flesh and blood and stitched it together.

However, a slight pulse from the other side caused the healed gap to start to tear open again.

Li Huowang thought of his daughter and felt as if his heart was being gouged with knives. As his body cracked, extreme pain filled his entire being. The power of Ba-Hui surged through the umbilical cords and caused his body to swell even more.

And yet, it was still not enough. Mending the Baiyu Capital would require more Dragon Qi.

At this critical moment, Li Huowang sensed a dense Dragon Qi.

He looked down and saw a six-clawed golden dragon and a group of mutated dragon people emerge from the darkness. It was Xuan Pin!

They twisted and turned amidst the chaos, as though they were searching for something.

"I'm here!" Li Huowang shouted. Xuan Pin and the others found their direction and crashed directly into Li Huowang's body.

A massive influx of Dragon Qi poured into Li Huowang, and his Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies instantly had a medium. He quickly stitched the two sides together and pushed forcefully, which caused the cracked Baiyu Capital to instantly close up.

Once the Baiyu Capital was without cracks, Li Huowang's body fell along with everything inside him.

He did not disappear, but he saw that his eyes and Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies were all above him. That was Ji Zai, who was still fighting afterward.

Thump! Li Huowang slammed heavily into the cold seawater from a great height.

This might have been perilous for other mortals, but not for Li Huowang.

After some time, he emerged from the water and made his way to the shore. His mouth hung open as he let out a desperate, lifeless howl. Tears and saliva mixed together, cascading down and dripping continuously to the ground.

Li Sui was dead. The evil being that had followed him for so long was gone.

He had initially kept this being by his side to avoid obstacles. Somewhere along the way, they had developed a bond akin to family ties. Yet now, it was gone.

"Are you okay? What happened?" A hand reached over to help Li Huowang up.

Li Huowang heard the voice, looked up excitedly, and saw Xuan Pin's familiar face.

"Not bad at all, truly amazing. Because of you, we finally won this time."

"Perhaps... maybe...." Li Huowang suddenly pounced on Xuan Pin and forcefully tore off his red Daoist robes.

A handsome young man's face appeared before Li Huowang, one he had never seen before.

The young man looked at Li Huowang's emotional face with a hint of bitterness.

"Actually, I didn't want this body either. 160 years ago, when I fell from the sky, I accidentally crushed him to death.”

As Xuan Pin spoke, his face began to change. It eventually returned to the cute girl’s appearance from before, except her demeanor was now like that of a dignified lady rather than the young girl Li Sui once was.

Xuan Pin awkwardly reached out and patted Li Huowang on the shoulder, who stood there in a daze.

“It’s been so long since I called you that, I suddenly find it hard to say. Uh... Father, are you okay?”

“I wanted to find you when I fell from above, but I realized there was no sun or moon in the sky. Since I fell more than a hundred years ago, I had to wait for you to return.

“I actually wanted to reunite with you sooner, but then I remembered that you lacked Dragon Qi before I came down, so I thought of a way to send—”

Before Xuan Pin could finish speaking, Li Huowang pounced forward and hugged her tightly in his arms.

Chapter 813 - Death

Dong, dong, dong! The sound of war drums accompanied by howling wind kept resounding. With the drumbeats, the massive formation of soldiers advanced step by step.

As the drumbeats quickened, their speed also increased. Everyone exhaled and inhaled in unison as if tens of thousands of soldiers moved as one body.

Hundreds of followers of the Dharma Sect stood opposite them. They pulled gigantic statues of Buddha and waved towering soul banners as they surged toward them like wild beasts.

When the two sides clashed, the battlefield's center became a grinding stone of flesh and blood, continuously devouring everything and spitting out fragments and remains. Most importantly, these remains were still alive.

When battles no longer resulted in death, everything inevitably became more extreme.

The Dharma Sect followers with stone statues inserted in their heads chanted as they charged at rows of White Lotus followers.

Their bodies were already broken, but they stood up again and endured the pain through stitches and the purple talismans on their foreheads.

Their hands were gone, replaced by rusted blades tied to their bones. They had completely transformed into beasts and livestock.

The Grand Witch said that the enemy caused all their pain. As long as they killed them, Sir Arrogant Stone would mercifully grant everyone peace.

They didn't have much power, but their sheer numbers were overwhelming. They would keep getting back up unless they were torn into pieces.

Amidst the blood and gore, the two sides fought for days and nights until they were completely drained of strength.

At that point, each person was filled with despair and numbness, moving purely on instinct.

Everyone dragged their exhausted bodies and slowly left the decaying battlefield. They forced themselves to make it back to their lines before finally succumbing to exhaustion, collapsing into a heap.

Bai Lingmiao, covered in blood and grime, staggered through the battlefield. They wouldn't die, and once they regained their strength, they would stand up again.

Bai Lingmiao had already exhausted all her tears two days ago. She was extremely tired and could only let the White Lotus followers, who still had a little strength, return to the halls to sleep.

Her mind was buzzing as if it was no longer her own. Everything felt too tragic.

She looked at the distant, pulsating ground of flesh. Her heart was devoid of any fluctuations now. She had experienced far too much during this time.

Just then, a group of people in black robes quietly walked through the crowd. They moved as silently as possible to avoid waking anyone. They crouched by each person and left a trace of red behind.

Soon, they reached Bai Lingmiao and placed the same red traces beside her and the people behind her. The teachings of Ao Jing shall endure, and pain shall persist.

Bai Lingmiao picked it in her hands and realized that the trace of red was the Profound Records.

The followers of Ao Jing Sect were attempting to distribute the Profound Records to everyone, in preparation for an even more ruthless battlefield.

Bai Lingmiao's lips trembled slightly. She wanted to say something but ultimately kept quiet.

If the pain-inducing Profound Records could bring an end to everything sooner, she had no right to stop what was happening.

A disheveled young man rushed from among the corpses to Bai Lingmiao, then knelt and continuously bowed to her. "Saintess, please help my grandfather! I'm begging you!"

Bai Lingmiao gently lifted him up and followed him to the nearby tents.

Many people lay in disorder inside the tents. They wore no armor and weren't soldiers. These were laborers who fell to the ground like logs.

Since they wouldn't die of sickness or cold now, they could sleep anywhere they wanted.

After walking a while, the young man suddenly turned and rushed toward a black humanoid mass by the gutter.

As the black mass buzzed and dispersed, Bai Lingmiao realized it was a living person who was previously covered by a thick layer of flies.

It was an old man covered in age spots. His head was sunken, his belly was leaking, and a hole in his temple had white maggots crawling within.

In ordinary times, he would've died long ago. Now, he remained alive and coughed with all his strength. The itch in his throat did not ease no matter how much he coughed.

The young man wiped his tears. "Saintess, please help my grandfather! He's so tired, but he can't sleep. He's so hungry, but he can't eat. Whatever he eats leaks out."

Bai Lingmiao looked at the intestines that had slipped into the gutter.

Bai Lingmiao realized she couldn't do anything now that death was gone, even if she wanted to. The old man was old, and he should have died of old age long ago.

This was his fate, and no divine power she wielded could reverse it.

Bai Lingmiao sat by the old man and watched his pain with compassion. She silently recited the White Lotus Sutra in her heart.

She knew it was useless, but it was the only thing she could do at this moment.

As Bai Lingmiao's heart filled with compassion, the suffering old man gradually stopped moving under everyone's shocked gazes.

Soon, black flies swarmed and crawled into the old man's mouth.

"Dead? Really dead? The Saintess can kill! The Heavenly Mater has manifested!"

"Really dead! Finally! I can die too!"

Hope gradually appeared in everyone's eyes and seemed to spread outwards.

The crowd began to gather around Bai Lingmiao, their eyes filled with anticipation and reverence as they kowtowed towards her.

"I..." Bai Lingmiao looked at her hands in shock. "Has the Heavenly Dao of Death returned?"

When she looked at the kneeling half-body before her, Bai Lingmiao quickly realized that the Heavenly Dao of Death had not returned. She had merely gained the power to grant death.

Bai Lingmiao understood what it meant. There was death on their side but not on the enemy's side, providing a massive boost in morale! Pain was no longer eternal—they could die whenever they wanted.

As the news of the White Lotus followers spread, everyone's spirits lifted despite their extreme exhaustion.

More people witnessed Bai Lingmiao granting the release of death to those who should have passed away long ago.

The once lifeless camp buzzed with vitality.

Without death, there was no life. Only death could bring life.

Chapter 814 - Perish

After a brief rest, the drum sounds resumed, and the flesh mill started turning once again. But this time, it was completely different from before.

On Bai Lingmiao's side, everyone was extremely excited, attempting to receive fatal injuries so they could die with the Saintess's blessing.

A group of chicken-feet men wearing veils on their faces noticed something was amiss. They attempted to surround Bai Lingmiao.

The White Lotus followers were not to be underestimated. They quickly formed an array with Bai Lingmiao at the center.

Meanwhile, on the other side, something began to bulge beneath the ground of flesh, stealthily moving toward Bai Lingmiao.

Before it could get closer, a streak of red descended from the sky and slammed into the bulge. Foul-smelling blood quickly seeped out of the soil with a squelch.

Li Huowang stepped forward and crushed a head beneath him. He wiped the blood off his face with his hand. "I made it in time!"

When they saw him, the nearby Dharma Sect followers roared in anger. They changed direction and rushed toward Li Huowang.

"Ha!" Li Huowang opened his arms and pushed outward. Within several meters centered around him, the Dharma Sect followers were crushed into an indistinguishable pulp of flesh and blood.

After clearing the area, Li Huowang found himself facing three Grand Witches. Above them, blood started dripping incessantly.

Li Huowang looked at them and laughed happily. "You are all finished!"

The next moment, Li Sui appeared behind them. The father and daughter simultaneously exerted their strength and charged toward the three Grand Witches.

Just as they collided, a low rumble of thunder echoed from the sky. Boom! Boom! Boom!

Li Huowang twisted his throttle sharply and rode his motorcycle high over a pile of debris. He landed heavily on Orange Isle's unfinished asphalt road.

Dark red blood seeped through the cracks in his helmet and dripped down his bulletproof vest to the ground.

Deep in Orange Isle, he heard gunshots and engine noises. Soon, he saw the enemy—the projections of the foreign Simings! They were engaged in combat!

Li Huowang pulled out a military knife and slashed it forcefully into the motorcycle's front. "It's time to cut off their retreat and beat them!"

His motorcycle hummed as its speed approached the limit of 320.

Someone emerged from the side and attempted to block him. Li Huowang twisted the throttle, making his motorcycle collide with them and directly rip them into two.

Amidst the rain of blood, he charged into the enemy like a bowling ball and caused a storm of flesh and blood.

The enemy clearly didn't expect Li Huowang to suddenly join the fray, causing chaos. They had assumed he was stuck in the psychiatric hospital.

Li Huowang braved the hail of bullets and broke through to Wu Qi's RV. He leaned against the vehicle. "I'm here to help you!"

"Cut the crap! The situation is dire! I don't know what's going on with these guys. They've gone mad!" Chen Hongyu replied grimly.

"Where's the Three Pure Ones?" Li Huowang wiped the blood off his helmet and asked the others.

“Who?”

“Qing Wanglai.”

“He said he went to find you! But since you came back, who knows where he went!” Zhao Lei said with a grimace.

Li Huowang glanced at the encirclement in the distance and the enemies hiding behind the car cover, quickly making up his mind.

Without hesitation, Li Huowang climbed onto Wu Qi’s RV and quickly turned the steering wheel to charge toward the encirclement ahead. He stepped firmly on the accelerator, though all the glass was shattered.

The vehicle was under constant fire, causing the tires to burst and the hood to smoke and catch fire.

Boom! The RV slammed into their black car and caused the vehicle to explode, sending flames soaring into the sky.

While everyone ran clear from the raging flames, Li Huowang, who was currently engulfed in the fire, charged out of the blaze with twin knives and directly sliced off an enemy’s head.

Li Huowang was going to rush toward the next person, but a towering figure appeared before him.

He raised his foot and kicked hard at Li Huowang’s stomach, causing him to slam against the charred car frame.

“What the heck kind of projection are you?!” Li Huowang yelled angrily. He endured the sharp pain in his abdomen and charged with his knife toward the figure.

The opponent sprayed Li Huowang’s chest with a machine gun, and more blood seeped from the cracks of his helmet.

Li Huowang staggered and fell, but he flung the dagger forcefully, embedding it into the opponent’s chest.

“Come on! Again!” Li Huowang struggled to stand and looked at the corpses on the ground. The others finally began to retreat, gradually fading into the darkness of the unfinished buildings.

“Hahaha! We won! You’ll never take over our world!” Li Huowang laughed out loud.

“Yeah, yeah, you won, you won.” Two burly orderlies, with a cigarette in each of their mouths, walked past the charred car frames and bullet-ridden walls. They carried a wheeled stretcher to Li Huowang’s side.

“It’s New Year’s. Stop running around and make us search everywhere,” they complained as they lifted Li Huowang onto the stretcher, firmly tied him, and then carried him toward the distant ambulance.

Li Huowang was momentarily stunned, but then he smiled.

As the Simings over there vanished, their segments of history vanished, just like Doulao did before.

This meant that his side had truly won this time!

“What did you win? If you mean pulling your eye out and scaring me, then you really won,” Yi Donglai said helplessly.

“Li Huowang, that’s your eye! Did you ever think about what that means? You’ll only have one eye from now on. What were you thinking?!”

At this moment, Li Huowang was in good spirits. “Heh heh... you wouldn’t understand.”

He turned his gaze toward the sand table before him. The sand table was filled with people. Their voices annoyed Li Huowang.

“Shut up!” He waved his hand and toppled the models on the sand table.

Suddenly, the chaotic battlefield fell silent. All the Dharma Sect followers stopped in their tracks, looking confused.

The next moment, a gentle breeze blew by. All the Dharma Sect followers regardless of rank, from the Grand Witches to the lowest novices, simultaneously leaned back and fell straight to the ground.

In the entire Nanping, including An Xi, occupied by the Dharma Sect, all the followers lay flat on the ground silently.

The Li Kingdom had fallen.

Chapter 815 - Won

“We won?” Li Huowang stood in place and stared blankly at the Dharma Sect followers lying scattered on the ground.

He walked over and checked someone's pulse. He was shocked to find that the person wasn't breathing at all. They were all dead.

There was a loud clattering noise as the earth crumbled. The enormous Buddha statue, which had been dragged to the center of the battlefield by the followers of the Dharma Sect, started to crack and eventually crumbled into scattered fragments.

“We won, we won!” Excited shouts spread endlessly like a tsunami that reached everyone's ears.

The cries of excitement echoed through the sky, filled with exhilaration. They lost themselves in ecstasy as they pounded the ground with their fists.

They had won. Their enemies had been defeated, and the fear of a dreadful destiny akin to that of the Great Qi no longer burdened their hearts.

Many people even tossed their weapons high into the sky. If death hadn't disappeared, that alone would have killed many people.

“We've won... finally won...” Li Huowang smiled as he glanced around, and his gaze finally settled on Xuan Pin.

“Li Sui, how did I do as a tall guy?”

Li Sui gently nodded. She approached Li Huowang, reached out to open his abdomen, and crawled inside. “Father, let's go home.”

“Yeah! Go home!” Li Huowang nodded. He felt elated as he headed off the battlefield.

“It seems we really won up above. Only then could we win so easily down here!”

The corners of Li Huowang's mouth lifted slightly as he listened to the cheers around. "Li Sui, what do you think I should do next?"

Li Sui didn't answer. She just extended two tentacles from his navel, wrapping them around Li Huowang's left hand and gently shaking it.

Li Huowang approached a group of White Lotus Sect devotees who were zealously kneeling on the ground and kowtowing toward Bai Lingmiao amidst the crowd. They were calling for the manifestation of the Heavenly Mater.

"Miaomiao! We won! Let's go home!" Li Huowang shouted.

Bai Lingmiao smiled and shook her head slightly among the dense crowd of White Lotus believers. She discreetly pointed at the believers around her.

"Okay!" Li Huowang smiled and nodded, then pointed towards Cowheart Village and strode towards that direction.

Just as he stepped off the battlefield, he saw Huangfu Tiangang, the Imperial Preceptor of Great Liang, flash by, standing on a sword in the sky. "Where is Xuan Pin?! His Majesty commands Xuan Pin to return to the Great Liang immediately!"

Li Huowang paused for a moment before finally reaching out to gently pat his abdomen. "Go on."

Suisui had grown up and now had her own matters to attend to. Li Huowang's abdomen slowly opened and her dense tentacles poured out.

Li Huowang took off his red Daoist robe and draped it over Li Sui's sticky body. Li Sui nodded at him, then quickly retracted her body into the earth and vanished completely.

Li Huowang looked at the ground where Li Sui had vanished, then smiled again. He happily turned his head to shout at the monk beside him. "Monk! Did you see that? We won! We really won!"

The monk also nodded vigorously. "Yes! Daoist! You won and saved many people, which is a great deed! You can become a Buddha now!”

Jin Shanzhao also dragged his broken body over and muttered excitedly to Li Huowang.

“We won! Hahaha!” Qiu Chibao held her rotten child and laughed hysterically as she circled Li Huowang.

“Hmph .” Peng Longteng watched the farce unfold atop her horse as she slowly followed along.

Li Huowang left the bustling scene with the company of these illusions.

“Daoist? Is it really you? Daoist?” A voice that was both familiar and unfamiliar sounded behind Li Huowang.

Li Huowang paused. He slowly turned around and saw an old monk smiling at him.

It was the monk—the one who always wanted to do good deeds.

Li Huowang turned his head to look at the illusion beside him, which looked exactly like the old monk.

“Daoist, long time no see! I didn’t expect you to come too. Did you come to help with the fight?” The monk held his prayer beads and asked Li Huowang curiously.

Li Huowang glanced between the two monks and finally stared wide-eyed at the real one. “You’re not dead?”

“Huh? What are you talking about? Of course I’m not dead,” the monk said matter-of-factly. The illusion of the monk began to flicker.

“Wasn’t I working at Righteous Monastery before? After you left, I kept moving stones there, all the way until now.

“Then there was a war, and I heard I could do good deeds, so I came to help with the masters. I did a lot of work along the way, but I can’t tell if they’re considered good deeds.”

“You’re still alive?” Li Huowang slowly turned his head and looked at the illusion of the identical monk beside him. “If he’s still alive, then who are you? Who are all of you?"

Li Huowang's mind was in chaos. He had always believed these illusions were the souls he kept around with the power of his Strayed One just before they died.

He had believed this for so long, yet now he realized that he was wrong.

The illusionary monk glanced at the real monk, who was identical to himself. He looked at Li Huowang with a complicated expression. "Daoist, if he's the real monk, then we're probably all fake."

Jin Shanzhao and Peng Longteng also began to flicker alongside him.

"Nonsense!" Peng Longteng jumped off her horse and approached Li Huowang. "Can't you see? We're not the original us. We're just parts of you! You're not cultivating the 'Truth.' You're just cultivating 'Lies'!"

These words struck Li Huowang like a thunderbolt. Peng Longteng, Jin Shanzhao, and the monk all quickly became transparent.

After seeing this many times, the illusionary monk walked up to Li Huowang as if he knew his own ending. "Daoist, I'm sorry. I couldn't help you much during this time. I was only able to recite 'Amitabha.'

"Still, I think that even if it's not useful, you should always have a good heart. Otherwise, how can you become a Buddha?" the monk said, then completely vanished.

Next was Jin Shanzhao. He said nothing but reached out and gave Li Huowang a thumbs-up as he smiled happily.

Jin Shanzhao was about to say something, but Peng Longteng bumped into him and caused his body to scatter like smoke.

"Kid, you're a man. I tried to kill you before, but you ended up killing me, which is fair. Our debt is settled."

Li Huowang stood there in a daze as he watched the illusions around him disappear one by one. Finally, only Qiu Chibao remained as she danced crazily with her child.

"This...." Li Huowang looked at the empty surroundings while a flood of distress suddenly surged into his heart.

The self-deception that he had always believed in had finally crumbled.

Li Huowang staggered backward with a twisted expression. The monk hurried to support him, only to be pushed away by Li Huowang. "Shai Zi, what do you mean by this?!"

Somebody gently tapped on the sounder of the monk, and he immediately froze. The one who tapped him had an eighteen-sided die on his head.

"Nothing. I helped you, and so naturally, you should help me. I couldn't come down from above, so I used your deception to come down. You can't go back on your word."

"What the hell do you want?!"

Li Huowang looked at Shai Zi with a gaze that could kill. As he stared, Shai Zi's body gradually shrank.

"For now, I want nothing. I just want to stay alive."

Shai Zi snapped his fingers, and he stopped shrinking.

"Li Huowang, you surprised me. I originally thought the sky would collapse, but you held it up.

"When I took the Dragon Vein, I had just been thinking of picking up the pieces after the sky cracked. As expected of Ji Zai's Twisted One, everything is uncertain with you around.

"Don't worry, you've already patched the sky, so I don't need to work against you. Isn't that right, Xuan Pin?"

The red-robed Xuan Pin walked between Li Huowang and Shai Zi. She glanced at Shai Zi and then reached out with six hands to embrace and support Li Huowang. She gently whispered to him as she slowly retreated.

Shai Zi turned around to look at Huangfu Tiangang, who had suddenly appeared. He reached into his bosom, pulled out a fortune mask, and handed it over.

Huangfu Tiangang harrumphed, his face ashen. He waved his sleeve and turned to leave.

“Wait!” Shai Zi reached for his eighteen-sided die head, took out a die with six sides, and offered it again to Huangfu Tiangang.

This time, Huangfu Tiangang didn’t leave. He hesitated for a moment before reaching out to accept it.

It was the twelfth lunar month. On the 24th, they dusted and cleaned the house. On the 25th, they ground tofu, then slaughtered pigs and cut meat on the 26th. On the 27th, they slaughtered chickens and went to the market. On the 28th, they made rice cakes and steamed buns, then pasted window decorations.

With red paper decorations on the windows, the air filled with the sweet scent of snacks. After the heavy snow, the flavor of the New Year had arrived in Cowheart Village.

It wasn’t just Cowheart Village. The Great Liang, Hou Shu, Qing Qiu, and Si Qi also tried to be as lively as possible. It was as though they wanted to wash away the past sorrows with the joy of the New Year.

Li Huowang stood on the second floor of the Bai family courtyard, watching smiling children run freely in the snow.

The room was cold, and the stove was not lit. He stood there as though waiting for something and stayed there until nightfall. The white snow in the air slowly fell and landed on his black hair, forming a thin layer.

Li Huowang caught sight of the dazzling fireworks illuminating the sky above the distant wall, while the White Lotus flags swayed gracefully between the houses. The corners of his mouth slowly lifted.

Chapter 816 - Li Sui

“Father! Father, where are you?” Li Sui shouted in panic as she looked around at the unfamiliar forest. The leaves were completely red. She had never come here with her father before, so she didn’t know where she was.

This was the first time she had been genuinely separated from Li Huowang. Most of her tentacles were already broken, and her body had been torn apart. She was both afraid and in pain.

She looked down and saw that she was crushing a young man. The impact from her fall had crushed him, and he was vomiting blood. She had seen him before. It was the same young man who talked to her before she left.

Li Sui didn’t have the time to ponder why he was here. In the end, she confirmed that he was dead and then ate his organs. Afterward, she wore his skin to recover her frail body.

She felt her body slowly getting better thanks to the nourishment from her food, but her situation was still perilous.

She looked up and saw the hole in the sky had been grafted over. She couldn’t go back even if she wanted to. Without Dragon Qi, she would be dead when she flew up there.

She called for help, but no one came to her rescue. Li Sui had no choice but to cheer herself up. “It’s alright. Father is busy up there. He will come down soon once he’s done. I can wait for him here.”

Li Sui pushed her eyeballs out of her eye sockets and raised them high in the air to look at the sky. She stared at the sky for an entire day, but she still didn’t see Li Huowang falling from the sky.

Although she may have been naive, she was smart enough to realize that something was amiss.

“Unless...” As Li Sui worried, she remembered what Li Huowang was going through before she fell down.

Li Sui regained her motivation and started running down a dirt path. “My father said he needs Dragon Qi! I need to go and help him obtain some!”

“The big Emperor has Dragon Qi. I need to find him and ask him to send Dragon Qi to my father!” Li Sui said as several tentacles sprouted out from her body.

Li Huowang had never hidden anything from her, so she remembered what he had said even though she hadn’t understood it.

Li Sui perked up upon seeing track marks of carriage wheels on the dirt path. She earnestly followed the tracks.

She noticed a carriage up ahead and quickly approached it. She jumped up and grabbed the reins, then turned to face the astonished carriage driver. “Where is the war? I want to go there!”

The driver stammered when he saw Li Sui. “There’s... There’s no war. I don’t think there’s a war here.”

“Impossible! So many people died! Isn’t this place Nan Ping?” Li Sui suddenly panicked. Somehow, the situation wasn’t unfolding as she had remembered.

“Nan... Nan Ping? I never heard of that place. This is the Great Qi!”

The sound of footsteps snapped Li Sui out of her reminiscence. She looked out from the window and saw several children running excitedly in an alleyway.

One of the children had vitiligo. Despite her condition, she made an effort to keep pace with the others. She was holding a lit incense stick in her right hand.

They ran around and soon found their target at the entrance of the village: a fresh pile of cow poop.

“I don’t think this is a good thing to do. My dad said we needed to take the cow poop home and plaster it onto the walls to make biscuits.”[1].

“Who cares? Blasting them away is much more fun than collecting them! Everyone, stand back. I’m going to light it up!”

One of the older children placed a red firecracker into the poop before taking the incense stick from the younger child and lighting it up.

Sparks flew and everyone scattered. Those who didn’t manage to run out of the blast radius in time would be peppered in cow poop.

Even so, there was an undeniable sense of excitement among all of them as they saw the cow poop getting blasted apart by the firecrackers. All of them laughed happily. A child’s happiness was always so simple.

Li Huowang, who had been soaking in the sun’s rays at the top of the roof, saw everything. “Why are there so many children in the village now? And of all things, why are they playing with cow poop?”

Li Huowang lifted his finger when he saw the children lighting one of the firecrackers up again. The firecracker, which was supposed to explode, became silent.

As the children took out another firecracker and circled around the cow poop, Li Huowang let his finger down. The previous firecracker exploded and covered all of the children in cow poop as they cried.

“Hehehe.” Li Huowang chuckled gleefully when someone overshadowed him from the back.

“Want to sit down for a bit? Taking in the sun’s rays during winter is pretty comfy.” Li Huowang patted the spot to his left.

Li Sui, who was now wearing Xuan Pin’s red robes, sat beside Li Huowang. “Father, there’s something I need to do in the Surveillance Bureau. I have to go back now, so I won’t be accompanying you and mother.”

“Does the Surveillance Bureau not celebrate the New Year? At least go back after the Lantern Festival. [2]

Li Sui replied, “The Dharma Sect might’ve been eradicated, but the divisions haven’t returned yet. The Surveillance Bureau in Nan Ping needs to be rebuilt too. Also...”

“Also?” Li Huowang looked at his daughter.

“The Sitting Oblivion Dao is back. We have a lot of work to do.”

“Sitting Oblivion Dao!” Li Huowang’s killing intent leaked out. “Leave it to me!”

“Father, there’s no need to do that. The Sitting Oblivion Dao will never be exterminated as long as the Heavenly Dao of Lies exists. We just need to knock them down a peg if they go overboard.”

“But they are the Sitting Oblivion Dao!”

“I don’t think it’s rational to destroy the Heavenly Dao of Truth and the Heavenly Dao of Lies just because we want to exterminate the Sitting Oblivion Dao. The Sitting Oblivion Dao will exist for as long as they exist.”

Li Huowang frowned at those words. The Heavenly Daos must exist, including the most dangerous and useless ones. The world would be in chaos if even one of them were gone, especially since Li Huowang himself was controlling the Heavenly Daos of Truth and Lies.

Li Sui continued, “You are technically a Sitting Oblivion Dao member too. You can’t kill yourself to remove the Sitting Oblivion Dao permanently, right?”

“You are talking about Shai Zi, not me.” Li Huowang frowned when he recalled that unkillable pest. “I always wondered what his plan was, but I never thought he had a plan to use my ‘Lies’ to bring himself back to life.”

Li Sui was surprisingly calm in the face of Li Huowang's reaction. "Father, the Sitting Oblivion Dao is indeed a hassle, but it's just a small issue."

"Small issue? Don't forget that they almost stole the Liang Kingdom's Dragon Vein."

"They wouldn't be able to do so. They almost succeeded because I let them do it. If not, we wouldn't have Ji Zai. This is part of the Cause and Effect, after all."

Li Huowang looked at Li Sui with displeasure. "Sui Sui, why do I think that you are speaking out for him?"

1. Not the kind of biscuits they would eat. They plaster the poop onto the wall and use the sunlight to dry them. The dried poop biscuits can then be used as fuel to burn wood since they are rich in fiber. 🤔

2. The fifteenth day of the new year, which is also the day signaling the end of the celebrations. 🤔

Chapter 817 - Red Packet

Li Sui bent her body forward and snuggled against Li Huowang. “It’s not like that. It’s just that Shai Zi is very smart. He knows that causing trouble now would benefit no one. Also, he knows that it would be detrimental to him if anything were to happen to Da Nuo.”

Li Huowang reflected on the name. “Da Nuo... is Da Nuo the name of this world?”

“Da Nuo is also our name. Everything in this world—the seas, the land, and every grain of sand, is part of Da Nuo.”

“What about the Simings? Are the Simings part of Da Nuo?”

“Da Nuo is the Greater Siming.”

“Greater Siming... A Greater Siming does not have the past and the future.” Li Huowang sighed. “If we are part of Da Nuo, then what about them? What about god Yu’er? What are they?”

Li Huowang tried to recall the beings outside of Baiyu Capital. They had tried to tear Baiyu Capital in half, but no matter how hard he tried to remember, he could not come up with anything.

Suddenly, the skies almost split apart! The small crack in the sky trembled as it threatened to open. It was alive.

“Don’t think about it! Just carry on!” A low shout snapped Li Huowang out of it. The voice sounded like him and Ji Zai at the same time.

Li Huowang smacked his head and looked around. Nothing had changed, as if it had been an illusion.

Li Sui explained, “I don’t know what it’s called on the other side, but the Surveillance Bureau called it Fu Shengtian.”

“Why is it called Fu Shengtian? Is there any special reason?” [\[1\]](#)

“The name was passed down in the Surveillance Bureau. Those before me called it Fu Shengtian, so we continued to use that name.”

Li Huowang then looked at Li Sui. “Since you already knew all that, why didn’t you tell me? Why were you letting me guess what was happening?”

“Father, I didn’t dare to tell you. I feared that revealing what was happening might alter the course of the future. We would’ve been in trouble if Ji Zai had disappeared because of that.”

“Heh.” Li Huowang wanted to make a snarky remark, but he stopped himself. Ji Zai was his past self. He would become Ji Zai if he entered the Baiyu Capital.

“Also, why did you give yourself the name Xuan Pin? Xuan is one thing, but what does Pin mean?”

“Father, Xuan is the color black. As for Pin, it holds the meaning of a female beast. For example, ‘A Pin chicken doesn’t call the dawn’ means that a hen doesn’t crow like a rooster does. There’s no other meaning.”

Li Huowang was embarrassed. He might’ve deduced Xuan Pin’s identity if he had known the meaning of Xuan Pin’s name.

Li Huowang sighed. “Sui Sui, you’ve grown a lot. You are now taller and wiser than me.”

His daughter was now a hundred and sixty years old. Even though Li Sui had constantly been changing, he felt that she was very different now.

Li Huowang also felt empty now that Li Sui was not constantly by his side.

“Father, no matter how much I changed, you’re still my father.” Li Sui said, pointing at a faraway alley. Inside the alley was none other than Lu Xiucui pulling along his crazed father towards their home.

“Look. Even if Lu Zhuangyuan can’t remember or recognize anyone, he will always be Lu Xiucui’s father.”

Li Huowang nodded and gently pulled on Li Sui's tentacles. "You've worked hard for the past hundred years. You have done a lot to ensure the peace of the world today. If you hadn't come in time, all of this might have ended differently."

Although Li Sui never mentioned it, Li Huowang was aware that she had patiently waited for a hundred and sixty years just to send him the Dragon Qi. He was fully conscious of how long that was and the excruciating pain that accompanied such a lengthy wait.

"Father, when I was young, I believed you were everything, but every child must eventually leave their home. In the past, whenever I encountered problems, I hid inside of you. I was certain that you could handle anything.

"However, when I ventured out into the real world, I began to truly grow up. I didn't merely wait for a hundred and sixty years—it was also an important part of my life. I matured and became Xuan Pin, Chief of the Liang Kingdom's Surveillance Bureau. As the Chief, it is my responsibility to protect Da Nuo."

When Li Huowang heard what Li Sui told him, he felt a complex feeling in his heart. His daughter had grown up, and he was also experiencing what it felt like to be a father, much like a father does when his daughter gets married.

Li Huowang glanced at the kitchen filled with smoke and turned to Li Sui, saying, "I know you're busy, but could you at least stay for lunch?"

"Alright, I will go and help my mother." Li Sui phased downwards from the roof.

It was the second day of the new year, and the warm meal was quickly finished.

Li Huowang held onto a de-feathered live chicken and snapped its neck before tearing it in half to present it to Li Sui. "Eat this. I know you like eating raw food. Eat something nice before you go."

Li Sui declined Li Huowang's offer. "Father, I don't need to eat that now. I can now easily control my nature as a Black Taisui."

"Then..." Li Huowang looked at his arm.

"Father, here, eat this." Li Sui stretched out two tentacles from her robe and grabbed some chopsticks. She then picked up the braised ribs and placed them in Li Huowang's bowl.

Li Huowang only gave up on tearing off his limb to feed Li Sui when Bai Lingmiao kicked his legs gently under the table.

"Here, eat this instead." Li Huowang picked up a large piece of duck meat and placed it in Li Sui's bowl.

Xuan Pin's large body slowly shrunk before the familiar little girl's body walked out from the robes.

The three of them sat and ate their meal. It was a rare occasion where they felt like a family.

While the three of them were savoring their meals, the courtyard door suddenly swung open. Puppy, who was now in new clothes, entered with his wife and their daughter in tow. Laughter filled the air as they made their way inside.

"Senior Li! Happy New Year! I'm here to visit you! May you be prosperous and have good luck in your endeavors!"

Puppy greeted Li Huowang and then gently picked up his daughter, placing her near Li Huowang. "Nan Nan, say hello to your Uncle Li."

"Hello, Uncle," she stammered, her voice fading into silence out of shyness. Puppy was also staring at Li Huowang without a word.

Bai Lingmiao took out some money wrapped in red cloth[2] out of her clothes and passed it to Nan Nan. "It's impressive how well your daughter can express herself at such a young age. She will grow into a fine young woman in the future."

Seeing that his mission had been accomplished, Puppy smiled with joy. He took his daughter and readied himself to visit the others. “Senior Li, now that times are peaceful again, you should hurry up and have children. If you don't, you'll only be handing out money during the New Year.”

He turned to his daughter. “Nan Nan, let Daddy hold onto the red packet for you. I will return the money when you get married.”

Just then, Li Sui blocked Puppy's path. “Uncle Puppy, I wish you a Happy New Year! I wish that your blessings will be as vast as the Eastern Seas and your lifespan as long as the Southern Mountains.”

“Uncle... Puppy?”

Puppy was shocked and caught in a daze as Li Sui extended her arms and took back the red packet.

1. Fu Shengtian can be literally translated as “Prosperity Births the Heavens” 🙌

2. A red packet. It contains money in it. In folklore, red packet money is used to ward off evil beasts that devour children. Nowadays, it's a way for elders to pass on blessings to children. 🙌

Chapter 818 - Story Teller

Li Huowang brought Bai Lingmiao along to send off Li Sui after their lunch. They were now at the entrance of Cowheart Village.

“If you encounter any difficulties, feel free to reach out to me using your illusions. I will rush there as soon as I can,” Li Huowang said.

“Father, don’t worry. I will always tell you if something requires your attention.”

“Good. Then let me know if someone bullies you as well.”

“Father, I don’t think anyone in the Liang Kingdom could bully me now. I will leave first.” Li Sui disappeared instantly like a popping bubble.

Li Huowang exhaled a white wisp of breath as he gazed at the village blanketed in snow. He held onto Bai Lingmiao’s hands as they walked back. “I forgot to tell her to write to us once in a while.”

“Senior Li, I think she would still write even if you didn’t tell her. Next time, should we still call her Sui Sui? It feels very strange to call her Xuan Pin.”

Li Huowang shook his head. “It’s fine if we call her Sui Sui at home, but we should still refer to her as Xuan Pin outside. We can’t embarrass her since she’s the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. Also, isn’t my other name Xuan Yang? One’s Yang and one Ying. I think the name Xuan Pin fits our daughter well.”

“That’s true.” Bai Lingmiao nodded. “Senior Li, don’t try to feed Sui Sui your flesh next time. She’s no longer the same little child that we know of.”

Li Huowang looked at the spot where Li Sui had disappeared. “She waited a hundred and sixty years just to fulfill her promise. I just wanted to find a way to thank her.”

“We don’t have to be this formal since we’re a family. You would’ve done the same if you had been in the same situation.”

Li Huowang nodded and held onto her hands.

The two of them walked silently in the snow-covered village.

They had almost reached their estate when Li Huowang asked, “You’ll be leaving soon as well, won’t you? As the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect, you’re about as busy as Sui Sui, right?”

As Bai Lingmiao was going to say something, Li Huowang stopped her. “Go. Have a safe journey.”

Li Huowang tried to let go of her hand, but Bai Lingmiao held on. After some time, she loosened her grip.

“Death is still missing. I have to perform a ceremony to pray for the Heavenly Mater’s blessing and return Death to the world. I will come back once I’m done.”

“Alright.” Li Huowang wasn’t worried about it. The Heavenly Mater had indeed obtained the Heavenly Dao of Death. The Natural Disaster would soon come to pass.

“There’s so many devotees in the White Lotus Sect nowadays. Don’t hesitate to bring Sui Sui and me into your business if someone tries to usurp your position. We will make sure that they think twice before they act.”

“Don’t worry. I was chosen by the Heavenly Mater. Trying to usurp my position would be equivalent to betraying the Heavenly Mater. Those who worship her would never do so.”

Upon hearing that, Li Huowang suddenly raised his head and shouted into the skies. “You better be honest and don’t pull off any tricks! I will smash your golden lotus if you dare to do so! I always honor my promises!”

Bai Lingmiao pushed his back lightly before quietly whispering for the Heavenly Mater to forgive his outburst.

Soon, the devotees of the White Lotus Sect with white donkeys tattooed on their backs carried a large palanquin into the village. Bai Lingmiao entered the palanquin before they left Cowheart Village.

Li Huowang entered his estate and saw that the busy estate was now empty. Even his numerous illusions had dwindled, leaving only Qiu Chibao behind.

“The others already left, so why are you still here? You should be fake too,” Li Huowang asked Qiu Chibao.

However, Qiu Chibao ignored him and silently ran into the kitchen. She tried to pick up the leftover food on the plates.

Her dirty hands phased through the plates repeatedly, but she kept trying.

Seemingly out of nowhere, she managed to grab a large braised pig trotter. She was briefly shocked, but then she jumped with joy and quickly stuffed the trotter into her mouth, devouring it eagerly.

Li Huowang stood behind her, staring at the sad scene before him.

Qiu Chibao's belly gradually expanded as she indulged in the meal, yet she showed no signs of stopping. Li Huowang waved his hands, causing Qiu Chibao to once again transform into an illusion.

She then sat in a pot and held onto her rotten child as she cried. Li Huowang left her and walked away.

He had just taken two steps outside when he met Zhao Wu. “Happy New Year, Senior Li! Where are you going?”

“It's the New Year. Don't you think it's inauspicious to carry that around you?” Zhao Wu pointed at Li Huowang's spine sword.

Li Huowang pondered a little before he removed it and passed it to Zhao Wu. “Help me put it back in my house.”

As Zhao Wu barely opened his mouth to reply, Li Huowang walked past him toward the outside of the village.

With every step he took, the ground folded and slid under him.

It was as if he took a hundred steps with a single step.

He walked for a brief moment before reaching the town beside Cowheart Village.

But Li Huowang had forgotten it was the second day of the New Year. At this time, almost everyone was visiting their family.

The streets were empty except for the place where the White Lotus Sect was recruiting devotees.

“Think about it carefully. Who is the Heavenly Mater? What is the Heavenly Mater? Heavenly means death. [1] Think carefully. How strong must the Heavenly Mater be to hold the reins of Death? Do you not believe us? You can also enjoy your afterlife in the Void Home after your death!”

Li Huowang walked past them and heard the storyteller’s voice in one of the tea shops.

“The storytellers wish to advise everyone to choose the middle path! Everyone will face their karma, whether they are kind or evil, for such is the path of life. Today, please allow this young one to talk about the person with a majestic and regal appearance. He is above the Dharma and commands the Heavens, the Saints, and the Universe. He illuminates the Heavens and heeds the lessons of Heaven. He had the ability to create all things and saved countless lives! He is none other than the merciful Zhuge Yuan! Everyone, please listen to me closely!”

The storyteller threw a piece of wood onto the table to catch everyone’s attention. The voices in the tea shop quieted down.

Li Huowang turned and entered the tea shop.

Li Huowang had just sat down when a waiter placed the teapot on his head and poured a cup of tea for Li Huowang from a meter away.

“Dear customer! You are just in time. We’ve just opened during the New Year, so there’s a promotion going on. The boss says you can drink as much tea as you want for twenty coins. We would even throw in two plates of cakes for each customer!”

Another waiter appeared and served two plates of small cakes to Li Huowang.

1. The Chinese raws 无生 mean without life, i.e., dead.

Chapter 819 - Qi Kingdom

“Dear customer, here are some pomegranates and begonia cake for you. Please enjoy the meal, and call us when you need more tea.”

Li Huowang took a sip of tea and continued to listen to the storyteller.

“Saint Zhuge Yuan stood on the walls of You Capital and shook his bar mace! He glared, and the cowardly Dharma Sect members dropped like flies! All of them got scared to death!”

When they heard the story, the customers whistled and clapped. Some of the richer ones even threw some money onto the stage.

“Heh. This is interesting. To think that the storyteller would turn into a story itself.”

Upon hearing that, Li Huowang turned to his left. He saw a middle-aged man with a black mustache sitting there. “Do you know Zhuge Yuan?”

“Sure, I’m from the Qi Kingdom,” the man replied, lifting his empty tea cup and calling out to a waiter, “Excuse me, waiter!”

“Coming! Please hold still!”

A long teapot spout extended from the second floor and poured down a thin stream of tea from the top. The tea fell accurately into the customer’s teacup and filled it perfectly.

“You know who Zhuge Yuan is, yet you can still stomach this story?”

“Sigh. I have nothing to do anyway. My family and relatives are all dead, and I don’t have anyone to visit. I just came here to pass the time listening to stories. Look around you. I think many of the people here are from the Qi Kingdom.”

Li Huowang looked at the customers and nodded. "Even though this guy is telling some rubbish story, it's still undeniable that Zhuge Yuan saved the Qi Kingdom."

"Heh, who knows if it's true? I believe the monks are embellishing the details to deceive others into giving them alms," the man remarked casually before lifting his cup and starting to drink his tea.

He almost choked on his hot tea as he coughed. His face was red from the choking.

Li Huowang ate a cake and slowly chewed on it. He savored the sweetness as he listened to the story.

The storyteller began to exaggerate his story, going as far as claiming that Zhuge Yuan carved out the heavens themselves. Li Huowang couldn't bear it anymore and decided to leave.

"Dear sir, please come and visit again soon! The price is right, and we serve the best of the best for just twenty coins!"

When Li Huowang heard the waiter say that, he reached into his pockets and placed twenty brand-new coins on the table before leaving.

He suddenly realized that the man from the Qi Kingdom beside him had disappeared. Li Huowang hadn't noticed the man's departure.

Li Huowang left as he pondered. He's probably not just someone ordinary. I wonder what kind of background he has.

He walked around the village and found that there was nothing he could do, so he decided to head back. I should just focus on cultivating.

The troubles were over, but it was still beneficial to become stronger.

Li Huowang returned to the village and entered the familiar cave at the back of the village. He closed his eyes and focused.

The more he cultivated, the more the difficulty spiked. Still, he wasn't in a rush. He took his time, gradually pushing the primordial breath within him with his inner sight.

He didn't know how long he was cultivating, but he saw that it was already nighttime when he opened his eyes.

Li Huowang was heading back to the Bai family estate when he walked past Puppy's house.

Puppy held onto a bowl as he walked out. "Senior Li, where have you been? We thought you ran away somewhere again."

"Hm? Did I leave for a long time?" Li Huowang was confused.

"Yeah. We last saw each other on the second day of the New Years. It's now the Lantern Festival. [1]" Puppy gave Li Huowang his bowl of glutinous rice balls. It bobbed around in the sweet soup.

"What?! I've been cultivating for so long?" An intense drowsiness overtook his mind, lasting only a short moment before being replaced by an intense feeling of hunger.

Without any hesitation, Li Huowang ate the bowl of glutinous rice balls. He ate and drank his fill before slipping onto the ground and falling asleep.

He slept for three nights before waking up again, and he felt that the world was spinning when he did.

The others who had been taking care of him circled around. Puppy said, "Senior Li, maybe you should... bring someone to accompany you when you go and cultivate. Next time, you could easily end up accidentally starving yourself."

"I would've been fine if you said nothing." Li Huowang kicked off his blanket and drank his tea.

He only looked at everyone after he finished his drink. The people around him were Puppy, Zhao Wu, Yang Xiaohai, and Lu Xiucui.

"Where's Xiaoman?"

"She's with the Saintess of the White Lotus Sect. Don't you know that?"

“Alright, fine. I understand now. You can go back now.” Li Huowang needed to think up a plan to prevent something like this from happening again.

They didn’t leave, confusing Li Huowang. “Is something wrong?”

“Something happened, but it's not anything major. Senior Li, do you remember how we accepted a group of refugees from the Qi Kingdom?”

“Yes, I still remember. What about them?”

“They are gone.”

“Gone? What do you mean?”

“They just disappeared into thin air. Thankfully, none of our people are gone.”

“Only the people from the Qi Kingdom disappeared? Since when?”

“Since the evening of the second day of the New Year.”

Li Huowang frowned. He recalled the man who had abruptly disappeared right next to him in the tea shop. “Did only the people staying in the village disappear? What about the other places?”

“We asked the peddlers, and they told us that the people of the Qi Kingdom in other places were also gone. We sent a letter to Gao Zhijian, but we have no clue if he could do anything about it.”

“How could they just disappear like that? What happened?” Li Huowang frowned and stared at the stars in the skies.

“Wait... Unless?” Li Huowang suddenly remembered something. He took the spine sword beside his bed and swung it. A single rift flew above Cowheart Village.

It was different this time. The strange liquid was gone! Li Huowang saw light from the other side of the rift!

“I knew it!” Li Huowang swung another rift and then jumped into it, propelling himself with his window.

He reached the Qi Kingdom and was shocked to find that it had been restored. The grass on the ground was already an inch long.

“Who’s there?” Li Huowang suddenly turned around to find a shocked Qi Kingdom resident chewing on the grass.

1. Also the fifteenth day of the new year. 📖

Chapter 820 - Shangjing

“Eat slowly. Don’t choke on it.” Li Huowang frowned and stared at the man wolfing down his meal.

The man in front of Li Huowang almost choked on the sweet potato in his hands. It was as if he was the embodiment of a hungry ghost.

Li Huowang barely recognized the man due to how disheveled he was.

He inspected closely and recognized the man in front of him was none other than Niu San, the Qi Kingdom refugee who had previously sneaked into the kitchen for food.

Niu San appeared to have been staying in Cowheart Village, which is why Li Huowang saw him when he entered the rift. Niu San shook his head with his cheeks stuffed with sweet potato. He then drank from the puddle beside him.

He washed the food down his throat and smiled at Li Huowang before he started eating the other food that Li Huowang had brought for him.

This time, he spoke as he chewed on his food. He mumbled, “I dare not eat slowly. Food is life right now.”

Niu San cried as he said, “Foster father, what just happened to us. I finally became the head of Cowheart Village’s militia force and finally obtained four Mu of land to plant my crops. The good days were coming for me. I was enjoying myself when I was suddenly transported back! Look at this barren place. There’s nothing but grass here! How can I survive?”

Niu San crunched on the sweet potato out of spite after he complained.

Li Huowang looked around and asked, “What happened to the others? Were the other people from the Qi Kingdom sent back here too?”

“Yes. We had nothing to eat even if we were together, so everyone scattered to find food. We began digging out the roots of the grass to satisfy our hunger. Some of the weaker ones already died from starvation as well.”

“Died from starvation?” Li Huowang was shocked to learn that Death was still in the Qi Kingdom.

“Did you encounter any danger? Like the Dharma Sect or the strange water that causes people to grow extra limbs?”

The Qi Kingdom appeared to have been restored to normal, but Li Huowang wasn't sure. The Qi Kingdom was massive. It would be a headache if his enemies lurked in some obscure corner of this world.

“Danger? There's nothing here! The biggest danger is that there's nothing here!”

Niu San was startled when he saw Li Huowang frowning before he begged earnestly. “Foster father, could you send me back? Please take mercy on me and send me back. I will... I will kowtow to you.”

Niu San kneeled and started kowtowing to Li Huowang.

“Stand up,” Li Huowang said as Niu San shot upward like a zombie.

“The Qi Kingdom is your true home. Where else can you go? Stay here.”

Niu San shouted, “But my wife is from the Liang Kingdom! She's also pregnant with our baby! If I have to stay here, doesn't that mean that I won't see them again?”

“You can't go back at all. You would be sent back here if I tried to send you to the Liang Kingdom, but I should be able to bring your wife here. However, the Qi Kingdom is now a desolate place. Do you really want your wife to suffer with you?”

Niu San stopped being emotional as he gave up. “Then... That's fine.”

“Wait.” Li Huowang looked at Niu San as an uneasy thought came to his mind.

“If everyone from the Qi Kingdom is here, what happened to Gao Zhijian?”

Gao Zhijian was the Qi Kingdom’s Dragon Vein, but he was now attached to the Liang Kingdom. Which side would he be on?

Sensing that something might be wrong, Li Huowang created another rift and returned to the Liang Kingdom.

He didn’t bother explaining to Puppy and everyone else. He gave them some simple instructions before running towards Shangjing.

With his cultivation, he arrived at Shangjing two days later. It was as bustling as ever. The city itself had not been affected by the things that had happened.

Because this might affect the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom, Li Huowang took no chances and went straight toward the palace despite his disheveled face.

Gao Zhijian must’ve given them instructions beforehand because none of the guards stopped Li Huowang. In fact, there were very few gazes on Li Huowang himself.

Gao Zhijian was already sitting on his throne when Li Huowang saw him once more.

Gao Zhijian had changed a little compared to last time. He had a beard, and his face was plumper now. He looked much more commanding.

“Why are you here?” Xuan Pin’s red robes floated up from the floor.

Li Huowang explained, and Xuan Pin shook her head. “Since Fu Shengtian has been repelled, its effect on the Qi Kingdom was naturally dispelled. This is good news—there’s no reason to be worried.”

Xuan Pin saw that Li Huowang was looking at Gao Zhijian with worry before explaining further, “There’s no need to worry about the Emperor. Since he’s attached to the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom, he no longer has any connections to the Qi Kingdom.”

Li Huowang sighed in relief. He was happy that his thoughts were wrong.

He refused to take any chances since this was related to the Dragon Vein.

“As long as everything’s fine. I thought we might have some new troubles again. Since it’s good news for us, you can just continue with your work.” Li Huowang yawned and turned back.

“Senior Li, it’s been a long journey for you to reach here. How about having a meal with us? I didn’t have time to return even during the New Year.” Gao Zhijian’s words made Li Huowang turn around.

He looked at Gao Zhijian before stepping back. “I think we don’t have to do that, your Majesty. You are busy too.”

Gao Zhijian, however, insisted. He sat up from his throne and pulled Li Huowang towards the back palaces.

Soon, Li Huowang was seated in front of a table with a hundred and eight dishes.

Shark fin crab soup, braised chicken with mushroom, ham enveloped in fish bladder, shark skin chicken soup, false panther placenta, steamed camel hump, and civet steamed with pear slices.

Li Huowang had never even heard of some of the dishes. This was the first time he had witnessed the extravagance of the royal family.

Li Huowang had no intention of being reserved in front of Gao Zhijian. He eagerly devoured the food while listening to Gao Zhijian introduce his children.

“Senior Li, this is my eldest son. He is naturally also the prince,” Gao Zhijian said, handing the plump little prince to Li Huowang.

The plump little prince was handed to Li Huowang.

Chapter 821 - Emperor

Li Huowang looked at the little boy with innocent, wide eyes in Gao Zhijian's arms. Picking up his chopsticks, Li Huowang dipped them into the vegetable broth before guiding them toward the boy's mouth.

The old eunuch nearby was about to step forward and stop him, but a single glance from Gao Zhijian made him retreat.

The chubby little prince licked the vegetable broth, only to find it tasted spicy. He immediately scrunched up his face like a steamed bun and began crying loudly.

Both men exchanged smiles, and the atmosphere returned to what it once was.

"How are things in the village?" Gao Zhijian handed the crying child to the eunuch beside him and asked Li Huowang.

"Not bad. With the silver you sent, how bad could it get?" Li Huowang said as he picked up a piece of camel hump with his chopsticks and stuffed it into his mouth.

"I heard that Sun Baolu brought his family from Qing Qiu to our village?" Gao Zhijian asked before picking up a steamed bun, dipping it in the braised pork sauce, and chewing on it.

Li Huowang shook his head. "He didn't. The grass in Qing Qiu had turned yellow and he was worried he wouldn't survive there, so he thought about it.

"Later on, the grass turned green again, so he stayed in Qing Qiu with his people to continue herding sheep. I reckon they wouldn't come to Cowheart Village unless absolutely necessary. The people from Qing Qiu might not be used to a farming lifestyle."

Gao Zhijian nodded and raised his tiger-head wine cup. The eunuch quickly poured him some wine. "Senior Li, let's drink."

Li Huowang shook his head. "I don't drink—I get drunk easily. Besides, it doesn't taste good."

Gao Zhijian laughed and leisurely downed the wine. He closed his eyes as he set the cup on the table. "Wine isn't about the taste. Sometimes, when your heart is troubled and your mind is jumbled, a pot of wine can calm your heart and mind, allowing you to get a good night's sleep."

"You're troubled? Isn't the Dharma Sect gone? What's there to worry about?" Li Huowang asked as he drank the milky yellow croaker soup. After rushing all the way here, he was very hungry and decided to eat his fill before he slept.

"Ah, of course. A good emperor has troubles, but a bad one doesn't worry about them."

Gao Zhijian raised his cup again and drank, his face slightly flushed. "Senior Li, now that everything has settled down, what do you plan to do next?"

"What else can I do? I'm a Daoist, aren't I?" Li Huowang said, patting his red Daoist robes. "Of course, a Daoist cultivates immortality. Who knows, one day I might really ascend to heaven and become an Immortal."

Gao Zhijian laughed heartily. "Hahaha, Senior Li, if you hadn't mentioned it, I would've forgotten you were a Daoist priest."

"What? Do you think I'm a fake Daoist priest?" Li Huowang also laughed.

"Real, you're definitely real." Gao Zhijian turned to the old eunuch. "Bring a Daoist register for Senior Li. My Senior Li must be a true Daoist priest."

Li Huowang smiled faintly. Pouring himself some wine, he gently clinked his bowl with Gao Zhijian's cup before raising his head and drinking it.

Gao Zhijian's smile widened as he grabbed the wine jug from the eunuch and personally poured wine for Li Huowang.

With the delicious food and fine wine, their harmony deepened, reminiscent of their journey to the Great Liang back when they had left the Zephyr Temple.

After eating and drinking heartily, Li Huowang began to feel drowsy. He had ways to avoid getting drunk but chose not to use them.

“Alright, that’s enough for today,” Li Huowang said as he put his arm around Gao Zhijian’s shoulder.

Li Huowang yawned. “Do you have a place to sleep? I’m exhausted.”

“Of course.” Gao Zhijian turned to the eunuchs. “Take Senior Li to the sleeping quarters.”

Li Huowang staggered as he turned around. Two eunuchs supported him on his way to his room.

Just as they were about to reach the door, Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and turned back. “This drinking almost made me forget the important matter.”

He tapped his head. “What was it again...? Oh, right! The people in the Great Qi have no food. Don’t forget to allocate grain for disaster relief.”

As Li Huowang reached the main hall door, Gao Zhijian called out from behind him, “Senior Li, while I can promise you many things, I’m afraid I can’t promise you this.”

“Hmm?” Li Huowang almost thought he had misheard. He turned around and saw Gao Zhijian with three heads overlapping each other. “What did you just say?”

“I said I can’t do it. I can’t provide disaster relief for the Great Qi.”

“Oh, you mean you can’t go to the Great Qi? No problem, just prepare the supplies, and I’ll take them.”

“Senior Li, I’m the Emperor of the Great Liang. Why should I waste the hard-earned grain of my people on disaster relief for the Great Qi?”

Li Huowang pushed away the eunuch supporting him, and the eunuch staggered. “What do you mean? The Great Qi has nothing now. They’re starving and eating grass!”

He had thought this was a trivial matter, but it was quite the opposite.

“What does it matter to me if they eat grass? They don’t pay taxes or provide labor for the Great Liang.”

“Many people died in the Great Qi! It won’t take much grain to feed those who are alive!”

“Great Qi is twice the size of Great Liang. There are still many people alive,” Gao Zhijian replied resolutely.

Li Huowang now saw this completely different side of Gao Zhijian. He sighed softly and softened his tone.

“I know that. We don’t need to help everyone. Just make sure they don’t starve to death. We can send them some seeds to get them through this tough time.”

“No! The Great Liang is still recovering. Every grain of food is valuable and cannot be wasted.”

“Gao Zhijian!” Li Huowang jumped onto the table and towered over him. His hand instinctively gripped his sword hilt.

In an instant, Li Huowang was surrounded. “Stand down!”

Gao Zhijian looked up directly at Li Huowang without flinching. Li Huowang gradually released his grip on the sword.

“It’s fine, it’s fine,” Li Huowang said, forcing a smile as he patted Gao Zhijian on the shoulder. “You’re right. You’re a good emperor for the Great Liang, not for the Great Qi.”

“If you don’t help, then I will. I’m now the emperor of the Great Qi. I’ll take care of them!”

Li Huowang took the crown from Gao Zhijian’s head and placed it on his own head. Without another word, he sliced open a rift with his spine sword and jumped through it.

Chapter 822 - Grain

Li Huowang walked through the Great Qi with a heavy expression as he observed everything around him.

This wasn't as Niu San had described, where there was nothing but grass. At least in the capital of the Great Liang—You Capital—there were still countless ruins and broken walls.

Li Huowang had used the spine sword to travel from Shangjing, so he naturally arrived in Great Qi's capital city since Shangjing was built on top of the Great Qi's capital.

A person blocked Li Huowang's path, lying motionless on the ground like a corpse.

This person appeared to be overweight. Though several days of starvation hadn't turned her into a skeleton, drinking too much water had caused her body to swell considerably.

As Li Huowang stepped over her, she suddenly moved and shakily raised her blackened fingernails toward him.

Her cracked, pale lips trembled as she tried to say something. Before Li Huowang could do anything, her raised hand fell back down. She had starved to death.

Qiu Chibao was terrified by the scene. She wailed as she ran away while holding onto her rotten child.

Li Huowang clenched his fists tightly, but he gradually relaxed them and continued to stride forward.

This wasn't the first person he had seen starve to death, and it probably wouldn't be the last. The capital of the Great Qi was filled with people collapsing from hunger.

Li Huowang knew the most immediate thing he should do was transport grain from the Great Liang to save as many people as possible.

However, saving all of the Great Qi couldn't be done this way. If he couldn't turn the situation around, bringing grain would be useless, no matter how much he brought.

Disaster relief wasn't just about providing food. It also required the organizational capability to integrate all the refugees from the Great Qi.

When Li Huowang arrived at a temple and saw monks distributing porridge, he knew he had found the people he had been looking for—the monks of the Righteous Monastery.

He noticed something was off as he approached. If there's nothing left, where did the porridge come from?

He hurried to the porridge stall, only to discover that what was being distributed wasn't plain porridge or mixed grain porridge—it was meat soup!

At that moment, a monk emerged from the city, pushing a wheelbarrow filled with various dead bodies. It included the woman who had just starved to death before him.

"Amitabha, Benefactor Li, it's been a while," Chan Du, the abbot of the Righteous Monastery, said from behind Li Huowang.

Li Huowang turned around and looked at him with a shocked expression. "Are you all eating people?!"

"Benefactor Li, your words are mistaken. These are just dead bodies. In the eyes of Buddha, the flesh is merely a vessel. Moreover, the monks of Righteous Monastery chant sutras and strike wooden fish to offer prayers before cooking them.

"Besides, there's no food anywhere now. As monks, we must be compassionate. We can't let others starve to death just because of some taboo against the dead."

Li Huowang stood there in silence for a long time. He ignored the large pot beside him, then turned and walked toward the Righteous Monastery.

Under these circumstances, if he told them not to eat human flesh, it would be akin to asking them to eat cake when there was no bread. They were just trying to survive.

Thanks to the monks' maintenance, the Righteous Monastery was relatively intact compared to the rest of the capital. It was still habitable, at least on the surface.

The monks inside didn't appear emaciated from hunger and looked relatively healthy.

Li Huowang sat down on a stone bench above a newly sprouted sapling. He got straight to the point with Chan Du. "This can't go on. Without food, the remaining people will eventually starve to death.

"The Righteous Monastery's religion used to be the Great Qi's state religion, right? After all of your good deeds, shouldn't you should still have some influence?"

"Why does Benefactor Li ask this?"

"To save people! I can't stand seeing others starve to death any longer!"

Li Huowang laid out his plan to Chan Du. "Use the Righteous Monastery's influence to gather as many survivors as possible. I'll bring as much grain and seeds as I can. We'll plant them together and have a unified distribution.

"There must be some officials amongst the survivors, right? They're good at managing things, so set them to work. The sooner we restore Great Qi's government, the sooner we can turn this dire situation around!"

"Amitabha. Benefactor Li, you are truly compassionate. On behalf of the people of Great Qi, I thank you." Chan Du bowed to Li Huowang.

"Enough with the talk! Let's get to work. People are dying every moment."

Li Huowang stood up and pulled out the spine sword to return to the Great Liang, but Chan Du blocked his path.

“Senior Li, it’s said that you’ve achieved great success in cultivating ‘Truth.’ Can you create grain out of nothing?”

Li Huowang sighed. “Do you think that’s possible? Do you think I’m a Siming? I don’t know if I’ll be able to do that in the future, but right now, I can’t.”

“I do have the ability to create food,” Li Huowang said. He looked at the stone table in front of him, and then the stone expanded and transformed into a pile of white buns.

The sight of the white buns immediately drew the monks’ attention and caused them to salivate.

“These things are edible and taste good, but once I stop maintaining my ‘Truth’ cultivation, they’ll turn back into stone.”

As Li Huowang thought about it, the buns instantly became solid black rocks.

“I can’t constantly keep thinking about these foods being real. It’s slow and won’t save many people. With the time required to spend on that, I could bring several bags of grain from Great Liang instead.”

“I’m not just trying to save a few people or even a group of them. I’m trying to save all of the Great Qi!” Li Huowang said. He drew the spine sword and returned to Shangjing.

Upon his return, he wasted no time and dashed into a store to start buying grain.

The shopkeeper thought he had landed a big customer and was overjoyed. However, an old eunuch with his golden whisk also walked in.

“Master Li, if you use gold created through ‘Truth’ cultivation to buy grain, that would be considered fraud, wouldn’t it?”

He continued, “This grain is the result of the hard work of our people, meant to fill their bellies. It wouldn’t be quite fair if you were to take it and give it to the Great Qi for nothing, would it?”

Li Huowang sneered. “Who said I’m going to cheat? I have my own money! I even have a courtyard in Shangjing! If I sold it, don't you think I could afford enough grain?"

"Of course. Although grain is expensive now, real estate in Shangjing is worth a lot. But what if the money from selling your house runs out?"

Li Huowang stood before the eunuch and said, "I also have a Strayed One's corpse in Shangjing! Is that enough? Now get lost!"

The eunuch took two steps back, bowed respectfully to Li Huowang, and then turned to leave the store.

Li Huowang turned around while still enraged. He had scared the shopkeeper so much that he was trembling.

"What are you looking at? Get your workers to load the grain! I'm going to get the land deed!"

Chapter 823 - Mother

Six-year-old Miao Guihua lay in bed. Her head felt dizzy and foggy. She was simply too hungry.

At first, she cried loudly out of hunger, begging her mother to find food. After two days, she couldn't cry anymore. Her eyes were filled with hunger, and her mind was consumed by a single thought—finding something to eat.

There were people in the city, and her mother had carried her around while searching for food. Although she had money, she couldn't find any food.

They had heard there was Guanyin clay^[1] to eat outside the city, so Miao Guihua had gone there with her mother. However, too many people were digging by the river, and the two of them couldn't squeeze in.

They managed to dig up some grassroots, which ran out eventually.

There were grassroots in other places, but by then, the lack of food had weakened them too much to walk that far.

After being hungry for more than ten days, she became numb. Her stomach no longer growled, and she needed a stick just to walk.

"Mother, I'm hungry..." Miao Guihua weakly called to the woman lying on the ground beside her, but she didn't respond.

She wanted to cry, but no tears came out. She looked around, then used her fingernails to scrape off some white wall plaster before chewing on it.

Her mother had forbidden her from eating that. However, she was simply too hungry.

The wall plaster tasted bitter and absorbed moisture. After just a few bites, her mouth felt dry.

Guihua picked up a stick from the ground and shakily approached the water jar. She leaned forward into the moss-covered jar and scooped with a gourd ladle, yet didn't get a single drop of water.

She turned back and weakly called out to the woman on the ground, "Mother, the water's gone too."

Guihua still got no response from her mother. She leaned on her stick to walk over and push her mother with all her strength.

Guihua started to panic when her mother still didn't respond. She had seen adults suddenly stop moving and then never speak again.

In her panic, she hurried to the door to call for help.

"Master." Guihua imitated her mother and called out to a monk who was pushing a wheelbarrow. "Master, my mother won't move. Can you help her?"

The monk walked into her house. After a while, he carried her mother out, placed her in the wheelbarrow, and left.

"Master, where are you taking my mother? Can you wake her up?" Guihua followed behind the wheelbarrow with her stick for support.

Guihua walked slowly, but the kind-hearted monk would wait for her whenever she was about to fall behind. More and more people were piled onto the wheelbarrow.

Finally, Guihua followed the monk into a temple. Her mother had told her about this place. It was the place where people prayed to the Buddha, and her mother had prayed there before she got pregnant with her.

The monks here were good people, giving out meat soup daily. Her mother had once been lucky enough to get a bowl, but she gave all of it to Guihua without taking a sip herself. The soup had been delicious, and she had licked the bowl clean.

"Master, where are you taking my mother?" Guihua was in a state of panic when she saw her mother disappear into the temple. She started crying helplessly, feeling something was wrong.

After a while, the monk who had pushed the wheelbarrow returned, picked her up, and carried her into the temple.

The monk placed her on a stone bench. "Be good. Wait here, and you'll soon have something to eat."

Guihua thought she was being good, so she waited as the monk instructed.

Before long, the monk came out of a red building with a bowl full of meat soup.

Guihua reached out her hands to take it just as another monk ran over and whispered something to him.

The monk looked at her with a complicated expression and repeated, "Be good. Wait here, and you'll soon have something to eat."

Shortly after, a group of bald monks came out with many wheelbarrows and carts. It seemed as if they were getting ready to transport something.

It wasn't just monks only. Soon, some young and strong men started coming in from the temple gate.

While they all looked hungry, at least they didn't need sticks to walk. Everyone gathered together, their faces filled with anticipation as though waiting for something.

Guihua was wondering what they were doing when the sky suddenly split open.

A bag flew out from the opening. She heard cries and shouts as everyone rushed over. Guihua tried to see what was happening, but her efforts proved futile.

Another bag flew out, though it wasn't full. She saw golden millet spilling from it and realized the bags must have been filled with food.

Bag after bag of food fell from the sky, piling up rapidly.

Eventually, a man in red came out, holding two bags. Guihua joined the adults, kneeling on the ground and bowing to him.

Guihua heard the adults cry out and learned that this man was called Bodhisattva, the one her mother had said could do anything.

Soon, the deity came over, helped her up, and handed her a bun. Guihua forgot about everything else and started to devour the bun.

She had finished half of it when she looked up and asked, “Bodhisattva, can I have another one? My mother is still hungry.”

After she received another bun, she ran to the monk with the wheelbarrow and said, “Master, where’s my mother? I have food now.”

Guihua followed the monk’s trembling hand and ran into the kitchen.

She saw her mother on the table. She climbed onto it and tried to stuff the bun into her mother’s mouth.

“Mother, there’s food now. Eat it so that you won’t be hungry anymore.”

Guihua saw that her mother was still unresponsive. She turned helplessly to the red-robed Bodhisattva at the door. “Bodhisattva, can you help my mother? She’s not eating.”

The deity didn’t move, and Guihua seemed to understand. Her lips trembled, and tears welled up in her eyes. “Bodhisattva, is my mother dead?”

“Child, I’m not dead. I can still eat.”

She looked up in surprise and saw her mother’s eyes open.

Guihua's eyes welled up with tears of joy as she threw herself into her mother's embrace. "Mother!"
